The heart-sick man paced the streets until they were wholly deserted. A restless spirit kept him on the move until the bells of the Christmas morn proclaimed "Peace upon earth, good will to men." Again the scornful smile curved his lips as he whispered: "Where is it? O, where is this chanted peace?"

As he was beginning to feel tired and was about to return to his hotel his attention was attracted by the movements of a man a short distance in advance of him who was staggering along the street as if intoxicated. Impelled by some strange fascination Owen followed, never for a moment taking his eyes off the figure in advance. The reeling man soon came to Riverside drive, and thence to the Park which he entered and passed through the winding paths down to the river's edge. His movements became more and more suspicious. Owen quickened his steps almost to a run and just as he was on the verge of taking the fatal leap he reached the side of the stranger, and hastily grasping him by the arm he quickly drew him back. The man reeled and almost fell from the force of the impelling motion. When he regained his equilibrium he turned his white and stern face upon Owen who dared to interfere with his actions.

"Let go my arm," came in a husky gasp from his lips. "By what right do you compel me to remain where there is nothing but pain and sorrow, where all is cruel deceit, blackness and lies, while down there in the clear depths peace and rest await me?"

To be continued.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Startling!
Thoughtful!
Scientific!

"A SOCIAL ANTISEPTIC."

What the Young Need to Know;

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

PRICE, 10 CENTS

OUR NEW HUMANITY.

Of all rights, the greatest is—to be born well.

Vol. II., No. 5 contains: The Rights of Children; by E. B. Kerr. An interesting presentation of the other side of the question. Incineration; by Walter Breed. Startling theories, facts and figures. What are Women Here For? By E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. What the Young Need to Know.—A Primer of Sexual Rationalism; by E. C. Walker. The New Martyrdom; by Lillian Harman. Eye Will. From the French of Guy de Maupassant. A Free Man's Creed; by Moses Harman. Price, 25 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

A gentleman would like to correspond with a lady living in Chicago who approves of Dianism. Address J. C., care of Lucifer, 1304 W. Congress st.

The Firebrand. For burning away the cobwebs of ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical, and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions, subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free. Box 94 Portland, Oregon.

672.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
Practical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,	.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury,	.10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.,	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	.25
Degeneracy; C. L. James,	.25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Causes of Hard Times; Chavannes,	.05
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15
Henry George Examined; J. K. Ingalls,	.05
Christianity and Progress; G. W. Foote,	.10

Those books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Eugenics,—An appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Red Heart in a White World.

A Suggestive Manual of Free Society, proposing the Comradeship of all those who believe in the Spirit of Liberty as the essential element in True Society, and the immediate inauguration and practical realization of the Free Life. Price, 20 cents, 10 copies $1. For sale by M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of author. 126 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents. Address this office.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

The Living Temple, or the House We Live In.

Contains much interesting information upon Astrology, the Law and Language of Correspondency, Birth-day Chart, Figure of the Heavens, the Living Temple, Who and When to Marry, Whom to Choose as Partner in Business, and what business you are best adapted for, and other information of a like nature. Those who are interested in the subject of Astrology will do well to send ten cents to this office for Dr. C. T. H. Benton's little book.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Shoowville, Va.

A Single man wishes to correspond with a single Freethought lady not over thirty-five years old. Please address Lucifer C 39.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by H. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published. .10

Bar Sinister and Legit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .10

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .15

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10

Fountain of Life,	"	" paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood,	"	" cloth, price,	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex,	"	"	.50
A Sex Revolution,	"	"	.25
Helen Harlow's Vow,	"	"	.25

Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 1.00

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM.

BY M. HARMAN.

A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Price, 5 cents. For distribution, 25 cents per dozen. Address this office.

THE ADULT.

A journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Bedborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League, Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscure Judes and Distracted Sues, by Leighton Pagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

THE UNREVEALED RELIGION.

An address of great depth, strength, and beauty. By the veteran, J. K. Ingalls.

"The rainbow is not less beautiful and wonderful to me than to Noah, or to the aborigines, because I understand something of optics and the refraction of light. The rose is not less attractive because botany has taught us to analyze and classify it. The Good of Truth, whether we worship it as an entity or as a personality, or conceive of it as impersonal, is an ever-living and persistent principle man can never cease to revere and admire. And his growth in knowledge and progress in all things refining and elevating to his nature will be promoted, not retarded, by the true but unrevealed, and as yet "unloved religion 'The Religion of Progress'."

Price, 5 cents each; Address LUCIFER, 1394 W. Congress Street, Chicago

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, suite 84, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in first Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1037, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; assuring an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, Department A, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Send Sex, Birth-date, 25 cents, and get outline life reading. Disease diagnosed, with advice whom to marry, by look of hair. Life Guide Box 814, Pasadena, Cal.

We Will Send You forty (40) of the best anti-constipation, liver pills you ever saw on receipt of twelve (12) cents in stamps. Worth half a dollar. Agents wanted. The Ransom Supply Co., Chicago. Station X.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, look of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson Barker,
Box 130, San Jose, Cal.

PRICE 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 34. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, AUGUST 25, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 673.

One Woman.

BY WILLIAM FRANCIS HARNARD.

I thought to love you once; but now,
Despite your wealth of sweetness,
I see dark signs upon your face,
And find great incompleteness.

I cannot love who make of truths
Ideals, dreams, above them;
Who think great thoughts, yet live them not:
They are not worthy of them.

The Persistence of Evil.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Anthony Comstock is still active in the service of his master. When the publisher, George H. Richmond, was acquitted a few months ago in the court of special sessions, it was generally thought that the vice agent would give D'Annunzio's "Triumph of Death" no more free advertising. But Comstock is a Bourbon, with the Bourbon's proverbial incapacity either to forget or to learn. The few who were keeping track of him have known all along that he was determined to prosecute "The Triumph of Death" in the federal courts. So they were not surprised when on July 21 Mr. Richmond was again arrested at the instance of Comstock, this time being taken before United States Commissioner Shields, by whom he was admitted to bail in the sum of $2,500. The bonds were signed by J. J. Little, the publisher.

Inasmuch as the Messrs. Richmond have not sent D'Annunzio's book through the mails, how comes it that Mr. Richmond, Sr., is arrested under the federal statutes? Here is the explanation: At the last regular session of Congress the provisions of the Comstock mail law were extended to inter-state commerce through the express companies. The attempt to thus augment the power of the Vice Society and still further circumscribe the liberties of the people, was initiated years ago. The movement might have been thwarted had any considerable number of the people been awake to their own interests, for a few watchful men knew what the enemy were about and did all they could, with the limited means at command, both to hinder the progress of the obnoxious measure through Congress and to arouse their stupidly contented fellow-citizens. All their efforts were in vain; the bill became a law, and the prosecution of Richmond & Son is its first fruits.

The complaint brought by Mr. Comstock is specific. He alleges that he became acquainted with the fact that there had been deposited with the United States Express Company two copies of the "Triumph of Death," one addressed to Miss Ella Chambers, Bartlett's Female Seminary, Asbury, N. J., and the other addressed to Miss A. R. Ascalle, Asbury Park (N. J.) High School. He also learned that the Adams Express Company was in possession of a volume of the book, addressed to Miss Esther Seeley, of Baltimore, Md.

Upon inquiry Mr. Comstock pretended that he was horrified to learn that all three of the consignees were young girls. This caused him to begin a rigid search for the consignor. He forbade the express companies to forward the books and calling into service several of his shrewdest and most indefatigable suppressors of vice, ultimately learned that the shipper was none other than Mr. Richmond. Thereupon Mr. Comstock, remembering that the last Congress had by statute forbidden the sending of pernicious matter from one state to another by express under the same penalty as attaches to the transmission of such matter through the mails, waited until yesterday before pouncing upon the unsuspecting publisher.—N. Y. "Journal," July 22.

Of course Comstock's asseveration that he "became acquainted" with the fact that there had been deposited with the express companies copies of the "Triumph of Death" for transmission to certain alleged young women is merely another of his lies by indirection. His euphemistic statement covers the confession that he had written over the three female names to the Messrs. Richmond for the hated book. That is how he came to know that the books had been deposited as charged. Had the alleged consignees been real persons Comstock could have known of the shipments only in case the buyers were stool pigeons in his employ or he had received his information from a spy in the publishers' shipping room. But those familiar with the Vice agent's methods did not require the investigations of the "Journal's" reporter to tell them that "Miss Ella Chambers and Miss A. R. Ascalle are purely mythical characters." The reporter adds:

Mr. Comstock, it may be mentioned, lives at Asbury Park in the summer. The copy addressed to the high school was delivered at the school, but was never claimed. Mr. Comstock, when told of this, evinced no surprise, but said it mattered not whether the addresses were fictitious or not.

"The intent was there, and the purpose to debauch the morals of the young is only too patent," he said. "Why, only a little while ago I rode in a stage from North Asbury Park with a young lady who boldly displayed a copy of the vile book, and I said to her: 'Madam, excuse me, but if you will allow me I will destroy that book. It is unfit to be read.' The young lady unblushingly replied: 'No. I got it for a friend.' Now, what do you think of it? And that young lady lives in a prominent avenue in Asbury Park!"

Naturally, the Censor "was not surprised" that the book was not claimed by the non-existent person whose name he had used, and we are not surprised that he insulted a young woman on the stage by impudently insinuating that she was incompetent to select her reading matter. He "unblushingly" confesses his shameful insolence. He says he began a "rigid investigation for the consignor," and "ultimately learned that the shipper was none other than Mr. Richmond," and then he "remembered" that Congress had forbidden the sending of "pernicious" matter by express from one state to another, just as though he had not engineered that measure through the national legislature, just as though he did not know all the time who the consignor was, and just as though he had not himself ordered the books to be sent by said consignor to said mythical girls! What a specimen of noble, truthful manhood this Anthony Comstock is!

We are told that the Censor forbade the express companies to forward the books to the asserted consignees. Where is his authority for stopping books in transit, and especially before they have been condemned by any judicial tribunal? If he did this, he had not a shadow of authority of law for his action. Leaving all general principles to one side for the moment, he knew that as concerns "The Triumph of Death" the only court that had passed upon its merits had flatly refused to brand it obscene. The acquittal of Mr. Richmond by the Court of General Sessions was in effect a bill of clearance for D'Annunzio's work, good until some other court, a court of equal or superior jurisdiction, should affirm a judgment against it. Until such time, the taking of a copy of the book by Anthony Comstock without the permission of the owner would be as much theft as would be the like taking of it by any other person. The express companies were under no greater obligation to heed the prohibitive mandate of Comstock than they would have been to heed the prohibitive mandate of John Smith of Podunk.

I am surprised to find prevalent in New York, even among some Freethinkers, a suspicion that these prosecutions of the Richmonds are advertising schemes in the joint interest of the publishers of "The Triumph of Death" and of Anthony Comstock. I do not see the slightest reason for this suspicion. Those who entertain it are not of the old guard of Freethinkers, the men and women who know what a fanatic the Vice agent is and to what lengths he will go in the effort to crush heretical literature, and literature that runs counter to his notions of propriety. His non-acquaintance with letters and his desire to convince his supporters that his society has a cause for being, amply explain his repeated attacks upon the Richmonds and upon other publishers and booksellers. Were he not so intense a bigot he might be a blackmailer, but his bigotry is of so virulent a type, and his ignorance of the literature and art of the world is so profound, that to understand his acts it is not at all necessary to suppose him to be financially dishonest, in the common meaning of the term. Besides, no prudent publisher would for a moment think of fooling with the buzz-saw of the Comstock postal statutes. Not even Comstock could guarantee that the court would assist in a farcical trial.

The examination of George H. Richmond for depositing with the express companies three copies of "The Triumph of Death" for transmission to the fictitious addresses given by Comstock, took place before United States Commissioner Shields on August 2. The result was that counsel were allowed two weeks in which to submit briefs, and it is probable that a decision will not be reached before the early part of September. During the proceedings, Comstock admitted he had written the three letters and signed the names of the supposititious school girls for the purpose of entrapping Mr. Richmond.

"Then you wilfully told a lie!" exclaimed Mr. Fiske.

Comstock colored and shook his head violently, disclaiming any such intention.

"You disguised your handwriting to make your fraud more difficult to detect," insisted Mr. Fiske.

"I didn't," exclaimed Comstock. "Those letters are all in my ordinary handwriting."

"Well," responded the lawyer, "I'd a good deal rather believe my eyes than your word."

Commissioner Shields refused to permit the introduction of the record of the state court, wherein Mr. Richmond had been acquitted, saying that this case must stand upon its own merits. If this principle is sound, what becomes of those criminal laws that make each subsequent offense of a person punishable by a severer penalty than the last preceding offense? So far as the accuser is concerned, as against the accused, the prevailing administration of law seems to be very much a game of "heads I win, tails you lose."

Sundry Criticisms.

BY C. L. JAMES.

Lucinda B. Chandler says "The conjugal love, that which truly unites man and woman, which is a blending of complementary qualities, is necessarily an exclusive love because it is the agency of the organizing creative force of the universe. Was ever an organization effected by elements that were continually seeking change, opposite direction, separation?"

That is as lucid as a London fog. Mrs. Chandler confounds variety with short duration of attachment. It is surely superfluous to show that they are quite different. A lover of many may love them all through life. Love of only one at a time may turn—it often does—to indifference or hatred for the lately idolized object, after very short experience. But I am prepared to maintain something which is worth the trouble, viz., that these two propensities—to variety in love and to discarding old flames—vary about inversely as each other. It is obviously rather natural they should. "'Tis good to be off with the old love before you are on with the new," follows at once from the premise that variety is awfully awful. And, of course, the varietist must reply "It is not good. Be on with the new love, if you will; but never be off with the old." The experience of history also teaches me that the propensity to variety and to discarding former loves vary inversely, not directly. Wherever marriage means anything else than female slavery, either divorce is tolerably easy or variety not much disapproved. And in all social states, from the lowest to the highest not absolutely anarchistic, we shall find that facility of divorce brings increased reprobation on variety. My personal experience also teaches me that the craving for an eternal mate who cannot be found, with the consequent rapid change from one temporary mate to another, is the reverse proposition of variety. Its pathology is simple. It is selfish. It is heartless. It is sensual. It is the feminine form of sexual vice (which means sexual weakness), just as the desire to wholly possess and own a woman is the masculine. Every charge it makes against the varietist can be retorted with excellent effect. I call it alcinism from its best representative in literature,—the wanton enchantress who, when the forty days of her fondness were over, condemned her lovers to expiate in loathsome shapes the crime of having pleased her too well.

And now I will repeat the observation which ruffled "Matadore's" plumes, that the masculine and feminine forms of morbid sexual irritability—satyriasis and nymphomania—the bull-necked brute and the feather-headed fribble—are the beginning and end of legal marriage. The bull-necked brute does not doubtless, propose to be "faithful" to his wife. But he proposes to have a wife. The feather-headed fribble usually ends by marrying someone she "wouldn't wipe her old shoes on" in the day of her attractions.

From their own standpoints, both are right. People can make shift to "lead an unhappy sort of life, wishing each other not divorced but dead, and living respectably as man and wife." It is impossible they can find their predestined mates, because there are none to find. Therefore, legal marriage, bad as it is, will do better for a steady thing than the accursed Alcina of affinity-hunting, whose only recommendation is having shaken the chains of legal marriage in her paroxysms until everybody heard them rattle. Our children's hope of deliverance from legal marriage is in the varietists, who love moderately, as long love does; love new loves without repudiating old; love their children more than the children's mothers; and love the mothers' children as much as the mothers, although not their own.

Let me remark, in conclusion, that there is nothing personal about all this, notwithstanding "Matadore." I have not said that Mrs. Chandler is Alcina—only that she repeats a cant which Alcina originated. Can she lay claim to similar temperance in controversy? Are not her allusions to the "heat" of brutes, and her anecdotes about the young man in love, aimed directly at the personality of varietists?

So Brook Farm killed socialism for H. M. Parkhurst! Brook Farm was a fatal place to many souls. Dana was there. But the victims of Brook Farm were all very easily convinced. It has been justly said, by one not a socialist, that the modern advocates of socialism are not to be disposed of by that easy stroke of the pen which identifies them with persons so curiously unlike them and one another as the Buddha, Plato, St. Benedict, John Ball, Joss Fritz, Campanella, Sir Thomas More, Babœuf, Owen, Fourier, Rapp, Ann Lee and J. H. Noyes. All these would doubtless have their place in a complete history of socialism—itself a very vague term—but they had nothing in common beyond a more or less wholesome dissatisfaction with "things as they are." Socialism, since Saint Simon, has been evolutionary. Its corner-stone is demonstration that "things as they are" simply cannot last—that the existing bourgeois system had a beginning, and is evidently destined to an end—that the merchant triumphed over the knight in the battle of life by aid of the proletaire; and that, having done so, he must either accept the rule of the proletaire (social democracy), or escape into no-rule (anarchism). One who knew this could have foreseen that Brook Farm would fail, without trying the experiment. He must have seen that religion, the inspiration of a few, is necessary to successful withdrawal from the world; and that the world is not to be changed by withdrawal, even when successful, but by the development of its inherent tendencies. One who did not know it was behind the age then, and that he should be so still is very natural.

"Then and Now."

BY WM. GILMOUR.

I am not sure whether gross physical cruelty keeps pace with or is a necessary accompaniment of piety and religionism, but in reading over some data on Scottish town-life before the Reformation I have been much struck with the tortures inflicted upon people in those good old days, for the most paltry offenses. The fact that people are not tortured so openly nowadays does not prove that tortures are not inflicted; in act, I am disposed to think that the social ostracism, the ossiping, the scandal-mongering of people for entertaining radical opinions on orthodox and tabooed subjects, may be as great a punishment to some men and women as were the modes of punishment in force in Scotland before the period spoken of.

To say openly that you are an anarchist, an atheist or a free lover is the best and quickest way of getting dismissed from your situation; of being spunned by your supposed nearest and dearest friends of being pointed at as a person who should be studiously avoided in almost all walks of social life; and, were it not for the fact that there are some men in good social positions holding similar opinions, and who are ever ready to come to the assistance of some poorer freethinker in the broadest sense of the term, and that the public press, even the most commercial of them, are, upon the whole, ready to defend the outspoken utterance of a bold individual, we would have the same old methods of bringing conviction to the stubborn minded as in days gone by. I am not, of course, attempting to interpret the spirit of American orthodoxy, but rather that form of it which holds sway in Scotland. The Parish minister, in the real country district, is as tyrannical in his own sphere as any inquisitor, and I am credibly informed that the village vicar of the church of England is, in that country, much nearer to his ancient inquisitor brother-in-trade than the Kirk of Scotland man. He is boss at the school; in the home—when he goes there; at all social gatherings; salutes must be his when met by his parishoners on the highway, and all the boys must—at the risk of a sound thrashing if they don't—doff their caps when the lord's representative is met within the parish boundary.

Again, to come into a large city like Glasgow and look for a situation in an office or some such employment, ay, even in the liquor traffic, without "a line from the minister" is the worst fate that can befall you, and your chances of getting engaged will be increased if you have a note from your Sunday school superintendent and your secular schoolmaster. Then when you leave your native village, the one clergyman informs his town brother of your departure, and before you are properly settled in your new quarters the senior elder of his church calls on you to inquire for your welfare—but in reality to see that you join his church. If you refuse to go, you are reported at home, and straightway become a marked, a dishonored man.

So much for the condition of the God-fearing at the end o the nineteenth century in Scotland.

What of the past? Well, sixty years ago people were hung in Glasgow for robbery or house-breaking. It hardly seems possible—but 'tis true nevertheless. Still farther back, if you began to "flyte" (scold) a neighbor you'd be put in "stocks" or in the "cuck-stule," which at a later date was placed in the church and was called the "stule o' repentance." Someone has no doubt read: "Robin! come hither sir, and answer for't, yer blam't for jobbin," and as he advanced he was made to get up on the "stule" to be duly admonished because he was no celibate. And if a child was born out of the orthodox marriage fold, the parents had to present themselves for a sound talking to from minister and elders, and many of them, doubtlessly, gay old sparks themselves.

"For strubling Agnes Henderson, calling her slanderous names, and threatening to lay a pint storp on her 'chaps,' Marion Ray was hung from the head of the Tolbooth building in a creel during the will of the provost and bailies." For a very small offense the culprit had often to go bareheaded, barefoot, and clothed in a white sheet carrying a candle of one or more pounds and present it during the public service in church. Other crimes were met by fining, banishment, confiscation of goods, whipping, ducking, drowning, beheading, hanging or being nailed through the ear to a wooden post. To obtain acknowledgement of religious dogmas, and to exact confession of stubbornness and error from a man, the most stringent and forcible methods were brought into action. Thumb-screws for crushing the thumb bones; boot-jacks to crush the feet; racks, and many other torturing machines were utilized; sometimes successfully, and at other times to no purpose.

State, or communal, legislation was quite common—as common in the sixteenth century as it is becoming more fashionable nowadays. According to one writer "the town officials fixed the price of everything to be sold." By the ale-tasters the strength was tested, and the price fixed of all ale brewed for sale. In modern times, the exciseman does the first named—the seller the latter. The judges of bread "fixed the price at which the bread was to be sold, and tested its weight and quality;" and no one could sell any article at a higher or lower figure than that fixed by the authorities.

That the wife was the husband's property was tacitly, if not directly, recognized. If a man had a talkative wife who used her tongue in miscalling her neighbors the husband, when occasion and circumstances required him to leave his town to go to another, would get his certificate, but not free from blemishes—all his wife's misdemeanors and faults would be inscribed thereon in order to warn the authorities, religious and civic, that he was careless of his domestic duties, and should be watched. So far as sexual relationships were concerned, I take it that they remain practically unchanged. The Holy Romish Church has never had any desire to liberate any of its members from the marriage bond, and to this day in Scotland will not sanction divorce. In extreme cases of cruelty a separation may be had, but 'tis distasteful in every sense to Mother Church.

I have been speaking of long ago: of those dark days of priestcraft, ignorance, misery and war. What of the present, or, prospectively, of the future?

Well, I think I perceive the dawn. Here and there one can find a few hardy souls, full of hope and energy. Let them not be dismayed—their numbers are daily increasing. Every man and woman, young man and maiden, who proclaims a love of freedom and lends his or her help in its cause, is hastening on the happy time.

Bold and original thinkers have pointed the way to liberty. On, then!

Lord Macauley has remarked somewhere, and I close with this quotation (from memory). "The highest intellects, like the tops of mountains, are the first to catch and reflect the dawn; they are bright while the level below is still in darkness. But soon the light which at first illuminated only the loftiest eminences descends to the plain and penetrates to the deepest valley. . . . The sound opinion held for a time by one bold speculator becomes the opinion of a small minority, a large minority, of a majority of mankind. Thus the great progress goes on."

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus: so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

LUCIFER CIRCLE evening has been changed from Tuesday to Thursday. The next regular meeting will be Thursday evening, Sept. 2, at 1394 West Congress St. All are welcome.

Murdered by Sex Maniacs.

Infuriated savages, who pretend to be civilized and law abiding, riddled a fellow man's body with bullets, mangled it with pitchfork tines and bruised it with stones at Schiller Park, a Chicago suburb, last Thursday. Papers found in the victim's pocket after his death show that he was insane. His alleged offense was a violent assault upon a woman he attempted to rape. If such an offense by an insane man is worthy of ignominious death how much worse punishment is due to those men who rape their own wives without even the excuse of being demented? How many among those who shed his blood were guiltless of legal rape?

Life at Lake Brady.

BY THE EDITOR.

The little lake called Brady—named in honor of a man who made a perilous leap in crossing the Cuyahoga river, at a point near the lake, while fleeing from Indians in the early settlement of the country—is not so well known in song and story as is Lake Geneva in Switzerland, Lake Genesaret in Palestine, or as some of the English and Scottish lakes that Wordsworth, Burns and Scott tell us of, and yet all who have had the privilege of floating upon its clear waters will agree that Lake Brady has charms not often found by one who would escape from the turmoil of city life and get into closer relations with Mother Nature.

The transition from the heat, dust and noise of a great city to the comparative coolness, quiet and repose of the wooded hills surrounding this beautiful lakelet, brings sensations more easily imagined than described, and yet very difficult of conception to those who have never had a similar experience. The purity of the atmosphere, absence of dust and smoke, absence of the many urban sights and sounds that suggest human misery and degradation, all combine to make one feel that he is, for the time, an inhabitant of another world. Added to these are the influences brought to bear upon one who cares to investigate the philosophy and phenomena of modern Spiritualism—Lake Brady being one of the noted "camps" at which, for some years past, have been congregated hundreds and thousands of the believers in and investigators of that philosophy, cult, or "religion," as some choose to call it.

As frequently before stated in these columns I prefer not to be labeled. I answer not to the roll-call of any sect or "ism." And yet, as a conscious human being I feel a deep interest in all that concerns humanity. Prominent among human interests is the problem of continuity of life. "If a man die, shall he live again?"—or rather, does the human ego really die, when the breath leaves the visible body?—is a question that has interested the wisest as well as the most ignorant in all ages of human history.

That there is much of the fraudulent and deceptive connected with the phenomenal side of modern Spiritualism has often been shown. This fact need excite no surprise. In our commercial age, our mercenary age, the wonder would be if such were not the case; but after all due allowances are made for frauds—whether conscious or unconscious on the part of "mediums," there remains a large residuum that cannot thus be explained. At least such is the conviction of many thousands of honest investigators—of whom I claim to be one.

As stated a year ago, when visiting this camp, my chief object in coming to Lake Brady is not to investigate Spiritualism, but rather to extend Lucifer's work and, incidentally, to get a little needful rest and recreation for my own personal benefit. It is at the gatherings of Spiritualists that I find the most tolerant spirit, the most hospitable hearing for the reforms to which Lucifer is devoted. While no effort was made by myself or friends to secure such invitation I was cordially invited to the platform as one of the speakers on "Woman's Day," at Lake Brady this year, and also last; also at one of the few "conference" meetings held on the grounds since my arrival here. While the great financial depression makes it impossible to do much in the way of business my first week in camp has not been a failure, from a business point of view.

Among the noted speakers who have held the attention of large audiences since my arrival at the Lake, are Lyman C. Howe of Fredonia, New York, Mrs. Anna Robinson of Port Huron, Mich., and Miss Maggie Gaule, the famous "platform test medium," of Baltimore, Md. Week day audiences have not been large but on Sundays excursion trains bring crowds of people from Cleveland and other neighboring cities and towns. On Wednesday the 11th about six hundred of the patients at the "State Hospital" or asylum for the insane, with their attendants came from Newburg, Ohio, for a picnic on one of the hills overlooking the lake. Citizens and campers mingled freely with the patients, most of whom seemed to enjoy their outing quite as well as though sound and well. It was hard sometimes to distinguish between patients and visitors, or even attendants, except by their badges. Most of the patients with whom I talked seemed not to know that they were being treated as insane. One, however, whose history I knew something of, having met her a year ago at the camp,—the bride of a few days, made something of a sensation by dropping out of the ranks and imploring her friends and acquaintances to "save her," declaring that she was unlawfully and unjustly held in confinement, and that she is not insane at all.

On the Saturday following, Mrs. Anna Robinson took occasion, in her address in the "Auditorium," to speak of the insane and of the utter lack of real knowledge of what insanity is and of its causes and cure. Also of the causes and cure of crime, which she designated as a form or symptom of insanity.

Lack of space and time prevent further report for this week, of what I have seen and heard at Lake Brady.

Again the Inquisition Moves.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Quite a number of years ago, Dodd, Mead & Co., very orthodox and very respectable publishers of New York, brought out a little book called "Almost Fourteen." It was intended to impart necessary but generally neglected instruction to boys and girls approaching the age of puberty. They are very careful in regard to what they publish; it has been said that "literary men could not think of offering to them for publication 'Trilby' or 'Tess of the d'Urbervilles' or any other work o a realistic inclination." The publishers thoroughly approved "Almost Fourteen," as did Mrs. Mead, Rev. Lyman Abbott (who read it in manuscript), and other conservative persons. Nevertheless, when the work came out the "unco guid" were terribly shocked, whereat Dodd, Mead & Co., were "sincerely surprised." "The booksellers, some of the publishers' patrons, and some of the literary journals commented upon the work adversely until the edition was recalled and a revised one issued in its place." In the book shops the current question was "Can you imagine how Dodd, Mead & Co. were persuaded to publish such a book?" The author eliminated much of the "physiological and illustrative detail" and sent out the new edition.

But the concession was in vain. "The movement in favor of ignorance" bore remorselessly on, and now the New England Watch and Ward society, a Massachusetts institution of the same genus as the Vice Society of New York, has pounced upon "Almost Fourteen." An antiquated numbskull of the name of Chase is at the head of the Watchers and Warders, and he has just caused the arrest of Albert F. Kent, editor of the Newburyport (Mass.) "Item." Mr. Kent's offense is the serial reproduction of "Almost Fourteen." At the time of writing he is under bonds of eight hundred dollars, held to appear for trial in a week from the time of his arrest. Interviewed, Mr. Dodd says: "I cannot explain the action of the New England Watch and Ward Society in condemning the work, except by saying that this condemnation is the effect of an error of judgment. The author of 'Almost Fourteen' and the publishers of it stand by it, surely."

"The error of judgment" is more than a mere mistake of the Watch and Ward Society. The American people have been guilty of the stupendous folly of allowing a little group of hysterical and jaundiced men and women, who have no useful business to occupy their minds, to set themselves up as the censors of the literature, art and morals of the nation. But back of this immeasurable silliness was the primary colossal blunder of a sex-superstition that forbade perfect frankness between parents and children, teachers and pupils, and writers and readers, regarding the amative and reproductive glands and functions of human beings. Our Comstock and Chase surveillance is the legal expression of our individual and collective ignorance and cowardice where sexual facts are touched in our thought and experience. Sexology is under the taboo imposed by the medicine men of theology and morals, and the postal statutes to which Mr. Dodd's publication has fallen a victim are the political manifestation, by Act of Congress, of that taboo. Corruption and tyranny must run riot in any community where the processes of the reproduction of their kind are looked upon by self-styled rational beings with suspicion, aversion, fear, disgust and horror. Such an attitude toward sex, the fundamental fact in the perpetuation of Man, is utterly *ir*rational, and cannot fail to be disastrous in every direction.

I should like to be sorry that "Almost Fourteen" has been prosecuted, but when I remember that Dodd, Mead & Co., Dr. Abbott, and the others of that caste are the passive when not the active sustainers of the Comstock despotism, I confess that I feel a certain satisfaction in the knowledge that they at last writhe under the sting of their own lash. It is just possible that the irritation and pain will induce some of them to do a little independent thinking. They may inquire why it is that honest teaching of needed truths is a crime in a "Christian nation."

Sociologic Lesson. No. XXXXVII.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

PRODUCTIVENESS OF LABOR. A very large proportion of the results of labor is due not to muscular exertion, or even to skill, but to the implements which are used. A farmer, wanting his garden dug, hires three men. A has no tools, but breaks off a limb from a tree and stirs the earth with that. B brings with him a spade, with which he does as much in an hour as A can do in a day. He is entitled in equity to pay in proportion to the amount of work done. But nine tenths of it is done by the spade and only one tenth by himself. He is entitled to all, because he owns the spade. C is furnished with a spade belonging to his employer; so that he and the spade can accomplish as much as B; but he is only entitled equitably to as much as A, since he works no harder and contributes nothing but manual labor. Under the fundamental law that the result belongs to him who produces it, nine tenths of the results of C's labor belong to the employer who furnished him with the spade. These considerations show, when applied to labor generally, that the employer who furnishes buildings to work in, and machinery and tools to work with, usually receive very much less than his equitable proportion of the results of labor. This is largely due to a compromise, by which the laborer is allowed partial payment for the work done by the tools with which he works, to induce him to forego obtaining possession of such tools for himself, as he might easily do if he appreciated its importance. Probably at least half his pay, although nominally for manual labor, is practically a bribe, to induce him to remain in a position in which it is impossible for him to become independent.

The Logic of Slavery

BY REV. SIDNEY HOLMES.

Professor Parkhurst in this issue of Lucifer uses the logic of slavery, not of economic freedom. Under freedom C would not use a spade unless it would increase the reward of his labor. D's spade will produce nothing unless it is used. If "the result belongs to him who produces it" then D has no claim to the product of C and the spade unless both are his tools. And so they are regarded under the present iniquitous system of exploitation. D retains all of the result of the labor of C and the spade except enough to keep his tools in repair. The so-called wages allowed C are merely sufficient to keep his muscles in repair and enable him to reproduce other human tools.

But the spade alone produces nothing. C alone produces one square rod of garden bed. C takes the spade as a partner and the product of C plus the spade is ten square rods. An equitable division then is five square rods a piece; and if C should receive such an equitable share he would soon have a spade of his own and D would have to dig, pay C more than fifty per cent. of the joint product of a man and a spade or starve.

Lois Waisbrooker writes that she is ill, and while she does not desire an appeal made for contributions for her aid, she would be glad to receive orders for any of her books, the titles and prices of which are as follows: "The Fountain of Life,' 50 cents; "Perfect Motherhood," $1; "Occult Forces of Sex,' 50 cents; "A Sex Revolution," 25 cents; "Helen Harlow's Vow," 25 cents; "My Century Plant," $1; "Anything More My Lord?" 10 cents. Mrs. Waisbrooker's trouble is malarial. She is confined to her room at present, but her doctor hopes to bring her out of her illness in better condition than she has been in for years. Her address is 1512 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal. L. H.

Publisher Richmond Makes a Clear Distinction.

In the New York "Herald" of August 3, appears this letter from George H. Richmond, now in the toils of Comstock for selling D'Annunzio's "Triumph of Death":

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE 'HERALD':—

"I would like to say a word in regard to my examination before Commissioner Shields this morning in relation to the publication and sale of 'The Triumph of Death.' I was asked if I had said I would not allow my daughter to read the book. I was only allowed to say yes or no, and was not allowed to give my reasons, leaving it to be inferred that I considered the book immoral. That, however, was not my reason. My objection was general rather than specific. I do not believe that books portraying scenes in life so painful and so tragic as shown in the pages of this much discussed book should be put in the hands of children or young girls, and the same remark applies to my mind to books like 'Trilby,' 'Jude the Obscure,' 'A Lady of Quality' and a great number of books in circulation published and sold by firms of the highest standing in the country. I doubt even if a book so widely known as 'Vanity Fair' is just the book to give to a very young girl, whose mind is open to new impressions.

"The trouble seems to be that certain persons, whose intellectual horizon is very limited, seem to think that no books should be published that children and very young people may not read. It is certainly very strange that the only 'girls' who have written for the book in dispute are acknowledged to be the creatures of Comstock's own imagination, and this is a fair sample of his method of manufacturing evidence.

"GEORGE H. RICHMOND.

"New York, August 2, 1897."

Are Bank Checks Currency?

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

I wish to refute Mr. Parkhurst's statement that currency includes bank checks. Bank checks do not pass current, and are not currency. If Mr. Parkhurst wishes to satisfy himself of that fact, let him try to pay his way to Chicago with the best of bank checks. He could not pay his fare with them to the Brooklyn bridge. If bank checks were currency, there would be no possible contraction of the currency, for they can be issued in unlimited number.

If Mr. Vanderbilt should buy a railroad, and pay it with a check for one hundred million dollars, he would not add one cent to the currency of the country, but if the people of the United States should decide to print and issue five hundred million dollars of treasury notes, it would raise prices as soon as they got in circulation, and yet no change in the amount of the basis of the currency would have taken place.

The argument of the gold men last fall, that there was no lack of currency because its place was taken by bank checks, was in my estimation one of these arguments got up on the spur of the moment to stem the free silver tide, and like many others, succeeded for a time in misleading the people. But adversity is a pretty good teacher, and four more years of McKinley prosperity will probably find the Americans a wiser, if a sadder, people.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LII.

Owen retained his grasp while he looked the other full in the face. He saw it clearly now. The man was not intoxicated; he was sick. The eyes glowed feverishly from their hollow sockets, his cheeks were sunken, what were to be seen of them, for the lower part of his face was covered with a handsome flowing beard.

"You are sick," said Owen, "and are raving."

"Sick? Yes! Raving? Ha! ha! ha!" The wild wierd laughter made Owen think he was confronting a madman. "So would you rave were the bloodhounds of the law hunting, dogging your every step." Another chill crept over Owen. Was it a desperate criminal he had encountered? Had he made a mistake in attempting to interfere with the action of this stranger? Then again, when he looked closer, he did not believe it. By the bright light of the full moon the face before him showed not a single trace of what he would expect to find in the face of a criminal. Sick and delirious he might be, but nothing else. Speaking in an authoritative manner he said:

"Come with me. This is no place for you. I will see that you are taken home and cared for."

"Home! Ha! ha! What a mockery the word is. I wonder if any one ever has known by experience what the word implies?"

Owen was beginning to feel the effects of the cold. Here by the water's edge it was doubly keen and the standing still added still more to it. Once more he spoke. "Come, you can not stand here all night, and surely you have thought better of the rash action you contemplated. At any rate I shall not move from your side until you come with me."

A bitter smile for a moment rested upon the bearded face of the stranger, then he said:

"Very well, some other time will do as well. Lead. I will follow, and then explain why on this night of all others, when the world is rejoicing over the birth of a "redeemer," I came so near seeking and finding a watery grave."

Owen accompanied the staggering stranger to Seventh avenue where they had the good fortune to find a cab. Both men got in and were driven rapidly to the hotel where Owen was staying, arriving there just as the gray dawn was breaking. Having reached Owen's rooms the stranger sank exhausted into a cushioned chair. Owen assisted him to disrobe and placed him on the couch where he was soon sleeping soundly. Owen then stretched his tired limbs upon a lounge and in a little while he also was in the land of dreams.

It was almost noon when he awoke. He arose and walked over to the bed whereon the stranger was still sleeping. While he was debating the advisability of awakening the man before him the stranger opened his eyes. A bewildered look for a moment filled them, then returning memory brought with it recognition of the face before him and the circumstances which brought him into the present surroundings. A bitter smile moved the bearded lips as he half rose. Leaning his head upon his hand he let his gaze wander about the luxurious apartment and biting scorn was in his words as he spoke:

"It is not likely that you, who can afford surroundings like these, would ever attempt so desperate a deed as you prevented me from doing a few hours ago."

"Why did you do it?"

"Why did I do it? You cannot realize to what utter despair and darkness you have called me back. I will have all these battles to fight over again, and the struggle is not an easy one, I can assure you."

The bitterness that rang through every word betokened a despair that was deep seated, and Owen's heart was touched deeply.

"Tell me, and let me judge. But first, however, I think it would be advisable to take care of the inner man. So while you arrange your toilet, I will order some breakfast. It is somewhat late in the day for that meal and all the more necessity that it should be partaken of."

Accordingly a generous repast was ordered which was served in an adjoining apartment. After they had finished their meal they drew their chairs before the fire. The stranger leaned his head with its heavy clustering hair upon one hand and sat staring into the glowing coals. Owen did not disturb his train of thought but patiently awaited his pleasure, and by and by he was rewarded. The hand dropped and the head was raised.

"And now, since you have shown an interest in my case, I shall tell you my story briefly. For years I have been the only support of a widowed mother, an only sister and a delicate younger brother. My father has been dead quite a number of years and sad as is the fact, it was rather a relief to be rid of him. The more pitiful because of the fact that he was a very intellectual man once, but hard luck during the early years of his married life, when it seemed that there was no work for him to do, even though he offered his service for a mere pittance, had embittered him. He had loved the girl he married and bright were his visions of the future. But his misfortune made him desperate and he took to drink, which transformed the gentle-tempered, loving man into a veritable demon. Forgetting that unkind fate had already placed a much too heavy burden upon the slender shoulders of the delicate woman the demon of jealousy took possession of him. Discord dwelt where love and tenderness once held supreme sway.

"Only when at great intervals he let drink alone, long enough to clear his befuddled brain, would the intelligent mind assert itself. But the realization of his wretched condition and surroundings would then almost drive him distracted and he would return to his cups with a wilder abandon than ever. When in a drunken brawl he was struck down and they brought the livid corpse to the wretched abode he had called home, the unhappy family were conscious of a feeling of relief rather than that of sorrow.

"I was then but fourteen years old, but tall for my age and on me fell the task of supporting my mother and younger brother and sister. It was little, indeed, that a lad of my age could earn; but we fared better than hitherto. And as I grew older and was able to earn more our condition improved.

"As my education had been sadly neglected in my childhood and I began to realize it, I determined yet to master it, so my evenings were now devoted to study. My sister, a very pretty and charming girl, when she became old enough also added her mite by becoming a factory girl. Her beauty made her position a difficult one, and her warm love nature, which had been starved into a craving hunger, caused her to fall an easy prey to the handsome, wealthy young scoundrel who was the son of the factory owner.

"Her condition soon became apparent and when I questioned her she broke down and confessed the whole pitiful story. She had not even the tender words and caresses of her lover, now, to support her. He had tired of his plaything and cast her aside. I understood what arts are employed to lure to her destruction a poor loving creature and could only pity her from the bottom of my heart. Not so, however, my mother. She had been reared within the narrow confines of the church. Her standard of virtue was, 'touch me not,' regardless of what the circumstances might have been. So the mother who should have been her stay and comfort only cast reproaches upon the head of the despairing girl, driving her almost insane. My brother, too, could not forgive her for the disgrace she had brought upon him. He would not speak to her. I have often seen him draw back at her approach that her clothing might not brush against him.

"Of course he was very young then, only a boy, not yet fifteen, but it would cut me to the heart to see the blood mount to her face. When it became unbearable she would fly to me and I would try all in my power to pacify her; drawing upon myself the condemnation of the others, who could not understand how I could countenance such shamelessness.

"But even my sympathy could not sustain the breaking heart, and when the trying hour came her strength failed and with a little stillborn girl-baby folded in her arms my beautiful sister was laid out of sight.

"Although my mother wept bitter tears, I fear she felt much relieved that the matter ended as it did, for now grass would grow over the grave of Millie's shame. Robert, my brother, also seemed deeply affected. But her name was never mentioned now. I knew best what the poor girl had suffered, and it was a long time ere I could forgive either my mother or my brother. Robert was not very sweet-tempered at best. From his birth he had been delicate. A puny, fretful infant, he came at a time when the nightly debauches of my father set my mother almost wild, souring an otherwise gentle and loving nature.

"Notwithstanding his ailings, however, he was his mother's favorite. If his advent had been dreaded it seemed as though upon his arrival her heart went out to him with a spasmodic passion. She never refused him anything it was in her power to give, thereby showing a decided weakness of character.

"This was the worst thing she could have done, as it had the tendency to develope all the bad traits of Robert's weak character. As he was physically unfit for work the support of the family rested entirely upon my shoulders. But as the years sped by there came a change. A saucy black-eyed maiden crossed my path and my fate was sealed. I loved her with all the strength of my passionate nature. To me she seemed perfect and I had no greater desire than to make her my wife. First, however, I felt it my duty to tell her of the sad history of my early life. She gave the black curls a saucy toss and said she could not see how all this should possibly effect us any. I caught her in my arms and strained her to my breast, my heart almost bursting with its overflow of admiration of the grand nobility of character, which I thought was exhibited in those words; never once dreaming that it was her very lack of character which prompted that declaration."

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Ralph E. Galbreath, Leetonia, O.:—I am highly pleased with Lucifer. I hope that we will not soon be without a paper which fearlessly attacks the popular evils of our times. Mr. Walker's tract, "Love and the Law" is to the point. I send $1.15 for one hundred copies of it.

John Hildebrandt, Borden, Tex.:—Through the kindness of a friend I received a copy of Lucifer of June 23, and to say that I was pleased with it would but poorly express my appreciation, therefore I will enclose twenty-five cents for a three months trial subscription. I am a believer in free love, and would be pleased if I could find a few ladies to correspond with.

Wm. Duff, Glasgow, Scotland:—Please send two dozen copies of Lucifer every week until further notice, and twelve copies of "Our New Humanity." Regarding pamphlets, I will not take any at present. I will see how Lucifer and "Our New Humanity" go, and you can rest assured I will do my best to spread the truths we all have at heart, or perhaps I should say, in mind. "The Adult" here is a genuine success. It fills a long felt want, and I am sure marks a new era in this country, as far as progressive thought is concerned.

Walter Paulsen, Jamestown, Kans.:—Enclosed find one dollar for a year's subscription to Lucifer for myself. I have received "Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs." The four half-tone portraits it contains are each worth what the book cost. Altogether it is a neat little book. I attended the Kansas Freethought Association convention at Clay Center. The Kansas Freethought Association is not narrow like the Oregon Secular Union, but seems to be truly liberal. I suppose Lucifer has done much in making Kansas Freethinkers free and liberal.

Emma Goldmann, 50 First St., New York City:—I am about to make a tour through the West delivering lectures on free love and other important subjects in every city possible, and I would greatly appreciate it if you will kindly make the announcement in Lucifer. I intend to leave New York Sept. 3, first visiting New England states, and on my return from there to start out for the West. Comrades wishing to arrange meetings, I would request to correspond with me at once. I do not wish for any compensation, all I wish the comrades to do, is to contribute toward the rail expenses. I herewith send you a list of subjects I shall lecture upon: "Prostitution;" "Woman;" "The Aim of Humanity;" "Marriage;" "Free Love;" "Why I am an Anarchist-Communist." Of course I shall be glad to speak on any subject the comrades may choose, if they will let me know a few days in advance.

OUR NEW HUMANITY.

Of all rights, the greatest is to be born well.

Vol. II., No. 3 contains: The Rights of Children; by R. B. Kerr. An interesting presentation of the other side of the question. Interrogations; by Walter Breen. Startling theories, facts and figures. What are Women Here For? By E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. When the Young Need to Know.—A Primer of Sexual Rationalism; by E. C. Walker. The New Martyrdom; by Lillian Harman. The Will. From the French of Guy de Maupassant. A Free Man's Creed; by Moses Harman. Price, 25 cents.

673.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury, .10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoke, .10
Vitae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr., .25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
Degeneracy; C. L. James, .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Causes of Hard Times; Chavannes, .05
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .15
Henry George Examined; J. K. Ingalls, .05
Christianity and Progress; G. W. Foote, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 36 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Ebriosity,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda. In "Appendix; Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Red Heart in a White World.

A Suggestive Manual of Free Society, proposing the Comradeship of all those who believe in the Spirit of Liberty as the essential element in True Society, and the immediate inauguration and practical realization of the Free Life. Price, 20 cents, 10 copies $1. For sale by M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of author. 135 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents. Address this office.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

A gentleman would like to correspond with a lady living in Chicago who approves of Iranism. Address J. C., care of Lucifer, 1394 W. Congress st.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of Ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical, and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free. Box 94, Portland, Oregon.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

A Single man wishes to correspond with a single Freethought lady not over thirty-five years old. Please address Lucifer C 39.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published. .50

Her Sinister and Licit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .20

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .15

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50
A Sex Revolution, " " .25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .75
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .15

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

THE ADULT.

A journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Bedborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League, Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscure Judes and Distracted Sues, by Leighton Pagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

THE UNREVEALED RELIGION.

An address of great depth, strength, and beauty. By the veteran, J. E. Ingalls.

"The rainbow is not less beautiful and wonderful to me than to Noah, or to the aborigines, because I understand something of optics and the refraction of light. The rose is not less attractive because botany has taught us to analyze and classify it. The Good of Truth, whether we worship it as an entity or as a personality, or conceive of it as impersonal, is an ever-living and persistent principle man can never cease to revere and admire. And his growth in knowledge and progress in all things refining and elevating to his nature will be promoted, not retarded, by the true but unrevealed, and as yet "unloved religion, 'The Religion of Progress'."

Price, 5 cents each; Address LUCIFER, 1394 W. Congress Street, Chicago

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1037, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Send Sex, Birth-date, 25 cents, and get outline life reading. Disease diagnosed, with advice whom to marry, by lock of hair. Life Guide Box 814, Pasadena, Cal.

We Will Send You forty (40) of the best anti-constipation, liver pills you ever saw on receipt of twelve (12) cents in stamps. Worth half a dollar. Agents wanted. The Ransom Supply Co., Chicago, Station X.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson Barker.
Box 122, San Jose, Cal.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 35. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPTEMBER 1, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 674.

Impromptu.

BY JONATHAN MAYO CRANE.

As by lot God wot,
And then, you know, it came to pass
As most like it was—Hamlet Act II, Scene 2

How strange a hodge-podge is this life!
Like puppets at a country fair,
Shown by a roving mountebank
And made to play fantastic tricks
By pulling slender hempen strings,
So we do act.
Free will's a thing does not exist.
Our wills, our minds and all our acts
Are set in grooves in which they run
Like set scenes on a play house stage.

Who can be free in such a cell?
The daring mind that would explore
The untrod fields in search of Truth
Is pulled back like a wayward horse
That tries to disregard the rein.
The Known is ours, and that alone
Our pleasure ground, our dwelling-place.
"Thus far," our fearsome brothers cry,
"Thou mayst with safety venture, but Step not beyond Convention's pale,"
So are our actions circumscribed
And, like unto dumb, tethered kine,
We graze and graze and ruminate.

Who hath set up this boundary pale
And hedged us in like ignorant curs?
When we through Superstition's fog,
Lured by the siren song of Truth,
Would make our way a halt is called.
"Thou shalt not!" is the dread command.
Who says "Thou shalt not?" I demand.
"Thus saith the Lord," is the reply.

Who is the Lord's interpreter?
Who are his deputies on earth?
Those black-robed priests who prate and pray,
Those fur-gowned magistrates—I say
Let them the Lord's credentials show.
If there's a God, let him appear
And say if these his vicars are,
Lest his great majesty itself,
His wisdom, love, perfections, grace,
Be made a laughing stock for men.

Another Official Incitement to Murder

BY E. C. WALKER.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug 10.—There was filed with Clerk Clemens here this morning a remarkable document. It was from Governor Atkinson, and orders that the fine of $100, imposed on W. H. Kimes for shooting Ben Hall, about a year ago, be remitted. The clerk is directed to discharge Kimes from all further responsibility.

In the course of the order the governor declares:

"This is a remarkable case. The only regret in the matter is that Kimes did not kill Hall. He ought to have done it. He tried to do it, but his pistol missed fire and he shot the scoundrel four times and, unfortunately, did not kill him.

"Every man who has a soul in his body will agree with me that he ought to have killed him. Hall is yet at large. He ought to be apprehended and imprisoned for life. I hope he will be.

"If the prosecuting attorney of Wood County does his duty he will see that the scoundrel is apprehended, prosecuted and imprisoned for his natural life for breaking up Kimes' home. I remit the fine in this case, and all the costs, with more pleasure than any word that the English language furnishes me can express.

"In this case Kimes did what every other man would have done under the circumstances, except that he ought to have practiced with his revolver or double barrelled shotgun, so that when he aimed at the scoundrel he would have brought him down.

"A villain like Hall is unfit to live in a civilized country. Such a man ought not to be allowed to run at large in a Christian community. I remit this fine and costs with more pleasure than I have words to express."

With some feathers stuck in his hair, his face paint-daubed, and his hands dripping blood, Governor Atkinson could easily pass himself off as an Apache chief out after the scalps of peaceful settlers. There is nothing in his yell to differentiate him from any other savage. He would make the ideal Kurd of Christian artists and correspondents.

While men like Judge Falconer of Kentucky sit on the bench and men like Governor Atkinson of West Virginia occupy the executive chair, there is no hope for the South. Hangings, torturings and burnings will continue to disgrace her, to prevent fair trials of the accused, to make accusation or suspicion equivalent to sentence of death, to still further degrade her citizens, and to raise up a new generation more callous, cruel, vindictive and irresponsible than the present. So long as the idea of punishment, of vengeance, dominates the minds of a people, so long will crimes of violence continue, so long will law and mob be informed by the spirit of the vendetta.

From the viewpoint of the governmentalist, Governor Atkinson is a traitor to the state—he would substitute the vengeance of the private citizen for the orderly processes of the law. He would have the individual be judge, jury, and executioner, where his own interests are involved, where his prejudices and passions are most likely to blind him to all considerations of justice, to extenuating circumstances, to all questions of doubt as to guilt, whether guilt is imputed rightly or wrongly. Governor Atkinson has forsworn himself, he has trampled his oath of office, and become the disrupter of the civil organization he was chosen to conserve. So much for Governor Atkinson as estimated by his fellow believers in the compulsory state.

From the viewpoint of the equitist, of the humanitarian, Governor Atkinson disregards the fundamental principle upon which rests all genuinely orderly society. Anger, passion, hate, revenge, should have no part in the administration of social regulations. A fair trial for every person accused of anti-social acts is essential to the preservation of the peace, security and life of the individual, to the preservation of the peace, security and lives of all individuals. In a word, every man wants "fair play" for himself, and if he is to have fair play for himself he must grant it to all others. Ex parte trials, lynchings, personal reprisals, are alike and all inimical to the well-being of the individuals composing the society, and disruptive of the society itself. Canovas, premier of Spain, dead with three bullets in his body, should be an impressive lesson to such as Atkinson, governor of West Virginia. Canovas died by the hand of an assassin because he had denied to the comrades of his slayer a fair trial in the open light of day, without intimidation and without torture. He sowed the wind and reaped the whirlwind, and greater disaster hurrieth apace.

From the viewpoint of the equal liberty and responsibility of the sexes, Governor Atkinson talks like a antediluvian. One would suppose, judging by his frenzied utterances, that the wife is simply a piece of property, which is "stolen" if she give of her love to another man. The lover is accused of "breaking up the home"; he is credited or debited with being the only responsible factor in the transaction, the only one subject to the demands of law or vengeance; the woman in the case is nothing; she does not think, she does not feel initiative'y, she does not choose, she is simply passed from one man to another —from her lawful owner, her husband, to her unlawful possessor, her kidnapper, her lover. She is a chattel, men only are persons. I wonder if the women of the South, if the women of America, are really proud of the position to which they are assigned by Judge Falconer and Governor Atkinson?

From the viewpoint of the rationalist, Governor Atkinson is unscientific, illogical, is lacking in good sense, and is, as yet, not even in the primer class in sociology. In the first place, it is better, as society now is, that a "home be broken up" if the wife love another better than she does her husband, or only as well as she does her husband, if the husband is not amenable to reason. No good can come of relations unsanctioned by love, and the hypocrisy involved in living with a man while loving in secret some other man is more disastrous than open rupture of the old relations. But, in the second place, there is no need to "break up homes," in so far as this phrase implies the dissolving of business associations and the scattering of children, if there are any. Men and women who are rational in sexual matters know that the affections cannot be forced, that very often one can love two or more of the other sex, that love ebbs and flows, that civilized persons do not think of murdering their lovers' lovers any more than they think of murdering their friends' friends, and, therefore, that the existence of another love or of other lovers of the husband or wife in no way necessitates the dissolution of partnerships other than the sexual, and very often not even of that. The state of society that prevails where the Falconers and Atkinsons bear sway and incite to slaughter must pass away in the course of development, as the blood of tiger and savage is slowly but surely drained from the veins of man.

Items From Colorado.

BY ALBINA L. WASHBURN.

One of the meanest confidence games on record is that which was played by a well dressed man and woman upon clergymen of several towns in Connecticut last week. The couple first appeared in Bradford, where they visited the town clerk and procured a marriage license. Then they went to the house of the clergyman and were married. The groom after the ceremony handed the parson a $20 bill and told him to take out $5 for his services. The minister did so and gave the newly wedded husband $15 in change. The couple left on the next eastbound train, got off at Guilford, and went through the same performance there. In all they visited five towns between Clinton and New London, were married in each town, and worked off five $20 counterfeit bills.

I clip the above from the Loveland "Register." If arguments against marriage were needed surely this strong one furnished by the much married couple and the long suffering clergymen ought to count heavily. "Marrying for money," this is, "with a vengeance."

I hope the time is approaching when it will be considered "bad form" to go to a strange clergyman to be joined together for life for better or for worse. And yet we used to think this "life sentence" was all right. We were single hearted then, the uses of married life had not been so universally supplanted by its abuses. Now the tax upon a woman's physical vitality in that relation, saying nothing of being considered legally and socially but the adjunct of a man, drives her to declare her independence. No wonder "the institution" has fallen into disrepute, but as a commercial dodge for shoving off counterfeit bills—this, saith the preacher, is the unkindest cut of all.

* * *

Loveland has lately been honored by a visit from the "Co-operative Commonwealth Van" inhabited by our good co-workers James Hogan, V. P. A. R. U.; N. L. Griest, Marxian Socialist, and Wm. Holmes, editor of the "Labor Exchange Guide" of Denver. The boys are out on a propaganda tour of the state, for socialism, revolution, Debs' Commonwealth, Labor Exchange and everything the people need and must have.

These comrades left Denver and made direct for Greely, where from the "rear platform" of their one horse "private car" they addressed the people, meeting with much sympathy and encouragement. Thence to Fort Collins where they were detained by heavy rain, and so gave three speeches awakening much interest and distributing thought-rousing literature.

Saturday evening brought them to Loveland where, being obliged to hasten on to Longmont and Boulder, there was only time to take tea with a certain sympathetic anarchist, to give one evening speech by the light of their flambeau and then after leaving leaflet and socialist books among a number of enquirers they folded their "van" unlike the Arabs and silently stole away in the soft moonlight across the country, past smiling orchards and ample hay fields where doubtless old Dobbin fared well, for says Comrade Griest, "We forage our way." The people ought to feed the revolution—but the name of the indifferent thoughtless and ignorant is legion. Yet now and then a seed finds lodgement in a fruitful mind and blossoms for the "generations following."

It is noticeable that the "Labor Exchange" so called as inaugurated by D. B. DeBernardi and now obtaining a foothold in every state, has some essential points of difference from the "Co-operative Exchange" instituted by myself some years earlier, viz., in February 1886, at Denver, then removed to Loveland, Colo. The Labor Exchange has organizations, officers, pledges, by-laws. The Co-operative Exchange has none.

The former use to some extent printed "checks" protected by all sorts of devices from any supposed enemies.

The latter uses entirely a money based on all labor and its products, past, present and future—including, of course, gold and silver—including in fact every thing. There is in the former a place of redemption. In the latter money "good for one dollar in labor and its products" is redeemable any where at any time any one agrees to use it and pass it on to the next—a universal medium of exchange which needs no banks, draws no interest, shows no partiality, but simply represents values.

There is room yet for more kinds of money although there are now in circulation to a greater or less extent, it is said, over six hundred kinds of money, aside from the vast amount of promissory notes doing duty (lamely) as money at all times.

Tell Mr. Debs for me that with my hearty sympathy and respect I will offer but one suggestion for the peace army soon to move to better conditions and a higher civilization. "Make your own money simple, universal, with which to buy every thing needful on your way. Thus you leave behind you a trail of money connecting the people with your colony.

Thus your products have a ready made channel when they come forth by which to flow back to those still in bondage. But if more is written this time it will, like the man's legs in the portrait, have to "hang over" from the sides of our brave little Lucifer paper.

LATER. I see Brother Holmes in his editorial letter to the "Labor Exchange Guide" gives me a hasty send off, naming me as not only the "head and front" of an exchange "similar to ours" but the "principal beneficiary." This I take it means the one principally benefited. Eleven years then of such devotion to "Co-operative Exchange" and the gradual descent to poverty which confines me now to one room for a home ought to have brought wealth instead! Thanks, Comrade Holmes, pass up your dish for more strawberries—and let us hope you may stay long enough on your next visit to Loveland to learn the facts in the case with regard to Co-operative Exchange and its simple-minded manager.

* * *

Have you heard of the "Cincinnati Trading Company?" Incorporated—2,000 shares at five dollars each. Fifty members. Stock bought with either labor or merchandise. A residence for one of its members nearly finished, material to be paid for in labor or products.

So every now and then and here and there "the superstition of government monopoly of money issue" is punctured and business goes on without it. And the people go marching on.

[The above letter from Lucifer's faithful friend and co-worker was overlooked—fared the fate of many other good and useful communications, for which seeming neglect I sincerely ask pardon. Much that is written for Lucifer's columns fails to appear simply because of lack of room for all. M. H.]

Sociologic Lesson. No. XXXXVIII.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

INTEREST ON MONEY. The principal part of production is by tools or implements, and not by labor. Nature works for those who ask it. Tools are the result of past labor, and can be bought for money, which is also the result of past labor. When money is borrowed, the owner forgoes its use in the purchase of productive implements, while the borrower is enabled to purchase them and receives what they produce. Interest on money is compensation for the advantages which the money might procure for its owner and is expected to procure for the borrower. If a farmer is plowing, and his neighbor wishes to borrow his horses to plow his own garden, it is manifestly equitable that compensation should be made. If the farmer wants to plow, and intends to buy a horse to help him, it is manifest that for the same reasons it would be equitable to compensate him for his loss, if that money is borrowed from him.

The Logic of Monopoly.

BY REV. SIDNEY HOLMES.

Last week it was the logic of slavery and this week it is the logic of monopoly with Professor Parkhurst. Without monopoly of credit there could be no such thing as usury, which Parkhurst calls interest. A person who borrows money at interest must give security exceeding the value of the money he desires. Under freedom the possession of such security would enable him to issue his own money and let the usurer work or starve. Benjamin R. Tucker in "Instead of a Book," page 178, says:

"Interest and house rent exist only because the state grants to a certain class of individuals and corporations the exclusive privilege of using its credit and theirs as a basis for the issuance of circulating currency. Otherwise credit would be free to all, and money, brought under the law of competition, would be issued at cost. Interest and rent gone, competition would leave little or no chance for profit in exchange, except in business protected by tariff or patent laws. And there again the state has but to step aside to cause the last vestige of usury to disappear.

"Usury is the serpent gnawing at labor's vitals, and only liberty can detach and kill it. Give laborers their liberty and they will keep their wealth. As for the Somebody [the usurer] he, stripped of his power to steal, must either join their ranks or starve."

I regret I have not space for further comment. I advise Professor Parkhurst to read "Mutual Banking," by William B. Greene, and to subscribe for Comrade Fulton's able paper, "The Age of Thought," published at Colum bus Junction, Iowa.

Popular Follies and Crimes.

BY JAMES S. DENSON.

Chauncey McGovern and Janet B. Montgomery met in New York and in two months were married. They call theirs a "scientific" marriage, and propose to "scientifically" reform the world by means of a statute law! Two persons must be firmly grounded in science to dare sign a contract of life relationship after having known each other only two months. The firm of Montgomery-McGovern has organized the "Society for the Perfection of the Human Species. It is eminently scientific to dream of the "perfection" of a perishable organism or of the aggregate of such organisms! This "perfection" is to be brought about through the electrocution of all children born idiotic or deformed, of all incurable lunatics, of all persons who have permanently lost the use of three senses; through the supervision of marriage by a board of state-appointed physicians—diseased, and "immoral" men and women to be forbidden to marry; through the enactment of laws abolishing "all existing absurd customs." Verily, this is a scientific programme! And what fun Montgomery-McGovern will have abolishing custom by law! The legal extirpation of religious beliefs would be a summer day's frolic compared with this task which our "scientific" friends have set themselves to perform. Another "scientific" measure of reform is to be the incarceration for life of all murderers and their daily flogging. "Electrocution is too merciful," lisps the gentle and scientific Mrs. Montgomery-McGovern. We must all admit the pre-eminent scientific qualifications of persons who cling to the barbarous conceptions of "punishment" which characterized the animistic stage of human development. Assuredly, such persons should be given full legal control of the property, persons and lives of their fellows. Of such has ever been the kingdom of the Inquisitor.

* * *

The wealthy friends of Brown University have forced Dr. Andrews to resign the presidency of that institution because his views on the financial question do not coincide with their own, or, more accurately, because he will not promise to be silent regarding his views. It is not claimed that he is not a good educator, or that his character is open to reproach. Simply because he exercises the right supposed to belong to every American citizen to say what he believes to be true and to advocate such measures of public policy as he deems good, he is shoved out of an educational institution that lays claim to the honored title of university. It may be asked what a college president knows about business that he should meddle with financial questions. To this it might be answered that a college president in these days is expected to know a great deal about business, for upon his shoulders is placed a large portion of the burden of raising money for the institution. Again, it might be answered that it probably would not have been thought that Dr. Andrews was getting out of his "sphere" had he taken the other side of the current political quarrel over finance. Dr. Andrews was frankly told that his opinions as expressed were endangering the revenues of the university, just as, only a few years ago, professors inclined to accept the teachings of Darwin were told that rich pietists would no longer give to the schools with which they were connected if the heresy of natural selection was taught therein, or even publicly sanctioned otherwheres by members of the faculties, and just as, in the ante bellum days, the financial interests of church schools and of the churches themselves were wielded as admonitory clubs over the heads of professors and ministers inclined to deny the divinity of slavery. If the price of the presidency of or a professorship in a great university is to be the mental independence and the freedom of utterance of the man who accepts the position, it will not be long before the great universities get down to the level of the ordinary denominational colleges. No Freethinker can favor proscription on any ground; above all others, the educator should have complete immunity from the menaces of priest and politician, of mob and millionaire.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1338 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 West Congress Street, Thursday evening, Sept. 2. Jonathan Mayo Crane will address the meeting.

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send sample copies and trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$276.25
A Friend, Cleveland, O.,	10.00
Mary Smith,	1.00
R. M. McKee,	1.00
Luna Hutchinson,	.50

The Social Evolution.

Middleton, O., Aug. 24.—The case of William Hunter, an employe of the Bicycle works, in this city, who was charged with bigamy, was compromised by wife No. 1, who hailed from Chicago, accepting seven acres of land near Hunter City, Ind. Hunter will continue to reside here with wife No. 2.

But what will the lawyers and the judges, the clergy and dear old Mother Grundy say to this? Will the guardians of public morality and purity be content to let Mr. Hunter and his two wives settle their own affairs in their own way without demanding tribute in the way of fees? and will Mr. Hunter and "wife No. 2" be allowed, by the people of Middleton, Ohio, to live in peace without a divorce from wife No. 1?

The news item just quoted is headed "Bigamy Case Compromised." It is significant that the compromise is effected by the surrender of "seven acres of land," by Hunter to wife No. 1. Thus, in our commercial age, our mercenary age, affairs of the heart, the love relations of women and men, are made matters of money or of property. As some one has pithily said: "In marriage contracts man bargains for the person of woman; woman bargains for the purse of the man."

But why should any one wonder at this? The instinct of race-preservation, of race-reproduction, is fundamental in the social structure; is the most powerful of all the human instincts, desires, or passions. By this instinct, this desire, this passion, man is irresistibly impelled to seek the companionship, the association, of woman, and likewise woman the companionship of man. But while the desire of companionship is mutual the needs of the sexes are not the same, nor equal in kind or degree; and this because their powers, duties or functions are not the same nor equal. While most men have the parental instinct—the love of offspring and the desire to help to care for children—it is easy to see why this instinct and desire should be characteristic of woman rather than of man, and why woman should seek for permanence in love-relations, and for the protection of home and of money or of what money brings, in order that she may be able to do her best work in building and caring for her children.

It is, therefore, quite natural, proper and right that woman should see to it that a suitable place, and means of support, be provided for her use before she takes upon herself the responsibilities, the fearfully heavy responsibilities of motherhood.

What is needed, then, in the social evolution, is not less solicitude on the part of woman for a home, and for the support and companionship of man, but that to woman shall be conceded the right to seek these, and to demand and secure these without in any way compromising her personal independence—without in the slightest degree forfeiting the right of control over her person, her time, her conduct, children or her home. How to practicalize this demand, this new declaration of independence is today the question of questions, the problem of problems.

On the Wing.

Leaving Lake Brady Saturday the 21st I returned to Cleveland. Met the Franklin Club Sunday afternoon. The attendance was quite as good as could reasonably expected to hear a radical discussion of the "Causes and Cure of Our Social and Economic Ills." Spoke about one hour at the opening, endeavoring to show that the real causes of "strikes," and of the injustice against which labor is now in open revolt, lie much deeper than would appear to the superficial reader, hearer and thinker. I tried to show how interrelated are all slaveries, and especially how modern wage slavery is related to and ingrained with that older and more basic slavery, the sex enslavement of woman, as wife and mother, and that no real and lasting solution of the labor problem can be reached until woman is freed from man's irresponsible domination over woman in the marital relation.

The subject was much too large for one address, and such seems to have been the opinion of the reporter for the Cleveland "Recorder" which paper said next day that the "editor of Lucifer spoke two hours, touching upon nearly every question now agitating the public mind," or words to that effect.

Comments and criticism by members of the club and by visitors, followed the opening address, and for an hour and a half the arena was a very lively one—the chief speakers being Joseph Lee, S. G. Lanham, Howard Dennis, Rose Bedford, Ann Purkin, John Jacobs, R. G. Holt, Fred Schulder, Claude Taylor and Ed Dykins, all of Cleveland; also by the president pro tem, Mrs. Mary Smith, of Newburg, Ohio, and by W. C. Pomeroy of Chicago, most of whom agreed in all important points with the opening address. One noteworthy exception was Howard Dennis, formerly prominent as a lecturer and leader in the Free Silver agitation, also as an Agnostic or Free thinker, now quite as earnest in defending the Republican policy, Christian theology and the orthodox codes of morals. Mr. Dennis, while giving the speaker credit for ability and good intentions, could not find language severe enough to express his condemnation of the sentiments and arguments he had listened to. He said the Bible foretells that in the latter days false prophets would arise and would deceive many, and that the editor of Lucifer is doubtless one of these false prophets. Said he was glad to see that the speaker's head is blossoming for the grave, indicating that soon an end will be put to his power to lead his fellow men into the paths that end in destruction to body and soul,—and much more to same effect.

Harsh, cutting as was the criticism of Mr. Dennis, who I learn is now a Christian preacher, it was mild when compared with that of W. C. Pomeroy of Chicago, who, if I mistake not, is prominent as an "organizer" and agitator for better conditions for the poor and disinherited wage-earners. He began by saying he was pained to see the Franklin Club, whose fame was nation-wide, waste its valuable time in hearing tirades such as that to which he had unwillingly listened. Said it was simply amazing to him that men would persist in making asses of themselves in the way he had just witnessed. Thought no denunciation could possibly be too severe for men who would defend common prostitution, and try to drag woman down from her present high and honorable position, and thereby send mankind back to barbarism and savagery. These are not his exact words, but the substance thereof.

A few applauded the terrible castigation administered by the labor orator from the "Windy City," but before the club got through with him he was quite willing to apologize, and to confess that he knew but little of the subject under discussion.

And such I have reason to believe is the mental condition of most if not all of those who denounce social radicals and the movement for absolute freedom, in all human relations including the sexual.

On the evening of the same day I had the pleasure of meeting some twenty or more of Lucifer's friends at the home of Mrs. Lee and of Joseph Lee, in that part of Cleveland known as Brooklyn. The object of the meeting was the formation of a club similar in purpose to that of the "Lucifer Circle" in Chicago, and after the pattern outlined in the "Call for Concerted Action" published in No. 672. This "Call" was read and commented upon, also a paper that had been prepared by Mr. Fred Schulder, advocating organization for mutual instruction in regard to the principles and facts underlying the problems of life. After discussion it was agreed that such a club should be formed in Cleveland. The times of meeting, with other preliminaries were then settled to the apparent satisfaction of all present.

Altogether the two weeks outing, though not a very pronounced success from a business standpoint, was a most enjoyable one, and, if I may judge from indications, the meetings held and acquaintanceships made will hereafter be productive of good results.

Returning to Lucifer's sanctum Wednesday evening, the 26th, I find everything moving on so smoothly and successfully that I have concluded to accept the cordial invitation sent by the president of Mississippi Valley Spiritual Association to visit the encampment of that organization at Clinton, Iowa, hoping to meet there, as in former years, many of the faithful friends who for many years have helped in all possible ways to build up a public conscience that will tolerate and welcome the radical truths to the dissemination of which Lucifer is and has been devoted.

M. H.

Since my preceding comments on the Newburyport case were written, the trial in the police court has taken place and Mr. Hunt (instead of "Kent," as first reported by the dailies) has been found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $100. I understand an appeal has been taken. According to Mr. Hunt's description of himself, he is a sort of compound of Editor Funk of the "Voice" and Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, having been engaged in making it uncomfortable for all classes of persons in his town whose ways of life do not have his approval. He says he has always been a "pure" man, and hence he finds it exceedingly difficult to understand why he has been attacked by other "pure" men who, like himself, are engaged in the propaganda of injected righteousness. He can understand it only on the supposition that some of the persons in Newburyport whom he has been stirring up the officials to persecute have instigated the prosecution in a spirit of "spite," and I should not be surprised if his surmise is the right one. The man of violence is quite apt to get some kicks and cuffs in the course of his life. Mr. Hunt may not have forgotten that the scriptures of his own church declare that "They who take the sword shall perish by the sword."

But, of course, the meddlesomeness of Mr. Hunt in other matters does not excuse the act of the Watch and Ward Society. The principle of freedom of speech and press and mails should be vindicated regardless of the unworthiness of the person in whose name it is assaulted. There is no excuse whatever for the prosecution of "Almost Fourteen," and the Liberals of the country should do all they can to encourage Mr. Hunt to make a stubborn fight.

E. C. W.

The "Great Woman Question."

A. F. Tindall, in "Liberty, Political, Social, and Sexual."

Let us look at social questions squarely in the face, and they all cluster round the great woman question. We will discuss them as freely as we dare, for, to our shame be it spoken, in free England we dare not discuss such questions fully. This restriction alone bears more weight than a hundred articles or speeches on this question. We see a hypocritical assent to established social customs, an assent which all must give or be ostracised. Also a servile press which ever, parrot-like, repeats the old stale moral axioms, however effete, and has a set of sermons ready to blast the fame of anyone who gets outside the pale. Thus false morality and apparent virtue exists on the one hand, mixed with a fearful amount of sorrow and female degradation on the other. Our puritans are ever preaching against this latter side of life. They call for fresh state enactments; they form their spy societies; they stir up the smug followers of Mrs. Grundy to goad on magistrates and police to ever fresh tyranny; they are full of devices to make vice difficult. So they drive the disease inwards, and make it more loathsome. They preach from their pulpits sermons to young men, though they do not understand human nature, or, if they do, dare not speak the truth about it. And what is the result? Espionage, disease, misery, and people of any means being the sport of blackmailers. For though society is rotten to its core, none dare be thought anything but immaculate, so deception becomes deeper, and the blackmailers and spies have a happy hunting ground. Without discussing for a moment the question of our rights, does the method succeed? No! And men of the world can only sum up the failure of our puritans by saying, this has always been and it always will be, and there is an end of the matter.

Shall then a large number of the fairest of creation always be thus degraded? Is there no remedy? Why does the social evil appear hopeless? Because the efforts to remove it are wrong. They are based upon the false notion of human nature, taught by religious asceticism, and on the idea that Governmental law can regulate the most powerful of human passions. The first step is to allow free discussion, both in speech and writing, on this question. The second step is to lay it clearly down that the State has no right to inter-meddle with the relation of the sexes, except to see that money contracts entered into of their own free will are carried out, and that the children of their unions are provided for till they attain maturity. Just as we have arrived at a stage in which it is admitted that the State has no right to dictate to a man his religious or political opinions, so it has no right to prescribe for him the form of his sexual relations. In Greece and other ancient countries, though marriage was honorable, the hetairai were not considered the social outcasts which puritans consider them to be. In this they do not follow their Master. How beautiful is the story when the erring woman is brought to Jesus that he may pronounce her doom. He said, "Let him without sin among you cast the first stone;" and legend further has it that he wrote upon the ground the particular sin of each one of the self righteous standing round. Would that this could be re-enacted in our law courts or churches now.

As a partisan of individual liberty I am not offering an opinion whether marriage as at present enforced is right or not, whether it should be more free, whether divorce should be easier or not; but, as an individualist, what I am striving for is that those who do not believe in marriage should have the same liberty as those who do. The State and its police have no right to treat them as social pariahs, to hamper and watch them, to spy into their actions and trip them up if possible. It has no more right to do this than the State in Turkey to keep women prisoners in harems. Let us remember that many may sincerely dissent from the received views. They may have studied physiological science; they may even have read the forbidden literature of Malthusianism; they may have seen that heaven does not always follow marriage; that to separate many of these life-long partners would be to the advantage of both; that two young people are not always right in their choice of each other, and that to give them no opportunity of reversing their mistake is a cruel tyranny. It may be just possible that people there are who have such opinions as these. These people may be filled with the purest motives if they write or speak these opinions, and if they translate them into acts are they to be held up to social ostracism by a double-faced press, and treated as suspects by the police? Social freedom has yet to be conquered. How many scapegoats do you want, oh, society? How many must you imprison, oh, socialistic state, before it will be won? As the force age departs woman will rise to be equal with man, having her vote, her property, and earning her own livelihood. The unions she will contract with man must then be on an equal basis; as she advances we can dimly see her salvation from her present state of bondage in marriage or infamy in vice. Her unions will then be the result of affection, not for money or to be kept. Such is the true marriage, but to obtain this salvation we must renounce the methods of the puritans, and struggle for social and sexual freedom.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LIII.

"In a short time we were married. But my dream of happiness was short lived. My wife and my mother had little in common, and often the passionate red lips would utter words that wounded the elder woman to the very heart. I soon saw how matters stood but was unable to control them. I pleaded with Annie, I reasoned with my mother; but the two beings whom I loved better than any others in the world had no love for each other. Several times I spoke sharply to Annie and to my surprise Robert sided with my wife against me and the mother who worshiped him. This seemed to break her heart and it was not long until she closed her eyes in her last long sleep.

"When all was over I again sought to reason with my wife. I folded her to my heart whilst I could scarcely repress the sobs that would well up from its depths. It seemed to me that she at first shrank from me, but I thought it must be only imagination.

"She now often treated me to perfect storms of passionate caresses and I was as wax in her hand. No request could I deny her, and I found myself rapidly sinking in debt. But I should not blame her. Poor child! she knew no better. She had been left an orphan at an early age; cuffed about from place to place, her heart always full of longings which were never satisfied. When she married me she believed all that would be at an end. What one man could do for his wife another should also do for his. That this was impossible she could not understand.

"Sometimes I felt like cursing her, then overwhelmed by a rush of tenderness I would almost crush her in my embrace and again she would win the victory. But the time came when I felt the waves closing over my head, and I surely must have been mad or I would never have done what I did."

The voice of the man broke and a suspicious moisture could be seen in his eyes. For a moment, he laid his hand over them ere he proceeded:

"I robbed my employer's safe of ten thousand dollars. I knew I would be received with a storm of kisses and caresses which would outweigh everything else. Let come what would, for once she should be perfectly happy.

"With the stolen treasure in my pocket I hurried home, a full hour earlier than usual, in a state of delirious excitement bordering upon insanity. I found the door locked, but having my latch key with me I did not ring but quietly let myself in.

"The little parlor was deserted; so was the dining room and kitchen. The soft carpet deadened the sound of my footsteps. I went from room to room and in Robert's room I heard voices. The door stood slightly ajar. Touching it lightly it opened several inches wider and the sight that met my eyes broke my heart. Clasped close in each other's arms, their heads pressing the same pillow, were Robert and my wife. A quick movement opened the door wide with a slight creaking sound; the two heard and both started up as if electrified. Annie screamed and clapped both hands to her face. Robert's face was a study. Hate and defiance were written in every line of it. With a sudden movement he took a revolver from his pocket and leveled it at my heart. But quick as was his action I forestalled him. With a single bound I was at his side and gave his arm an upward blow sending the bullet into the ceiling and the revolver into the far end of the room.

"'Madman!' I cried. 'What would you do? Have you not enough upon your conscience that you would commit murder?'

"The sullen, defiant look upon his face deepened.

"'I hate you!' he almost hissed. 'You are a constant bar to my happiness.'

"Unjust as I knew this accusation to be I made no comment upon it but asked:

"'Tell me one thing, and without prevarication, Do you love Annie?'

"Quick as a flash came the answer

"'I do!'

"'And you, Annie, do you love Robert?'

"But Annie sobbed and would not give an intelligible answer, until I sternly repeated the question, and then, between broken sobs:

"'O, I cannot help it. Indeed, indeed I cannot help it.'

"Staggering as beneath a blow I steadied myself for a moment against the table, then, with a mighty effort of will recovering myself, I took the stolen money from my pocket and threw it on the table.

"'Take it,' I said, 'and make the most of it. I have now no use for it. Be happy if you can, I shall no longer stand in the way. You are free in every sense of the word to do as you choose.'

"I turned to leave the room when Annie threw herself sobbing in my way. She clung to me in passion and despair, asserting again and again that she 'could not help it.' Almost forcibly I loosened her hold and pointing to the money on the table I said to Robert,

"'See to it, that you handle the money wisely, and remember that this girl now depends upon you for the comfort of life. I have done with both of you!'

"Overcome by a sudden impulse I once more caught her in my arms, clasping her close to my breast. I pressed a last kiss upon her lips, then putting the half-fainting form from me I rushed out into the cold night air. I surely need say no more. You now can understand what drove me to the verge of desperation. To find the woman who had driven me to the verge of ruin, untrue, was more than I could bear. A day or two and I would stand before the world exposed. The shame, the disgrace and the walls of Sing Sing loomed up before my mind's eye. I had been a slave all my life to adverse conditions. And now to lose the one boon that I prized above all others—my liberty! No, I would die first! And yet I had it not in my heart to wish any ill to those two. True, I felt bitterly towards my brother, but for some reason the fact of his actual helplessness was more clear in my mind than ever before. Have there not been countless cases wherein this very defect has appealed to the heart of some strong, healthy woman? and her pitiful 'I cannot help it' kept ringing in my ears. I knew never loved her more dearly than in the moment I gave her up or ever felt more tenderly towards him.

"Many conflicting thoughts surged through my brain; while constantly I questioned, 'Why? why?' And you may think me mad, sir, but the more I thought the more I blamed not them, the chief actors in this life tragedy, but the system from which such abnormal conditions could arise, and in one day make criminals of us all."

Owen listened as if entranced. The excited man had arisen and was pacing the room with hurried strides, wildly tossing the masses of dark curling locks. After a few moments he continued:

"Often and often I had gnashed my teeth in helpless fury when the few paltry dollars were laid in my hands that constituted the remuneration for work which I knew was worth more than three and fourfold that which I received. I knew if justice could be done I had only taken my own. But that was not law.

"Now my mind wandered in another direction. I knew Annie and Robert had been thrown long hours together in my absence. His weak, delicate condition first awoke her sympathy, and 'pity is akin to love.' The frequent squabbling during the life time of my mother helped develop these feelings in her heart. So the weakling, who all his life had been scorned and shunned by health and strength loving maidens, suddenly found himself the object of tender and sympathetic glances, and what wonder that his starved heart became inflamed? I could see the whole proceeding was but natural. But oh, the shame of it. No one else in all New York would look at the matter as I did, when it became known. But then the thought struck me, 'Was it necessary?' and must I fill a convict's cell? I answered 'No! No! No! Never!' Thus for many hours I walked the streets, thinking, thinking, thinking, until I found myself at the water's edge about to end all the maddening perplexities, when your hand stayed my movements. So now you are in possession of facts which I had expected to take with me into my watery grave."

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

W. Irving Lincoln, Beechwood, Mass.:—Enclosed find one dollar for Lucifer. If any of your friends have any literature for missionary purposes to send me I think I could use it to advantage.

J. M. Clarke, Henryville, Tenn.:—Find enclosed fifty cents for which send "The Old and New Ideal." Will you please save me a copy of Proudhon's "What is Property?" I will get it soon I think. You can not know how we both (my mate and I) enjoy reading Lucifer. It is utterly useless to attempt to reform the world so long as we force people to subserviency—whether it be to law, government, marriage, education, church or state. I received books Aug. 12. I hope to get soon "Red Heart in a White World," "Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs," "The Prodigal Daughter," "The Adult," "Bar Sinister," "A Free Man's Creed." Am going to travel soon, lecturing, canvassing, etc., and, rest assured, will do what I can for Lucifer.

John Foulds, Morecambe, Eng.:—My last subscription expired with No. 666. I ordered it on account of seeing it mentioned in "Natural Food." I little thought how invaluable and helpful it would prove to be to me. I have never yet been able to look very hopefully on that state of "Too-much married-dom," in which most of my personal friends exist. In Lucifer I have found a host of intelligent friends (most of whom I shall probably never see face to face), who are not afraid to use their reason and intelligence to change customs and modes of life that observation and experience prove to be unsatisfactory to those more in accord with spiritual progress. I would rather be cut off from the majority of my friends than cease taking Lucifer, which I should miss far more. I enclose six shillings for which send Lucifer and enclosed list of books.

J. G. Truman, Lemon City, Fla.:—In the writings of E. C. Walker we find many expressions that are grand and noble, but coupled with them are others that seem to me, if I am allowed a sailor's phrase, "to take all of the wind out of their sails." Of such is an expression in "Plumb-Line Paragraphs" in No. 666 of Lucifer as follows, "It can only rationally be said that Nature makes no mistakes when it is taken for granted that nature has no intentions, no plans, no schemes." Did I, and many more would-be reformers, believe that assertion, we would find ourselves lost in the woods without a compass or guiding star, and would either wander aimlessly, or we would seek the nearest bush or hollow tree for shelter and cease to progress entirely.

But I believe that Nature has intentions and plans and in her general principles and plans that she makes no mistakes, although individuals make great mistakes, and of this latter saying Mr. Walker is no exception. But these individual mistakes are a part of Nature's plans. Without them we could not have the experience that is necessary to give us true wisdom. To be so formed that we should always act right would be to lose individuality and become mere automatons unworthy of the name of men. Even the "fetish God" cannot make the impossible, as Mr. Walker would require him to do, to make wise men without the means of obtaining wisdom, or to make a two-year old colt in one minute.

But Mr. Walker further refers to other forms of life to show the failures of Nature. He says that "Not one in ten thousand of the fishes born reach maturity." Really, but I never learned that any fishes were born in the sea, I always thought that they were all hatched. But can Mr. Walker tell us what the grand consummation of the plan would be if all of these fishes reached maturity? What would be the result if all of the plants in the woods obtained full size? Or otherwise, what better would it be if but few were started to grow? If I read Nature rightly the object of these lower forms of life is to gather the crude atoms of earth and to work them over and prepare them to sustain the higher animal life.

I am told by scientific men that such work in necessary. And is it not better that they are numerous and do their work quickly and pass soon away, rather than to drag out a long dreary existence alone.

So we can see Nature everywhere working out grand plans, but those who lack the comprehension to understand them charge Nature herself with want of sense. And we can farther see the great law of compensation in Nature. Individuals who suffer that individuality may be developed. If right acting and consequent happiness were compulsory there could be no individualized thought or life; but now individuals are allowed to bring trouble upon themselves and others in order to start new sensations and thought. But foolish individuals think themselves wiser than Nature and try to make laws to compel people to obey their rules and all do alike in certain matters. But is it not better to take Nature as a guide and let individuals learn for themselves?

I believe with the editor of Lucifer that as sex seems to be the foundation of individual life it is of the greatest importance that it should be free, that we may learn more of its action that the world may be benefitted by it. But then I do not assume to know more than all the rest of the universe combined, so I am willing to learn something more than I now know. And yet I prefer Puritanism to the unrestrained, thoughtless licentiousness that atheism would give.

OUR NEW HUMANITY.

Of all rights, the greatest is—To be born well.

Vol. II., No. 3 contains: The Rights of Children; by E. B. Foote. An interesting presentation of the other side of the question. Infanticide; by Walter Brooks. Startling theories, facts and figures. What are Women Here For? By E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. What the Young Need to Know.—A Primer of Sexual Wrongs; by E. C. Walker. The New Martyrdom; by Lillian Harman. The Rationalists; by E. C. Walker. The New Martyrdom; by Lillian Harman. The Rationalists; by E. C. Walker. The New Martyrdom; by Lillian Harman. The Rationalists; by E. C. Walker. From the French of Guy de Maupassant. A Free Man's Creed; by Moses Harman. Price, 25 cents.

LIBERTY; Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

674.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker, .10
"ractical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .03
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .03
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury, .10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake, .10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr., .25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .50
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
Degeneracy; C. L. James, .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Causes of Hard Times; Chavannes, .05
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .10
Henry George Examined; J. K. Ingalls, .05
Christianity and Progress; G. W. Foote, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 30 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Ehrlichty,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Red Heart in a White World.

A Suggestive Manual of Free Society, proposing the Comradeship of all those who believe in the Spirit of Liberty as the essential element in True Society, and the immediate inauguration and practical realization of the Free Life. Price, 20 cents, 10 copies $1. For sale by M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical, and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free, Box 94, Portland, Oregon.

Elmina's Bequest. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

A Single man wishes to correspond with a single Freethought lady an over thirty-five years old. Please address Lucifer C 39.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published. .50

Bar Sinister and Legit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone portraits of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .75

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .25

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .10

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .50
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50
A Sex Revolution, " " .25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00
When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10
Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .25
Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

THE ADULT.

A Journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Bedborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League, Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscure Jades and Distracted Sues, by Leighton Pagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

THE UNREVEALED RELIGION.

An address of great depth, strength, and beauty. By the veteran, J. K. Ingalls.

"The rainbow is not less beautiful and wonderful to me than to Noah or to the aborigines, because I understand something of optics and the refraction of light. The rose is not less attractive because botany has taught us to analyze and classify it. The God of Truth, whether we worship it as an entity or as a personality, or conceive of it as impersonal, is an ever-living and persistent principle man can never cease to revere and admire. And its growth in knowledge and progress in all things refining and elevating to his nature will be promoted, not retarded, by the true but unrevealed, and as yet "unloved religion, 'The Religion of Progress'."

Price, 5 cents each; Address LUCIFER, 1394 W. Congress Street, Chicago

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whitrick. With portrait of Author. 199 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1037, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Send Sex, Birth-date, 25 cents, and get outline life reading. Disease diagnosed, with advice whom to marry, by lock of hair. Life Guide Box 814, Pasadena, Cal.

We Will Send You forty (40) of the best anti-constipation, liver pills you ever saw on receipt of twelve (12) cents in stamps. Worth half a dollar. Agents wanted. The Kanson Supply Co., Chicago, Station X.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptoms and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson Barker,
Box 132, San Jose, Cal.

PRICE, 2 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 36. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPTEMBER 8, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 675.

From Patriotism to Humanity.

Programme for a new chapter in White's "Conflict of Science with Theology."

BY C. L. JAMES.

Man is a gregarious animal. The instinct which impels him to herd with his kind takes effect at an earlier stage of evolution than that which produces marriage and family life, as was shown in a former article of this series. The system mongering sophists who defend existing institutions commonly represent them as created to protect relations whereby "solitary savages" became social; but that study of barbarous customs which evolutionary philosophy has made usual teaches that there are no solitary savages. Apes, and all species of simia go in troops, which often number thousands. Men appear living together in hordes before they have any other institutions. The earliest represent that attachment to the horde which is thus the oldest and crudest phase of love. Living on game or such products of nature as can be secured with very little knowledge, the hordes generally hold their land in common among their own members, but are always vigilant against trespass by outsiders. Their normal condition is war with one another. They bear tribal names indicative of their martial qualities—children of the Stone, Wolves, Eagles, Snapping Turtles. Their dawning poetic faculty represents them as actually descended from a rock, wolf, eagle, turtle, etc. Before this totem, or ancestral deity, they offer sacrifice. To this divine ordinance they attribute the tribal customs, which thus become associated with all the sanctity of religion. So unfailing an element is totemism in the creed of every country that learned mytheologists have endeavored to find in it the basis of all dogmas. And though this view can scarcely be maintained, it is certainly true that the great theological conception of a supreme good spirit and an evil one did originate in the antithesis of one's own totem to the enemy's. Thus patriotism, in its oldest as in its latest forms is bound up with hatred of what is against the tribal usage. We do not apply the name of patriot to the benefactor of his own people—to a Howard, a Bacon, an Edison, a Peter Cooper. He is a philanthropist, a philosopher, a scientist, a man of public spirit. The prouder title, patriot, is reserved for the destroyer of his country's enemies, foreign or domestic, for a Hannibal, a Brutus, an Arnold von Winkelreid.

Patriotism, a sentiment thus proper to the barbarous state, was evidently destined to decline before the progress of knowledge, which always tends to reveal the solidarity of human interest. But the process has been extremely slow. Marriage, as shown in a former article, fused neighboring hordes into nations and reduced them to clans. But outside the circle of mutual female capture, other hordes were coalescing in like manner, and hereditary antipathy, as it waned among the clans, waxed hotter between the nations. Slavery superseded cannibalism; slaves were sought with more systematic cupidity than victims; and freedom herself, like a vestal bound by vow, became devoted to the drudgery of feeding the flames of patriotism. In vain did Homer and Hesiod portray with matchless power the horrors of war. No people can learn from their instructors a lesson which the more radical culture of events has not prepared them to receive. The wrath of Achilles struck a responsive chord in every heart. The sorrows of Chryses or Andromache seemed only reasons for taking arms against similar calamities. A later and more didactic literature systematized these one-sided interpretations. When the Roman Empire had become a tyranny from which the multitude welcomed the barbarians as deliverers, her philosophers were still able to use the same language as Prodicus or Pericles, and to "cant about the duty of sacrificing everything for a country to which they owed nothing."

This trick, once learned, served perfectly the turn of those man-eaters who could still gain something by making nations fight, though those days when the people could gain anything by doing it, or lose anything by refusing to do it, had long since passed away. Patriotism was the spell-word by which the sorcerers of policy sent British bowmen to slay and French serfs to die at Crecy. It drove the Russian moujiks to slaughter in the trenches of Zorndorf; and the hosts of united Europe to perish in the snows of Moscow.

Political economy, in the hands of Adam Smith and his successors, is entitled to credit for ample demonstration that, upon utilitarian principles, patriotism must be considered very foolish. But it is the original sin of political economy to reason from the capitalist's point of view. The capitalist is the successor of the noble in that grand, old trade of anthropophagy which during all the ages has distinguished the aristocrat of each. That patriotism means wholesale mutual destruction by which neither side any longer profits, was nothing to him if this passion could be made to line his individual pockets. And it could, as long as those who had to bear its burdens associated it with terms like Duty or Glory. After thirty years' uneasy peace, necessitated by the exhaustion of the Napoleonic wars and the mutual fears of despots whose thrones tottered, the demands of British capital called Europe once more to a new slaughter house in the Crimea. The experiment once tried successfully, the despots themselves went heartily at it again. In quick succession followed the butcheries of Solferino, Dybol, Sadowa and Sedan. "You will never deter men from war," said Oscar Wilde, "by showing them that it is unprofitable. Make them feel that it is vulgar, and you really will have done something."

The time came, and its product demonstrated the sagacity of his erratic but positive genius. No superstition becomes harmless till it has become ridiculous. Many an one has been killed by satire, though its advocates appeared to have altogether the best of argument. While the Turks and Russians were last cutting each others' throats, and the proprietors of India stock were anxious to guard against possible depreciа-

tion of their dividends by bringing England into the melee, the latter clique put forth a song which they expected to fire the English heart. The chorus ran thus: "We don't want to fight"—oh no!—

"We don't want to fight; but, by jingo! if we do
We've got the ships, we've got the men, we've got the money, too."

Some advocate of peace derived from this lyric the happy idea of calling the war-spirit "jingo." The new term "took." It stuck. It was heard in the House of Commons. The demand for war was jingoed down. The sublime expression which had saved a million lives, went forth conquering and to conquer. "Jingo!"—how expressful of the war-spirit, arrogant, boastful, silly, flippant, vulgar! Henceforth, every howl from the dying tiger, whether it were Armenia, Venezuela, Cuba, or Hawaii, has had to reckon with the hollow echo "jingo!" Twenty-seven years have passed since any enlightened state has engaged in war with another. None can again without overcoming the feeling of the sudd'enly awakened masses that to fight is "vulgar." Blessed forever, therefore, be that unknown sage upon whom descended the holy inspiration of calling patriotism jingo!

Reply to Dr. Foote's Criticisms.

BY F. W. C.

Dr. E. B. Foote, in Lucifer, questioned the practicability of New Idealism in the following terms: "Those who really value and desire the benefits and joys of a life companionship, or even a few consecutive years of family comforts, will generally find it necessary to do more in the way of binding their liberty than Mr. Ruedebusch admits, and include among their deprivations of entire freedom the right to encourage and indulge entangling love alliances." And in another place the doctor says: "The libertarian in love will roam at will in such fields as are accessible to him, enjoying the privilege of satisfying spontaneous impulses and form no burdensome attachments, but when his day is spent and the long, dreary blight of disease, settles over him; he must do without the tender hand, the sympathetic word, and unfaltering devotion which comes only to those who have cherished the fond love of a life companion and built up a true home."

Dr. Foote is here talking of the "libertarian" or libertine of today—one who upholds marriage but hypocritically seeks indulgence wherever it is "accessible to him." His words do not apply to the members of a New Idealist association. The true New Idealist is not a mere pleasure seeker who takes no joy in the comforts and happiness of others. On the contrary one half his joys will come from the privilege of giving happiness to others and the other half will spring from the willing efforts of others to give him happiness. Love with the New Idealist is a different thing from mere self-indulgence. It includes friendships and warm-hearted devotion to the welfare of friends.

The "entangling love alliances" which the critic thinks must be dispensed with in order that we may enjoy the comforts of home and family life, will be the foundation of many life-long friendships. And when "the long, dreary blight of disease settles over him" the New Idealist will not be left to the uncertain care of a marital slave or owner, he will not be dependent upon one pair of weak and perhaps unwilling hands to provide for, protect, soothe and comfort him; but he will have dozens of sturdy friends of both sexes, including some with "tender hands," "sympathetic words" and "unfaltering devotion" whose attentions will be all the sweeter because given freely in memory of the past or for love yet existing. Who would not prefer the service of love to that of duty? Who would not rather accept the voluntary kindness of a dear comrade to the matter-of-course attentions of a comrade IN LAW who possibly would be glad to evade the service?

Is this voluntary love service merely theoretical and not a thing to be relied upon? I pity the doctor's experience and narrow observation if he thinks so. I could cite him to cases of poor men, yes and unmarried men, even in this greedy, dog-eat-dog society, who if they were stricken helpless by disease today would have no fear that they would lack kind attention and good care; but would only fear that dear friends and relatives might over deny and over exert themselves.

Again the doctor says, "Will it not invalidate the contract if she, being enamoured of another Lothario, dines out with him and fails to prepare a dinner for her comrade? Or will it be fair for him to take his latest flame to a champagne supper or a box at the opera, and have a night off, while his home comrade is tending their baby through the measles, and their home really needs a few extras for comfort that could be had for the cost of his outing?"

Suppose a man was providing for his widowed sister and a little niece or nephew, and she was keeping house for him. Would the sister neglect her brother's dinner and go off with a beau? Perhaps—and he would get his own dinner or grumble about it according to circumstances and his own temper. Would the brother leave the sister alone to care for a sick child while he devoted his time and money to a sweetheart? Perhaps—and she would bemoan her brother's selfishness or rejoice at his opportunity for pleasure according to circumstances and her own disposition. It would all depend upon the willingness of the brother and sister to discommode themselves a little for the sake of each other's happiness. It would depend also upon the urgency of the love affair, the seriousness of the child's illness, the importance of the extras for home comfort etc. But in any case comrades in partnership would treat each other like brother and sister.

The critic adds: "The comradeship contract, or varietist's home life, would often be reduced to a mere housekeeping with too little of the value and beauty of a home companionship to make it deserving of being so called." Doubtless it would be if the comrades could not treat each other like brother and sister when other love failed them. But what of it? In the case of a husband and wife having "too little of a home companionship to make it deserving of being so called," one or both must be "untrue," hypocritical, or suffer for the want of companionship. When, however, the provision-supplying and housekeeping is simply a business arrangement between two friendly comrades, neglect of duty on the part of one or the other would be neglect of a business contract which, while it might be annoying and necessitate endurance or re-adjustments, would not be a heart-breaking affair; and neither of the home partners being held by any sense of duty to marriage vows, neither would have to be hypocritical or go without the pleasure of loving companionship when it could be had elsewhere. And as for home life, what is that home life which must be held in place by force and which one or both of the partners secretly rebel against? To my thinking it is not preferable to a home of free associates where you are not obliged to turn a cold shoulder to every dear friend but one, and where you must be a very unamiable person if ALL neglect you in your hour of need.

Again I quote: "Was there ever an instance where the butterfly, or common housefly, quality of sexual attraction was responsible for any inspired creation, continuous self-sacrificing effort, or really unselfish service?" There may have been such instances; there may not have been. At any rate it has nothing to do with the point at issue. Because a person believes it is possible to love more than one, that does not destroy his capacity for loving intensely and devotedly. Was there ever a more inspired love poem than Burns' "Highland Mary?" And yet Burns loved his Jean, and indeed his affections seemed comprehensive enough to take in a good many of the lassies. How much the butterflies among New Idealists or among old idealists may be inspired, I don't venture to guess; but earnest devoted lovers among New Idealists will doubtless be as much inspired as they could possibly be if persuaded of the sanctity of marriage. Is it to be assumed that a marriage ceremony will inspire "self-sacrificing effort" and "unselfish service" and that love in freedom would not do so?

"The purest, sweetest, most inspiring joys of love, necessitate some exclusiveness. . . . . If it be not a mutual admiration society, abolishing all thoughts of others, the course of true love is not smooth, and the god of love does not bestow supreme unction." No doubt "all thoughts of others" will be abolished at certain happy interviews between two lovers, even among New Idealists; but that does not destroy the latent affection which exists for others and which may be aroused into activity at other times, whether one is a New Idealist or not. Exclusiveness for the time may be admitted but exclusiveness for all time is a demand that human beings accede to, often at a bitter cost, because of a widespread and tyrannical superstition. But does marriage abolish "all thoughts of others"? And if a couple do love each other devotedly and exclusively for a time and the love wears out or "sours on them," will it add to their happiness if they are bound together?

"There seems small prospect of success of efforts to devise any new ideal for the regulation of human love relations that shall insure uniformity and happiness." Well then suppose we don't seek uniformity and suppose we concede the right of every human being to do his or her own regulating in such matters. I fancy if we were all free to do as we liked, some of us would avoid regulating devices which have been proven by thousands of examples to be conducive to unhappiness and would experiment with ideals and customs which would at least have the merit of being comparatively new and not yet convicted of miserable failure.

One more quotation: "Personal happiness has not been and cannot be the sole factor by which to judge of what is best for humanity." This is an old question and I believe the doctor is on the wrong side of it. Humanity is made up of persons and the happiness of persons constitutes the happiness of humanity; but that happiness which is found by seeking to benefit the race through free-born, love-conceived children, by seeking to promote the pleasure of your companions that you may be surrounded by happy friends, and by seeking to place yourself among free people where you can attain personal pleasure only through the contemplation of the joy of others or through the voluntary efforts of loving friends to make you happy,—this is a very different happiness from the personal gratification sought and the meager joys obtained by the person who seeks possession of another in marriage.

Is Dr. Foote really in the service of conservatism, or is he merely spurring up the New Idealists?

Ideals, Old and New.

BY A. WARREN.

I have not read Mr. Ruedebusch's book. The advance in the price of wheat has not enabled me to buy all the books I would be glad to read. Through Lucifer, I learn that he has written one; that it is entitled "The Old and the New Ideal;" and that it deals with the problem of the relations of the sexes. From the comments of Dr. Foote, and the author's reply, I conclude that the proposed new ideal differs little from that of E. C. Walker's and others of the so-called Variety school; and upon that point I think there remains somewhat to be said, which I hope to say, without subjecting myself to the charge of assuming to criticise a work before reading it.

The idea of sexual variety is not new. Its open advocasy, as a basis for social reform, is new; and so, in the estimation of its advocates, it is, unquestionably, a new ideal; but so long as other new ideals are offered and entertained, to christen it THE new ideal would seem to be premature. There is a new ideal abroad, which all real reformers accept; and which is, therefore, entitled to be designated as, par excellence, the new one. This ideal is graphically expressed in the single word freedom. This is the new, which is coming, and coming to stay.

But whether, with the advent of freedom, plurality of loves will prevail, more generally than hitherto, is a question upon which ideals will, no doubt, continue to vary. To dogmatise, therefore, either way, is to crucify the world's real savior, while pretending allegiance to it. Let each present his ideal, with or without reason. That is all right. But let us not forget that the highest, to which we all aspire, is freedom; and that freedom is not for ourselves only, but for all, for the old, as well as the new.

So far as I have followed the current of this controvercy, no facts have been adduced, on either side. We are cited, in a general way, to the prevalence of variety, even under the restrictions of the present established system; but such general facts prove nothing, until we ascertain their cause. If prostitution is the product of enforced monogamy, may not male irregularities be attributable to the same conditions? Why do not our varietist friends give us the benefit of their observation and experience? Let us hear from the Imeldas and Hildas of actual life. Has there ever been a case of plurality without discord? A few facts, detailed and definite, would weigh more than whole reams of ideals.

I am not denouncing variety. I am not going to crucify freedom in the name of freedom. I believe in freedom for varietists, as well as, but not more than, for others. Ideals vary; and if one passes through a phase of development, while aspiring to what he regards as higher, that fact is not to be taken as evidence that he is deluded, and that what he considers transitional is really the final goal of progress. The undeniable fact is, there is no progress without experience; and the more genuine, honest experience, the higher the ideal; but it does not follow that plurality of loves, at one and the same time, is the highest ideal.

A celebrated clergyman (I have forgotten his name) was asked by his wife if he believed they would recognize each other and love each other in heaven. He replied that he expected to be so enraptured by the glory of God, that he would be unconscious of even her presence. That was a Christian ideal; but who will say that such absorption is impossible? So long as men are without love, they are apt to crave its manifestation from many women, and often with little discrimination. Some men never learn anything of love but this. And the same, to a degree, is true of women. But at last, perhaps, comes genuine love, comes a love that satisfies the heart. There may still be "side loves," whatever they may be, and friendships, and attractions of all sorts; but the desire for love's sweetest sacrament, with any of these, has vanished, like the stars with the rising of the sun.

It is not a question of morals. There is no obligation about it. It is simply an option between stale bread and the sweetest of cake. The best love ever known to the human heart is nothing if not spontaneous. If the divinest manifestation of love is to be reserved for expression of only the divinest love, it will be because to do otherwise will be recognized as profanity, as uttering or acting a lie, and not because variety, in itself, is wrong. Nevertheless, that it will, in the happiest state, be so reserved, is my cherished ideal. In that state, if I ever attain it, I expect to be so enraptured by the charms of the one, select, and precious above all others, as to forget the existence of my side lover, altogether; to forget the need of substitutes of any description, in the realm of sexual manifestation.

Is this being "still in the grasp of the old?" Possibly so. We never see ourselves as others see us; but opinions, even of new things, are subject to change. I have been acquainted with some hundreds of varietists, during the past forty years, but I have never known of a case of plurality without pain. It is noticeable, too, that nearly all the old experimenters, those who enjoyed the most experience, have slunk back into marriage, and are no longer heard from. Variety was their school. We are all children, learning to walk. Let us not assume that the new has all been discovered.

Gwendolen's opinion of marriage: "Her observation of matrimony had inclined her to think it rather a dreary state, in which a woman could not do what she liked, had more children than were desirable, was consequently dull, and became irrevocably immersed in humdrum."—George Eliot. "Daniel Deronda." Ch. IV., p. 35, vol. I.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S specialty is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 West Congress Street, Thursday evening, Sept. 16, Dr. Wahl will open the discussion. The subject will be, "Might is Right."

Home Again.

With the last day of August the three weeks vacation of Lucifer's scribe came to an end, and now resuming his place at the desk he wishes to return sincerest thanks to all who have contributed to make this vacation enjoyable. While not an unmixed pleasure he looks back over this brief summer outing as one long to be remembered for the helpful co-operation received in a multitude of ways. And now, once more, putting his shoulder to the wheel, with renewed energies, physical and mental, he asks all who feel an interest in Lucifer's work to give him the benefit of their best thoughts, telepathically sent, and also their best co-operation in all other ways, to the end that the educational work of our Light-bringer may now receive an impetus such as it has never before experienced in its checkered history covering a period of seventeen years.

Plurality vs. Duality.

For many months past in the columns of Lucifer much has been said upon the merits of plurality, complexity or "variety" in sex-associations, as compared with the dual or monogamic code which, by law and custom, has been attempted to be enforced upon the people of Western Europe, and upon their descendants in America, for many centuries. The interest in the story called "Hilda's Home" seems to turn mainly upon the question as to whether duality or plurality (complexity) in the sex-life of human beings, is the more truly moral, the more truly normal, healthful and happifying to the persons immediately concerned, and also the better adapted to make the on-coming generations moral, healthful and happy.

The recent publication of the book called the "Old and the New Ideal," by Emil P. Ruedebusch, has given a fresh impetus to this investigation. Among others Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., Edwin C. Walker, J. William Lloyd, Lucinda B. Chandler, C. L. James and others have contributed thoughtful and helpful articles upon this most interesting and, perhaps, most important of all ethical questions now agitating the minds of humanitarian reformers.

This last statement may perhaps not be clear, may not be self-evident, to all the readers of Lucifer, but to those who look for bottom facts, for bed-rock causes of the prevailing unrest, the unhappiness, the crimes, the vices, the miseries—the fearfully wide and deep chasms that separate the favored few from great masses of our common humanity, it is not hard to see that something is radically wrong with the foundations of our social structure.

The foundation stone, the chief corner stone of this social structure is the sex-relation, based, in turn, upon the most powerful of all human appetites or desires, the amative, the sex-desire or passion. Phrenologists tell us that "amativeness" is by far the largest organ of the human brain, and when we consider its office or function in the evolution and perpetuation of the race we can easily see that it should be so. The life and happiness of one individual of the race or species is of small importance compared to the life, happiness and development of the race in its wholeness.

Everything, then, pertaining to the mating, to the intimate co-operation, of the sexes—the two halves into which, for reproductive purposes nature has divided human beings, must be of moment in determining how to reach and practicalize the highest and the best.

In this issue of Lucifer "F. W. C.," A. Warren and others have something to say upon this much discussed but still unsolved problem. It is not my purpose to sit in judgment upon the merits or demerits of the arguments used by these writers. The duty of an editor, as I take it, is much like that of a chairman at a public meeting. It is his duty mainly to see that justice is done to each and to all—to see to it that all phases of the subject in hand be allowed a fair hearing, and that the speakers or writers do not wander too far from the main points at issue. Lucifer's methods have usually been to allow pretty wide latitude in discussion, not wishing to decide what points, facts or arguments, are or are not, germane to the subject. What seems to one pertinent and germane may not seem so to another.

Granting to all the honesty of purpose claimed for myself I wish briefly to state here some of the difficulties, as I see them, that surround the investigation of this subject of the "Old and the New Ideal," and some of the more common errors into which we are all apt to fall.

First. It is simply impossible that any of us can approach the discussion of the right relation of the sexes with wholly unbiased minds. We are all handicapped with an artificial conscience on all ethical questions, and upon none more so than upon the sex or mating question. This conscience is a composite element, or force, in our lives.

It is partly religious, or built upon what we think "God" thinks.

It is also "statutory," or refers to what we think "the law" or the judge thinks.

We have also our "Grundy" conscience, made up of what we think our neighbors think, or what "they will say," about what we think or do.

Conscience is chiefly a matter of education, of environment or geography, but it is also to some extent hereditary, and is never a safe guide until completely under control of our own rationality or educated reason.

Unfortunately for us all, this composite thing called conscience is not yet in our own keeping. We allow the priest, the judge and our neighbors—or what we regard as the "consensus of the competent," to be the keepers of our conscience, and all these keepers tell us that the standard of morality in the sex-relation is not now an open question. They say there is but one side to it and that side is "duality,"—the union of one woman and one man, and that union for life; or at least until the keepers of our conscience think best to allow us to re-adjust our sex-relations, but always on the same plan of duality.

Second. Added to the disadvantage under which we all labor in not having an impartial conscience, a rational conscience, is the disadvantage imposed upon us by civil law. Free, candid, earnest, honest investigation of the problem of sex ethics is very liable to bring penalties in the way of fines and imprisonments, which penalties are to most of us anything but pleasant. Hence sex-reformers are obliged to use tact, policy, strategy, in these investigations, and especially so they would test their theories by or in the crucible of practical experiment.

From this view-point A. Warren's criticisms upon the advocates of plural relationships, are, it seems to me, not quite fair, as when he asks:

"Has there ever been a case of plurality without discord? Let us hear from the Imeldas and the Hildas of actual life," etc.

If Mr. Warren would remove the ban of civil law, and the fear of social ostracism, so that the Imeldas and Hildas of real life could relate their experiences in this regard as freely as they relate their religious experiences or their experiments in flower culture, chicken raising or in dairy farming, there would be more fairness in his criticism.

Mr. Warren says he has "been acquainted with some hundreds of varietists, but has never known of a case of plurality without pain." It is the "wounded bird that flutters." May it not be that it was only the failures that came to the notice of Mr. Warren,—and because they were failures, whereas in the same territory and at the same time, may there not have been thousands of experiments, on a small scale, that were not failures, but very helpful and happifying? The happy and the successful do not usually "wear their hearts upon their sleeves for daws to peck at." And may it not be that our critic has been simply unwise, or unfortunate, in selecting his acquaintances or associates? "Birds of a feather," etc.

That "nearly all the old experimenters, those who have had the most experience, have slunk back into marriage, and are no longer heard from," is not at all strange, or proof of false premises. Nearly all experiments in "co-operation" on industrial lines, have also been failures, and yet the principle of equitable co-operation has more advocates and believers now than ever before. Most reformers get tired of the struggle, and compromise principle for peace, or for a mess of Grundy pottage.

Our critic says he is "not denouncing variety." Nor do I denounce duality. On the contrary my cherished "ideal" is very nearly his own. But I would not limit nature. I would not "crucify freedom in the name of freedom." Whether plurality or duality is highest and best can only be determined in freedom. If, as many of us think, duality is the highest and best the only way to demonstrate this fact and to practicalize that ideal, is through natural selection, through freedom to experiment, through liberty to know and to grow. Only in this way can full-rounded human beings be produced. Only in this way can women and men be created that will fully complement and satisfy each other, so that there will be no longer a desire for plurality.

No foe to duality like law-enforced marriage. Law kills love, and when love is dead the expectant mother's fancy constantly wanders,—strays hither and thither in search of a resting place, with the necessary result that her child is born a rover, in its amative or affectional nature, and thus plurality, "variety," becomes self-perpetuating.

With most that Mr. Warren says I am in hearty accord; also with most that is quoted in "Voices" column from the letter of Col. Baylor. Unlike Mr. Baylor I do not fear free discussion. I do not fear that the advocacy of "variety" will "pollute the temple of motherhood." Only in the widest and freest discussion can Truth, Justice and Purity be evolved. Not until church and state cease their meddling can it be demonstrated whether duality is "the law of Nature," or not.

M. H.

We have received No. 2 of "The Adult" the organ of the Legitimation League of England. The striking title of an article by the well-known writer, John Badcock, Jr., is "Go to the Butterfly, Thou Slave." Orford Northcote writes of "The Mutability of Sex-Love." "Sexual Freedom in Relation to Woman and Economics" is alone worth more than the price of the magazine. E. Wardlaw Best replies to the article on "Our Troops in India," which appeared in No. 1. The editorials and the contents of "Our Letter Box" will be found interesting. The motto chosen for this magazine is the following from Max Nordau:

"The truth is, that amongst ten thousand pairs of lovers, there is barely one in which the man and woman love each other throughout their entire lives, to the exclusion of all others, not a single couple who would invent the perpetual, single marriage to answer to their own requirements, if it did not already exist."

"The Adult" may be ordered from this office. Price, 5 cents.

The National Propaganda Work.

The responses to the "Call" published in No. 672 of Lucifer are very favorable. With one exception, all expressions of opinion, oral or written, that have reached me, are heartily sympathetic with the movement. The commendation is even more earnest and extended than I had anticipated. Some names have been sent to Lillian Harman, some to James Morton, some to myself. From a few of the first letters written to Mrs. Harman and to me, I quote the sentences that follow:

The morning after the "Call" reached this city, I received this from Mrs. A. S.:

"Please find inclosed $1 for active membership in the new free association. (Why is it called organization?)"

Charles B. Cooper, of New York, referring to the subject, of which I had spoken to him before the "Call" was printed, wrote:

"By all means carry the idea out—it is what is wanted. If at first it has to be a small affair—no matter—even the appearance of organization is a power, and so, useful even if there is nothing back of it stronger than an array of a few names analogous to the Three Tailors of Tooley Street."

A. G. Lengberg, of Florida, writes:

"I see by last Lucifer that you and a few other Social Radicals intend to form a national organization with the worthy object in view of promoting the development of a new human society, not merely the reformation of the old. I wish to say that I am heartily in sympathy with the movement, and wish its success. I also wish you to enter my name on the list as a member of the organization, and I herewith inclose my membership fee of one dollar. I have nothing to hinder me joining the active class if I can be of any use. I hope all of Lucifer's readers will take a hearty interest in the movement and contribute their aid freely, and that those best able will assist you in getting the organization in working order, which no doubt will require a great deal of labor."

One of the clearest thinkers among Liberal women, writes:

"Mr. Walker: Associated free lovers will undoubtedly do much more in proportion to their numbers than they can when working separately, only, as this gives them two methods of work instead of one. Put me down as a contributory member. Should I sign as an active worker, my "Freethought" employers might deprive me of work. Of course they believe in free thought on the lines along which they are free. So does the Christian."

A devoted Western worker, now in the East, and who has sent the membership fee for herself and a friend to another signer of the "Call," writes to me:

"That this 'Call for Concerted Action,' will be to 'strike the nail on the head' I have no doubt. But, in order to 'strike while the iron is hot,' it seems to me the convention should soon be called."

From some who go into the contributory class, or whose letters leave us in doubt as to the class in which they desire to be enrolled, I quote:

"I herewith inclose $1 as membership fee in the national organization that you and a few other friends of freedom purpose establishing. The Call for Concerted Action is opportune, and I trust the response thereto will exceed your greatest expectations."—From Wisconsin.

"Count me a willing member of your national organization for Sexual Freedom."—From a Philadelphia woman.

"Concerted action is a good move; I will help all I can to forward the matter."—From Colorado.

"I inclose $5 as a mite toward the promotion of some of your noble purposes as outlined in your last issue."—From N. Y. City.

When I met him yesterday, that untiring disseminator of light, Edw. W. Chamberlain, said: "Of course you can count me in, in the active list."

In regard to the call for convention, I will say that it will be sent out when the number of responses is such as to warrant the expense. Probably we will be able to meet in the late autumn. In the meantime, let the names come in in a flood; the earlier those who intend to join in the work sometime, do so, the better it will be, the sooner we can begin the leaflet work, the first movement in the campaign.

The growth of the idea of whole human freedom is most encouraging; in both Europe and America the tide of thought is setting our way. It is for us to take advantage of the currents of agitation set in motion by the pioneer workers in our cause. The time has come to reap some of the fruits of their labors. Spread the light. Live liberty.

E. C. WALKER

244 West 143 St., New York City.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LIV.

The strange recital was at an end. Wearily the narrator flung himself into his chair and leaned back, white and exhausted. The bitter but musical voice was hushed while Owen Hunter sat with his head resting on his hand, lost in thought. Was the life of every good man a wreck? For that the man who sat before him was a good man he had not a single doubt. Aside from the bitter experience of his own life he had never thought of the struggling, suffering masses of humanity. Ten thousand dollars! He had no doubt that the sum seemed an enormous fortune to the man before him, while to Owen it seemed scarce worth mentioning.

"What salary," he asked, "did you receive?"

A bitter smile curved the lips of the other.

"Fifty dollars per month."

Fifty dollars! How often had Owen thoughtlessly squandered as much and more in a single evening; and here was a man who with his family had to live a whole month on it. For the first time in his life the question arose why it was that those who were the producers of all wealth should have so little of it to enjoy; for the first time he asked himself, "Have you a right to control so much money, while so many others are suffering for the actual necessaries of life?" What had he ever done to alleviate human suffering? In memory he saw large figures heading long lists of charity. "Charity!" Suddenly the word seemed to him the most cold and heartless in the English language. To offer charity where justice was due! In that instant he resolved that the sons and daughters of humanity, the many poverty stricken little children, should reap the benefit of the money he controlled. He did not yet see his way clear, and for the moment very wisely left the selection of methods to the future. The present hour belonged to the deeply stricken man who had permitted him to read the pages of his sad history.

"Will you not tell me your name?" he sympathetically inquired.

"My name?" With indescribable bitterness he spoke the words. "Why should I not give it you? All New York will be ringing with it in a few days when it will be known that the assistant bookkeeper of the firm of Hunter & Co. has proven false to his trust. My name is Milton Nesbit!"

As if electrified Owen turned upon the man before him.

"Repeat the name of the firm by which you were employed! I am not sure that I have heard aright."

"Hunter & Co."

With a gasping sound Owen sank back, pale to the very lips. Surprised, Milton Nesbit turned inquiringly to him.

"Why, what is wrong; are you ill?"

Owen shook his head.

"No! no! It is not that, but—— Well, why should I search for empty words? My name is Owen Hunter!"

It was now Milton Nesbit's turn to gasp with surprise. He had been holding his position some two years and in all that time had never seen the senior member of the firm. He had been told it had not always been thus; but for several years Owen Hunter no longer took an active part in the business, and most of the newcomers had never seen the man for whom they were coining and piling up money.

Milton Nesbit felt a strange thrill as his eyes rested upon the man who now was to be his judge. An unspeakable bitterness vibrated through his voice when he again spoke.

"If you are the Owen Hunter of Hunter & Co. and if I were a good Christian I should say that the workings of an Almighty God could be traced in the events of this most fatal day; that he so willed it that it must be just the man whom I have robbed whose hand should stay the action which would have freed me from an accursed fate. But this just God who is all love will not have it so. Earthly justice must first be satisfied, the almighty wrath must first be appeased by giving man a chance to avenge himself upon his fellow man. I simply call it cruel, relentless fate, which has pursued me so many years and which dates from the earliest recollections of my childhood. Very well! pass the sentence which I know lies in your power to enforce, for 'money rules the world,' you know. Hand me over to the guardians of the peace and let the law take its course. It matters little what becomes of me now. I may as well sleep behind prison bars as anywhere else. The sunshine of happiness has long since forsaken me; it is lost in the gloom and darkness of despair."

Oh, the bitterness, the hopeless misery in the strong man's voice. He had arisen and walked back and forth the full length of the room, then with his elbow resting upon the mantel, his hand supporting his head, he stood glaring into the glowing coals, awaiting his sentence. But Owen now no longer calmly sat enjoying the comforts of the room. As the other ceased speaking he stepped to his side and laid his hand upon his shoulder.

"Will you look me in the face?"

Silently Nesbit turned and faced Owen. For some minutes they stood thus face to face; then Owen's hand was extended.

"May I ask you to give me your hand in friendship?"

Surprise was depicted upon Nesbit's face as he looked at the outstretched palm, and then inquiringly into the face of the man to whom it belonged.

"Friendship?" echoed Milton Nesbit, while he nervously passed his hand over his forehead as if he would dispel the mists which seemed to him to be gathering there.

"And why not? Am I selfish when I ask it? But with my many millions a true friend is something which I have not, and now I am waiting to feel the clasp of genuine friendship. Do I ask in vain?"

Milton Nesbit's face was a study. Queer little quivers were stirring the muscles. Sinking once more into his chair he buried his face in both hands. For some time neither spoke, then the deeply moved man raised his head and looked the other searchingly in the eye.

"And how about the criminal?"

"Do you feel yourself one?"

The flash in the dark eye answered him even before the firmly spoken words:

"No, I do not!"

"Then once more I extend my hand and ask, will you be my friend and brother? I might be able to give you an insight into a life that would verify the words, 'All is not gold that glitters.'"

There was now no hesitation, and in that hand-clasp a life-long friendship was sealed. A Christmas morn it was to these two, that all their lives stood out clear and bright.

All that afternoon the two men sat in that quiet comfortable room, and as Owen had first listened to one of the saddest of life histories, so now, in turn, he opened his heart to his new friend and in the first hour of his new found friendship he proved it no idle phrase, for in this hour he claimed Nesbit's trust and full confidence. If Milton could not at first give his sanction to an affair like that of Owen, who having already a wife, however unworthy, could take to his heart another woman, and finding her as he had found her, should hold her above all other women—this, certainly, should excite no surprise.

Remembering the woman who, though false to him, he still loved, Milton could not sit in judgment upon and condemn this other woman who had given the wealth of her love to Owen without first asking leave of some third person or persons. Just at present he could see nothing clearly. He could feel, but was in no condition to reason. Owen saw and understood, and knowing that in his present condition the best thing for Milton was change—change of scene and of mental occupation, he at once decided to put into execution a long deferred plan of his own. He would travel; he would take Nesbit with him as traveling companion; and just then he remembered an old college mate whom he had not seen for many years. Why not begin the proposed journey by making a call upon this friend of his youth?

Accordingly a dispatch was at once sent to announce their coming and in a very few days the two friends, who had become such in a way so strange and unexpected, were comfortably seated in a luxurious Pullman car while their train slowly pulled out from the great city towards its western destination.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. L. Kibler, Winchester, Va.:—I do not believe in Lucifer's free Love theory, but go ahead and ventilate the sex question—that is what the world needs. It is the grandest subject for man's study. Man should study man—his own self.

Garcia Leao, N. Y. City:—As I am going to Brazil and desire to continue reading Lucifer please send it to me at 57 Rua do Rosario, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, care of Dr. Irenea Machado. If I can be useful to you in any way while in Brazil, I shall be glad if you will address me as above in the confidence that I will gladly do all in my power for Lucifer. I entirely agree with you and fully appreciate the value of the propaganda which I hope will soon wipe out from the flag of liberty the stain of sexual superstition.

C. S. Crass, Lexington, Ky.:—Enclosed you will find $1.25 for which please continue my subscription to Lucifer. If there ever was a need for the teachings of Lucifer, it certainly must be now, for over population is now forcing thousands of honest and hard-working people to go almost starved and naked. If at any time during the four years of McKinley's prosperity a train of Goldstandard Confidence comes through the Blue Grass region of Central Kentucky, and will switch off a few cars at Lexington, it may be that I can help more to aid you in some time of future need.

Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Pulaski Co., Va.:—"Who would be free themselves must strike the blow." While our good editors are doing so much to free woman from wrong, injustice and oppression it is meet that she herself should do her share towards her own enfranchisement.

This diffidence, shyness and mock modesty that holds her back must be overcome; she must come out of her shell and leave the chimney corner for the great arena of progress and thought.

I have been thinking for sometime of doing a little more myself in the line of introducing liberal men and women to each other pen-wise.

We are so scattered we cannot, in isolated homes, find those whose aims and ideas coincide with our own. We are so alone we feel the need of the cheer and encouragement of co-workers.

I have, within two or three years, three times put notices in our Lucifer asking for names of women who are willing to talk to men with the pen. But half a dozen men have responded where one woman has done so, and thus it is all one-sided and up-hill work. I see that "The Firebrand" has about the same experience in getting women to come to the front.

Some women tell me they feel hurt and insulted by what men write them. Others are owned by husbands who oppose their seeking comradeship in this way. And others lack the stamps it would take for the correspondence.

But "we cannot have our cake and eat it too." We must sacrifice many things for the greater good. Men are what women make them. If they are not pure and clean a good woman can help them to become so.

In the forty or more years that I have had correspondence with men, I have found them far kinder, better and more worthy than I have expected. Out of my own experience, therefore, I can safely advise this correspondence as useful, helpful, pleasing and instructive.

For the first time in my life I tried this year to help a woman get an office. Our acting post master for four years was a woman, and the only post master here of whom no complaint was ever made. So a great many of us did our best to have her appointed as real post master, and had it gone to the vote of the clientage of the office she would have become so by an immense majority. But half a dozen men were trying for it, and just at the last, news came that the shoemaker had won. He had a vote and she had none. She was educated—he could hardly read intelligibly, and boasted he had had no book or paper in his hands but the Bible, for a year. Do you wonder I ask woman to work for herself?

I wonder how many woman readers of Lucifer will write me in regard to this article. I hope twenty-five or so at least will do so; and I'll answer all letters enclosing a stamp.

I would gladly pay postage both ways if I were able. In December I'll be seventy years and so must economize or be left dependent in my old days. I am just as "work-brittle" as I was in my youth, and rejoice that I can speak an advisory word to others in this way.

[The following letter was sent me by Col. Chas. Gano Baylor of Kentucky, now resident in Providence, R. I. I think it deserves a place in the reform press of the country.

AUNT LYDIA.]

Woman is the moral regenerator and spiritual illuminator of the race. Man is not. Woman is man's conscience.

The status of every nation, in all the past of man's struggle with animalism, was an enslaved and degraded womanhood. It was not the Alexanders and King Davids and Solomons and Aristotles and Platos who have regenerated the race,—so far as it has been regenerated.

Mere reasons, or economic forces in themselves, will not regenerate the race. The status of a self-reverencing and reverenced womanhood must first be established before the race can be regenerated.

A spiritualized humanity, therefore, depends potentially on a spiritualized womanhood and motherhood. Woman, in her complex organism, holds in custody the sacred law of heredity. An animalized womanhood will inevitably brutalize the race. Marriage, the one to the one and only one, is the law of Nature and should be held to be a sacrament in nature, absolutely free from the interference of either Church or State,—for it is infinitely more sacred and more grand than either. Beware est in discussion of the sex question—which is the basic question, the vital question, the life question—beware in discussion of what is known as "variety," that you do not pollute the temple of feminine sanctity,—the temple of motherhood.

675.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

The economic emancipation of womanhood is the foremost question in the labor propaganda; because it lifts woman above the degrading influence of poverty, and thus leaves her perfectly free to fulfill her divine mission as the High Priestess of the race.

Hence the unspeakable infamy of the foul and damnable conspiracy between Republican Capitalism with the Papacy, under which the "protected" factory harem and the tenement-hell of law-created poverty—in order to manufacture millionaires—has clasped hands with the Convent and the Confessional for the degradation of woman.

It is the woman feature of this infamous alliance which marks the decay of liberty in the United States, and which deserves the execration of every liberal mind, without regard to creed. The man who will countenence this infamy, or remain silent before it because Holy Church has decreed it, has no right to stand within the ranks of Labor. The woman question is, after all, the foremost queseion in universal civilization. You cannot strike woman or degrade her without beating down the race, for she, if degraded, will drag the whole structure of society with her to a common ruin.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Rook, .10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker, .10
"ractical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .03
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .02
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
to Hell and the Way Out; H. H. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury, .10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .10
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake, .10
Vistæ Vitæ; M. T. Martin, .10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr, .25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
Degeneracy; C. L. James, .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Causes of Hard Times; Chavannes, .05
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .15
Henry George Examined; J. K. Ingalls, .05
Christianity and Progress; G. W. Foote, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker.
Box 128, San Jose, Cal.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, eclectific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.

Bar Sinister and Licit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .20

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .25

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50
A Sex Revolution, " " .25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .10

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL,

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Ethicosy,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of Ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free. Box 94, Portland, Oregon.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally in vogue. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 131 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 131 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Send Sex, Birth-date, 25 cents, and get outline life reading. Disease diagnosed, with advice whom to marry, by lock of hair. Life Guide Box 814, Pasadena, Cal.

We Will Send You forty (40) of the best anti-constipation, liver pills you ever saw on receipt of twelve (12) cents in stamps. Worth half a dollar. Agents wanted. The Ransom Supply Co., Chicago, Station X.

PRICE, 2 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., NO. 37. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPTEMBER 15, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE NO. 676

The Angel of Discontent

When the world was formed and the morning stars
Upon their paths were sent,
The loftiest-browed of the angels was named
The angel of Discontent.

And he dwelt with man in the caves of the hill,
Where the crested serpent stings
And the tiger tears and the she-wolf howls,
And he told of better things.

And he led men forth to the town,
And forth to the fields of corn;
And he told of the ample work ahead,
For which his race was born.

And he whispers to men of those hills he sees
In the blush of the misty west;
And they look to the heights of his lifted eye—
And they hate the name of rest.

In the light of that eye doth the slave behold
A hope that is high and brave;
And the madness of war comes into his blood—
For he knows himself a slave.

The serfs of wrong by the light of that eye
March with victorious songs;
For strength of right comes into their hearts
When they behold their wrongs.

'Tis by the light of that lifted eye
That Error's mists are rent,
A guide to the fable-lands of Truth
Is the Angel of Discontent.

And still he looks with his lifted eye,
And his glance is far away
On a light that shines on the glimmering hills
Of a diviner day.

—Sam Walter Foss, in "Yankee Blade"

"Poor Old Massachusetts!"

BY E. C. WALKER.

As will be seen by the exquisitely satirical editorial from the New York "Journal" of August 4, included herein, the authorities of the Boston Public Library have made another high bid for the leather medal of asinity. In the interview published in the Boston "Globe" of August 1 (from which the "Journal" has quoted), Mr. Lindsay Swift, editor and cataloguer, says:

Outside of the Anarchistic and Socialistic works of course there are many other books which are unsuitable for general circulation. These we have gathered together in a certain section of the building which we have termed "The Inferno." Among the works here are Boccaccio's Decameron unabridged, the Heptameron of Margaret of Navarre, and the unexpurgated editions of the earlier English and French dramatists, Beaumont and Fletcher, Webster, Racine, and so on.

Mr. Swift does not say that the Bible and Shakespere have been banished to this inferno, but there is no reason why they should not be if honest frankness of expression is cause for such banishment. Mr. Swift graciously informs us that these books can be read by persons of suitable age and discretion, Mr. Putnam and himself being the judges in the premises. That is, the applicant can spend from half an hour to an hour and a half in pursuit of the book before he runs it to earth in the "Inferno."

That was my experience in trying to find Burton's translation of Catullus, a work which the authorities of the private Astor Library in New York hand out without question as to the age and soberness of mind of the inquirer. But here is the "Journal's" delicately cutting castigation of the Boston censors:

"Mr. Putnam, the librarian of the Boston Public Library, has withdrawn from general circulation the more extreme French and German books, papers and magazines, advocating anarchy and socialism. Such writers as Henri Rochefort and Louise Michel are to be strictly confined to their reservation hereafter. The new policy is thus lucidly described by Mr. Lindsay Swift, the editor and cataloguer of the library:

"In the opinion of the librarian no good can be gained and much harm may be done by allowing works of this extreme character to be generally read. It may be asked why are these books placed in the library if not to be read? They are in the library for that purpose and they may be read, but Mr. Putnam and his assistants reserve to themselves the right to choose the readers, and most common sense people will agree with Mr. Putnam in such a decision. The average man of anarchistic or socialistic tendencies that frequents the library is not qualified by education or judgment to read the works I refer to, and estimate them at their proper value.

"Mr. Putnam recognizes the fact that as physicians must be allowed access even to the most virulent poisons, so there are certain persons—physicians of the public mind—who must be permitted to read the most pernicious books, if only to know what heresies are percolating among the masses, and to be able more effectively to combat them. The only apparent difficulty is in distinguishing between persons who can safely be trusted with revolutionary literature and those who cannot. Who is to tell whether an applicant for the privilege of reading La Lanterne is 'qualified by education or judgment' to make a safe use of its dangerous contents?

"But that difficulty is only apparent. 'Mr. Putnam and his associates reserve to themselves the right to choose the readers.' They take the responsibility of keeping this perilous reading matter out of improper hands, and they are confident that they can spot a disguised Anarchist as easily as a Treasury clerk can detect a counterfeit bill.

"Of course, if some unbalanced radical like President Andrews should succeed in eluding the vigilance of Mr. Putnam and his assistants and getting hold of some of this incendiary literature should be impelled by it to throw a bomb into a bank, the consequences would be unpleasant for the librarian. Having assumed the duty of classifying the patrons of the library according to their fitness to be intrusted with certain literary matter, and having failed in the performance of this function, Mr. Putnam is of course morally, and should be by writings, responsible for any damages that may result from pecuniarily, responsible for any damages that may result from the faulty performance of this function. In view of this increase in their responsibilities we should think it would be only common business prudence to require librarians hereafter to furnish heavy bonds from some substantial surety company to secure the payment of any liabilities incurred through a failure to discriminate correctly among the applicants for risky reading matter."

Perhaps Mr. George Schumn or Mr. W. D. Forrest, who spend a good deal of time in the Boston Public Library, may kindly consent to tell Lucifer's readers something about that terrible group of Russian, German and American Anarchists and Socialists who foregather in the "northeast corner of Bates Hall," and read incendiary works on "political economy, exact science and philosophy," to the infinite horror of Mr. Putnam, Librarian, Mr. Swift, cataloguer, and the solid residents of Beacon Hill and the Back Bay district. The Boston "Globe" has a characteristic newspaper cut of some of these awful men, engaged in the nefarious occupation of reading ponderous tomes of political economy and the exact sciences. Among them is supposed to be a Russian who has acquired such a classical English diction that the degenerate Bostonese are astonished, and a "Yankee through and through, the possessor of one of the oldest and best-known names in Massachusetts, and one intimately associated with the settlement and earlier history of Boston. Up to a few years ago the homestead of the family was still in existence near Boylston station, and not a few of the older and wealthier citizens of Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury are connected with his family by blood or marriage." This gentleman, we are informed, "furnishes the 'balance wheel' for the remainder of his associate Anarchists and Socialists." I do not know whether this "American" is an Anarchist or a Socialist, and I presume the reporter is in a like state of ignorance, as no doubt also are Mr. Putnam, librarian, and Mr. Swift, cataloguer, who presume to select his reading matter for him. "The never-ending audacity of elected persons" receives fresh illustration every day, but the authorities of the Boston Public Library may be permitted to go up very near to the head of the class.

* * *

The police silly season is undoubtedly on. A Washington officer claims he had the right to stop a cab and ascertain if the young woman it contained had a proper escort.—New York "Journal."

The police silly season lasts every year for three hundred and sixty-five and one-fourth days, on an average. But the Washington officer did not transcend the spirit of the law—is a cab more sacred than a bedroom?

* * *

Charles E. Butts and Nellie Turner, a white man and negro woman who married each other recently in St. Joseph, Missouri, have been sentenced to two years each in the penitentiary for violating the law prohibiting miscegenation. And this barbarity was perpetrated by Christians, the worshipers of a god who committed miscegenation with an Israelitish woman, and the blood of whose son, the fruit of this cross-breeding, is supposed to have the incredible virtue of washing clean their cruel little souls!

"Hear the Other Side."

BY CYRUS W. COOLRIDGE.

[The following communication was written in May for the "Free Thought Magazine." Mr. Green wrote me that he was pleased with the article and he promised to publish it in the July number. However, it was not published, and Mr. Green returned it to me stating that he had no room for it in the last two numbers and that it is too late to publish it now. Thinking that the article may be of some interest to the readers of Lucifer, I send it to you for publication. C. W. C.]

In an article on Civilization and Freethought in the May number of the "Free Thought Magazine" Mr. Edward W. G. Dobson says: "Free thought includes the unreserved examination of all questions, no matter what the nature of those questions may be." Those are true words which should be the motto of every man who claims to be a Freethinker. We should remember that free thought cannot be limited to a mere denial of the Christian religion. Freethinkers cannot afford to be narrow-minded and bigoted. But is it not a fact that many of our freethinking friends cannot stand opposition to their views and do not welcome new ideas? Is it not a fact that some Freethinkers are no less bigoted than are the followers of the Pope or of John Calvin? People who live in glass houses should not throw stones. Why, then, should we accuse Christians of bigotry when we ourselves are bigoted?

We say that the reason why so many people believe in the absurdities and impossibilities of the Christian religion is because they do not want to hear the other side. But how many Freethinkers wish to hear the other side? And yet the man who knows only one side cannot be sure of being right. We must also remember that the man who always harps on one subject often makes himself ridiculous. Freethought should be a wide field with plenty of room for all questions that, as Mr. Dobson says in the article mentioned above, may affect the happiness or welfare of mankind.

What is the mission of Freethought? Is it not to make the world happy? If not, why do Freethinkers want to destroy the Christian religion? Is it only for the mere pleasure of destroying? If so, Freethought is of no use to the world and it might as well cease to exist. If Freethought cannot improve the condition of mankind, is it worth our while to be aggressive Freethinkers? Why not leave the church people alone, if by converting them to our views we can do them no good? But of course such is not the case. Do we not say that the Christian church is a detriment to the intellectual development of the people and that when the people become intelligent enough to throw away the old myths, there will be more happiness and prosperity in the world? But do Freethinkers really think that to destroy the church is sufficient to make the earth a paradise? Is there nothing else to be done? And is it not a fact that the rejection of the Bible does not always make men good and kind? Take our millionaire Andrew Carnegie. He is said to be somewhat of a sceptic, but is he a just man? Does he treat his workingmen with kindness and consideration? Let us then try not only to destroy reverence for "God's Holy Book," but also to civilize and humanize man, and this can be done only by a free discussion of all questions that can be of interest to humanity.

Why is it that our Freethought publications are afraid to discuss social, political and economic questions? Why is it that as soon as someone dares to discuss such questions in a Freethought paper, we hear the angry voice of some subscriber saying: "Stop my paper"? The "Free Thought Magazine" "dared" to publish an article on marriage by Moses Harman and for this "crime" the editor has been severely condemned by many of his subscribers. It is true that Mr. Harman's article was printed for the purpose of proving his views to be "pernicious," but the fact that the editor has allowed such a "vile" article to "mar" the pages of his "pure, lofty and able publication" was enough to make some Freethinkers think that the world is coming to an end. Now, Moses Harman's critics are, undoubtedly, honest men; but let them not forget that Mr. Harman is also an honest man and that he is fighting for what he believes to be a just cause. He is convinced that marriage protected by law, tends to the enslavement of women, and therefore he wants to have it abolished. It is not my business to discuss the question, whether Mr. Harman is right or wrong. Let us admit for argument's sake that he is entirely wrong and that the realization of his ideas would ruin the world, but what of it? Are the readers of the "Free Thought Magazine" obliged to agree with Mr. Harman? Can they not think for themselves and refute his arguments, if they think them to be wrong? Why should they adopt Christian methods and ask that the magazine should print nothing which does not accord with their own views? The bigoted Christian says: "Christianity is a divine institution, and you must not attack it." The bigoted defender of conventional marriage says: "Marriage is a sacred institution and you must not let any one attack it." In what respect is the latter better than the former? Does a bigoted Freethinker deserve more respect than does a bigoted Christian?

Brother Freethinkers, we must learn to be broad and liberal in our views; we must welcome new ideas and thoughts, and we must give to every honest man a hearing. If upon examination we find that another man's views are better than are ours, we must have courage enough to accept them. If, on the contrary, we come to the conclusion that other people's ideas are erroneous, they can do us no harm. Let us banish the spirit of bigotry and let us be true Liberals.

Philanthropic Stupidity.

BY ADELINE CHAMPNEY.

Dr. Tarnier of Paris in 1888 first put in use at the Maternity Hospital of that city an invention known as the Baby Incubator, by the use of which forty-five per cent. of the prematurely-born children may now be saved, and the death-rate among delicate infants reduced some thirty per cent. This invention is now used in the hospitals and Dr. Lion, a philanthropist, is establishing incubator nurseries where the fragile mites of humanity, many of them weighing less than two pounds at birth, may be carried and nursed into sufficient vitality to sustain their feeble lives.

To the incubator, which is a very simple and effectual affair, I take no exceptions but I should like to ask some philanthropists to suspend their enthusiasm over the saving of the dear little babies long enough to answer a few questions.

What proportion of prematurely-born and delicate infants are likely to develop into strong, healthy children? Is not the cause of their frailty generally some disease or weakness of the mother which the child is likely to inherit? This incubator will largely be used, of course, in hospitals; who are the women who go to the maternity hospitals? Are they the cultured, the refined, the advanced women of the day? Are they women with fine qualities to transmit to their offspring and leisure and means to develop them through a happy childhood to a useful manhood and womanhood? Do women with comfortable homes go to the hospitals for confinement? Very rarely, but women with drunken husbands; women who walk close to the brink of poverty and want; women with large families dependent on them; betrayed women struggling to keep their self-respect and resist degradation;—these women have no other resort than the hospitals in their hour of need. It is the children of such, born to poverty and woe, undesired children, too feeble to live without artificial heat—these children are to be saved from the death which their birth-conditions would naturally cause, are to be coaxed into life and launched into the world. For what?

How many of these will be life-long invalids, sapping the lives of those who love them, requiring luxuries that deprive others of necessities, always a burden to hands and hearts already over-full? How many of them will be thrown upon the care of indifferent or cruel parents in homes where no love is, to be scorned, abused, neglected; hated for their helplessness? How many will grow up in bitter poverty, through a loveless childhood, a lawless youth, to a manhood of crime and violence? How many will be saved at birth to cry in later life—"Would I had never been born!"

How many of them will grow up to be happy and to help their fellows, thus fulfilling the "chief end of man" which is twofold—individual happiness and race progress?

Yet is this a pretty charity, a beautiful philanthropy, over which we wax sentimental. We conceal all understanding of the laws of sexual activity, cultivating ignorance, condemning and punishing knowledge and prohibiting all attempts to gain knowledge. We use all restrictive measures to prevent the rational control and regulation of reproduction. Under the compulsion of ignorance women must bear children in sorrow, men must toil to support them, but—O great charity!—when toil and privation have done their work and the woman at the hospital gives birth to a puny, half-dead child, modern science will save it for her and modern philanthropy restore it to her helpless arms.

By all the gods, let us call things by their right names! Philanthropy? I say stupidity; short-sighted, narrow-minded, self-destructive stupidity.

Nature and Pain and Man.

BY E. C. WALKER.

I would respectfully suggest to Mr. Slocum that pointing out flaws in arguments is not, as he seems to think, inconsistent with the search for truth; on the contrary, it is one of the methods by which we ascertain the truth and make it known.

The attempt to differentiate the "acts of individuals" from the "order of the universe" is futile, and may well be monopolized by theologians. Man is a growth out of the universe as a whole, one of the results of its processes, and anything he does is as much a part of its order as is the belching of a volcano or the revolution of a planet.

Yes, pain warns us that something is wrong; in the evolution of organisms those most readily escape their enemies which are most keenly sensitive to pain—the fittest survive. It is the "something wrong" that is the primary mistake, from the view-point of man, not the sentinel that warns us. And when we are unable to avoid the danger of which it gives warning, our suffering is increased in the ratio that the sentinel is faithful and acute. The "something wrong" is the fer de lance, not the accumulated experience which tells us that its bite is quickly fatal. And so on to the end of the chapter.

Yes, again, I have before heard that "through suffering comes refinement"; but from the viewpoint of man there is certainly "something wrong" when it is so. And after all, none of us is anxious to go to school to this teacher. Upon the whole, we prefer the condition of the healthy man, of the free man, to that of the invalid, or of the tortured prisoner or slave. I surmise that even Mr. Slocum would manage to worry along without the refinement if thereby he could escape the affliction of the cancer. In other words, there is a great deal of flub dub talked about the "refining, spiritualizing," influence of agony. But it is generally the agony of the other fellow.

"If I were God."

BY MARGUERITE L. HAMILTON.

"Never a heart should be broken on earth if I were God."
"Never a heart should be broken on earth if I were God."

These beautiful words of Kenneth Lamar have echoed and re echoed through my mind all day, and all day I have been thinking of the stanzas written by this man of tender, compassionate, loving nature who would not that human souls should suffer one throb of anguish, and of the countless burdened ones crushed by the commands of God.

"Never a heartache should follow our mirth," he cries, remembering the life-time of bitter regret after the few short hours of pleasure, forbidden by our God.

"Never should longing be vile or vain." The words are sweetest music to my heart, for I know that not always shall longing be "vile and vain." When we have thrown off the chains that have bound us lo! these many years; when we have listened to the loving voice of Nature, instead of the sepulchral tones of long dead prophet and priest; when the royal heart of man and the tender love of woman have proved strong enough to defy the decrees of savage law makers; when we have grown strong and free and noble; when love reigns, and bitter jealousies and heart aches are no more; when a race of kings and queens with beautiful children born of love shall walk the earth in the place of the sneaking, fearful, trembling law-breakers, who cringe and crawl and fawn at the feet of law-executors, who in turn tremble before the crowd that has placed them in power; when man dares be true to his nobler, better self; when woman dares be true to her own heart; yea, when the man dates of God are no longer obeyed; then, and only then, shall the pure longings of our hearts cease to be "vile and vain."

"Never be pestilence, famine or chain, never be poverty, farewells or pain, if I were God."

Beautiful, daring, loving words. Words worthy our deepest thought.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Hexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 West Congress Street, Thursday evening, Sept. 16, Dr. Wahl will open the discussion. The subject will be, "Might is Right."

☞ Lillian Harman is taking a vacation in Missouri. Her address is this office.

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$288.75
Larose,	.50
S. G. Hodge,	1.00
Emil F. Ruedebusch,	5.00

Strikes and Trusts.

Whatever is, is right—right and true to the causes that produce it.

Whatever is, is wrong—wrong to the ideal; wrong to the possible—under ideal conditions.

As illustrations, take the "strikes" and the "trusts" now so common in the industrial and commercial world. Looking for causes we readily see that these social phenomena are the natural, the legitimate results, or outcome, of causes dating back hundreds and thousands of years, and, reasoning from analogy, we conclude that until these underlying causes are changed or removed it is irrational to hope for results different from those we see—and deplore—today.

"See and deplore." This phrase indicates discontent. It indicates that we—some of us at least, are not satisfied with the social status of today. Discontent implies desire for change. Intelligent discontent implies inquiry, investigation, into causes of the conditions, the environment, that gives us discontent, unrest, unhappiness. Intelligent discontent, rational unrest, implies hope that conditions, environment, may be made better; and by better we mean more pleasurable, more happifying.

Assuming that our discontent is intelligent; that our unrest is rational, let us ask,

First. What are some of the social conditions that give us pain, and against which we protest?

Second. What are the causes of these pain-giving conditions? and,

Third. How can these causes be removed?

Prominent among the social conditions, the contemplation or endurance of which causes us pain, are, (a) The accumulation of wealth—the products of labor—in the hands of those who do little or no work, and the consequent poverty deprivation, of those who work, or those who would work if opportunity were allowed. (b) The monopoly of nature's opportunities—including soil, mines, discoveries and labor-saving inventions—by the fortunate and cunning few, and the consequent exclusion of the great masses of mankind from equal participation in these rights and privileges.

The causes that produce these unequal conditions—conditions that bear their fruit in abnormal development, in diseases, in crimes, in vices, in insanity, imbecility, premature old age and premature death, may be summed up in two words,

Ignorance.

Superstition.

Of these two the first is the elder, and the parent of the younger. In fact we may sum it all up in the single word ignorance. "Ignorance is the only darkness." "Ignorance is the only devil."

From this parent source spring a numerous brood of superstitions that enslave and debase mankind. Prominent among these may be named,

First. The religious, or the god superstition—putting upon the throne of the world a monster fashioned after the image of barbaric man; that is, a vain-glorious, jealous, revengeful, clannish, partial, hating and hateful being. What wonder that the worshipers of such a god can with a clear conscience monopolize the earth and complacently see the masses suffer, when they know their god can sit idly by and witness the suffering that he could now prevent, and the endless suffering hereafter that he himself inflicts?

Second. The "statute" superstition—the state!—the superstition that makes it right to rob—by tariffs and other forced levies—to give to a privileged few what they do not need, and makes it very wrong to steal a loaf or a coat to satisfy a real need. What wonder with a "legal" conscience, our standard of right as to "property" and the sacredness of human life becomes confused and unreliable, when we are educated in the belief that to be a good citizen is to support a system, a fetich, built upon robbery and murder!

Third. The most baneful of all our inherited superstitions; one that keeps life in all others—the marriage superstition. The superstition that tells us to regard as vile and sinful the most important of all human passions and functions—the creative—until it is sanctified by permission of a priest of God or State. A superstition that enslaves the creator—woman—in loveless union for life, and compels her to be the mother of unwelcome children—disinherited, defrauded children, compels her to be a mere breeder of the unfit—so that "God and State," priest and law-maker, may have a perennial supply of obedient slaves to do their will, and to make their own offices and privileges necessary to "society."

Here, then, as some of us see it, is the first and most important work of reformers; of those who would do away with "strikes and trusts." So long as the public conscience is dominated by these three superstitions, and especially by the last named, the work of the reformer, whether political, industrial, religious or what not, will make little real headway. It is simply the old, old story of fighting effects while the root causes remain untouched. The axe must be laid at the root of the tree, and woman, upon whom nature has placed the burden of responsibility in the creative realm, must first be awakened to a realizing sense of such responsibility.

Alas for us! this our awful baggage in the rear of humanity, these women who have not moved on their own feet one step since the primal mother taught them to suckle, are perpetually pulling us backward on the march. Slaves of custom, forms, shows and superstitions, they are slaves of the priests.—"Beauchamp's Career," ch. 58, p. 497.

The foolish and the dead alone never change their opinions. —James Russell Lowell.

Selections from "The Adult."

Among noteworthy articles in the September number of the "Adult" is one entitled the "Mutability of Sex Love," by "Orford Northcote." This writer is already known to our readers as the author of the series of articles on the "Contagious Diseases Acts," by which legislation it is sought to lessen the dangers to health of men from association with diseased women. (For man's benefit, of course; the woman's welfare is not considered.) In his opening paragraph in the current issue of the "Adult" the writer of that series says:

"It is curious that, notwithstanding the universal agreement that passionate love never lasts long past its physical consummation, men and women of even advanced views still believe that it is possible for a married man and woman to continue to stand to each other in the relationship of passionate lovers throughout the sexual life, to the exclusion of all other sexual attractions. The prevalence of this belief may easily be traced to the deep-seated ignorance of the fact that sex love has invariably a physical basis. If it were recognized that the male and female sex cells were solely responsible for the sexual attraction, and that the secondary sexual traits, whether of body or mind, which differentiate men from women, are merely the means to the end of guiding the sex cells in their search for other sex cells of suitable character for the ultimate purpose of union, the mistake would not be made of supposing that sex love is due to a mental or spiritual affinity, which, unlike physical attraction, may, it is supposed, be of a permanent character. I have, elsewhere shown at some length, and, I believe, incontrovertibly, the truth of the thesis that sexual love is based absolutely on the activity of the sex cells, and, starting from this position, I will endeavor to show that a long continuance of passionate sex love, of the character that is supposed to be spiritual, is impossible in marriage; impossible, that is to say, where there are frequent opportunities of physical union."

By many of our readers this view will be regarded as "materialistic" and degrading to the instinct or passion called love, but it is not so much a question of what we would prefer to believe as "what are the facts?"—as shown by human observation and experience. The time was, when the "evolutionary" theory, as taught by Darwin, Huxley and others, was regarded with much the same kind of aversion by all who held to the divine or supernatural theory of man's origin. "Evolution" was called materialistic, atheistic, cold, brutalizing, unsentimental, degrading, etc. Now, however, with few exceptions even theologians are compelled to reconstruct their creeds to fit the hated Darwinian, or as some call it, the "monkey" theory of man's origin. And so likewise, it is probable that our ideas in regard to the origin of love will have to be reconstructed, to conform to the facts of anthropologic and physiologic science.

I should like to insert the whole article, did space permit. The treatment of this "occult" subject is clear and very convincing. Two more brief selections will show the author's manner and animus:

"If we could read the sexual history of those persons who suppose that passionate sexual attraction may last throughout married life, we should probably find that in every case the men and women who held such an opinion had, at some time or other in their career, been violently in love with some person of the other sex with whom they had never enjoyed sexual intercourse. The married woman who flatters herself on her good fortune in her husband holding to the view that the limits of a passionate love are only bounded by its inception on the one side and the grave on the other, would flatter herself less if she knew the genesis of her husband's opinion. As it is, she imagines that it is for her that her husband has this passionate regard. She little dreams that while he admits to himself in the privacy of his own self-communings that this never-dying, passionate love is impossible for him so far as his wife is concerned, it would have been possible had he been able to marry that other woman he had loved, but whom circumstances had assigned as the sexual property of some other man, or whom death had removed from his ken forever. So do husbands and wives, in this age of sexual hypocrisy, deceive themselves and each other."

"The oft-quoted lines of Tennyson's 'The woman's cause is man's' have a broader application than is usually given to them by their readers. Not to the poet, even, is it always given to understand the true significance of his message. And nothing will be gained by merely ascribing to reformers, whether men or women, the bias which is due to sex. Such bias there undoubtedly is, and enlightened ideas of sexual sociology will only become general when the inaccuracies of thought due to such bias are subject to that mutual correction which the frank interchange of ideas between men and women on this subject would make possible."

Another article of nearly equal length and importance is that on "Sexual Freedom in Relation to Woman and Economics," by "Sagittarius." A few brief paragraphs will give the reader a glimpse of the direction of this archer's arrows:

"In every phase of thought, the breakdown of authority, making way for the advent of rationalism, has made it possible to ventilate ideas with such (relative) freedom that heterodoxy of any sort can hardly excite the same degree of horror as in the days when mere opinion, if rationalistic, was combatted with the prison, the rack, or the stake. And, by the natural law, under which disused functions become atrophied, much of the desire to coerce has passed away with the power.

"This comparative immunity for rationalistic propaganda is enjoyed less by the advocates of sexual freedom, doubtless, than by Protestants of any other sort. For two reasons. First, it is newer, and the 'innate conservatism of humanity' is always opposed to change; and, secondly, the marriage laws and customs are the last citadel and bulwark of authority, both from the religious and the economic standpoints."

"There are two barriers new to sexual freedom—public opinion and the economic enslavement of five-sixths of the people under our wage system. While there is economic dependence there cannot be complete sexual (or any other) freedom. So obvious is this that its statement is seen to be a platitude. The majority are dependent on the wage-paying minority. Dependence and freedom are mutually exclusive terms."

The closing article of this number of "The Adult" is a criticism upon the "Troops in India" question, by E. Wardlaw Best, who seems to be the only woman contributor to this month's bill of fare. She takes issue with Victor Martell, who in No. 1 had, if I understand the matter, defended the "Contagious Diseases Acts," of "Parliament." Miss Best handles the matter without gloves, and seems to have the "best" of the argument. Her article closes thus:

"The whole subject is disgraceful in the extreme, and our marriage system is at the root of the whole matter. Women are divided into two sets, trained to detest each other; sets whose interests are diametrically opposed. The prostitute, the blackleg of the marriage system; while marriage, on the other hand, is held up as the market price of women. These sets are kept apart—by interest, and by the man who has created that interest. The one set used as a public harem by men, whilst the second set is starved of its natural sexual rights, excepting those chosen in marriage by the man for breeding purposes, to produce a family which is to belong primarily to him, and whose mother is to be kept handy for his sexual desires. This is the plain truth. Those not chosen, or who refuse to be used under this system, or to help to degrade their sex, are sexually starved, whilst their unfortunate sisters of the public harem are so disgusted and replete with the horrible life they lead, that suicide is common amongst them. Other women just manage to hang, like Mahomed's coffin, between the two principal sets, and lead, as best they can, something resembling a free life. The Church, meanwhile, continues to prate of "sin"; the State to oppress women; and the medical priesthood to reap a rich harvest."

Vol. I. No. 2 of "The Adult" is for sale at this office, price 5 cents.

Sociologic Lesson. No. XXXXIX.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

Risk of Loss. Interest on money can never equal the expected advantages to the borrower, for two reasons. First, the person who uses the money must give physical and mental labor in order to obtain the benefits, and is entitled to compensation for his own contribution; and second, there is always a risk of loss; tools may break, or the production may prove of little value; and the user of money is entitled to compensation for his risk. It is almost wholly a question of risk which makes money worth in some places ten per cent or more, and in others only two or three per cent. Where the rate of interest is high, there is either danger that the borrower will be unable to keep his agreement and return the capital borrowed, or else that he will not be honest enough to return it. Even the danger that he will take advantage of legislative enactments, and while nominally returning the borrowed capital will return it in a depreciated currency, increases the risk and the rate of interest. This explains why the rate of interest is so high in the "silver" states.

REMARKS.

From the viewpoint of privilege—a privileged commodity and privileged men, there is little to be said against the reasoning found in the above "Lesson". But under equal freedom for all commodities, and for all men, there would be no place for "interest," as such, and no place for robber "legislative enactments" such as that which changed the standard of legal currency from silver—or silver and gold, to gold alone. Then "silver states," gold states or corn or sugar states would not look for special legislation in their favor. Risk of loss would be guarded against in a natural and rational not an arbitrary or artificial manner.

M. H.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LV.

And thus it is that the threads of our story once more unite. Again the figure of a man is pacing up and down the platform, awaiting the incoming train and, as at last it comes thundering in and makes a brief halt, Norman's eyes rest upon the stalwart, manly figure of the companion of earlier days, and the clasp of the hand that follows is almost painful. But even in that first quick meeting when joy lights up the eyes of both, Norman sees the change in his old time friend; sees the lines that the flight of years alone has not engraven on the handsome face.

"What is it, Owen? There is that in your face which tells me all is not well. Have you been sick?"

"Heart-sick—yes! to the extent that life sometimes seems but a burden."

"Why should a man of almost unlimited wealth, such as you possess, speak in such a strain?"

"Why, indeed! You speak as though wealth could buy happiness."

"And can it not? Do you not know what untold, what inconceivable misery could be turned to joy with the assistance of wealth?"

"In thousands of cases, yes. In my own instance, no! Wealth cannot heal a breaking heart, cannot buy the happiness which has fled."

"I believe I possess a panacea for an evil such as yours. The society of sweet women will restore you to life and love."

"Don't speak of woman and love to me. I have done with em!" Norman smiled.

"O, I have touched the right cord, have I? But that is a bold assertion which you have just made—that you have done with women forever. Yet I assert that you must—you must and you will be won."

"Don't you know that I am a married man?"

For a moment Norman looked him searchingly in the face; then, as if satisfied, replied,

"And what if you are? Are you sure that that fact should prove a barrier to future happiness?"

Owen Hunter in turn now looked Norman searchingly in the face—

"How am I to understand you? That the Norman I once knew, and who I know possessed such high-strung ideas of honor, should express himself thus?"

A slight flush rose to Norman's brow. Hastily he opened his lips to answer but as quickly checked himself—

"No more, now! This is scarce a proper place to discuss the sort of topics we are drifting into. Without doubt ere we part there will be moments more opportune for thorough discussion. At present I am eager to introduce you into a most charmed and charming circle."

Owen shook his head.

"I have come to you for quiet, Norman. My heart is sore, and needs rest. I would rather not meet strangers. Besides I have with me a friend whom I wish to introduce to you; also to ask your forbearance for thus imposing on your hospitality, as that is what I am about to do. Another storm-tossed soul in need of rest and quiet; one who has drained the bitter cup of sorrow to its very dregs." Turning he approached a man who had hitherto stood motionless at some little distance. A man well worth looking at. Tall, well proportioned; dark, heavy beard and clustering hair; with an unspeakable sadness in the deep, gray eyes.

"I claim your hospitality for Milton Nesbit, as well as for myself, and promise that neither shall be too great a burden on your kindness, if you can secure us the welcome of your mother and sisters. I know it is much I ask of you, as our intimacy in the past years can scarcely be called by the name of friendship—but permit me, Mr. Nesbit, this is the friend of my college days, Norman Carlton, of whom I have been telling you."

Extending his hand and firmly grasping that of the stranger, Norman said:

"Permit me to welcome any friend that Owen Hunter may introduce. You are worthy, or he would not ask it. As for our being friends in the past, do not let that worry you. If we have not been intimate friends it has not been for lack of mutual attraction but rather that the ties that bound us were not close enough, and it is not too late to make them closer. I always felt the most profound admiration for the sunny tempered youth I knew as Owen Hunter."

"Thank you, for your generous welcome," replied a grave, musical voice. "I am but as an instrument in the hands of Mr. Hunter. I follow where he leads. Later I hope you may bid me welcome on my own account."

"Spoken like a man. I feel that already I may speak the words of welcome in your own behalf. But come, dinner will be waiting, and in a well regulated household, as you both understand, to the good housewife that is an abomination, and my mother knows what good housekeeping is. But set your minds at rest; she will tender you the welcome I ask for my friends. Formal and precise she may be but she is also a most gracious hostess. My sisters also you will find pleased to meet you. But they do not belong to the charmed circle to which I insist on introducing you. No protests! I will have my way. You are already announced, and in this instance I mean to be firm. You would scarcely be a man if our many charmers cannot succeed in dispelling the clouds, and a man must be of flinty hardness who could listen to our song-bird, sweet, winsome Cora, without being moved."

Owen started.

"Cora! did you say?—Cora? But pshaw! why should I excite myself over a name. There are hundreds of Coras in the world. But lead on. We are ready to follow."

So they piled into the cutter and as they dashed over the snow quite forgot their sorrows, and as events of their college years were gone over they soon felt better acquainted than they had ever done in the olden days. But Milton Nesbit was quiet, very quiet. He only spoke when spoken to, and Owen now realized that it would be better for him to mingle more with others in order to awaken again in that crushed and bleeding heart an interest in life—to deaden the pain that was ever gnawing at his vitals, and though at first Nesbit refused to join the two friends when evening drew near, preferring to remain at home, and although Owen, too, would have much preferred to remain in the seclusion of his room, he feared to hurt the feelings of his kind host, and therefore sacrificed his own desire to that of Norman's. As for Milton, Owen believed it absolutely necessary that he should accompany them, and insisted on his doing so.

Unwilling to seem boorish, with a sigh Nesbit prepared to make a martyr of himself. So when Norman's cutter drew up to the Westcot mansion he brought two guests instead of the one expected, but both were made equally welcome. For some reason Norman had not mentioned the name of his intended guest. No intentional oversight, I ween. He had never heard the name of Cora's lover and therefore could not have known the link binding these two, so when the name of Owen Hunter was announced, each of the girls started. Owen must have thought, for an instant, that they acted strangely, but quickly recovering themselves they extended a hearty welcome. Soft white hands were clasped in the manly ones; rosy lips were wreathed in sweetest smiles. But as Norman's eyes went about the room he missed Cora, and asking Imelda where her sister was,

"I believe she was telling baby Norma a story and when that was finished Meta wanted a song, so when she gets through entertaining the little folks she will no doubt make her appearance."

Owen again started—upon being presented to Imelda Ellwood, and the two names kept forming themselves into one. "Cora, Ellwood; Cora, Ellwood!" Surely he must be going mad. It was only a coincidence, thought he. To find his own sweet girlie here would be too good to be true. So he devoted himself to Imelda and soon found himself admiring the intelligent, gravely sweet girl who was so well informed on whatever subject might be broached. Milton Nesbit had been passed round, so to say, from one fair maid to another, and all were struck with the sad beauty of his manly face, but unable to elicit many words from him, as his thoughts were many miles away with the fair woman he had left behind him. But now it was Alice who was talking to him. That incessant little chatterbox did not give him much time to talk or to think, even if he had been so inclined,—she had so much herself to say. It was said in a way so quaint and sweet, and as she was the mistress of the house and a married woman he felt himself more at ease and more free in her society, and ere long she managed to hold his attention, and soon he found himself admiring the dainty color in her cheeks, the pearly teeth gleaming from between rosy lips, the mischief sparkling in the clear blue eye, while her voice sounded like tinkling music. The large room was pretty well filled with ladies and gentlemen, but as she pointed each one out to him it was with a word of praise and love for some peculiar trait, attraction or accomplishment. Not one disparaging word, and as his eyes followed her indications he thought he had never found so much harmony.

While his eyes were roving from one to another they rested on Cora who had but just entered the room. Was it that he had not seen her before, or was it that she possessed some feature more attractive than the others? His eyes followed her every movement as she gracefully found her way to the piano and seating herself thereat began a prelude, and soon the rich, full voice filled the room with its rare music, while the sweet tones slightly trembled as the words dropped from her lips:

Across the sobbing sea of doom
The weary world is slowly drifting.
Eyes wet with tears peer through the gloom,
Yet see no sign of rest or rifting.
Still angels bright from some far height,
Repeat through hours of weary waking——
"Hope's starlight shines through darkest night,
To keep the world's great heart from breaking!"

Listening to the words they all knew there was an undercurrent of meaning attached to the simple strain that a stranger would not be apt to detect. And yet Milton Nesbit understood it well, as if the story had been told him in so many words, that the gifted singer had known sorrow, and slowly his gaze sought Owen Hunter. What was it? Owen had risen from Imelda's side, evidently unconscious that he was acting strangely, that he was, to say the least, impolite. He had neither eyes nor ears for anything else but the fair singer. As if fascinated the song drew him to her side. He repeated the words:

"Hope's starlight shines through darkest night"—

whispering them close to the pink shell ear,

"O Cora, my own, is not the night over? May the morning now at last dawn?"

Quick as a flash Cora whirled about on her stool, and with the one glad cry, "Owen!" cast herself into his arms, regardless of the many eyes resting upon them, and was held by him in an embrace so close as if he meant never again to let her go.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

I. Johnston, Victoria, B. C.:—Kindly discontinue Lucifer for some time or until I again send you an order. Reason—"Klondike." Will likely renew next year.

J. Jameson, Brinnon, Wash.:—Don't know how we could get along without Lucifer's visits, but can't renew just now. Will write a long letter soon. Yours for humanity.

Mrs. L. G. Logan, Shelby, Mich.:—I am old and decrepit but want the weekly visits of Lucifer, and will pay for it as long as I can. Our means do not begin to keep pace with our desire for reform literature, especially on sexual and financial lines. Enclosed find one dollar for which please give me credit on subscription.

L. Larose, Montreal, Canada:—I am sorry to have to tell you to not send me Lucifer any more. I agree entirely with the opinions expressed by your collaborators, but as I am not rich, and having very little time to spare I prefer to read books that I can pass to my friends. Will you please for the dollar I send you in this envelope send me "The Old and the New Ideal" by Emil F. Ruedebusch, fifty cents. The balance use to send trial numbers of Lucifer to others. Accept my thanks and best wishes.

[The above are specimen replies we are getting, in answer to our late request to be informed whether the weekly visits of Lucifer are longer desired by those whose paid up time has expired. If all would respond promptly it would relieve us of much embarrassment in deciding the question of whether or not to continue sending the paper.]

Dr. Cora A. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.:—I have just returned from a nine weeks sojourn in Southern California. While there went to see James G. Clark, the dear old veteran in the cause of human rights, and found him almost at death's door. He has been ill for eight months. Spent all his energies singing for the campaign for human freedom, and fell at last in the battle. On his marble brow the sunlight of hope and prophecy still lingers, and one can almost hear the sweet voice vibrate the "O yes, 'tis coming," the chorus of a song he has sung to thousands, telling of the good time yet to be. Will you mention these facts in your paper and ask your readers to send one dollar to James G. Clark, 154 E. Colorado St., Pasadena, Cal., for a copy of his "Poetry and Song," and thus help defray his expenses and keep his sensitive soul sheltered from the blast of charity as a means of sustenance. We who are yet in the ranks must try to bear the cup of cold water to the wounded who fall at our sides. Have missed Lucifer much, but found piles of them here on my return and am reading them greedily.

676.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

[The above appeal needs no second from this office, but the second is heartily given, and from this office the dollar will soon be sent for a copy of his almost unequaled poems. Having had the pleasure of a visit from this veteran in the work of breaking the chains from the souls and bodies of women and men, and having heard that wonderfully sweet voice, and felt the inspiration of his exceptionally noble and venerable presence, I earnestly hope that this appeal from Dr. Morse will be promptly responded to by hundreds of Lucifer's readers.

M. H.]

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
Practical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,	.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury,	.10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistæ Vitæ; M. T. Martin,	.10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Lester from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loocks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	25
Degeneracy; C. L. James,	.25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Causes of Hard Times; Chavannes,	.05
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15
Henry George Examined; J. K. Ingalls,	.05
Christianity and Progress; G. W. Foote,	.10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson Barker,
Box 132, San Jose, Cal.

THE ADULT.

A journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Bedborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League; Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscure Judes and Distracted Sues, by Leighton Pagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whitlock, with portrait of Author. 180 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.
Bar Sinister and Legit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages.	.25
Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe.	.25
The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution.	.25
The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper,	.50
Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference.	.15
Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker.	.10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price,	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " "	.50
A Sex Revolution, " "	.25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " "	.25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth,	2.00
When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations.	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen.	.05
Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies	.05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Lascivousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Ebriosity.—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Knoxville, Va.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of Ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical, and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free. Box N, Portland, Oregon.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1502, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Send Sex, Birth-date, 25 cents, and get outline life reading. Disease diagnosed, with advice whom to marry, by lock of hair. Life Guide Box 814, Pasadena, Cal.

We Will Send You forty (40) of the best anti-constipation, liver pills you ever saw on receipt of twelve (12) cents in stamps. Worth half a dollar. Agents wanted. The Ramon Supply Co., Chicago, Station X.

PRICE, 2 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., NO. 38. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPTEMBER 22, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE NO. 677

I am convinced that those societies which live without government enjoy in their mass an infinitely greater degree of happiness than those who live under the European governments. Among the former, public opinion is in the place of law, restraining morals as powerfully as laws ever did anywhere.—Thomas Jefferson.

Ideals, Old and New.

BY EMIL F. RUEDEBUSCH.

After reading Lucifer No. 675 I concluded that, to prevent further misunderstanding, the readers should be informed that, although my book has been mentioned in many articles, my theory has not been discussed in Lucifer by any one so far. Furthermore I wish to say to my worthy critics: An intelligent discussion of my subject is absolutely impossible unless you begin by answering clearly and definitely the following questions: What is your ideal of love? Is it the Old or the New Ideal? (See lengthy definition of the terms in the respective chapters of my book.) Or is it something between the two extremes?

If you still hold to the Old Ideal, then note my claim that "more tyrannically than legal law, more effectively than any moral feeling, it forces mankind into slavery in love, into mutual possession!" (p. 112) and that, therefore, with such an ideal, real freedom in love would be absolutely impossible, even after every priest and every lawmaker had left the country. As long as you hold to this I advise for you good, true Christian marriage (without the priest, of course, and without the interference of the state wherever that is practicable), a union for life, to be sustained by the sense of duty and responsibility, in which, for the sake of a valued relation, you guard yourselves against any and all dangerous "outside attractions" and in which you try to get as near as possible to your ideal by persistent exertion in "mutual idolatry." The "free union," however, in which the parties live together as in marriage, but which is entered into with the understanding that, on account of their "new ideas," they may retain their freedom of love and that the union may be dissolved at any time by the wish of either party, I declare to be but "a farcical imitation of Christian marriage" in which the good points of the latter are discarded and the bad ones are retained. I hold therefore that the so-called "practical experiments" in, and the agitation for "Free Love" are not advisable until you have emancipated yourselves from the Old Love Ideal and have fully accepted the New. For this very reason I, as the only exception, according to Mr. Walker's statement, have declined to sign the "Call for Concerted Action." I am with you once and forever in the opposition against any and all compulsory legal laws, but when it comes to love- and sex-relations as a special field for agitation, I believe only and exclusively in the concerted action of New-Idealists.

Here then are some points worthy of serious discussion between us: severe criticisms of the theory and actions of "Free Lovers" on which I dwell at great length in my book. After its publication I was impatiently awaiting their answer. How would they defend themselves? Imagine my surprise, yes, my bewilderment, when I found that not one dared to try, and that every one of them who enjoyed an occasional "side love" seemed only anxious to make me out a "dear comrade in the cause of Free Love!"

If, however, you have completely discarded the Old Love Ideal (which I consider the most ludicrous as well as the most pernicious ideal which has ever entered the human mind) and have fully accepted the New Ideal, then you will oppose "dual" (monogamic) as well as "plural" (polygamic or polyandric) relations for the simple reason that you want no sexual "relation" whatever, and will detest the idea of ever being labeled as the sexual mate or partner of any one. As a necessary result you will never share your bed with an adult person of the opposite sex as a matter of course, will desire to enjoy private interviews with every one of those of your male and female friends in whom you have found or expect to find some beautiful complement to your own nature, which can be appreciated best where you are safe from disturbance or interference from outside. This may result for you in no sexual embrace whatever, it may lead to sexual enjoyments with many, or it may so happen that but one person shares such pleasures with you, but, whatever it may be, you will see no reason to give any notice of it to "society" and there is no reason why society should or could know of it. And in case of the last named result you could hardly commit a more foolish or more harmful act than to pronounce it to the world and brag about it.

The acceptance of this, the New Ideal, means a complete revolution in the social intercourse of human beings, and grand results could be achieved immediately, if but one tenth part of the Free Lovers of today could be won for it. I claim a great many things to be the inevitable result of the reign of the New Ideal. Every claim is substantiated by logical reasoning and I still defy you all to prove a defect in my argumentation. The only defense left to my opponents in the debates and discussions of the past was the final remark. "But it is impossible to get rid of this old ideal," which may be true of the speaker in each case (although I generally doubted whether they had tried), but which certainly can have no more weight as an argument than when the pious Christian says: "It is impossible for me to give up the idea of going to heaven and singing with the angels."

In the foregoing I have stated the pivotal points of my treatise. They have not been argued upon in Lucifer and the few allusions to them were incorrect and misleading. Hence I am justified in asserting that my theory has not been discussed and Mr. Warren may find some excuse for his queer notion of criticising an author before reading his book.

One man has indeed entered upon this important subject of love-ideals, J. William Lloyd. His ideal is to have one "central lover" and a number of "side lovers," but his definitions are too poetically vague to be in order in a philosophical discussion. Let us try to get a little nearer to the meaning of his terms by testing them as to their relation to the sexual: If the "central lover" is meant to be the exclusive sexual partner, then this ideal is in fact exactly the same as what good Christians preached for the last 1800 years and is simply clothed in different words. If, however, Mr. Lloyd's ideal permits that the "side lover" may be considered good enough for an occasional sexual embrace, then his ideal is far too low to suit me, as I hold that for a truly beautiful sexual co enjoyment the two should be exclusive "central" lovers for the time being. And furthermore the idea of classifying the human beings we love in such a manner appears absolutely useless and exceedingly harmful to me. I do not believe that any man or woman would relish the idea of being called a side lover and I can see no reason for such an uncalled-for depreciation. Well, unless Mr. Lloyd is a Tolstoian, he must mean the one thing or the other. And this he naively offers to Lucifer's readers without deeming it worth while to discuss my ideal in a single sentence. In a previous article he wrote a great deal about my book, but, unfortunately, made the serious blunder (like Dr. Foote) of discussing a number of my propositions without being conscious of the fact that all these actions are proposed only to New Idealists and that I have plainly stated that these actions would be impossible or at least extremely dangerous to followers of the Old Ideal.

I hope that these remarks will suffice to show you that we New Idealists have good reason to object to being "mixed up" with the "Varietists" of today. We do not care a fig whether your sexual relations are "dual" or "plural" or whether you have none whatever. All we want is to induce you to remove the obnoxious label, which makes freedom of action an impossibility. Show us that you have and intend to retain the right and the chance to enjoy whatever you find worthy of your love in any human being, then we will ask no question as to how, when, where, in what manner, with whom, with how many, etc., you intend to enjoy sexual pleasures and I will certainly not care to give you any advice on this subject as I do not claim to be an authority of sexual hygiene. But as long as you are so anxious to voluntarily brand yourselves as the sexual possession of another by "living together" in or as in Christian marriage, you do not belong to us, and the fact that you consider it the right thing or would like to change partners once a week, brings you no nearer to us than if you intend to remain "true" to your partner for life.

And furthermore I hope and trust that the time will come when your active propagandists will condescend to pay attention to the most important part of my treatise, Chapter XII, pages 112 to 139, "The Old and the New Ideal" (from which the book has derived its name.) As a gentle reminder I will quote the closing paragraph of this chapter:

"To be perfectly explicit, I must state that by discarding marriage I mean of course the discarding of any and all sexual 'living together' (which in fact is the essence of marriage,) and I herewith challenge all Freethinkers to show me the least advantage in such 'living together.' Discard this, accept the new love-ideal, and you have the perfect solution of one of the most important of all social questions!"

What country can preserve its liberties, if its rulers are not warned from time to time that the people preserve the spirit of resistance? Let them take arms. What signify a few lives lost? The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants. It is its natural manure.—Thomas Jefferson.

It is the habit of moral philosophers, when speaking of government, to argue from a vision of government as it ought to be, and to hide the disagreeable sight of government as it actually is.—M. M. Trumbull.

Variety's New Opponents.

BY C. L. JAMES.

On reading A. Warren's article, I meditated a pretty vigorous reply; but I see Moses Harman has anticipated me on at least one of the most important points. Clearly, as things are, it would not do for most varietists to give a satisfactory account of their personal experience. If, for example, I should say that I had been a varietist in practice many years, but that I never knew two variety women to pull caps about me nor about any other of their lovers, and never had a quarrel about a woman with a variety man, but, on the contrary, always found the love of the same woman a bond of friendship, A. Warren might not believe me, and to give proof would certainly be improper.

But a larger induction is quite possible; and what it teaches is, I think, that variety is much more common and successful in practice than most people suppose. In the southern countries of Europe, Italy, Spain, France, Switzerland, Bavaria, it has notoriously been rather the rule than the exception ever since the later days of the Roman republic. So it is, consequently, throughout the Spanish-speaking states of America. In Peru, particularly, there is said to be practically no such institution as marriage, notwithstanding the church's teachings. The same is alleged of Paraguay and of Abyssinia—one of the newest and one of the oldest among Christian countries. The customs of these lands are furiously denounced by Puritanical bigots in ours; but it is the customs themselves which furnish occasion for all this silly rhetoric. That the customs do a particle of actual harm is in no way proved after twenty centuries' trial. But, besides, variety is well known to be rather the rule than the exception among the aristocracy of other countries, such as England and Germany. And in these, also, those who really know the proletariate, or largest class, assert it to be also general among them. It is only the bourgeoisie who condemn it with any sincerity; and accordingly in that great Anarchistic and Socialist movement which unites the progressive aristocracy with those proletaires who have never been through the bourgeois or Philistine stage of evolution, regard for duality is commonly treated as a mere middle-class prejudice. Like orthodoxy, it has actually but few advocates; though those few, being noisy and dogmatical, are able to impose on most others some degree of that hypocrisy which is not "the tribute vice pays to virtue," but rather the blackmail indifference pays to bigotry.

In some countries, for example, England, Germany and the United States, they are strong. But these countries, though less addicted to variety than those others mentioned, have very liberal divorce laws. The real truth of it is that, marriage being simply female slavery, every people who have emerged from the most primitive state, escape it in one way or the other. The romantic seek affinities through frequent separations and remarriages; the more constant resort to variety without separation.

The evils attributed to variety by those few who can get off their dogmatical stilts long enough to allege any, are, I think, the fruit of artificial regulation. Under the restraints of community life people quarreled, just as husbands and wives quarrel, because they are irksomely tied together; and they quarreled more than husbands and wives usually do because there were more of them in the same coil. In Italy jealousy sometimes causes a murder, though such murders are not approved, as they are here. But it must be remembered that in Italy variety, though very common, is contrary to the law of both state and church. If it were not, I apprehend that jealous murder would be quite as rare as any other kind of murder. Liberty, therefore, is the true remedy, as A. Warren says. But when he accuses varietists of crucifying the world's real savior by dogmatism, it certainly seems pertinent to ask him who, except perhaps some advocate of the obsolete community-building craze, ever proposed to make variety obligatory on anyone?

As to Colonel Baylor, he has no notion where he is.

"Woman is the moral regenerator and spiritual illuminator of the race. . . . Woman is man's conscience." This is nonsense—the peculiar nonsense of the nineteenth century truly; but, none the less, unmitigated rot. Woman, being man's conscience, it is very bad if she be enslaved and degraded (that's true enough); therefore, she must be emancipated and spiritualized (whatever that means) through setting up for her worship a standard of virtue invented by men! Oh Logic! thy name isn't Baylor! That standard is (truly said) marriage, the one to the one and only one. It is a law of Nature (then why not let it enforce itself?) Well, says Colonel Baylor, it should be absolutely free from the interference of either Church or State. But it should be "held" to be a sacrament in nature (more unmeaning verbiage). It should be so held by what, since Church and State are both ruled out? By public opinion doubtless. It does not apparently occur to Colonel Baylor, but it does to me, that church and state are merely expressions of public opinion, to which, when restrictive, it resorts at once, by instinct. And we must beware how we even discuss variety, lest we pollute the temple of feminine sanctity! Woman, being man's conscience, must not be free, even to discuss, because an enslaved and degraded womanhood will play the devil. Oh logic, logic! For my part, I affirm, and will maintain whenever required, that sexual anarchy has always been the emancipator of woman, and that she never was degraded or enslaved by anything but a standard of virtue which men set up for her, whose nature, during many past ages, Colonel Baylor has stated quite correctly.

Every man and every woman who has brain of a superior quality is a visionary. It is only the dull, senseless clod who has no visions of a higher-fed humanity; of an international brotherhood wherein there shall be no soldiers and few policemen; of a holier church, purer judges and a better law. These were some of the visions of Jefferson.—M. M. Trumbull.

A Palpable Misapprehension.

In "Observations" in "The Truth Seeker" of September 11, the usually accurate George E. Macdonald has seriously misinterpreted the Social Radicals' "Call for Concerted Action," printed in Lucifer of August 18. Quoting from that Call the affirmation that self-respecting free lovers "refuse to be longer banned by the semi-religious 'Liberals' who assume the unwon title of Freethinkers," Mr. Macdonald remarks:

"This I construe to be an intimation that the social radicals can no longer work harmoniously with the religious radicals for the objects of the latter."

I submit that this construction is warranted neither by the quoted words nor by the context of the Call. If a group within an association finds itself subjected to ostracism because of the opinions that draw its members together, it may protest against such banning and it may enter upon distinctive propaganda work without the secession of its units from the larger association. This is precisely what is happening today in the case of the social radicals. Two at least of the periodical representatives of Freethought and Secularism and a larger number of prominent adherents of religious liberalism have lately been loudly calling from their sentry posts for the drumming out of the free lovers from the camp of the Secularists. Some of the free lovers have replied, in effect: "We refuse to longer tamely submit to this ostracism of ourselves by men and women calling themselves Freethinkers but who are so little Freethinkers in fact that they will not consent that we think freely upon the marriage and sex questions as well as upon religious beliefs, per se. We will organize, that we may more effectively put our views before the people, Christians and Freethinkers alike."

In this there is no intimation that those of us who have been active in Secular work intend to abandon that work, to withdraw from the Freethought Federation. Such abandonment and withdrawal would in itself be exceedingly displeasing to us, besides pleasing altogether too well the narrow-gaugers who want the Federation entirely to themselves. For myself I may say, I stand with all my fellow Secularists for civil justice for all men and women without regard to the opinions they may hold on the subject of religion, and at the same time I stand with some of my fellow Secularists for civil justice for all men and women without regard to the opinions they may hold on the subject of the relations of the sexes. And in each case I affirm that freedom of belief implies freedom of action. The fact that the Freethought Federation does not indorse all that I believe true and necessary will not prevent me remaining in the Federation and doing all I can to help advance the reforms it does believe true and necessary. For the rest I will work outside.

If men belonging to an agricultural society which refuses to take up good roads work, decide to form an organization for the improvement of the highways, does it logically follow that they must withdraw from the agricultural association, that they must decline to help in the work concerning which they and the other members of the association are in agreement? The question answers itself, and its pertinence to this discussion is self-evident. Because I think forest preservation an important sociological problem, and a certain sociological society neglects its study, it by no means follows that in going outside that society to use my influence against deforestation, I must also decline to longer avail myself of the advantages the society can offer me in pursuing investigations in other fields. These are two of many opposite illustrations I might present.

E. C. WALKER.

244 West 143 St., N. Y. City.

Societies exist under three forms: first, without government, as among the Indians; second, under governments wherein every one has a just influence; third, under governments of force. It is a problem not clear in my mind that the first condition is not the best.—Thomas Jefferson.

Two New Books by Ida C. Craddock.

"Helps to Happy Wedlock" is the title of another little pamphlet by Ida C. Craddock whose "Letter to a Prospective Bride" was recently noticed in this paper. "Helps" is written especially for prospective husbands. It consists of two short anonymous essays on male continence and magnetation, followed by Miss Craddock's comments. The pamphlet is written in plain language and emphasizes the importance of the husband giving due consideration to his wife's desires in their marital relations. It contains sixteen pages and its price is 25 cents.

In an entirely different vein is written Miss Craddock's little 67-page book "The Heaven of the Bible," published by J. B. Lippincott Company. In this book a careful collation is made of all the references to heaven which are found in the bible. From these Miss Craddock makes some curious deductions. She opines that there are trees, mud, chemicals, metals and precious stones in the world she believes exists "beyond the border" and that the inhabitants pursue avocations similar to those followed on earth. She argues that sexual relations exist in heaven and that children are begotten there. The book is a curious contribution to speculative theology. The price is 50 cents. Miss Craddock's address is P. O. box 1093, Philadelphia, Pa.

Blackstone, in his definition of law, tries, like Jefferson, to evade the principal evil of the state. He says: "Law is a rule of action prescribed by the supreme power in the state, commanding what is right and prohibiting what is wrong." He did not like to say "commanding what shall be done, and what shall not be done," because that would imply that the law-making power might deny right and establish wrong; yet nothing can be plainer than this, that all acts of the legislature are equally laws whether their character be good or bad.—M. M. Trumbull.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S specialty is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 West Congress Street, Thursday evening, Sept. 30. M. Harman will read a paper on the "Ideal Home."

☞ Lillian Harman is taking a vacation in Missouri. Her address is this office.

THE PARAGRAPHS which appear in this issue of Lucifer attributed to Thomas Jefferson and to M. M. Trumbull, are taken from General Trumbull's admirable little pamphlet entitled "Thomas Jefferson, the Father of American Democracy: His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy" General Trumbull says: "Of the millions of idolaters who claim Jefferson as the saint of their party, nine out of every ten know absolutely nothing about his work, his character or his principles." This little pamphlet gives a concise and well-worded review of Jefferson's political, social and religious beliefs. It can be ordered from this office at 5 cents a copy.

Crimes of Government.

The public conscience is so dormant, so callous, so thoroughly seared by the frequency and magnitude of the crimes committed in the name of law and government that it requires something quite out of the usual to arouse the stupid citizen long enough to take a little thought of these crimes. The wholesale butchery of the Hazelton miners by the riotous guardians of "law and order" is far enough out of the usual and regular grind of "legal" crimes to make even the most devout worshiper of government of man by his fellow man to seriously ask himself, "what next"?

The death by violence of a score or two "mudsills"—workers in mine, in factory or on the farm, is, in itself a small matter, seen from the economic or commercial standpoint. Human life is cheap, a very drug in the market, and hence a few score or a few hundred more or less miners, foreign or native, is a matter scarce worth a moment's serious consideration.

The mine lords evidently take this view of the matter when looking after the personal safety of the brutalized, half-human, operatives, who, for a pittance, delve in the bowels of the earth for the benefit of their employers. A very little forethought and a few dollars taken from the profit side of the ledger, would often save the lives of hundreds of these wage-slaves, but knowing so well that thousands of the unemployed would gladly take the place of the killed or maimed in the mines, or of those who die prematurely on account of bad ventilation under ground or of bad housing and poor sanitation above ground, the mine-owner and operator is justified, from the viewpoint of civilized commercialism, in regarding the killing of the Hazelton miners as a very trivial matter.

And so likewise would the general public view the late tragedy at Hazelton were it not for the exceptional or unusual way in which these men came to their death. If they had been asphyxiated in an ill-ventilated mine, drowned by a sudden and preventable influx of water, or crushed by falling rock from lack of timber-supports, the circumstance would have been regarded as one of the many casualties to which the occupation of coal-mining is always subject, and with a feebly uttered protest against the cupidity and carelessness of mine owners the loss of life would very soon have been forgotten.

But when a body of miners marching peacefully along a public road, unarmed, molesting no one, threatening violence to no one, when these men are set upon by the alleged guardians of the peace and shot down like mad dogs, or as though they were a band of marauding brigands, the indolent, stupid public conscience is roused just long enough to ask whether this sort of thing is to become common, whether this butchery is to be made a precedent in like cases all over the country, and whether the average unarmed and peacefully inclined citizen has any rights whatever as against corporate monopolists and their obedient tools, the courts, the sheriffs, the state militia and the federal or standing army.

As I see it, some of the utterances of labor leaders in reference to the late butchery are wise and some otherwise. While all see that a terrible wrong has been done but few seem to see that the real, the underlying cause is in government of man by his fellowman. So long as such system exists just so long will crimes of government continue, and perhaps with this view of the matter it is well that we have an occasional object lesson, out of the usual and regular, to show the inherent barbarism and savagery of all governmental systems, whether called monarchies, republics, democracies or what not.

The Call for National Organization.

In this week's issue, and in recent issues of Lucifer, considerable space has been devoted to the subject of a national organization for those who advocate abolition—or reform—of the ideals and customs relating to the sex-life of women and men. Hitherto but little has been said editorially, in Lucifer, touching this matter, and now, lest my continued silence should be misconstrued I propose briefly to define my own position on the organization question.

First. Let it be understood, most distinctly, that I am heartily in accord with the objects of the call printed in No. 672, dated August 18. These objects, if I rightly understand them, are identical with the main contention of Lucifer, as expressed in the program or general statement of principles printed in each issue at the head of the fourth, or editorial page. They are also identical with the views advanced in the pamphlet entitled "Motherhood in Freedom," issued from this office nearly twelve months ago, and for the practicalization of which views I have spent considerable time in the effort to form clubs or circles of workers and thinkers in this and one or two other cities of the United States.

It will probably be asked why, if there is no difference in objects, why is it that the name of Lucifer's editor does not appear appended to the "Call" aforesaid?

Briefly in reply: First, and negatively, because I saw no real need that it should so appear. My attitude on these questions is sufficiently known to our readers without making my personality still more conspicuous by placing my name at or near the head of the list appended to the call.

Second, and affirmatively—because, on general principles I fight shy of "organization", or of the idea implied by that term when applied to associations for mutual helpfulness. "In union is strength" expresses a truth of vital importance to all who would help themselves or the race of which they form a part, but more vital still is the truth expressed by the motto "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." Union of the would be free is necessary to the attainment of liberty, but union may defeat liberty by introducing inequity or inequality. Organization, as such, means inequality, and inequality is the negation of freedom. Organization implies "organs"—head, eyes, mouth, hands, feet, etc., some to command and some to obey. If by this term is intended simply voluntary co-operation, free and equal association, then the latter term would better express the aim of the projectors of the Call aforesaid.

But right here I wish to say that because organization restricts liberty this is not sufficient reason, always, to reject organization. Sometimes a temporary and partial surrender of liberty may promote the cause of liberty—as in military and industrial organizations. But the question always arises, is this temporary and partial surrender necessary to success?

This question each must decide for him or herself. To him or her who can do most effective work for liberty by such surrender, to join an organization is the right thing to do. For him or her who can do most effective work outside of organization, voluntary co operation is the plan to adopt.

To sum up in few words, then, let all who approve the objects and methods of the "Call," join the organization and help to make it a grand success, and let all who approve the objects but not the methods, co-operate in all possible ways.

Among these ways I would respectfully suggest the forming of groups, for educational helpfulness, in every city and town; with no rules, passwords or stated dues, but let the members of these groups be the judge as to how much each can contribute to the fund for local expenses, or for the "printing and free distribution of leaflets and pamphlets," and for the other objects suggested in the "Call."

Second. Since co-operative helpfulness is impossible without knowing the names and addresses of the co-operators, a "Bureau of Information" seems a prime necessity. The work of this bureau can be managed through an organization such as that proposed in the Call, and also through such voluntary associations as Lucifer's subscribers and workers are supposed to represent. M. H.

Lois Waisbrooker.

Last week's Lucifer contained a brief note concerning the needs of the poet-singer, James G. Clark, of Pasadena, Calif., and now I wish to say a word for another and not less deserving veteran in humanity's cause. Lois Waisbrooker is now in her seventy-second year, and if any one of our many reform writers and lecturers deserves to retire from active service on a life pension it is she.

Mrs. Waisbrooker does not ask this, however. All she asks is that her friends order her books, for themselves and for others. In a recent letter she says, "I seem to be in that stage of life that comes to many people of my age, when it is for a time a question of going down or going on. If I can have two or three months free from anxiety as to the means of living, I feel, and all signs indicate, that I shall rally and do good work, perhaps the best of my life; otherwise it is a doubtful question."

Readers of Lucifer who have read her books do not need to be told that "Helen Harlow's Vow" is a pioneer work, and one of the very best yet written, to show what woman can do to free herself, and to conquer opposition when she resolves that she will not be crushed by man, nor yet by her own sex. This book has passed through several editions and has now been issued in cheap form, only twenty-five cents. For years it was sold at $1.50 in cloth. It can be ordered of the author, at 1512 Howard St., San Francisco, Calif., or from this office. Catalogues and prices of Mrs. Waisbrooker's books, seven or eight in number, will be sent on application. M. H.

The democracy of Jefferson was not so much a form or method of government, as it was a political principle opposed to government. It was a code of restraints upon sovereignty and mastership; a system of limitations upon public power.—M. M. Trumbull.

The Lamb-Like Gentleness of the Moral.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The account of the performances of a mob of Michigan purists escaped my eye in the news columns, but the New York "Journal" of September 4 editorially condenses it as follows:

At Harrisville . . . on Tuesday night a band of virtuous citizens called on Mrs. Haws, who had left her husband to live in sin with one McKinna. She answered their knocks in her night dress. They inaugurated their reform movement by "beating her severely," and then "forced her out of doors." Next "they drove her down the road, barefooted as she was, constantly applying their whips and switches to her back," the busy! Several times during the march "Mrs. Haws fell to her knees, but was compelled to get up and move on." Once when the exhausted woman fell one of the reformers "grabbed her by the hair and with his knife cut it off close to her head." McKinna was met in his buggy, disarmed, pulled to the ground, and he, with the woman, was marched three miles to the railroad station. There they were tied to telegraph poles and left to reflect on their inferiority to their neighbors in all that goes to make up desirable residents of Michigan.

That is what the "Journal" calls going "beyond the law" in testifying "esteem for female purity." McKinna succeeded in releasing himself and he then untied Mrs. Haws and they returned to their home, from which McKinna the next day disappeared. The New York paper hopes he went to the county seat to get warrants for the arrest of the "reformers." The editorial concludes with these sentences:

The cowardice and barbarity of this Michigan method of testifying disapproval of vice are infinitely more revolting than the vice which it punishes, and a community in which such deeds of horror are possible is a good place for people with hearts in their breasts and a liking for civilization to keep away from.

There is no evidence that the relations of Mrs. Haws and Mr. McKinna were one whit more vicious than those of their persecutors, and the "Journal" should have said so, but, taken altogether, Mr. Hearst's paper has behaved quite creditably in this instance, much more creditably than the average newspaper does on such occasions.

I wonder if the fact that disapproval of "vice" generally assumes the form of cruel outrage has duly impressed itself upon the mind of the ordinary reader of Lucifer? Why is it that the "moral" are so often the heartless? What is there in conventional "purity" that makes its devotees usually utterly impermeable to the suffering of their victims? Why should callousness and "virtue" be almost synonymous? I would say that the habit of invasion must inevitably tend to blunt all the more delicate sensibilities, that supervisory meddling cannot fail to deaden all generous human feeling; that therefore the spy and censor grow to be cruel if not cruel in the beginning, and, on the other hand, the naturally cruel often become spies and censors. Hardness and domineering are eminently congruous. The "tender mercies" of the self-lauded "good" have filled the world with suspicion, hate, torture and murder.

In passing, it may be remarked that the Michigan episode again emphasizes the futility of attempting to live free live openly in the pagan districts. Where population is sparse, and means of transit and communication are in consequence limited as compared with the cities, it must be much more dangerous to disregard convention than it is to do so in the centers of population and thought-interchange. As in the transition from the old to the new religion, after the introduction of Christianity, the cities first came over to the Pauline faith, while the villages (pagani) long remained loyal to the ancient gods, so today, in the villages and country proper, Christianity dominates thought and action to a much greater extent than it does in the cities. In a word, Christianity and its adjuncts constitute the paganism of our time, while science and rationalism are more at home in the larger towns and the mighty aggregations of men and money known as cities. In the nature of things, the innovator is safer in the metropolis than in the village; it is better for him, so far as security is concerned, to be a man of the city than a paganus.

* * *

Referring to the attempt to enforce in Atlanta, Georgia, an ordinance against high hats in theaters, the New York "Journal," in the same number from which I have just quoted, while rightly characterizing the high hat as a nuisance, says that the remedy is education in the principle of equal freedom, not law, which merely arouses antagonism and so shuts the mind against improving influences.

> The less the law meddles with such matters the better. Every such meddling encourages the small busybodies who can find happiness only in interfering with the business of others. . . . If the Rev. Mr. Daniels who made a scene at Ocean Grove the other day because a reciting lady wore a decollete gown, had his way, no doubt a low-necked dress would be a penitentiary affair. Mr. Daniels is worse than many decollete gowns, but there is no need for a law that would cage him, or a charity fund to purchase bandages for his chaste eyes. When he is advertised to exhibit his mind no one is under compulsion to attend, and the intelligence and taste of the time are more efficacious in such cases as his than statutes could be.
>
> When women of refinement and social position set the example of appearing without head covering at places of public entertainment, as they now so generally are doing, it is only a matter of time when their sisters of lower degree will imitate them.

That is sensible, Mr. Hearst; be consistent and stick to that gospel right through.

You must lay aside all prejudices on both sides, and neither believe nor reject anything because any other person rejected or believed it. Your own reason is the oracle given you by heaven and you are answerable not for the rightness, but for the uprightness of its decision.—Thomas Jefferson.

"Sexual Freedom only a Detail."

The question of sexual freedom was up for discussion the other evening at a meeting of economic reformers in a large Eastern city. While there was some opposition to liberty in love, in itself considered, the chief contention of the negative side was that the subject was not germane to the general issue of freedom, as represented by the speakers and the club of which they were members. It was said that without economic and political freedom it would be impossible to realize sex freedom; that it was only a detail and a very small detail, of the question of human freedom; that it was useless to discuss it until the fruits of his toil had been secured for the toiler; that Lucifer and other papers of like character continually harped on the one string, giving to the world nothing new, and that the consideration of it now was a positive hindrance to the progress of the cause for which the objectors assumed to speak.

The spirit manifested on this occasion by our friends of the opposition was one distinctly characteristic of many economic propagandists. Their fundamental error consists in the conception of the reform of social conditions as something to be brought about solely by a rearrangement of the factors of production and exchange. In a word, it is the old delusion respecting a universal panacea that blinds them to the truth of the situation. As a matter of fact, man has many needs, he is the victim of many hallucinations, and he is oppressed by many tyrants. Progress is not along any single path. Men and women will do the best for enlightenment and liberty when they are free to work where the peculiar characteristics of each can have fullest play. All that we can rationally ask of any school of reformers is that it respect the basic principle of equal liberty. The work in which we are engaged will naturally appear to our vision as the most important that needs to be done; if this were not so we would not be engaged in it. But in our eager championship we should not forget that there are other sincere people in the world, that their work appears to them about as ours does to us, and that we are not much more likely than they to be infallible. Of course we can not abandon our work to join with them in theirs, and no more can we expect them to drop theirs to buckle to with us in ours. If we are informed by the scientific spirit, it will not be difficult for us to sympathize with them, to co-operate with them, to often times most effectively work together with them for wider knowledge and larger liberty. The sensible miner does not sneer at the farmer, nor the well-balanced farmer ridicule the miner. Each has his place and work. So, similarly, the reasonable economic reformer does not jeer at the sex liberator, nor the rational sex liberator assert that economic reorganization has no appreciable importance in the general programme of freedom.

To the amusing objection that Lucifer and its co-educators present nothing new, it is difficult to reply at once seriously and with perfect good nature. What do the critics expect? In their own chosen field, what have they lately given us that is not stale with constant repetition? In the nature of things, in either case nothing can be new but the rearrangement of arguments. The arguments themselves and the foundation for them are old, old, old. Generation after generation, century after century, epoch after epoch, man repeats his history. Age succeeding age, the hand of tyranny is heavy, and age succeeding age, comes the inevitable reaction, when men plead and fight for the opportunity to breathe, to grow. The picture of human wants, and human misery, and human struggles, is ever substantially the same; it varies only in the details of the setting, in the deepening or lightening of the tints and shades.

So long as those who do not sow reap the larger part of the harvest, so long will economic agitators tell the old story and make the old demands. So long as the politician enslaves, so long will the Anarchist repeat the old arguments in behalf of liberty. So long as priests peddle superstitions and exact unwilling tribute from dissenters, so long will the Freethinker and the Secularist reiterate the old axioms of reason and the old demands for the total separation of the civil and the sacerdotal, and so long as freedom of choice in love and parenthood in denied, so long will social radicals continue to present the old reasons why men and women should be free to live their own lives in their own way at their own cost. When superstition and despotism turn over a new leaf committing suicide, it will be time enough to ask us to quit talking about their idiocies and crimes.

LYSOF BARDSKY.

Shake off the fears of servile prejudice, under which weak minds are servilely crouched. Fix reason firmly on her seat and call to her tribunal every fact, every opinion.—Thomas Jefferson.

National Work—Important.

I apprehend some of our good friends do not sufficiently appreciate the importance of promptitude in correspondence. Quite a number, in sending in their names for enrollment in the national propagandistic association, forgot to state whether they wished to go in the Active or the Contributory class. Written to in regard to the matter they are slow in responding, and this slowness may seriously retard the work of organization. I trust this word will be enough to secure the necessary dispatch.

E. C. WALKER.

244 West 153 St., N. Y. City.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LVI.

As if in that one glad happy cry all her strength had been spent Cora lay back faint and white in her anxious lover's arms. Had the sudden joy killed her? He strained her close and kissed the white cold lips; then bearing her to a couch he began chafing her hands, helplessly looking about,

"She has fainted; can no one help me restore her?"

Quickly an anxious circle gathered about her, but Paul Arthurs soon reassured them.

"It is nothing—only the reaction. She will be herself in a few moments."

Taking a small vial from an inside pocket of his coat he forced a few drops between her lips and in a few moments had the satisfaction of seeing her open her eyes.

"Take her away where she can have rest and quiet for half an hour; then she will be quite herself again."

Winding her arm about her, Imelda was about to conduct her away when Owen laid his hand detainingly upon her arm.

"Will you not permit me?"

There was so much pleading in the manly voice and clear blue eyes that Imelda could not refuse him.

"You will take good care of her?" with a smile.

"Will I?—as of my life! May I, Cora?"

For answer Cora quietly laid her head against his shoulder, smiling into his eyes, and thus he led her from the room. What if instead of the half hour they remained two long hours? and what if they thought it such a very little while and that they had not had a chance to say anything at all? Who would blame them? Doubtless it was true that they had said very little. Their hearts were too full to speak; too full of unutterable love and happiness, and certainly none in that room thought of blaming them. And when they returned it was Imelda and Norman who were the first to meet and to greet them. Cora's arms wound themselves about her sister's neck while the men clasped hands with an undercurrent of feeling such as they had not felt before.

"So this is your charmed circle?" asked Owen Hunter in a husky voice, and smilingly Norman made answer:

"Don't you find it so?"

There was a suspicious moisture in Owen's eyes and his voice visibly trembled when he again asked,

"And no censure meets us here?"

"Why should there be?"

But the man of the world could not understand. His friend knew that he had left a wife, that his love for this girl was an illicit one; yet here he stood clasping his hand in a manner that seemed to indicate to the fortune-tossed Owen that Norman was proud to do so. So he drew him aside and asked the meaning of it all.

Nothing loath, Norman devoted himself for the next half hour to answering his eager queries, seeking to initiate him into the sweet love-laden theories of the new doctrine to which he himself only a few months ago had been a perfect stranger. Leaning against a pillar Owen stood half hidden in an alcove, lost in amaze and wonder; his eyes following every movement of the girl he so madly worshiped.

But still another was watching and waiting for a solution of this mystery. Milton's sad gray eye saw the happiness of his friend; had seen him catch the fainting figure in his arms; had seen him press his face against hers and kiss the white lips. He could only guess that in some unlooked for manner he had found the woman for whom he had so long been vainly seeking, and in the excitement which followed he for a time was overlooked and forgotten. But soon the merry peals of laughter, sweet music and soft strains of song again filled the room, and then, at the urgent request of Wilbur, Margaret read some strong dramatic scenes from various plays, holding her listeners spell-bound with the purity of her voice, the strength and clearness of the rendition and the depth of feeling which she exhibited. So, as the evening passed, Milton Nesbit became more and more puzzled as to what it was that made this circle so charming—so delightfully entertaining that all his perplexities were for the time forgotten, and that caused his sorrows to be dispelled as mist in the sunshine, and his heart to grow warm once more.

As he was one of the handsomest of the finely formed men in the room it did not take long for feminine eyes to detect that fact. Many were the admiring glances bestowed upon him. But there was something in the sad face which forbade intruding. Only Alice—airy, fairy Alice, was not backward. She again sought his side, showing him books, etchings, engravings and albums filled with selections of art gems. Her sweet airy, manner, the soft tender vibrations of her voice, acted like a charm upon his over-wrought nerves, and he soon found himself thoroughly enjoying her.

Lawrence, Wilbur, the young physician and the Wallace sisters had formed a little circle and were discussing economics. Imelda was devoting herself to her brother; making the evening pleasant for him; answering his questions as to the meaning of Cora's strange demeanor in connection with this handsome and refined looking stranger. Frank had already learned much, was learning every day, but all was not quite clear to him yet as to what it was that made these pure minded women and men so different from others he had met and known in his reckless and checkered life. She told him that it was a lover of their sweet and lovable Cora, who, like himself, had once been reckless and wayward. Margaret, her mother and Osmond formed another group to which still another was attached. Homer had found a seat at Mrs. Leland's feet, resting his head against her knee, her hand gently toying with the clustering locks. The boy said scarcely a word, only listened. Mrs. Leland also had very little to say, only now and then a casual word. The brother and sister, however, who until a few days ago had been as strangers, had much to tell, and were opening their hearts, one to the other. Margaret was delighted with the gems she found stored away in this boy's mind. While in this quieter mood they were surprised by a sudden burst of melody from the piano, evoked by the touch of a master hand. Nesbit having confessed to Alice that he was musically inclined, that bewitching morsel of humanity had so importuned him that, unable to resist, he soon found his heart swelling with emotion as he evoked the rich strains. This burst scattered the groups, and once more they formed into one whole circle. Nesbit's music was followed by singing and then by Margaret's selections, then in what seemed a very short space of time, Cora and Owen were again of their number, and, finally, when the good-nights were spoken it seemed there never had been quite such a feeling of content lodged in the innermost recesses of every heart then and there present.

The following day brought back the two newcomers at quite an early hour. They did not now protest against coming. They were there every day and evening, until the hour of Margaret's departure drew nigh. How brief the time allowed them had seemed. Wilbur drank in the glory of the blue wells, kissing the dewy lips again and again. Mrs. Leland folded her child close. It seemed almost harder to let her go now than it had been the first time. Osmond's eyes grew dim.

"I did not know how dear a sister might be. It will seem like a dream, if I must give you up so soon." And although Margaret's heart was sad she tried to hide it under a smiling exterior.

"Never mind," she said. "It will not be for long. A few short months will soon pass by, then a long summer will be ours to do with just as we see fit—a long delicious summer of enjoyment and planning. Listen! they are planning now. We are in that, and must hear all about it."

Slipping one hand through Osmond's arm, the other arm about the waist of her mother she drew them to where the others had drawn a circle about Hilda who, having been importuned, was explaining and trying to make plain that vague sweet dream of her future co-operative home, and none so attentive, or none more so than Owen. She spoke of the spacious halls where the ardent searchers after knowledge of any kind might find their teacher. Of the library stocked with volumes from the ceiling to the floor; of the lecture hall and the theater; of the opportunities where every talent could be cultivated; of the liberty—the free life—where every fetter should be broken. Of the dining hall where they would partake of their evening meal midst flowers and music; of the common parlor where every evening should be an entertainment for all wherein love and genuine sociability should always preside; of the sacred privacy of the rooms where each man or woman should reign a king or queen—the sanctum of each, closed to all intruders, consecrated to the holiest and divinest of emotions and self-unfoldment. She spoke of the grand conservatories filled with choicest flowers—the sweet-scented blossoms, the trailing vines, the exotic plants; of the spacious gardens, the sparkling, everplaying fountains; of the delicious, health-giving baths; of the life of unconventionality,—of the abandon; of the nursery rooms where baby lips were lisping their first words and little toddling feet taking their first uncertain steps; of the things of beauty surrounding the prospective mother; of the 677.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

unutterably sweet welcome that awaited each coming child; of the full understanding that would be taught to woman of the responsibility of calling into life a new being; of how man would revere her, how he would wait and abide her invitation; of the sweet co-operation and planning how all should be worked to keep up the financial part.

"O," said she, "it should, it would be paradise!—this my dream. But ah me! it is only a dream."

To be continued.

In religion Jefferson was a free thinker; in social theory he was an individualist; in politics he was a democrat; in theories of government he was called an anarchist.—M. M. Trumbull.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,		.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes,		.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,		.10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker,		.10
Practical Co-operation;	" "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism;	" "	.10
Love and the Law;	" "	.03
Sexual Enslavement of Woman;	" "	.03
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,		.05
Digging for Bedrock;	" "	.10
n Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,		.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury,	.10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How tae Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	.25
Degeneracy; C. L. James,	.25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Causes of Hard Times; Chavannes,	.05
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15
Henry George Examined; J. K. Ingalls,	.05
Christianity and Progress; G. W. Foote,	.10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dotson Barnes,
Box 122. San Jose, Cal.

THE ADULT.

A journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Bedborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League, Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscure Julias and Distracted Sues, by Leighton Pagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whitlock. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published. .25

Her Sinister and Licit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .25

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .15

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker.			.10
Fountain of Life,	" "	paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood,	" "	cloth, price,	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex,	" "		.50
A Sex Revolution,	" "		.25
Helen Harlow's Vow,	" "		.25

Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .15

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Nearly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Heredity,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of Ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical, and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free, Box 96, Portland, Oregon.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON Makes Child-Birth Easy. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Send Sex, Birth-date, 25 cents, and get outline life reading. Disease diagnosed, with advice whom to marry, by lock of hair. Life Guide Box 814, Pasadena, Cal.

We Will Send You forty (40) of the best anti-constipation, liver pills you ever saw on receipt of twelve (12) cents in stamps. Worth half a dollar. Agents wanted. The Ransom Supply Co., Chicago, Station X.

PRICE, 5 CENTS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 39. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPTEMBER 29, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 678

We have faithfully tried the experiment for ages; have dealt kindly and charitably with our prodigal sons, and harshly and cruelly with their wayward sisters; now let us carefully compare the results, and see if we are acting wisely in thus discriminating against our girls.—"Prodigal Daughter."

Liberal Thought Among the Jews in New York.

BY E. C. WALKER.

There has long been a very considerable element of Liberal thought among the Jews of New York, as elsewhere in Amerika and the world. In the early years of the life of "The Truth Seeker" in this city, Mr. Bennett received much sympathy and substantial assistance from Jewish Freethinkers, and today it reckons many of that race among its most active and helpful friends in various parts of the country. But it is my purpose to write here chiefly of the Russian Jews on the East Side, a class of citizens very largely augmented within a few years by the bitter persecutions of the Jews by the government of the Czar. This element of our population is composed mainly of workingmen and workingwomen, including many in trade and manufacture in a very small way.

Before proceeding to describe the organized progressive work in the ranks of this people, I wish to say that they generally have the reputation of being unusually industrious, and to mention a fact not so well known, viz., that they are serious and studious far above the average. I am informed by a woman of education and keen powers of observation, who is in a position to know whereof she speaks, that the Jewish patrons of the libraries on the East Side read the best kinds of books obtainable. Comparatively few works of fiction are called for, and these mostly classics and historical novels of permanent value. Books of history, biography and law; works on science, political economy and sociology in general, are the ones most often taken out by the Jews, old and young. This bent of the mind may well account for the much greater interest taken in vital social problems in the part of the city of which I speak than in some of the more aristocratic sections.

In 1888, as Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement) approached, a few Freethinking Jews conceived the idea that it would be a good plan for them to get together on that day for social recreation and mental improvement. A small hall was hired, the meeting was advertised among themselves, and the little group of fifteen or twenty men and women had a most pleasant reunion. Quite a number who were outside of this society of "The Pioneers of Liberty" participated in the meeting, enjoying with their more advanced compatriots the pleasures afforded by the recitations, music and dancing. Thus the propaganda was inaugurated. The next year Clarendon Hall was hired and the advertising begun by the circulation of an explanatory four-page leaflet, in which it was stated that the Freethinkers did not meet to antagonize their orthodox neighbors but to affirm that which they regarded as the truth, especially concerning the subject of religion. Through the influence of the police, as is generally believed, the proprietor of the hall broke the contract and closed the doors in the faces of the Liberals. Then the latter joined forces with the Socialists and met in Labor Lyceum in Fouth Street.

In 1890 the meeting was advertised to take place in Labor Lyceum in Brooklyn, but a wholesale butcher induced Mayor Chapin to prohibit the assemblage. Two hundred policemen with patrol wagons were sent to the hall to set themselves in array in defense of religion and order as against a handful of thoughtful Jewish Freethinkers. The adjourned meeting took place the next day in a small hall in Avenue A, in New York, and was a success. In 1891 a meeting was held in Clarendon Hall on the Eve of Yom Kippur and meetings and dancing took place in the same hall during the Day of Atonement. A park in the outskirts of the city had been hired for use should the police close the hall. A similar programme was carried through in 1892 and 1893, while in 1894 there was one meeting only, on the Eve. No meeting was held in 1895. But in 1896 the gathering was a most pronounced success. There was speaking both on the Eve and during the Day of Atonement, and recitations and a musical entertainment enlivened the occasion. Six hundred persons were present.

This year there will be one meeting, on the Eve, October 5. Clarendon Hall has been secured and addresses will be made in Jewish (Yiddish) by Dr. Solotaroff and M. Kass, and in English by John Edelman and others. Progressive literature in the English, Jewish and German languages will be on sale. Music will add its charms. It is expected the attendance of last year will be surpassed.

In this Liberal work numbers and interest have constantly grown from the beginning. Politico-economically there are two schools of thought, the Communist-Anarchist and the Marxian Social Democratic. Only the Communist-Anarchists take part in the meetings at Yom Kippur. Of the four dailies in the Jewish language, two are Socialistic. At present the Communist-Anarchists have no newspaper organ, but at one time they had a monthly and at another a weekly representative. The "hard times" have had their depressing effect on the East Side as elsewhere. It is thought the Anarchist-Communist propaganda is now proceeding at a relatively greater speed than the Socialistic.

As regards marriage, both divisions, the Socialistic and the Anarchist-Communist, resent the interference of either church or state. The predominant sentiment is in favor of monogamic free union, but the varieistic view has some adherents, while inquiry concerning it is evidently more and more prevalent. Regardless of economic divisions, the Jewish Freethinkers stand together for the equality of woman with man, politically, industrially and socially.

Altogether, the outlook for clearer thought and larger liberty is bright in the "Jewish quarter" on the East Side in New York city, and it is daily growing brighter.

"What Are the Men About?"

BY C. L. JAMES.

Some twenty years have passed since I gave the Movement in Favor of Ignorance a name which appears to have stuck. During those years the movement has made very considerable progress. That the dissemination of physiological knowledge by means of express companies as well as by means of the mail has come under the ban of Federal criminal law; that "legislation by judges" has drawn private letters as well as mail matter of an inferior class within the purview of Comstockian jurisprudence; that "good government" in cities has become that fad of which boodlers avail themselves to direct attention away from their own misdeeds to those of women so unfortunate that they prostitute themselves for bread;—all these things are but superficial symptoms of that toxin cultivated by the nasty nice. It is much more significant that works of art are rejected by cities like Boston, and organizations like the management of the World's Fair, because too realistic; that prohibition extends from vulgar obscenity, physiological instruction, and reform literature, to social studies such as the "Kreutzer Sonata;" that liberal journals, like the "Truth Seeker" dare not issue nude illustrations, even where any other are absurd; that publications designed for intellectual people, like the "Cosmopolitan," seriously propose a regular censorship as something better than the lynch law of Comstocks and Wanamakers.

So far as power can effect it, America, during this last decade of the nineteenth century, is degraded, in art, science, literature and reformatory activity, to the level of Scotland or Norway during the seventeenth.

The Movement in Favor of Ignorance has also found new and important fields for action. The Movement in Favor of Ignorance has two inseparably allied factors, the Knave and the Fool, each of whom, without the other, would be as useless as half a pair of scissors. It would be most unjust to charge all promoters of the Movement in Favor of Ignorance with hating knowledge. Among them are scientific physicians who hate, not knowledge, but quackery; new women whose pet aversion is masculine tyranny; humanitarians who hate only cruelty; and among all these, unbelievers without number.

These good people do not know that they are tools of the priesthood. So much the worse. The trouble is that they are many, all open in riding of their respective hobbies, while the clerical conspiracy which manipulates them is one, and is secret about its own designs. Anybody who has a prejudice will serve the turn of this new obscurantism. One wants to promote temperance; and forthwith school text books on physiology are filled with one-sided dogmas about the pernicious effects of stimulants, teaching error for science. Another wants to discourage pretended methods of treating venereal disease—and lo! a statute against all practitioners not "regular." A third has a conniption fit after reading the "Pall Mall Gazette"; and so all girls under twenty-one must be babies, though many could "set the murderous Machiavel to school." Another has shivered over Magendie's and Montegazza's vivisections; therefore England, really the most liberal of countries about such matters generally, ordains that a physiologist wishing to experiment on a living animal must obtain special permission from politicians, interested not in the lives of the next generation, but the vote at the next election!

Still another regards with just abhorence impositions on the imagination of bereaved parents, children, lovers; and absolute laws are invoked to punish every investigator of spiritual phenomena as a "rogue and vagabond." Freethinkers afraid of not being "respectable," or jealous of more advanced and successful freethinkers, applaud. Property owners who have read of the petroleuse, think it necessary to check the increase of Anarchism, and support ordinances for trying anarchists in secret—by electricity. Thus the movement in favor of ignorance moves on, drawn by all who would have knowledge stop at the point they individually consider safe, like Timor by his captive kings!

But "where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." The increase of radicalism has fully kept pace with that of reaction. The abuses of power have made innumerable anarchists and no conservatives. When I published my "Law of Marriage," twenty-seven years ago, such liberals as Warren Chase were astonished at its boldness. Now we should not think any one much of a liberal who was not for nudity, variety, and the Three Words. Bloomers, bicycles, woman's suffrage, equality of the sexes in education and the professions, are all of course. The bull-necked brute and the feather-headed fribble cleave to easy divorce as to the only way of heading off variety. Socialism is seized on by Bismarcks for a foil to more dreaded anarchism. The Legitimation League has made attacks on legal marriage respectable; and I have dropped them, as I always do anything which has become respectable. As for infidelity, it took its place among respectably uninteresting religiones licitae so long since that I forget when. At the very time when that well-meaning mattoid, Mr. Bergh, was identifying himself with one of his four-footed clients by abusing Jenner and Pasteur, vivisection achieved its most glorious triumph through giving birth to bacteriology. The mortality after surgical operations fell from twenty or thirty per cent to two: and "diphtheria, as a dangerous disease, exists no longer!" Meanwhile, spiritual phenomena, under the new name of hypnotism, conquered recognition; and the prudence of science confesses that only one doubtful step divides us from the veritable discovery of "another world!"

Such is the resume of twenty-seven years, coincident with my own active life. I was moved to write this by one of E. C. Walker's articles, which reminded me that there used to be an association for defense against Comstockery. I want to know what that association is about? Has it become respectable and subsided? Mr. Walker may be right in saying that Comstock and the Richmonds are not working together to advertise the "Triumph of Death;" but I am sure he is mistaken in thinking Comstock a fanatic above mercenary considerations. When Comstock seized thirty million copies of a circular issued by the Hop Bitters manufacturers, and then dropped the prosecution he had begun against them, was not that blackmail? When Comstock openly acknowledges that his society receives money from the publishers of the "Police Gazette," the most "immoral" periodical in American, which in never interfered with except under the local laws of some few southern states, will any man in his senses say that that is not blackmail? There cannot be the slightest doubt that the Comstock gang are open to prosecution upon evidence which a lawyer like Chamberlain should be able to find. Why does he not do it? These are not methods with which Anarchists can themselves have anything to do. But Anarchists are the reserve of the progressive army. It does concern them to see that the advance do their duty; and to withdraw support from any division which may be convicted by its actions of prolonging, for what there is in it, a conflict which might be pushed to a decisive result.

No good reason can be given why the door of reform is ever held invitingly open for a boy, and bolted and barred against a girl.—"Prodigal Daughter."

The National Propaganda

Since I made my last report in Lucifer, the membership has doubled and still the names are coming in in an undiminished flow. I quote a few sentences from some of the letters, taking first those whose writers go into the Contributory class, or who have left me in doubt as to their proper classification. A Pennsylvania friend writes:

As to the "Call for Concerted Action," you may enroll my name in the Contributory class. I will send you one dollar next week. I hope you will be encouraged in this action.

This comes from Florida:

Give two dollars to the work of organizing the Social Radicals as per Lucifer No. 672. This will pay for my membership for two years, provided I do not have the means to spare to send more another time.

That was a good idea—our friend knows how to make his "calling and election sure." The next is from an earnest woman of Massachusetts:

Of course the "Call for Concerted Action" is the leading interest in No. 672 and of course I can but desire all that it hopes to attain. But Contributory member is all I am equal to, more's the pity! The article shrewdly describes the situation of thousands who "cannot afford to align themselves," and the writer ought to be thanked for so doing. I have not the teacher's faculty, and so do not feel myself of much good, unless the suffering of a lifetime does impress itself on the ether and incorporate itself as natural law.

The Contributory class was devised for those who cannot afford to stand out against the Philistines and for those who do not feel that they have the "teacher's faculty," but who are anxious to do what they can to help disseminate the ideas which they accept. A man of the Green Mountain state adds his word of encouragement:

I should be pleased to join any organization that would give free thought, free speech, free love and free action, and will help all I can to forward such an organization.

We cross the continent, and from California, where they have not entirely forgotten to call a spade a spade, we bring this:

I want my membership in your national legitimation league. I wish we could abolish the hellish marriage practice. I cannot send the dollar today but think I can at the end of another thirty days.

Among the "Actives," I find A. Warren, of Oklahoma:

Of course I want to join your propaganda club. As you know, I would be proud to be included in the Active list.

Ambrose Sorenson, of Wisconsin, speaks right out:

You can count upon my name (and dollar) as Active member of the proposed organization of the friends of sex freedom. I will send the fee necessary to you, or whoever else is appointed for the work, as soon as wanted.

From Florida, Adeline Champney writes:

When the "Call" came out in Lucifer, I wanted to send immediate response, but the necessary dollar was not to be had. I delayed in hope of obtaining it, but now I can wait no longer to express my interest and my desire to co-operate in this movement. The most earnest wish of my life is to aid in the work of sex reform. Were I relieved of the bread-and-butter necessity to labor, I should give all my energies to reform work. As it is, I have no money to give, only myself. Or that part of myself that has not to concern itself with the "thoughts for the morrow." Count me among the Active members. The time will come when I can help the cause.

It occurs to me that there are many men and women of thoroughly radical views who are financially well situated and who need only the suggestion to lead them to join forces with such as Adeline Champney by putting into the treasury the means necessary to enable these good workers to scatter far and wide the "thoughts that burn" which it is the purpose of the Propaganda to embody in leaflets and tracts. There is a place and work for every one who is willing. No man or woman should for a day be kept out of the Propaganda because of the lack of a dollar.

I must again repeat the request that those friends who have forgotten to tell us in which class they wish to be counted, the Active or the Contributory, send me the desired information at as early a date as possible. Refresh your minds as to the distinctive features of the two classes by re-reading the "Call" in No. 672 of Lucifer.

If all who intend to join with us before the beginning of the New Year will write to me at once it will greatly facilitate the preliminary work of organization. In after years it will be a source of justifiable pride that one was a "charter member," as it were, of this initial organization for the concerted, systematic, thorough and wide-spread inculcation of the principles of social freedom.

E. C. WALKER.
244 West 143 Street, N. Y. City.

A woman may be amiable, truthful and generous, but, however well endowed otherwise with womanly excellence, it will avail her nothing if convicted of loving "not wisely, but too well." The door to honest industry is effectually barred against her; no one may walk with her, no one may talk with her, no one may give her employment. This is the verdict of society, and Mrs. Grundy is commissioned to execute the sentence.—"Prodigal Daughter."

Free Woman Legally and Economically.

BY LECINDA B. CHANDLER.

Perhaps, as Lucifer's columns are so seldom occupied by women upon the various aspects of sex relations which is Lucifer's specialty, it may not be intrusive to come again with some thoughts from woman's standpoint.

Our good editor in No. 675 has made some excellent statements. He claims that we "have not a conscience in our own keeping." Possibly there may be a lack of courage and boldness to act according to a "rational conscience."

Now I want to make some suggestions to the brethren who are so diligently advocating the freedom of variety. You are proceeding in the same manner as the brethren of the past have done. They fixed up a code, and a standard of sex morals, and not only failed to consult woman in regard to her ideals, but absolutely extinguished the legal personality of the wife.

Today you are fixing up ideals to suit your desires, and pressing them upon attention, and do you know that these ideals are acceptable to, and endorsed by women?

As man-made laws have robbed the wife of her personality, and as men are still the only law-makers, I would respectfully suggest that the most effective work men can do to secure freedom for woman, is to seek the abolition of the law of coverture. An agitation to accomplish this would command the respectful consideration of thousands of men and women who will give no heed to discussions upon "variety."

The order of human events is tending to secure the freedom of woman economically, which is the most important requisite for her freedom sexually. But the brethren are beginning to howl and whine about it for women are depriving them of the monopoly of "remunerative occupations!"

Uphold the economic freedom of women, i. e., the same poor kind that men have, a possible opportunity to obtain some kind of livelihood; and besiege the legislatures with demand for restoration of personality to the wife, legally.

These movements would be in the line of evolutionary tendencies now operating, and would most speedily work the emancipation of woman from sex slavery. When woman is free legally and economically, she will need no tutoring in regard to her choice of duality and plurality.

A man who was very warmly advocating the freedom of woman was asked if he was able to make one woman free. Could he let his wife be free? That is the great question for man to put to himself.

If the ideal of those men who claim to be reformers is that polygamy is the only solution of freedom in the sex relation, it is not probable that woman will be freed very speedily. The evolution of progress in human character is not in the direction of mixed and plural sex relations.

Abolish the law of coverture, and restore legal personality to woman, and "law" will not "kill love." There are a considerable majority of unions now in which love is not killed by law. There are many in which love is killed in the wife because the husband makes her the slave of his passions. The law does not compel him to do this.

Man would be far more manly and ennobled every way by mastering his passions and making one woman free, for whom he has love and respect, (and if he has not, and if it is not mutual they should go apart,) than by providing himself with several women to indulge them in variety.

A woman, to be virtuous, must live a celibate, or else become a legal wife; something she cannot be without a personal surrender of herself into the keeping of a husband, and an agreement to serve him sexually for the rest of her life according to the law of marriage,—a law, by the way, so constructed and administered that there is no phase of sexual abomination that may not be practiced with its full sanction. It justifies mercenary marriage and gives a license for excess and debauchery. The most cruel outrage and abuse will receive its benediction if they bear the semblance of monogamy and the seal of law.—"Prodigal Daughter."

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S specialty is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 West Congress Street, Thursday evening, Sept. 30. Mrs. H. S. Lake of Cleveland, O., will make the opening address.

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$295.25
Stephen Stiers,	20.00

"The Prodigal Daughter."

In this issue of Lucifer appears a number of paragraphs excerpted from Rachel Campbell's powerful essay, "The Prodigal Daughter." No more scathing arraignment of the present infamous marriage customs than this gifted woman's essay has ever come within the ken of the editor of this paper. It should be read and circulated by every reader of Lucifer. Yes, it should be written in letters of gold and circulated by the million among the honest and humane people of the world who believe in the accursed marriage institution merely because they have been taught to believe in it and have never had pointed out to them the fearful price we pay to sustain this tyrannous and barbarous fetich.

Lucifer has perhaps one thousand copies of this pamphlet on hand. They should be put in circulation in the shortest possible time and a new edition should be published. It is a tract of permanent value and there is no getting around its arguments, many of which are from the writer's own experience. Besides the essay the pamphlet contains selections from the personal correspondence of the author with Mary Florence Johnson, which are replete with personal reflections showing the infamy of the marriage institution.

The sex problem will not down. It is the most important of all human problems. It will flaunt its hideous visage in the face of society until women are freed from sexual slavery. In her essay on "The Prodigal Daughter" Rachel Campbell says:

"We are told by those who deprecate all agitation of the social question that it will inevitably destroy the home, and that the home is essential to the best interests of children; that to make home what it should be there must be one lawful wife who is the mother of the children and the mistress of the home. They grow eloquent over the advantages and excellencies of monogamy; besides investing it with a great deal of religious sanctity, which they somehow would gather to themselves and absorb as they proceed until they seem to glow with goodness. The question of prostitution they shun, if possible; but, if pressed, they solemnly say it is inevitable and must be tolerated as an escape valve for the passions of men that would otherwise make it unsafe for our wives and daughters to walk the public streets. It is the price of virtue, and virtue must be protected at whatever cost. In other words, prostitutes are the mudsills upon which the home is builded, and without them monogamic marriage would fall in ruins."

The pamphlet containing "The Prodigal Daughter," together with much other interesting sexologic reading matter, will be sent from this office to any address in the United States or Canada for 25 cents, or five copies for $1.

Evolution of Marriage.

The article of Mr. Chavannes champions reform in marriage, or rather the evolution of marriage, instead of its abolition. This seems also to be the object of our English friends, members of the "Legitimation League," from whose "Protest and Declaration" we quote in another place. Whether it is better, avowedly to work for abolition or simply for reform or amendment, is a question that each worker must decide for her or himself.

* * *

Mrs. Chandler, also, contributes a very readable article on the pivotal question of Ethics of Sex, under the head, "Free Woman Legally and Economically," but the question seems pertinent, does she rightly comprehend the views she appears to be combatting? Do the advocates of the New Ideals in Love and Marriage advocate "polygamy as the only solution of freedom in the sex relation?" Do they ask that all should be "varietists," or that any should be varietists? What they demand, first, last and all the time, is Freedom—freedom to choose and to refuse any or all methods of association and take nature's penalties, or rewards, for so doing.

* * *

"The law does not compel" the husband to make the wife the "slave of his passions." No;—the law, itself, does nothing whatever, but the superstition, the wrongly educated conscience, upon which marriage law is based, allows him, encourages or trains him, to "kill love" through the abuse of power over her person, and this is tantamount to saying that law kills love; and hence, as some of us see it, to rightly educate the conscience that underlies the law of marriage is the first and most important thing to do. To "free woman legally and economically" will fail of desired results so long as woman herself accepts as moral and right the standards laid down for her by conventional society—by power-loving priests of church and state.

Conventional Marriage Arraigned.

This office is in receipt of copies of an admirably executed—mechanically and otherwise—brochure, entitled "A Marriage Protest and Free Union Declaration," by Emma Wardlaw Best and Arthur Wastall, and dated London, September, 1897. On the first page of this document appear the portraits of the persons just named, with a brief but clear statement of some of the reasons which induced them to "discard the marriage ceremony and form an antonomistic alliance."

The subsequent pages are devoted to a concise yet powerfully worded protest against interference by church or state in matters pertaining to the sex life of women and men. A part of this arraignment reads as follows:

We resist all external coercion whatsoever in the affairs of the heart, and particularly marriage:

BECAUSE any bond on the woman establishes a double moral law.
" It undermines the nation's sense of justice and morality between the sexes.
" It is the mother of prostitution.
" It directly fosters child murder and baby farming.
" It is the enslavement of woman.
" It is the root of caste.

BECAUSE based on property (sale and purchase) it is an upholder of unjust economic conditions.
" It is the bulwark of Church and State, and the aggression upon which they are founded.
" Through its commercial basis it defrauds children of their inalienable right to be well born.
" It approves the unfairness that some should have love and recognition and others not.
" It approves the infamous word "bastard" as applied to innocent children.
" It keeps thousands of women sexually starved.
" It keeps thousands of women sexually disgusted.
" Under its rule male virtue has become a jest.
" Under its rule the lower the man goes in his choice of woman the less his condemnation; for has he not saved the higher for the marriage market? REFLECT.—Reverse the sexes and see what this implies to the wife.
" It holds that legal ties are more sacred than those of love.
" Under its rule the word honor is wrested from its meaning, and the woman is supposed to be the guardian of the honor of both sexes.
" Under its rule numerous epithets are applied to women who use their sex functions without reference to Church or State. No corresponding epithets are known for men—a direct proof of the double moral code.
" The male sex claiming with pride to be morally inferior to women, it is paradoxical that Church and State (bodies of men) should form the moral and social laws.
" It places a stigma upon the naturally beautiful and inspiring subject of sex love and relationship.
" It induces women, if "marriage" and "maintenance for life" be promised, to take, without shame, as husbands, men who are the leavings of the female criminal classes.
" It encourages legalized prostitution and rape with the hypocrisy of virtue added to the crime.
" It is no safeguard that only women fitted for the "public harem" are there, and only those fitted for the "home" are in the "home."
" The woman who of her necessity sets a price on her person is infinitely less degraded than the man who without her necessity pays for her to see his shame.
" Marriage is the direct upholder to the contrary.
" It sets the interest of women at variance, and forces classes of women apart and hand against hand.
" It divides women into classes for public and private use.
" A female witness is discredited for any sexual act not covered by legal marriage, while her accuser may be the participator with her in that act.

In next issue of Lucifer we shall probably give the rest of these indictments against this worst of all the enemies of social and sexual purity, and of human progress and happiness—institutional marriage, and will add the constructive side, or the "Free Union Declaration," which according to the view of these very bright and progressive people is the next practicable step to take in the social evolution in the department of sexual co-operation for mutual benefit, and for the benefit of the possible offspring resulting from such co-operation.

It will be noted by the reader that the name of one of these marriage reformers is that of Lucifer's London representative. The price of the booklet is not given but until further information we will supply orders at ten cents each.

Organization is only Co-operation.

There are many, who, seeing the great and terrible evils that a powerful organization, like the church or state, can do, declaim fervently and sincerely against all organization. But organization is simply association, co-operation, and may well serve the cause of human liberty. If it be objected that organized activity gives the same opportunity to invasive that it does to defensive men, it is to be answered that while this is true it is not a sufficient denial of the wisdom of organization by defensive men. If it were, then the fact that invasive individual action is as possible as defensive individual action would be a sufficient denial of the wisdom of individual activity on the part of defensive men. The objection proves too much and hence proves nothing. The fact of sometimes abuse is not a valid argument against use.

Organization is a useful tool and its possible injurious effects can be kept at a minimum when the men and women who use it know enough of human nature and appreciate the need of vigilance in safe-guarding personal liberty sufficiently to hold themselves always in instant readiness to revolt when the tool threatens to become a manacle. The voluntary association differs from the state in that while the resident of the country must submit to the laws of the state, while he cannot secede, but the member of the voluntary association can withdraw when he becomes dissatisfied with its management. If the subject of the state is a slave, he is such often because he has not the physical strength to obtain his liberty. If the member of the voluntary association is a slave, he is such because he has not the moral strength to free himself, and the chances are that he would be a slave anyway, regardless of that particular organization.

The proposed organization to carry on the propaganda of social freedom is, of course, to be a voluntary society. Those who wish to join can do so, and they can just as readily withdraw when they grow tired of the organization, if they do. We know that the dollars of a large number of persons, put together, can pay for the printing and distribution of a vast amount of radical literature, and that the manager of the propaganda can do much more economically a great deal more missionary work than could be done by the scattered men and women who employ him or her, and this without lessening their capacity for individual educative work in their respective localities. The names of those to whom it is desired to send leaflets and papers can be forwarded to headquarters, and wasteful repetitions thus prevented. Concentration of effort and of our scanty means can most effectively supplement our individual exertions in behalf of sexual liberty and of free and responsible parenthood.

Judging by the responses to the "Call" that reach me, I am glad to be able to say that a large proportion of our most earnest workers heartily agree with this view of the question of organization in general and of the organization of sex radicals in particular.

E. C. WALKER.

244 West 143 St., N. Y. City.

When "the truth comes uppermost" it may show us that society is the real culprit, and that the Magdalen is "more sinned against than sining."—"Prodigal Daughter."

Can There be Only One "Logic of Life?"

BY AMOS R. SMITH.

J. G. Truman, quoting E. C. Walker's assertion that "it can only rationally be said that Nature makes no mistakes when it is taken for granted that nature has no intentions, no plans, no schemes," says "Did I, and many more would-be reformers, believe that assertion, we would find ourselves lost in the woods without a compass or guiding star, and would either wander aimlessly, or we would seek the nearest bush or hollow tree for shelter and cease to progress entirely." This is merely another way of saying what the Theist has so often said to the

Atheist—"If I believed as you do, I would have no aim in life except to get sensual enjoyment out of it; I would lie, steal, rape, murder; I would pay no attention whatever to the rights, liberties and happiness of others." The old Infidel farmer, when his Christian neighbor talked in this way, coolly surveyed him from head to heel, then looked him calmly in the eye and said: "I really believe you would." I do not make this retort to Mr. Truman, who is undoubtedly much more rational, self-respecting, and regardful of others that he appears to think he is, but I desire to direct his attention to two very large and insistent facts: First. The most monstrous scourge of mankind—the bloodiest despots, the most ruthless robbers and enslavers, the cruelest inquisitors—have been devout believers in design. Their acceptance of this dogma did not give them a logic of life that in any commends them to our reverential love. They are the "horrible examples" to whom we continually point in reproach and warning. Second. Many of the most earnest, consistent and hardest workers for improved conditions for humanity have been in the past and many more are today, rejectors of the theory of design, whether design be attributed to a god or to nature. They do not seem to have needed, they do not seem to need, that belief as a logic of worthy and useful life. They neither wander aimlessly, nor "seek the nearest bush or hollow tree for shelter and cease to progress entirely." And has it not occurred to Mr. Truman that he might find himself just as ready to labor for what he believed to be right were he to pass through certain mental changes and cease to believe in design? Might he not discover that from the new viewpoint he surveyed the universe under a new light, that with the non-Theistic belief came a logic of life just as forward-impelling as was the old?

Those who claim we could not be happy in heaven, knowing that our friends were in hell, must have failed to notice how cheerfully righteous (?) women turn away from friends and sisters when guilt and shame overtake them.—"Prodigal Daughter."

A New Ideal in Marriage.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

I have been interested in the discussion which has been going on in Lucifer about a New Ideal in Love. Many of your contributors have taken part in it, and now I would like a little space to say a few words about another new ideal, which is slowly but steadily making its way in the social world, and which I call a New Ideal in Marriage.

I would define this new ideal as a leading to, or as a tendency to base marriage upon the mutual agreement of the parties concerned, instead of upon law and ceremony; to a decrease of the idea of the joint ownership of the bodies of the married couple, and a corresponding decrease of the feeling of jealousy. And this new ideal is growing, not only among persons of progressive minds, but is slowly influencing even conservative persons.

According to my belief, all new ideals are the result of the acquisition of new knowledge, which slowly changes the point of view of the individuals, and I will briefly point here the changes which have taken place in our knowledge, and are responsible for this new influence in society.

The first and probably the most important is the general diffusion of safe and healthy methods of preventing conception. Sex freedom, as advocated by free lovers and varietists, is nothing new. In all ages there have been persons who have claimed they had a right, in and out of marriage, to dispose of their persons, but so long as illicit intercourse was liable to result in pregnancy it offered a great check to such indulgence among married people. There is among right minded persons of both sexes, a feeling that it is a mean action to fasten upon an unsuspecting man the responsibility of the maintenance of a child because he believes it is his own.

The knowledge that conception can be prevented at will has removed that barrier, and besides has changed the popular view as to the real meaning of the marriage relation. Before this new knowledge became disseminated, marriage was really a procreative association, while now it is just as much an association for mutual advantage and sexual satisfaction.

The next knowledge which tends to change the ideal of marriage is that of the law of evolution. Under the old belief there were many persons who paid little heed to the teachings of the Bible, but the fact that evolution makes the attainment of happiness the true standard of conduct, has naturally changed the accepted views upon the sexual relations. It has robbed them of the sanctity which they derived from religious teachings, and is gradually placing them on a line with all other actions. This new influence is slow in making its way, but there is no doubt that marriage is not looked upon with the same reverence it obtained twenty-five years ago, and that there is an increased tendency to look upon a violation of the marriage vows as a breach of a mutual contract, instead of a crime against the will of God.

Another cause which is changing the marriage ideal is the growing independence of women. I shall not state here what are the causes of this greater independence, but only state it as a fact that any one can recognize, that they no longer marry with the idea of placing their lives in the entire control of their husbands. They realize as they never did before, that whether married or single, their happiness is in their own hands, and are gradually extending the circle of those actions which they claim, even after marriage, to keep in their own individual control.

The result of this increase of self-assertion on the part of women, is a recognition that even after marriage each party can keep their bodies under their own control, and a corresponding diminution of the feeling of jealousy, and I think it can be truly said that the foolish idea that there cannot be real love without jealousy is slowly dying out. I acknowledge that it is dying hard, even among free lovers, if I judge from the discussion in your pages about the New Ideal in Love, but it is dying all the same, as can be easily ascertained by careful investigators.

The growth of this New Ideal in Marriage has been so slow and gradual that many persons would probably deny its existence, but I have for years been persuaded that it was the direction taken by sexual progress, and I have watched it until I have no doubt that there is a general change in that direction.

Like all evolutionary changes, it embraces all degrees of progress. Some married couples have advanced so far as to claim and practice the greatest individual liberty, without its causing any diminution in their mutual affection. Others find that they cannot remain united without placing some restraint upon their individual actions, and for the greater portion of society the progress consists in only showing more leniency in their judgment of those who advocate and practice greater sexual liberty.

So far as I am able to judge, this evolution of the New Ideal in Marriage is greatly helped by such discussions as you have published upon the New Ideal in Love, and by the teachings and practices of the free lovers, and sometimes I am tempted to believe that the free lovers do the work and that the New Ideal in Marriage reaps the benefit.

How far will this New Ideal in Marriage travel, and to what extent will it transform the marriage relation, is not for me to say, but I believe that it will not stop until it has gathered to itself all the benefits claimed for freedom by the New Idealists, for it aims on one hand to hold on to all the advantages that in the past have accompanied a voluntary union for life, and on the other, to add to it all the benefits that experience will show to follow the teachings of the advocates of greater freedom in the sexual relations.

The great cause of revolutions is this—that while nations move onward constitutions stand still.—Macauley.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LVII.

As a being transfigured Hilda stood among them, her eyes shining, her cheeks glowing, her bosom heaving, looking far beyond them into space. A feeling came over Lawrence Westcot as with bated breath his eyes rested on her, of how utterly unworthy he was of the love of a creature so grand, so superior. A still, small voice whispered, "Make yourself worthy!"—and then and there a high resolve was formed in his mind that he would surely do so. A solemn vow rose as a silent prayer from the depths of his heart that some day he would realize that sweet invitation. With him every man in the room became conscious of a feeling of inferiority, but not an impulse to bow in humility. Rather each head was crested higher with a feeling of lofty aspiration. Owen Hunter answered the closing remarks of Hilda's dream picture:

"Why, my dreaming maiden, should your dream be but a dream?"

A sad smile played about her lips.

"You forget that it is such an expensive one. It would take a fortune, an almost limitless fortune, to build us such a home. Of course we could be very, very happy in our little circle, as it is, in a much smaller and less expensive home, but I would have it large, so that we might welcome all who possess the same lofty thought to our circle, so that we should be able to give to the world an object lesson in the art of making life worth living, so grand and so glorious that the whole world would want to imitate our example."

Owen smiled.

"What an enthusiast! Take my advice, little one, and until this grand, this glorious home can be ours, help us with your lofty aspirations, and help us not to despise our more limited advantages and privileges. In the meantime we will try to become more worthy of so perfect a home—as some years must of necessity elapse ere it can be completed."

"Have I not said it is only a dream? How can I dare to hope it could ever be realized; and when I come to this home, day after day, and realize what privileges are ours the feeling sometimes comes to me, how wrong-headed I am to be constantly sighing for still more."

Owen shook his head,

"You are mistaken, Miss Hilda. Your sentiments and aspirations are not wrong. Harmonious and beautiful as is the life that has been granted you through the mutual understanding and sympathy of our kind host and hostess it is by no means complete. So dream on, plan on, and if there is an architect in our midst he shall transfer these plans to paper, and, as soon as practicable, we will look about us for a suitable site, and when the spring sunshine calls all nature again to life, work shall begin, and what has so long been only a vague dream shall, all in good time, bloom into a living reality."

All eyes hung upon the lips of the speaker. All ears drank in his words. Could such a thing be possible? Only Cora seemed to understand. Pressing close to his side, she drew his hand with a caressing motion to her smiling lips. With a hasty movement he withdrew the hand to lay it on the head covered with the soft fluffy hair; he pressed it close to him. Hilda drew a step nearer and extending both hands,

"You mean——O, Mr. Hunter! do you really mean that it can be done? that the home can and shall be ours? But how? how?"

Cora slipped down upon her knees at Hilda's side and caught both those hands in hers.

"Did I not tell you long ago, when I told you that story of my heartaches and my noble lover, that he possessed almost limitless wealth? He could not be one of us did he not consecrate some of his millions to the happiness of others. It is in his power to lay the foundation stone for the future ideal society, by showing to the world an example of how people should live. Don't you see, my Hilda? Owen is wealthy, and he is going to build us our home."

To be continued.

A boy sows his "wild oats," as a matter of course, and then settles down into a sober, industrious man, and becomes a good husband, a fond parent, and perhaps a distinguished citizen; and there is no reason in nature why the girl who was his partner in the wild oat business should not become a good wife, a loving mother and a valuable member of society.—"Prodigal Daughter."

VARIOUS VOICES.

Henry C. Roberts, Bennington, Kans.:—I highly approve of "The Call for Concerted Action." I wish to join the movement as an active member, and as soon as the organization is perfected will forward to the person authorized to receive it, one dollar as membership fee. I am not a writer nor speaker, but will do what I can to help on the propaganda work of such an organization.

Stephen Stiers, Houston, Tex.:—Church members give about twenty-five dollars per year on an average to propagate superstition, and liberals ought to be equally self-denying and faithful to their convictions. For one I confess I have come short of the glory of God—that I have not done my duty. My conscience has been accusing me of late and telling me I ought to give something to the fund to aid Lucifer in its struggle in spreading light and knowledge. I will give twenty dollars for this purpose.

Phillip Pipher, Hagerstown, Ind.:—Am receiving your very interesting paper, the Light-Bearer. Cannot get along without it. If the philosophy taught in Lucifer were studied and put into practice it would not be long until the era of universal liberty would be inaugurated. It will take lots of hard work to remove the mountain of ignorance and prejudice, to clear the way for intelligent investigation. Go on with your grand work, and little by little humanity will learn the cause of their bondage and oppression and will learn to apply the right remedy.

David W. Gilmore, Chanute, Kans.:—My time for Lucifer expired some time ago, and I have neglected to write you because I had neither "sound" nor "unsound" money to send you. I appreciate the Light-Bearer none the less, however. When I wish the paper discontinued I will let you know. There is need that your work should be greatly extended, so long as Anthony Comstock is allowed to meddle with the affairs of honest people. A man who will stoop to such low performance as does Comstock, to get an excuse to prosecute people, should not be allowed to hold a public office. How can he expect people to be honest when he resorts to such dishonest practices to get evidence against those he wishes to prosecute? I enclose twenty-five cents, and hope to be able to renew soon.

Virgie C. Moon, Louisiana:—Enclosed find twenty-five cents. Please send me Lucifer. When the thirteen weeks are up I'll try to find some way to renew. I have known of your good work for a long time and have often felt that I would like to aid you. For the last year Aunt Elmina and others have sent me many copies of Lucifer and I have read them, and at once handed them out for others to read. But this is a very Christian country, and free thought, especially on love matters, is not popular to say the least. But the world "do move," and good (truth) may find rooting place, even in the Louisiana Lowlands. I must tell you how much I enjoyed "Motherhood in Freedom." That pamphlet points the way to borning a better race. It is only a free mother that can produce a truly free child. The race will be slaves to customs till the mothers are free.

678.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

The coarsest, filthiest and most sensual animal in the human form may associate with a woman, so he be her husband, may treat her in the most shameful and brutal manner that woman was ever treated by man, may infect her with sexual disease until her whole system teems with rottenness without any damage to her virtue.—"Prodigal Daughter."

It is not any more slavish and degrading to worship St. Patrick than it is to worship St. Jefferson.—M. M. Trumbull.

Civilization knows no greater infidel than he who is unfaithful to a demonstrated truth.—W. M. Lockwood.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
Practical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.05
Motherhood to Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.10
n Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,	.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury,	.10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.,	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How Lae Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	.25
Degeneracy; C. L. James,	.25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Causes of Hard Times; Chavannes,	.05
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15
Henry George Examined; J. K. Ingalls,	.05
Christianity and Progress; G. W. Foote,	.10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dotson-Barker,
Box 132, San Jose, Cal.

THE ADULT.

A journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Bedborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League, Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscure Julies and Distracted Sues, by Leighton Pagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whitlock. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.

Bar Sinister and Light Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains five half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .75

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .50

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .15

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10

Fountain of Life,	"	" paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood,	"	" cloth, price,	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex,	"	"	.50
A Sex Revolution,	"	"	.25
Helen Harlow's Vow,	"	"	.25

Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .05

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 30 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Heredity.—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

To "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of Ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical, and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free. Box 94, Portland, Oregon.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally in effect. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Send Sex, Birth-date, 25 cents, and get outline life reading. Disease diagnosed, with advice whom to marry, by lock of hair. Life Guide Box 814, Pasadena, Cal.

We Will Send You forty (40) of the best anti-constipation, liver pills you ever saw on receipt of twelve (12) cents in stamps. Worth half a dollar. Agents wanted. The Hanson Supply Co., Chicago, Station X

PRICE, 5 CENTS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 40. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 6, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 679

The divine right of man to rule over woman is no longer accepted as a theory, and in good time all the old statutes in accordance therewith will be numbered among the "blue laws."—"Prodigal Daughter."

The Two Sides of the Shield.

I am not going to try to argue with Mr. Ruedebusch That would be profitless. He is a gentleman of wide reading, of superb aspiration, of strong thought, but he has the defect of a class; in argument he fails to see the bearing of his opponent's reasoning upon the subject at issue, because he is utterly preoccupied with his own idea One's words pass him by ungrasped. After he reads this he will simply reiterate his former assertions, without in the least perceiving that he is talking about one thing and I another. So I am not trying to argue with him—I am essaying to make the matter plain to others, if there are any who share his delusion.

I do this because he has said his devotion to the "New Ideal" led him to refuse to sign the "Call to Concerted Action." And right here, in passing, a misconception of his should be corrected. He was not the man I had in mind when I said I had found one dissident, and, furthermore, I did not say anyone had refused to sign the Call. I said only that all but one expression of opinion, oral and written, that I had received had been favorable to the movement. I had received no expression whatever from Mr. Ruedebusch. This illustrates what I have just said concerning his inability to analytically hear what is said on the "other side."

But to return to the real issue: Did Mr. Ruedebusch perceive the clear distinction to which I am now going to call attention he would find nothing antagonistic to the "New Ideal" in the "Call for Concerted Action." The Propaganda has been inaugurated to spread the light of sexual freedom. It is to engage in the work of disseminating arguments favorable to the liberty of choice in love relations. The "New Ideal," on the other hand, is a theory regarding the methods of love and sexual expression. The Propaganda stands for the principle of liberty. The "New Ideal" pleads for a certain method of enjoying liberty. The Propaganda says that neither the state nor society nor any individual "owner" should be permitted to interfere between lovers. The "New Ideal" says that lovers will best enjoy their mutual affection when they assume a certain attitude toward each other and toward society. Whether that attitude is or is not the best one to assume, does not concern the Propaganda. The Propaganda simply affirms that the right and the opportunity to practicalize the "New Ideal" should not be denied, nor the right and the opportunity to practicalize any other ideal not antagonistic to freedom, that is, not invasive. If Mr. Ruedebusch could set his preconception aside long enough to sense this vital distinction between a principle and a method, he would see that he could help the Propaganda without in the slightest degree weakening his loyalty to the "New Ideal." The Propaganda intends to send out literature in favor of selfhood in sex life. This literature will not be in the interest of the "New Ideal" nor against it; it will not be in the interest of Dianism nor against it; it will not be in the interest of variety nor of free monogamy. It will be in the interest of liberty; it will be against compulsory monogamy. In a word, to repeat, it will be written and sent out in behalf of the principle of freedom of choice; it will neither antagonize nor favor any particular method of enjoying that freedom of choice. First get liberty; then we can begin to form rational conceptions of what will be "natural" under liberty.

Put it in another way: Mr. Ruedebusch does not believe in extraneous compulsion in love. The Propaganda is opposed to extraneous compulsion in love, and its work is to bring others to this way of thinking. Then, why should Mr. Ruedebusch decline to encourage the Propaganda? Surely, he does not fear that general acceptance of the principle of freedom in love would be detrimental to the "New Ideal"? That would be absurd.

Now for a few brief remarks on particular points.—but in the beginning I must say, as I have often said to Mr. Ruedebusch in private correspondence, his "New Ideal" is anything but new. This will be seen by all when we examine two statements made by our critic. He says: "As a necessary result [of the discarding of the old love ideal] you will never share your bed with an adult person of the opposite sex as a matter of course." Certainly not, but that axiom is not original with the author of the "New Ideal"; it is true, but not new. Years and years before Mr. Ruedebusch was out of the swaddling clothes of orthodox morality, many of us were enunciating the same truth with all possible emphasis. Again: "You will see no reason to give any notice of it [your sex choice] to 'society'." Precisely, but how does the reiteration of an idea familiar to thousands make it the personal property of the repeater? how comes it to be a constituent of an "Ideal" which he claims to be exclusively his own?

Mr. Ruedebusch calls frantically for radicals to crate their "living together," by which "living together" he means a relationship of real or apparent mutual possession by the husband and wife or by two lovers. An amusing practical commentary on this is furnished by Mr. Ruedebusch himself. While many of the men and women whom he regards as sadly deficient in radical thought and action because they have not seized upon the so-called "New Ideal" as a universal and original panacea, do not "live together" at all in pairs and absolutely repudiate the notion of exclusive possession and of monogamic love, he himself is a respectable married man! And it is perfectly safe to say that if he could convince the Mayvillians that he was not legally married he would find the village too hot to hold him. His telling his neighbors that his relations could not be known to them ("there is no reason why society should or could know of it") instead of being a defense against prosecution would be an additional incitement to it, because a deliberate denial of fundamental orthodox dogmas, and hence a decided aggravation of the irritation of the orthodox mind.

In conclusion: Let us all take hold in the work of education; let us do all we can to show that individual initiative is as necessary and salutary in love relations as it is in other spheres of human life. We are the champions of a principle, and no matter what we may believe to be the best method of enjoying existence under the domination of that principle, we can work together for the principle. Emil F. Ruedebusch, then, should be as much at home in the Propaganda as

E. C. WALKER.

No thinking person, who is also a philanthropist, will willingly accept the theory that prostitution is inevitable, or rest satisfied until a social system is evolved so completely in harmony with our human nature that there will no longer exist in man a demand for the prostitution of woman.—"Prodigal Daughter."

A Woman's Protest—and Appeal

BY ADELINE CHAMPNEY.

As a woman I come, speaking in behalf of woman, the free woman. Not the "New Woman," emphasized by capital letters and a satirical smile, half-contemptuous, half-indulgent. She is a feeble imitation of man, declaring a belief in her own inferiority, for we imitate our betters; otherwise she is a short-sighted man-hater, putting herself in opposition to the other sex,—as if the true interests of men and women could conflict! Not for her do I speak, but for the "free proud woman" of the twentieth century.

For her, man, rational, radical man, has no satirical smile, no bitter antagonism. He waits to welcome her with strong, helpful hands and loving heart, but oh! how little does he understand her.

Some, accustomed to regard woman as a pet, a toy, a treasure to be cherished and guarded and tenderly cared for, look upon the free woman as a new sort of plaything. Her claims to intellectual consideration amuse them. They will give her all care and kindness, but she is still inferior. Perhaps they find her charm so great, her attraction so sweet that they will even humor her demands, grant her liberty of choice and await her good pleasure, but she is still the "weaker sex."

"Sometime or other, somehow or other" writes one man, "the man must give way to her weakness—new woman or old woman—if she be a woman at all. For it is always her weakness, as in the end she cannot resist the man. Such is the destiny of woman. Only in this age of improvement and good feeling we wish to rationalize it; that is, to make it more comfortable for her."

Such men are flattering and gallant in their manner toward "sweet ladies." They think to please them by outward deference and a seemingly suppliant attitude, but all the while feeling a superiority and a right to dictate which will appear in almost brute force when the obsequious mask falls. Their ideal of womanhood is sweet submissiveness, receptivity. They feel they have a right to expect this and take credit to themselves for the freedom and initiative privileges which they grant.

O man! It is not gallantry we want. It is not indulgence, petting, flattery we ask from you. We seek no rights, no privileges which you can grant. We ask for understanding. We ask that you will see us as we are, equals with men and entitled to the freedom we assume.

There are others who misunderstand us as greatly, though in a different way. They exalt woman into a veritable angel of light, before whom they worship. Reacting against the long period of ownership and enslavement of woman, they would almost reverse things. The mere fact of womanhood, to them, renders her sacred, and the fact of motherhood may make her a ruler, a despot. They abase their own sex, declaring man to be a mere animal until sanctified and uplifted by the holy love of woman, whom they reverence as the fountain of human spirituality and purity.

Unfortunately many women are pleased with this worship and encourage it, but it is a false ideal. A man may be spiritualized and uplifted by a true woman's love; he may even thus be lifted from the mire of perverted sensuality, but this is equally true of woman, in ennobling response to the love of a true man. The inspiration springs not alone from the superior goodness of the lover, but from the purity of love itself which cleanses and beautifies the heart that opens to it.

O man! It is not worship we want. We are not goddesses, stooping from our high plane to bless and redeem degenerate man. We would be reverenced only with the same reverence you give to yourselves, for our place is beside you, not above you.

The woman of the twentieth century, looking at life with clear eyes, sees the race in its growth from ignorance to knowledge, from knowledge to wisdom. She sees in the whole course of evolution from the monad to man the process of the differentiation of sex, a constant drawing apart and organizing in separate forms of the masculine and the feminine qualities, forces, powers, until today man stands the highest attained expression of the masculine in nature, and woman the fullest embodiment of the feminine.

In the light of this truth the little distinctions, customs, usages of a few thousand years appear in their true light as experimental mistakes; and woman, seeing her true position, fulfils it. Henceforth she will stand beside man in all the walks of life. His need of her is no greater than is her need of him. His delight in her finds full response in her delight in him. She is his companion, his counterpart, his "other self." Body, mind, heart, soul—in all things man and woman are complementary, and through mutual interchange develop themselves and the race, bringing strength, power and joy to each other and to all.

This is the true "sphere" of woman and we of the new day, free women indeed, arise to fulfil our destiny. O you free men, for whose appreciation our whole being is calling, see you not also with the clear eyes? Will you not also answer the summons to co-operation in freedom?

I would like, above all things, to see this hitherto impassable gulf between the wife and the courtesan,—dug by jealousy and hate and kept open by prejudice and ignorance,—so effectually bridged over that each would regard the other as a sister and co-laborer instead of a rival and enemy.—"Prodigal Daughter."

Similar Results Follow Similar Causes.

BY L. T. P. F.

"The Torch of Reason," organ of the Oregon Secular Union, which aims to shut free lovers off its lecture platforms, and to bar out all speakers whose personal habits are not what the masters of the organization think they should be, is delightfully innocent at times. For instance, it quotes this from Colonel Ingersoll: "Orthodox religion is a kind of boa-constrictor; anything it can't dodge it will swallow." And the Oregon Secular Union, finding very soon that it cannot dodge free love, will either swallow it or be swallowed by it, the end being the same. "Of course the churches are going to endeavor to meet the demands of the hour," again quoting Colonel Ingersoll. The "Torch of Reason" is making the same attempt. Just at this moment, it thinks the demand of the hour is for orthodox anti-scientific morality, and so it is making a desperately brave effort to put the new wine of Freethought into the old bottles of supernatural authoritarianism, but if it lives long enough—and it will not have to live very long—it will make the discovery that the demand of the hour is for something less antiquated than the sex ethics of the Catholic church.

"The Torch of Reason" is grieved almost beyond expression that all free lovers do not proclaim their views from the house-tops, and it mournfully complains:

Some of these people have been drilled in deceit until they conceive it to be a virtue, and an unsuspecting person may associate with them and not know that they are of that belief, but be subjected to a small dose at a time, as the crafty free-love priest or doctor may think the patient able to assimilate it. This deceit must be wrong, and we who are trying to build up Secular churches, should be careful to have lecturers and teachers define their position before taking too much stock in their work.

"Secular churches" is very much in place here! Is it possible that "The Torch of Reason" does not see that the deceit of which it complains is the result of persecution, actual or feared? Does it not see that its rule of exclusion of free lovers makes the Oregon Secular Union the direct promoter of hypocrisy, the very father, so to speak, of deceit? When it says to every Freethinker who is interested in the work of Secularism and who desires to take part in promoting it, "You must 'define' your position on free love; if you are tainted with this heresy you can not speak for the Oregon Secular Union nor for the principles for which it stands," does not that organization do all that it can, in the absence of a physical Inquisition, to make every aspirant for the lecturer's or the teacher's position a liar and a coward? Was not the identical course pursued by the church the cause of unlimited hypocrisy, and does it not account for the fact that less than one-third of the Freethinkers in this country dare proclaim themselves such? If the Oregon Secular Union will stand beside the Church as it looks in the mirror of History it will see twins. But here is the most laughable of the "breaks" of "The Torch of Reason":

What to us is ancient was modern at one time, and people thought the same of their then modern ways as many do of ours, and anyone who tried to reform what seemed radically wrong were called by hard names, even as the crank is in our time; but looking back upon the crude ways of antiquity, we wonder how they could have thought their ways were all right, and there is no doubt that in twenty-five years people will look at some of our modern methods and systems as very crude indeed.

Now, how would that look in the "deadly parallel column" beside the rule excluding good Secularists from lecturers' and teachers' work just because they think there is something "radically wrong" with our sex institutions?

The laws claiming to regulate prostitution have no kindly consideration for the poor prostitute. They were made by men for the convenience of men; the secrecy and safety of men in the pursuit of sexual pleasure being their only end and aim. —"Prodigal Daughter."

"Little Freethinker."

DEAR FRIENDS:—I am deeply grieved to have to inform you of the death of Francis Graves and consequently of our "Little Freethinker." He had the grip for months, but hoped versus hope that he would finally recover and be able to continue the little pet paper. But fate determined otherwise, and the world has lost a good man and a useful worker for liberalism.

He published "Plain Dealer" for twenty-five years and commenced publishing "Little Freethinker" over four years ago when he had not a dollar in the world, and only a hand press and a little worn type. Kind friends encouraged and helped us so we struggled along, and just as light was breaking in upon us, his light of life went out.

Promise of help came and I think had he lived "Little Freethinker" would in one year more, have been on its feet, as a paying publication. I feel as if one half of my life is gone out with the death of Graves and the "Little Freethinker."

I gave the paper four years of work and nearly two hundred dollars in money. But I do not count it lost. I'm sure it was well invested, and the harvest will prove worthy of it all.

I hope to hear from each subscriber of the little paper, and will answer each letter that encloses a stamp.

Lovingly and sadly, ELMIRA DRAKE SLENKER.
Snowville, Va.
Sept. 24, 1897.

Passionate women are not a product of our present civilization,—a fact that husbands whine over most dolefully.—"Prodigal Daughter."

Sociologic Lesson. No. L.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

THE BASIS OF MONEY. Value being a matter of estimation, can not be measured absolutely by a physical standard; for the selected standard may be more or less desired at different times and by different persons. A standard varying inappreciably for an indefinite period can be adopted as soon as the agents of the people can be trusted to carry out the requisite plan honestly and intelligently. It involves two elements, which I shall consider separately. The first, the mode of causing money representing value to be more or less desired by the community. I reserve for the present, and confine my attention to the establishment of a standard with which the money shall be kept constantly in agreement.

What is required is such a standard that if money is loaned for a term of years, its purchasing power shall not be less when it is returned. Every article constantly fluctuates in value, and the articles most desired at one time are liable a few years later to be comparatively valueless. Nickel plating and galvanizing have largely taken the place of gold and silver for preserving metals from oxidation. Steam and electricity have largely displaced the use of horses. The crusade against alcoholic liquors, tobacco, tea and coffee, may at any time destroy their market value; and it is impossible to predict what other articles now commonly desired will be displaced by new discoveries or inventions.

Let Nature Dictate.

While it is interesting to look down from a safe perch in the upper tier and witness the war of the ideals now raging in the Luciferian arena it is to be regretted that all this good ammunition could not be spent upon the common enemy in obtaining that liberty without which all ideals are alike impossible of realization.

If your "ideal" is better than mine present if so that mine will suffer by contrast and fall and perish of its own unfitness. The fallacy of beliefs and arguments may be exposed if necessary without acrimony or personality. If my talk in Lucifer strikes some intolerant dogmatist as nonsense what is gained by calling me a fool? On the plane of the ultimate—the universal—who can say, "This is nonsence," "This is wisdom"?

At the imminent risk of getting my mug thumped I, too, will set up an ideal and proceed to bow down and offer unto it incense and oblation. As in my youth I had a three-cornered ideal—father, son and holy ghost—so now I have a trinity ideal—Nature, Liberty and Woman, the greatest of which of course is the climax—Woman! Her I declare into you and Her only I worship! Not in the ideal merely but in the real as well. Woman is a good enough divinity for me.

Let us work for liberty and not quarrel about chickens before they are hatched. Given Liberty, marriage will take care of itself. Individuals will adjust their own sex relations. It is not a question of logic but one of science—of individual preference.

It is well enough for us in friendly gossip to express to each other our choice in dress, food, flowers, sex relation, etc; but why should those of opposite tastes seek to convince each other that they are wrong? Simply because they do not know any better. Let all live out their nature in their own way. No dictation. S. R. SHEPHERD.
Leavenworth, Kans.

The practice pursued by society of weeding out the ardent, passionate girls, and selecting for motherhood only the cold and passive ones, has produced its legitimate effect in giving us a race of passionless women, so poorly endowed sexually that their husbands feel justified in seeking pleasanter relations elsewhere.—"Prodigal Daughter."

The make-believe monogamy we have among usis a hideous sham, bought with prostitution and clothed with hypocrisy and lies.—"Prodigal Daughter."

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus: so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1301 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

THE ADDRESS of Mattie E. Hursen, late of Battle Creek, Mich., is now at Lucifer's office.

A FEW more paragraphs from the writings of that brave and true woman, Rachel Campbell, are given prominence in this issue. See combination offer, on last page, to those who would like to read and circulate this very remarkable essay upon the saddest of all the sad features of our miscalled civilization.

LUCIFER CIRCLE, at its last meeting, was addressed by Emma Goldmann of New York, instead of by Mrs. Lake, as advertised. About one hundred persons listened to one of the best lectures ever delivered before the Club. Her theme was "Prostitution," its causes and cure. Miss Goldmann is on a lecture tour that will last several months and will extend to the Pacific coast. She will lecture before our Circle again, Thursday evening, Oct. 7. For the present she can be addressed in care of this office.

The Inquisition Again at Work.

The following letter explains itself:

"Cell 3, County jail, Portland, Oregon, Sept. 29, 1897.

"Dear Friends:—This is to inform you that on Friday the 17th, upon my depositing 'The Firebrand' in the post office, for Sept. the 19th, the United States marshal, under guise of friendship, pumped out of me that I was one of the publishers of the 'Firebrand,' so had me up before the commissioner, heard my story, and he, or they, committed me to jail in failure to find bail in the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000). The marshal would not allow me to go home and make arrangements to get some one to care for the cow, chickens and cats—all the group, excepting myself, having gone hop-picking to get funds to live on and run the 'Firebrand.' They have indictments for A. Isaac. Later—21st. H. Addis is in the same cell with me. I send clipping from the 'Oregonian' of Sept. 18. With love and hope, A. J. POPE."

The clipping from the "Oregonian" alluded to, is headed: "An Anarchist in Jail. A. J. Pope, of the Vile 'Firebrand' under Arrest. United States Authorities Also Hot After Henry Addis and A. Isaac, his Associates." In describing the arrest of Mr. Pope the report says, among other things,

In the meantime Postal Inspector Robinson had secured a copy of the paper, mailed by Mr. Pope, and, finding that it contained a lot of matter which he considered indecent and obscene, at once made complaint to United States Attorney Murphy, and a warrant was issued for the arrest of Pope on a charge of mailing obscene matter. About 1:30 P. M. he was brought to the United States attorney's office. On being questioned by Mr. Murphy, he acknowledged that he was one of the proprietors of the "Firebrand," and that he had mailed a packet of these papers shortly before. The papers mailed by Pope are dated Sunday, September 19, and the issue is No. 33 of volume 3.

Next week's Lucifer will probably contain later and more definite information concerning this latest assault upon the freedom of publication, this latest attempt to muzzle the press and stifle investigation in regard to the crimes committed by authority of church and state.

The Old, Old Story.

Under the heading, A "Problem for Idealists, Old and New," a correspondent writes,

"A girl of nineteen (C), graduate of a high school, who had commenced a successful career as teacher; refined, gentle, good looking; familiar with liberal ideas but who has heretofore lived an entirely conventional life among the 'Philistines'—has succumbed to the 'attraction that is stronger than gravitation,' and is now pregnant.

"The prospective father is an amorous young cus—tomer who has sported so many 'side loves' incidentally, that C. has lost all her illusions about him; the town has become too heated to hold him and he is presumably seeking 'other worlds to conquer.'

"Now, what is C. to do,—having no wings for heaven and no status on earth?

"Happily it is not 'a question of bread and butter,' as her mother is able and willing to care for her physical comfort.

"Don't all speak at once, but write to

MRS. DORA BOSS,
Amherst, Wis."

A very good text from which to preach a long SERMON on the home training of girls and boys; on the criminal failure of a "high school" education that teaches nothing whatever concerning the physiology and hygiene of sex—the uses and abuses of the procreative function; on the barrenness, or the unsatisfied longings of a "conventional life among the Philistines;" on the responsibilities of fatherhood and motherhood, and when where the responsibilities of each come in; on the duty of the "town," or the community, the law, in this matter, etc., etc.

The object of this brief comment is not to answer the query of Dora Boss, but rather to call the attention of our "Idealists" thereto, and to ask them to write short answers for publication in Lucifer. Whether published or not a "symposium" upon questions involved in, or suggested by, the object lesson herein presented, cannot fail to help clear the social atmosphere, or to disperse the fogs of superstitious moralism—cannot well be otherwise than very interesting to all who participate therein. For "Mothers' meetings" and for "Lucifer circles," the papers written in answer to the query of our correspondent would be very appropriate and useful, as subjects of discussions for an evening or for a series of meetings. Perhaps some of these papers, prepared for and read at such meetings, would find a hospitable reception in the columns of "society" journals,—the secular or religious press.

Conventional Marriage Arraigned

Under this head in last Lucifer were given part of the reasons why Emma Wardlaw Best and Arthur Wastall, of London, England, members of the Legitimation League, refused to comply with marriage law and custom. Here are some more reasons why they "resist all external coercion whatsoever in the affairs of the heart, and particularly conventional marriage:"

"BECAUSE while the legal wife may be the mistress of her husband's affections, the illegal wife must be the mistress of her lovers' affections.

" To be kept by obligation is a dishonored position.

" It stamps by the nursery term "Miss" thousands of women, while the man leaves "Master" behind with his childhood.

" It fosters jealousy, each partner claiming property in the body and mind of the other.

BECAUSE it affects that the male commences sex intercourse later than his partner, whilst everyone is aware to the contrary.

" It affects that the mother is the sooner prepared for her dangerous and difficult task of generation.

" It reverses—based as it is on purchase—the natural condition, and demands that woman should bring young flesh to the marriage bed.

" Its infamies force many a good and faithful woman to entreat a bad and faithless man to make "an honest woman of her."

" Whatever the character of the man "honor and obedience" to him are demanded of her at the "altar."

" It makes woman abdicate her right to her own person.

" It ignores that strength of passion and desire, virtue and vice, do not depend on sex, but upon individual temperament.

" It supports the claim of men, voiced by Tennyson, that—

'Woman is the lesser man, and all thy passions match'd with mine
Are as moonlight unto sunlight, and as water unto wine.'

which has an obvious self-interest, and is, in reality, an insolent male assumption of superiority and license.

" It forces women to pose as Pharisees and hypocrites towards men and the "other woman."

" Under its rule on the one hand women disown and lie about their natural desires, whilst on the other men rafely admit, and are ashamed of "chastity." So much for morality as inculcated by marriage!

" Under its rule parents who consider it the greatest wrong to their son to hide the faintest rumor of "incontinence" in his proposed bride, hold it no shame to deceive their daughters to the very foot of the "altar" on the whole matter of sex.

" The contemptuous insolence of women of the public harem towards men in general is not compatible with male assumed dignity as "heads of the household," nor with the honor of the "wife."

" It relaxes the efforts of lovers to be at their best towards each other.

" It encourages pre-marital ignorance—a fruitful source of suffering.

" It denies the exercise of the purely amative sex function, and prefers to be surrounded by a festering mass of pruriency.

And finally because it blights innumerable lives."

And here is a copy of the "Declaration"—the affirmation that naturally followed the Protest already quoted:

"We, the undersigned, desire to set forth to our friends some of the reasons which have induced us to discard the marriage ceremony and form an autonomistic alliance.

The decision not to enter into a state which is but too often one of legalized prostitution is of long standing with us both, and was consequently arrived at quite independently of one another.

We hold ourselves entirely free of any bond in this relationship save that of love, and that failing at any time our union will be dissolved. We, however, enter it with the intention of a life-long partnership.

We hold that the freedom of the mother is essential to the well-being of the children, and even were it not so her freedom is not justly sacrificed to the possible wrong to be done those not already in existence. If the mother is to enter legal bonds for the benefit of offspring the girl children will gain only to the extent of legitimacy, and will in their turn be sacrificed to the same fetish of matrimony, being no freer than were their mothers before them.

We hold that marriage is companionship, and reject the ecclesiastic dictum that it is primarily intended for purposes of procreation.

We hold that nature has given the child to the mother, the father's control over it being obtained through their mutual affection. A mother who lives her natural term of life is able to see her children attain their maturity, whilst the father may procreate when old and feeble.

Under current inequitable social conditions the support of the children could be made the subject of contract prior to conception, though we fully realize that this might impair the complete freedom of the woman."

The above declaration, while open to objection from the standpoint of many "New Idealists," shows a very interesting phase of evolutionary progress from the old standards of morality, or of sex ethics, towards the plane of absolute freedom, or complete abolition of all contracts, vows, sacramental or secular, "in the affairs of the heart." Whether this intermediate step or individualistic contract is better than absolute freedom, under existing conditions, is a question that every woman and every man must decide for themselves.

The power that "regulates prostitution" is heard in the voice of the policeman crying "Move on, move on! don't block up the way. Make room for others. MOVE ON!" And if she does not move on, and quickly too, she is arrested, dragged before a police court, fined and perhaps given a few months in jail.—"Prodigal Daughter."

Basis of Money.

In this week's "Sociologic Lesson" Professor Parkhurst says, "What is required is such a standard that if money is loaned for a term of years its purchasing power shall not be less when it is returned." That is like saying "What we need is a thermometer that will regulate the temperature instead of one which is affected by the temperature." He shows the impossibility of securing such a standard as he thinks is "required" when he says "Every article constantly fluctuates in value." Value, in the economic sense, is measured by desire and not by quantity or specific material. Hence the futility of any attempt to fix value either by establishing a monetary basis or enacting legal tender laws ought to be apparent. Under liberty free contract would determine the payment of debt. An agreement to return a certain quantity and quality of a borrowed commodity—whether that commodity be gold or something else—does not imply the return of exchange value equal to that possessed by the borrowed article. The element of chance, which effects exchange value, cannot be eliminated by any human laws, but the legal devices which can and do create artificial value can and should be abolished. S. H.

"Some Mistakes of Moses."

BY A. WARREN.

I do not mean that Moses who was so ably criticised, some years ago, by the immortal Robert G. Any person bearing the name Moses is liable, like the balance of us, to make mistakes. It is therefore with no feeling of disrespect for either the ancient or our modern Moses that I adopt the above title, or that I venture to point out what seem to me to be errors, in the editorial of the latter, in Lucifer, No. 675.

That our beloved Moses is ever otherwise than fair and impartial, it would be ungracious to affirm; for if there is one thing, more than another, upon which he bases his hopes of happiness in life, it is this of his reputation for fairness. I have sometimes wished that he were less sensitive in this particular direction; for it seems to me that too much modesty tends to obscure one's position on the question under discussion.

This remark, however, is not intended to apply specially to the editorial alluded to; for while he labors therein, as usual, to mistify his opponent by concessions, his argument is not in itself ambiguous. The evident intention, in the article, is to prove that a plurality of sexual loves, at one and the same time, if not his highest ideal, is at least "helpful and happifying."

It is not my aim, in this reply, to prove that he is mistaken in this opinion. What I advocate is freedom; and I do not propose to handicap the investigator at the outset, by any effort to enforce my ideal, or my theory as to what freedom may bring. But I do think our editor is mistaken in charging that those who oppose him are handicapped by an artificial conscience. It is true, he says all, thereby including himself; but in that very word lies his mistake. I protest that all are not so handicapped. That we all are biased on moral questions, I do not deny; but in my former article I distinctly assumed that the question of plurality is not a moral one. We do not all view it from the clergyman's point of observation. A few of us, at least, consider it purely a question of good taste and good social policy; and in these realms of thought, conscience usurps no authority.

Having made this fundamental mistake, he forced himself to concede that he himself is biased. Had he stopped at that limit, the need of this reply would not have been so obvious.

But why thus handicap even himself? Has he not placed himself on record as opposed to all government of man by man? And does not this demolish the old moral standard of human conduct? If men and women are to be really free, what has conscience to do in determining their relations with each other? What ultimate good is there, outside of happiness? Where does the ought come in?

One practical objection to this habit of viewing social questions from a religious standpoint is, that it develops antagonism and unkind personal feelings. I cannot help imagining that his remark that "It is the wounded bird that flutters," is attributable to this old habit. It had no relevancy, but on general principles it seems disrespectful. If he meant to intimate that my views were based on my own unhappy experience, it was both unkind and illogical. If my experience was against his theory, how could that fact strengthen his argument? I stated facts, and called for further testimony, and in reply he makes this fling, and alleges that his party are not permitted to relate their experience.

This is clearly another mistake; but under its influence he asks, "May it not be that it was the failures that came under Mr. Warren's observation, and because they were failures, whereas, at the same time, in the same locality, may there not have been thousands of experiments, on a small scale, that were not failures, but very helpful and happifying?"

No, there could not have been a thousand such instances of unrevealed plurality. Had Brother Harman been there, he would not have asked such a question; for he would have realized that those people, at least, were not restrained from relating their experience, and that, so eager were they to profit by each other's experience, that there was no disposition to keep love affairs secret, nor hardly any possibility of doing so. There may, indeed, have been a few such cases, in which plurality may have been helpful and happifying. That was the subject of my inquiry. If there ever was such a case, what law is there prohibiting any one from saying so?

In conclusion, I wish to certify, in the most earnest manner, that so far as I am informed, and as I sincerely believe, from personal acquaintance with those early experimenters, not one of them ever sold out for a mess of "Grundy pottage." If they have renounced their faith, in any particular, they have done so from honest conviction, and not from any unworthy motive. If my brother's ideal is nearly the same as my own, as he affirms, perhaps he will explain why he came to indulge these harsh reflections upon his own party, and to outdo himself in judicial fairness, by giving his best efforts in support of the opposite one.

Whether Moses or Aaron—M. Harman or A. Warren—has made most "mistakes" I leave others to judge. I am certainly not conscious of having made "flings," or of having "indulged in harsh reflections." When I said "It is the wounded bird that flutters" I stated what I believed to be an axiomatic truth, capable of universal application, and the same when I said, "Birds of a feather flock together." If, in my reply, I had reference to the writer of the criticisms upon the so-called "varietists" it was because his own utterances could not be fittingly answered in any other way. I am quite willing to be measured by the same foot-rule that I myself use in measuring others, and I presumed the same of Mr. Warren.

First, then, and briefly,—for it seems useless to continually reiterate the same arguments—I maintain that A. Warren discounts or discredits his own moral honesty when he accuses me of laboring "as usual to mystify his [my] opponent," etc. To try to mystify another is not candid or honest, if I know the meaning of these terms. In judging of the motives of others we can never get away from ourselves. I have not accused Mr. Warren of "unworthy motives," as he has accused me. When I say, "most reformers get tired of the struggle and compromise principle for peace, or for a mess of Grundy pottage," I speak from the acts and words of men themselves, and, to a certain extent, from my own personal experience. The time has been when I dared not to speak my inmost convictions, lest I lose my hold on the means of supporting a young and helpless family.

Second. The rational explanation, as I see it, of the fact that "nearly all the old experimenters, those who have had the most experience, have slunk back into marriage and are no longer heard from"—quoting Mr. Warren—is, besides the factors already mentioned, the persistence of early impressions, or the force called conscience. The rebel against conventional marriage—sacramental marriage, theologic or superstitious marriage,—is a kingdom divided against itself, and in time this abnormal conscience gets the better of the fight, and forces its victim back into conformity to conventional marriage, just as an early formed religious conscience forces many a rebel against irrational dogma, back into the church. I am not assailing the honesty of the backslider, in either case. I judge from experience and observation—the only "lamps for my feet," as Patrick Henry said, that to me seem safe or reliable.

Third. As to the comparative number of successful and unsuccessful experiments in "plurality,"—Mr. Warren has lived in many states, and his observations have extended over a period of half a century or more and hence I maintain that in "the same territory there may have been thousands of experiments, on a small scale, that were not failures," etc. Again I say, remove the ban of invasive law and of intrusive meddling by self-elected censors, and there would be some chance for candid and rational comparison of results.

Finally, in reply to his last question, I would say I have no "party,"—I belong to no party, creed or class, but try to deal fairly by all; and while, as I have often said, the exclusive or dual relation in sex is my ideal, I am not at all sure that this ideal is highest and best for all, or even for any. I am even inclined to take the ground that in our transition state of development this ideal is practicable for a very few only. As in all fields of human investigation, so in the realm of sex-association, sex ethics, I claim to be only an investigator, only a learner, not a teacher—at least not a dogmatist. Put all theories on a plane of equal right to life and liberty of expression, then the fittest will survive. That there are honest, noble, pure and good men and women who advocate and practice plurality in sex-relations I verily believe, just as I believe that there are honest, pure, true and good men and women who advocate and practice monogamy or duality. "In things essential, unity; in things unessential, diversity; in all things, LIBERTY."

M. H.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LVIII.

From that day forth a new life entered the charmed and charming circle. Lawrence proved to be the architect required, though he had never called his talent in this line to a practical account. Guided by Hilda's vivid imagination, inspired by her enthusiasm and aided by the practical suggestions of Owen, the plan grew, and by the time the first green of the young spring appeared upon the landscape they were ready for action. Margaret had left them at the call of duty, and could only from afar share in the excitement and enthusiasm. Every heart was beating high with hope, and with the advent of warmer weather, Owen, Wilbur, Lawrence and Norman kissed their loved ones good-bye and started on a prospecting tour.

Mrs. Leland was importuned to remain with the girls. Why should she return all alone to her western home?—though the probability now was that the west would be where their new home would be located. Just at this time, too, came the change that caused the sisters' eyes to grow dim with tears and a feeling of sadness to pervade every heart. Frank was daily growing weaker, his cheek more hollow and white, his hands more waxy, and intuitively the girls clung to the more mature woman. On a bright sunny morning in the early part of May the tired lids closed, never to open again. Although almost every day brought a letter from some one of the absent ones yet they were still far away when the death angel made his entrance into the midst of this happy circle, subduing their spirits with infinite sadness when they realized so well what had caused this painful result. So Frank's body was laid away to sleep beneath the daisies, and Imelda's and Cora's tears mingled as they knew that another bond was broken—only they two remained, united by ties of blood, but they also realized that it was better so. At best he had been to them but a wreck of what he might have been. Margaret had joined them just in time to lay a flower upon his pulseless breast and was now with them again for a brief time.

The young physician, Paul Arthurs, and Milton Nesbit had settled close by, and Paul was beginning to have quite a practice as he was fast becoming known. For some time, however, something seemed to have been secretly gnawing at his heart, and when his manner had been warmest towards the stately Edith he would suddenly and abruptly leave her, until his conduct became quite an enigma to her. One morning he laid a pack of written papers in her hand and told her to read, and——ah, well! why dwell upon a sad story longer than absolutely necessary? He loved the queenly girl but was conscious of such a lack of worth on his own part that he felt it would be best to give her up. Some where under the green sod slept a woman whom he believed the poison of his own body had murdered. Having first made a wreck of himself, almost, by early transgressions, the meaning of which he had been ignorant of, he had later contracted the germs of a loathsome disease. In his unpardonable ignorance he married a sweet, confiding, loving girl whom he loved with all his heart but whom he irreparably wronged by permitting his poisoned manhood to mingle with her pure womanhood; and when her baby girl was laid in her arms her eyes closed in that sleep which knows no waking, and the baby slept with her—under the circumstances the very best, probably, that could have happened. He was quite young when all this occurred—in the early twenties, a period of his life he never liked to think of. It was after that experience that he gave himself up to the study of medicine, and then he underwent a most rigid course of treatment, including very stringent rules or habits of diet, bathing and open air exercise.

"I can now look a pure woman in the eyes and know of a certainty that no harm can come to her through me, but for all that, the past is a blur upon my life, a stain which nothing can ever wash away. One word from you, my heart's queen, will send me to my place and keep me there. I could not accept the sweet love shining in your eyes when I know so well my utter unworthiness, without laying bare the past, the memory of which follows me like a mocking fiend. Sweetheart, say but the word and I will never become an inmate of that home which now is being planned—if you deem me too impure, too unworthy to associate with the unsullied whiteness that will congregate there. But O, my darling! I love you as only a man can love when his manhood's strength is most fully developed; but I must abide the verdict you may render.

Yours suppliantly,

PAUL."

And what had been sweet Edith's verdict? When next they met it was in the garden, under the blossom-laden trees. Paul was sitting with his head resting on his hand unaware of her approaching footsteps. From the rear she approached until she stood close to his side, when without a moment's warning two soft warm hands drew his head back, two warm, dewy, clinging lips were touched to his bearded ones, and the next moment he was pressing his cherished Edith to his heart, pouring all the pent up love of a strong nature into her willing ears. His errors of the past belonged to the past. She saw only a noble manhood to which she felt it would be safe to trust her womanhood.

About this same time, also, a strange restlessness took possession of Nesbit. A nightly visitor at Maple Lawn, he seemed to enjoy the society of the fair women there with the keenest relish. Alice's slight figure seemed perpetually dancing before his eyes and a great longing filled his heart. Alice, too, was restless. The color would rush in waves over her face at the sound of approaching footsteps. Although he saw and understood, yet he never said a word. With all the sweet possibilities the future so temptingly held out to him he kept his lips firmly closed while he knew full well that this fair little woman might be his for the asking.

One morning in early June Nesbit electrified them all by abruptly saying that he was going to New York. All looked their surprise. Margaret asked,

"Why?"

Alice nervously plucked the first full-blown rose to pieces as her color changed from red to white and white to red, but Margaret's question was evasively answered. Again she asked,

"When will you return?"

To which she received a short, "I don't know."

Bidding them all good bye he turned to go, when his eye rested for a moment on the swaying form of Alice who found it hard work to stay the hot tears. He hesitated a moment then, approaching the spot where she stood, in a low voice said,

"Walk with me down the maple walk."

Silently they walked until they reached the end, then,

"Do you know why I am going away?"

She shook her head.

"Because my heart yearns for you, and in that vast city dwells a woman whom I call wife. She has not been what the world calls true to me, yet I have treasured her long and faithfully. I feel I ought not to speak of love to another woman so long as she may have need of me. I know it was her own hand that cast the dice, yet I feel that I must know her fate ere I entirely cut loose from her. Oh, I loved her, Alice, in the days when she was mine, and still a latent tenderness lingers in my heart. Maybe she was not wholly to blame, but I have learned new lessons since. I feel a little woman here would prefer me to all others and my heart yearns to claim her. Will you kiss me just once ere I start on this journey which may bring me I know not what?"

Tenderly he raised the drooping head and forced the down cast eyes to look into his. It was too much. Two lips quivered pitifully, like those of some grieved baby, and two great tears rolled over her cheeks down upon the snowy whiteness of her gown. The sight robbed him of self-control. He gathered her in his arms, the tiny morsel, and held her there like some wee baby.

679.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

"I only want to see that she does not suffer; that she is taken care of, and then I will return. Indeed I will. Do not fear"—and then he was gone.

To be continued.

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

* * *

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue," By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman," By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom," By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell, By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?" By X.
"Legal Wife," By Lucinda B. Chandler.
"Whose is the Child?" By Lex.
"The Ascent of Life." By Moses Harman.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring books and lend them to your friends.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Rook, .10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .03
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .03
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury, .10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoke, .10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wachi, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
Degeneracy; C. L. James, .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Causes of Hard Times; Chavannes, .05
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .15
Henry George Examined; J. K. Ingalls, .05
Christianity and Progress; G. W. Foote, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address
M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.
Mrs. Dr. Dotson Barker,
Box 122, San Jose, Cal.

THE ADULT.

A journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Bedborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League, Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscure Judes and Distracted Sues, by Leighton Fagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.

Her Sinister and Lurid Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .20

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Roedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 367 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .15

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10

Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50
A Sex Revolution, " " .25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25

Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 1.50

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .1

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies 05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 367 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Etrinsity.—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Emma Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

We need comradeship of thought.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of Ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical, and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper, unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free. Box 94, Portland, Oregon.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON Makes Child-Birth Easy. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 807, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Send Sex, Birth-date, 25 cents, and get outline life reading. Disease diagnosed, with advice whom to marry, by lock of hair. Life Guide Box 814, Pasadena, Cal.

We Will Send You forty (40) of the best anti-constipation, liver pills you ever saw on receipt of twelve (12) cents in stamps. Worth half a dollar. Agents wanted. The Hanson Supply Co., Chicago. Station X

PRICE, 5 CENTS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., NO. 41. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 13, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE NO. 680

Endymion.

The rising moon has bid the stars;
Her level rays, like golden bars,
Lie on the landscape green,
With shadows brown between.

And silver-white the river gleams
As if Diana, in her dreams
Had dropt her silver bow
Upon the meadows low.

On such a tranquil night as this,
She woke Endymion with a kiss,
When, sleeping in the grove,
He dreamed not of her love.

Like Dian's kiss, unasked, unsought,
Love gives itself, but is not bought;
Nor voice, nor sound betrays
Its deep, impassioned gaze.

It comes, the beautiful, the free,
The crown of all humanity,—
In silence and alone
To seek the elected one.

—Longfellow.

Where are the Women?

BY ADELINE CHAMPNEY.

I have made an appeal in behalf of the "free woman," and now I ask myself—where is she? I know many women who are radical and free from religious superstition. Moreover they are no mere Grundy worshipers, but when we approach the subject of sex I am conscious of a sudden shrinking, the tightening about their minds of innumerable invisible bonds of custom, of false modesty, of morality. Must this be so?

This movement is primarily a movement for the emancipation of woman, but how shall we free the slave who clings to her chains? And women seem bent on forging and riveting chains for themselves and the race. Where are the women? They are working along conservative lines for restrictions of liberty, limitations of thought and action. You will find them by hundreds in any cause known by a name beginning with "Anti" or "Christian;" measures for prohibition, prevention, suppression, are widely and earnestly supported by women, but anything that tends toward freedom, especially toward loosening the "holy bonds of matrimony" is sure of encountering their bitter opposition.

There is a common idea that the marriage institution is a safeguard and protection to women, that it exists for the purpose of securing to them justice and consideration. This is a total misconception of the nature of marriage, and the radical woman should surely know better.

We speak of "Christian marriage" as though the institution were peculiar to the Christian Era, whereas it is older even than man. Westermarck defines marriage as an association of male and female which is continued beyond the period of "heat" and includes care of offspring. This may be called the physiological marriage, and is known among the higher simians, most birds, and some others. All the mating animals observe this earliest form of marriage. Westermarck mentions especially a certain ape who builds a nest for his mate in the tree top, and keeps guard over her, often spending the night at the foot of the tree that no foe may approach.

This form of marriage existed among primitive man. While there are savage tribes who live in actual promiscuity, they are rare, and are mostly considered degenerate. There is no evidence that promiscuity was ever the prevalent condition of man. On the contrary all indications point to a free monogamy as the early marriage. Selection was the privilege of both sexes and the idea of property in woman was yet latent. On that low plane of life there was comparatively little choice, one was as good as another, and mates were often retained for life. Woman was very nearly on a plane of equality with man at this stage of development, and sex-relations were personal matters merely, subject only to laws of physical attraction.

The first innovation was probably marriage by capture, which some tribes still practice and which is yet symbolized in the marriage ceremonies of some peoples. Finding the women of their tribe too few, or perhaps weary of them and desiring novelty, the young men would make raids on neighboring tribes and carry off the maidens to their own homes. Having captured their wives vi et armis, they naturally defended their spoil and the idea of property in women began to grow. Men respected each other's rights of possession and marriage became social—as some one defines it—sexual association with public recognition.

At this time man was subsisting chiefly on natural food products and industry was well-nigh unknown, but as he grew in knowledge and the ability to use his surroundings to add to his comforts and pleasures, as he began to till the soil and to fashion implements, weapons, clothing, etc., woman found a new value. Hitherto she had been merely a sex-mate, now she became a worker, a servant, and her value increased. Fathers assumed authority over their daughters and refused to allow them to mate with men unless some compensation were made for the loss of their services. Thus marriage by purchase arose, and as woman's value to man increased, the chains of her slavery were riveted ever faster and firmer. From the free sex-mate she became the spoil of war, then the purchased drudge. Brides are still "given away" at the altar, and many reminders of the old purchase marriage yet remain.

The world moves on toward freedom. Fathers no longer have absolute ownership of their children, and the unmarried woman is held to be the owner of her charms and abilities, and to have sole right to dispose of them. Man assumes a pretended attitude of a suppliant and beggar, but "value received" might often be truthfully added to the woman's vow of constancy and obedience. Our tastes have grown more refined, and we call things by delicate names and circumlocutions. It would shock our sensibilities were the bride-groom to say—"I take thee, Angelina, to be my bond slave and exclusive property until death thee release," but none the less the wife is the property of the husband; our laws declare it and we all know it.

In the evolution of marriage an important factor has been, of course, woman's physiological function of child-bearing. When tribes are constantly warring together numbers are important, and the father of lusty sons is an honored man. Thus the child-bearing woman became an especially valuable piece of property and the man who possessed such guarded closely his possession, while the barren woman was useless except as a drudge, and abuse and contumely were heaped upon her.

The religious factor was also of great influence. The race lived under constant fear of the gods and the direction and approval of deity was sought in all the affairs of life. Marriage, being an event of importance was especially under the direction of the gods, and a clever priesthood made all use of the opportunity to link the intimate personal affairs of life with subservience to the gods, thereby giving religion a great hold on the people. Marriage thus became a religious rite and its binding nature was greatly intensified. Being entered upon with religious ceremonies and the sanction of deity, it could not be broken without great disrespect to the god or gods,—blasphemy. Hence the fear of the wrath of god was another chain about woman.

State control of marriage developed in a similar way. The father had control of his children in all their ways, and the head of the tribe or clan exercised paternal authority over all the members of his tribe. State government grew from family government, and the father's commands to his children developed into legal codes. In the long process of evolution from patriarchism to democracy might has made right and the unimpeachable authority of the law has been preserved, and that most rigidly in those matters over which religion has especially claimed jurisdiction.

Thus the whole history of marriage is the history of property in women, and the cords that bind the willing slave have been drawn tight by church and state, while today women themselves are helping to draw them tighter. But, some will object, marriage is not today the one-sided slavery you represent it to be. There are hundreds of men who make no claim to possess their wives, and many married women are freer than their "bachelor-maid" contemporaries. Granted; individuals are in advance of the system, and many people hold higher ideals of marriage, but the institution is just what I claim,—The religious, social and legal enforcement of property right in women.

There is a deep, accelerating pulse of freedom beating in the veins of the race. Everywhere individuals are asserting themselves to throw off all yokes. Women are taking the stand of equality with men and practically marriage among the enlightened, has become a mutual contract, in other words, a mutual bondage, the enslavement of two instead of one. Yet is this an improvement, for when men and women are equal and woman recognizes and defines her true position, she will refuse to enslave or be enslaved, and will demand and attain freedom for the race. But she will never do this so long as she holds to marriage as to a patron saint, a special providence for woman.

Again I appeal to the women. Think for yourselves. Study the history of this marriage fetich of your worship and when you see it as it is, your superstition will drop away from you and you will wonder at your blindness. You are hemmed in,—I know it. Society has built its wall about you and love itself binds you to husband, children, friends, but the cause is worth it, whatever the cost, and in numbers there is strength. Already there have been heroic women who have fought and suffered for personal liberty and the cause of freedom. These have opened the way; let us follow. Are we not strong enough, free enough, wise, brave and true enough to throw off the yoke of our degradation and assert a free and noble womanhood?

We are growing up to a time of great release, when all chains shall fall away, and the race, arising to the recognition of its own power and goodness, shall enter upon the free development of its own best. The first step is the emancipation of woman, and it is one step for the woman and three for the race. When free woman takes her place beside free man in mutual co-operation for happiness, who then shall forge chains or who shall wear them? Then Truth shall blossom in free minds and Happiness shall be the natural atmosphere of life.

Survival of an Ancient Worship.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Fetich.—An object of devotion; an idol.—Dictionary.

This ancient and widespread worship survives not only in the interior of Africa and in other admittedly savage countries, but it has many devotees in the most enlightened lands on the globe. To illustrate: There is now visiting here an Englishman, Professor Atkinson. He is an anatomist, a very strong man, physically, and has keen perceptions, enabling him to recognize and properly classify the symptoms of disease. His specialty is bone-setting, including the lengthening of limbs contracted by fractures, making pliable muscles that were intractable, and reducing swelling and knottings of the flesh and muscles. He appears to be doing excellent work, and this without any appeal to hocus-pocus and superstition. His strength and skill are his means of cure. But—crime of crimes in the eyes of the Medical Priesthood—he is not a physician. He makes it a point, however, to have as many doctors about him as he can when he does his work. One of these gentlemen got himself into a city daily last week with the remarkable assertion that it did not make any difference how effective Professor Atkinson's methods were; the fact that he cured many persons whom the physicians and surgeons could not relieve would not save him from the accusation of criminality. He was helping persons who were ill and he had no license to do so; therefore what he was doing was against the law and he should be brought up with a sharp turn. Now, to any one not a fetich worshiper and not a beneficiary of partial statutes, the statement that such work as that of Professor Atkinson is "against the law" can provoke only the retort, "So much the worse for the law." Do not mistake my meaning—I do not say this doctor is a fetich worshiper; he is, as I have intimated, a beneficiary of partial statutes and very likely is at this moment laughing heartily at his dupes, the gulls who enact medical monopoly laws at the dictation of his guild. These gulls are the fetich worshipers I have in mind; the poor foolish automatons who pass "laws" at the command of interested classes, and then fall down in the dust and slime and do homage to their own idiotic creations.

Sundry Criticisms.

BY C. L. JAMES.

The comments of the bourgeois press on the diabolical massacre at Lattimer, Pa., may be summed up in one compound word, white-washing. In my opinion, the editorial of Lucifer (whole No. 677) concedes far too much to that cant which the bourgeois press originated. The whitewash applied by the bourgeois press to the red spot at Lattimer, is distributed in the following daubs. (1.) The massacre at Lattimer was "quite out of the usual." It was "exceptional." It is dangerously likely to "become common," and be "made a precedent." (2.) It was the fault of a "rash," "timid" or "foolish" sheriff. (3.) Violence on the part of labor leaders or followers is injudicious, and can only provoke similar tragedies. I deny all these propositions.

I assert (1) that the diabolical massacre at Lattimer, Pa., was not at all "exceptional," "out of the usual," has any need to "become common," or "be made a precedent." I assert that, previously to May 5, 1886, it was the regular thing whenever a strike occurred for the police or the militia to shoot a lot of the strikers under pretense of riot, arrest their leaders, and thus disorganize the strike, and frighten the surviving wage-slaves back to work. (2) That the murderous sheriff Martin showed no "rashness," "timidity" or "folly," but merely revived a policy uniformly pursued by the monopoly aristocrats, with unfailing success up to May 5, 1886. (3) That violence on the part of labor leaders and strikers is not injudicious, and has not caused massacres like that at Lattimer; but is eminently judicious, and has stopped massacres like that at Lattimer from May 5, 1886, till now. On May 5, 1886, a public meeting of strikers in the Haymarket, Chicago, was discussing a massacre like that of Lattimer, perpetrated a day or two previously, at the McCormick works. I was present at the trial of Parsons, Spies, Fischer, Engel, Lingg, Schwab, Neebe and Fielden, when the Mayor of Chicago, the lamented Carter Harrison, swore that he attended this meeting; and that his last act, when it had been almost dispersed by rain, was to bid Captain Bonfield let it alone. I also heard him swear that before he reached home, he heard the bomb in the Haymarket explode, proving that as soon as his back was turned, Bonfield, in disobedience of his orders, took 180 policemen from the nearest station and attacked the meeting. The police bore down on the meeting with revolvers drawn, crying "Shoot the sons of b——s." (For proof of this statement, see any Chicago paper of the following day.) One of the "sons of b——s" threw among them a dynamite bomb which killed seven and wounded fifty. Since then, until the Lattimer butchery, there have been no more massacres. Even during the great strike of 1894 there were only some sporadic murders. Such were the fruits of violence on the part of strikers and labor leaders. For ten years, massacres, formerly matters of course, have ceased. Why? Because the police and militia have had before their eyes the probability that the "sons of b——s" might be better heeled than they. Had the Lattimer "sons of b——s" been armed, they would not have been massacred. Of course, I am aware that this is not how the bourgeois represent it. But the bourgeois (see their own papers of May 6, 1886,) are liars. They have erected a monument to the policemen who died in the Haymarket "as the fool dieth," breaking the law, disobeying the magistrate, and assailing the constitutional right of assembly and free speech. On this monument their policeman is made to say "In the name of the State of Illinois, I command peace!" But he is only a bronze policeman. What the flesh and blood policeman—now dead—did say, was (see the Chicago papers of May 6, 1886) something very different.

"Chicago's column, pointing to the skies,
Like a tall bully, lifts its head—and lies."

(4) Finally, I assert that the Lattimer massacre and other crimes of the same nature are not of a trivial character, but the highest known to law. Of course, we Anarchists cannot invoke the law to punish them; but as the "reserve of the progressive army," we can require the advance to do its duty. I assert that these crimes are high treason; and I will proceed to prove it.

Treason, by our law, is making war against the commonwealth or aiding its enemies (those with whom it is at war). This is merely the old English statute of Edward III. modified to suit our institutions. (Since we have no king, the commonwealth is substituted for the king in those clauses quoted above; and another clause about seeking the king's death is omitted). Now, what is war? It is any hostile and military act. In May 1641 there were riots at Lambette. The insurgents generally, were held guilty only of felony. But one, Arcker by name, who beat a drum to assemble them as soldiers, was held guilty of high treason. It is also a well settled principle that war against a part of the people is war against the king or the commonwealth, under whose protection they are. Thus an attack on one brothel or gaming house is only a riot; but a conspiracy, like the Ku Klux or Whitecaps, to punish all gamblers or prostitutes in an illegal manner, is treasonable; because the former only disobeys the State, while the latter discards the State, and sets up a rebel government, with laws, penalties and jurisprudence, of its own. Finally, the circumstance that the persons doing treasonable acts are themselves magistrates, is no excuse, but rather an aggravation. In May 1642, Thomas Wentworth, Earl Strafford, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was beheaded for high treason. It is true, he was attainted by Bill, a process which our Constitution justly forbids. But it is also true that the Lords before voting on the Bill, consulted the judges as to whether articles of impeachment previously presented against him amounted to high treason, that the judges replied in the affirmative, and that the Lords found him guilty on two articles, doubtless those which the judges declared valid specifications of high treason, but as to the rest not guilty. The articles on which he was convicted charged raising troops by his own authority in Ireland, and employing them to oppress the people by exacting illegal oaths. Thus he seems to have had substantial justice. The impartial Hallam says there could be no doubt a modern general was guilty of treason if he, as an executive officer, raised and employed an army without authority from the legislative, which is the highest branch of the government.

By these precedents the Pennsylvania oligarchs are clearly guilty of high treason. They raised an army in another state, and brought it to Homestead, with drums and colors, to illegally put down those they chose to accuse of riot. They organized a regular corps in Pennsylvania, and shot unarmed people at Lattimer. They resisted the service of civil processes and imprisoned civil officers by military power without any legislative authority. The sanction given by the governor to these acts makes him liable to impeachment. His general ought at least to be cashiered. Sheriff Martin and the Homestead traitors ought to be hanged. The rebellion of the monopolists, like that of the slave owners, will inevitably increase till it deluges the land with blood unless it is promptly arrested by the condign punishment of a few leading rebels.

* * *

I wonder how often Mrs. Chandler will have to be told that we varietists are not "fixing up" any "code or standard of sex morals;" that we have no desire to exact variety from any one; that the New Ideal is merely liberty? It seems passing strange she cannot see that. Her proposal of energetic united war against the "law of coverture"—vulgarly called the law of marriage—is excellent in all respects but this, that it comes too late to be of any service. For twenty-seven years I have been urging war against the law of marriage and peace on the question of variety. My reasons for a "new departure" are, first, that war against the law of marriage has become respectable, and therefore too much like coward's work for me; secondly, that the prejudice against variety must be eradicated to prevent all that has been accomplished against the law of marriage from being undone. As to the personal insinuation about making one woman free, I have the greatest pleasure in assuring Mrs. Chandler that I never made a woman anything else.

* * *

The arrest of Comrade Pope and his partners, at Portland, Ore., on pretense that their paper, the "Firebrand," is obscene, doubtless illustrates again the facility with which this plea can be used to persecute any publication displeasing to those in power, as soon as it attains importance enough to attract their malice. I say doubtless; for the number complained of seems to have been effectually suppressed, and, not having seen it, I can say nothing about the merits of the case from my own knowledge. But however obscene the paper, Comrade Pope has a defense which should enable his lawyer to clear him. He did not mail the paper, but only offered it for mailing, and proposed to take it back immediately on being told it was considered unmailable. This proves that there was no malice (intention of breaking the law); without which there is no crime.

The Red Heart in a White World.

A Suggestive Manual of Free Society, proposing the Comradeship of all those who believe in the Spirit of Liberty as the essential element in True Society, and the immediate inauguration and practical realization of the Free Life. Price, 20 cents, 10 copies $1. For sale by M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 Congress St., Thursday evening, Oct. 14. The well-known phrenologist, William Windsor, will address the meeting. Subject, "The Physical Basis of Love."

Emma Goldman.

Seating room at Lucifer Circle, Oct. 7, was again filled to overflowing to hear Emma Goldman give her views on the subject of "Free Love," or of freedom against slavery in the realm of the affections. Her discourse, as on the previous occasion, was a well-considered and strongly-worded protest against the rule of authority, or of man-made law, whether of church or state, in the sex life of human beings. As usual in our meetings the lecture was followed by discussion, several physicians and one lawyer taking part therein. Our limited space prevents further notice here. The following brief notes by Miss Goldman, herself, will give the reader some idea of the work in which she is engaged. Her lectures are chiefly devoted to economic and governmental questions, and especially to the defense of the victims of unjust prosecution and imprisonment.

"Started on my tour the 2nd of September. Had four meetings in Providence and a conflict with the police authorities, but came out safely. Had two meetings in Boston. One in New Haven, Conn. One meeting in New York to protest against the Hazelton outrage. Four very successful meetings at Philadelphia. One near Pittsburg, at Monaca, Pa. Four meetings so far in Chicago and three more to address—besides the convention that I attended two days, but withdrew at the close of the second day because I came to the conclusion that the convention was only intended to serve a few petty political parties, but not the cause of the working class.

"The resolution that I introduced, and that according to my views was very tame, was tabled on account of its too radical utterances. This was sufficient proof for me that the delegates had no idea of the seriousness of the time, and after I had expounded my views and denounced the behavior of the delegates during the sessions, I withdrew, and with me many more of the radical element."

On next Wednesday evening, Oct. 13, a meeting will be held at Zepf's Hall, corner DesPlains and Lake streets, in the interest of the imprisoned editors of the "Firebrand,"—speakers, Emma Goldman, Max Baginsky, Lucy Parsons and M. Harman. From Chicago Miss Goldman will go to St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, and perhaps to the Pacific coast.

The Portland Outrage.

We had hoped, until too late for insertion in this week's issue, to receive more definite information in regard to the arrest and imprisonment of the editors and publishers of the "Firebrand," at Portland, Oregon, so that we could, with a better understanding of the facts, make an appeal to the friends of liberty and justice in behalf of these victims of church-state despotism—for such we are reasonably sure is the character of this prosecution.

If the information furnished by the report of the "Oregonian," from which report we quoted last week, be correct, then the prosecution is a persecution—a persecution for opinion's sake; neither more nor less. No crime is charged,—the accusation being that certain articles published in the "Firebrand" are "obscene." "Obscenity," as every one knows, is a law-made offense, not a crime, in the nature of things. Obscenity means that which is offensive to "purity or chastity of mind." It depends then upon what is in the mind of the beholder or hearer, as to whether any object or word is obscene or not. There is no obscenity except to the mind that perceives it as such. Naturally, then, the more filthy the mind of the beholder or hearer, the more obscenity he will perceive. Evil to him who evil thinks. To the mind of the pure minded philosopher there is no such thing as obscenity, in the technical sense. Perversion, abnormality, there is in abundance, but the philosopher, the rightly instructed person, whether adult or child, views these as the physician views the signs or symptoms of disease, and is in no danger of being corrupted by them. The cure for abnormality is better education and better environment, not suppressive or repressive laws.

At our Lucifer circle, Oct. 7, Emma Goldman made a brief appeal in behalf of the imprisoned editors, which appeal brought four dollars in cash. And now, in addition, we send five dollars as the contribution of Lucifer's office. Lucifer is itself often on the ragged edge, financially,—as a result of too much McKinley prosperity,—but the publishers of the "Firebrand," and especially our old-time friend, A. J. Pope, helped to keep Lucifer afloat while its editor was in prison, and now justice demands that we do what we can to help them in like circumstances even though we must struggle harder, and economize still more closely to do this.

Money can be sent to A. J. Pope or to Henry Addis, Portland, Oregon. It is sincerely to be hoped that all friends of liberty and of human progress will help in this fight for freedom of press and of public mail. "An injury to one is the concern of all." M. H.

Liberty the Means, not the End

Lucifer's management has often been criticized, sharply criticized, for devoting its space mainly to sexologic questions —to woman's emancipation from sex slavery and to discussion of "ideals" relating to sex. They say, "Fight for liberty, and all else will follow." "Given liberty, marriage will take care of itself." "The sex question is a matter of detail—a secondary or third rate question; industrial freedom, economic equity, is first in importance." "Let us work for liberty and not quarrel about chickens before they are hatched," etc., etc.

To these friendly critics I beg leave to make a brief reply:

First. Let me ask, What is liberty? and why do we want liberty? Is it a goddess to be worshiped? A master to be unquestioningly obeyed? Is it a good thing in itself considered? Is it an end or object to be desired as such? An object to fight for, to bleed and to die for?

To my thinking liberty is none of these. Liberty is a means to an end, not the end itself. Liberty is a matter of detail, not the main question. Liberty is not a good thing in or of itself, any more than knowledge is a good thing, in or of itself. Liberty is not a thing, at all!—not an entity at all. Liberty is simply a condition, a necessary condition, to or for growth, for development, for embodiment, for endowment, for differentiation or individualization of things—of entities or of realities.

The question, then, the "previous" question, is and must always be, "Why do we want liberty?" "What would we do with it?"—if we had it.

To illustrate: The Puritans wanted liberty—to worship God in their own way, and liberty to compel others to worship the Puritan's God, or get off the earth.

The slaveholder wanted liberty to do as he pleased with his own person and time, and liberty to use the person and the time of the black man and black woman, as he himself saw fit.

The Republican and Democratic plutocrats want liberty to exploit the earth of its treasures, and also liberty to exploit their fellow human beings and compel them by law to pay tribute to them—or get off the earth.

The average man wants liberty to make laws for himself, and liberty to deprive woman of the right to make laws for herself.

The statute moralist,—Christian and alleged Freethinker—wants marriage laws to give him the right to own the body of one woman, absolutely,—he will run his chances of illicit "variety" so long as one sex-slave is guaranteed to him by law—and he wants liberty to deprive all others of their right to live their own lives in their own way so long as they invade not the equal rights of others.

As some of us see it, then, the most important thing to be done, the next step to take in the social evolution, is to find out what Freedom is, what Liberty means, and then find out what we want it for—if it is desirable at all. Having found out what it means, and having definitely fixed in our minds why we want it, we can go to work with greater intelligence and with much better assurance that it will not be a curse to ourselves and to others when we get it.

With no desire to intimate that all the articles in this issue of Lucifer are not important, I wish to call particular attention, in this connection, to that of Adeline Champney, entitled "Where are the Women?" The history of woman's enslavement to man by and in marriage, is shown with a clearness and conciseness seldom equaled. No better answer to Lucifer's critics has been formulated, at least not for many months. "The first step is the emancipation of woman"—not simply removing her political disabilities, but removing all her disabilities, and especially giving her ownership of her person.

"It is one step for woman and three for the race." That is to say, human progress will then advance in geometric ratio—multiplex ratio—as compared to the speed at which it has advanced in all the past.

"Who shall then forge chains and who shall wear them?" When woman is no longer a slave she will cease to be the mother of slaves.

"Then Truth shall blossom in free minds and Happiness shall be the natural atmosphere of life." Glorious prophecy! Is it Utopian? Judging from what we know of natural causation we see no reason why this prophecy should not be realized, and more than realized, when once woman awakes to a sense of her power, and to a sense of the responsibility that goes with the possession of power. M. H.

Some Common Objections Considered.

BY LILLIAN HARMAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF LUCIFER:—The idea which you advocate is praiseworthy and it would, I believe do away with the thousands of heartaches and other inconveniences to which married life is, at present and from times immemorial, heir to. But there are very weighty considerations which, to my mind, seem to oppose the introduction of your principles, and before these considerations are properly decided and adjusted, free marriage will not and ought not be accepted nor practiced. The considerations which I have in view, are the loss of the identity of paternity and the question as to who shall support the children of the unknown fathers. The identity of paternity is necessary for hereditary purposes of the father's personal and real property, and, especially, is it necessary for the prevention of sexual intercourse between relatives of too near blood, as between father and daughter, son and mother or brother and sister, whose possible intercourse is repugnant to every sensible person. Then again, you will admit that it would be a great injustice to put the whole burden of supporting the little ones upon the mother alone; for a person, even a man of means, will refuse to support a child not of his own flesh and blood. Kindly explain me these two questions, and my friends and myself will work for this idea. Respectfully yours,
LOUIS PLESHET.

Having had the benefit of some experience and considerable observation, I take the liberty to answer the above objections. First, the assumption that only lack of opportunity to associate with other men renders it possible for a woman to be sure of the paternity of her child, is equivalent to one of two assertions: (a) that men are so savage in their desires that they will not respect the wishes of a woman who is not branded as the property of some other man; or, (b) that women have no choice but would, regardless of consequences, accept any man in that relation who might offer himself, and that the mother herself has no desire to know the paternity of her child. For no one will deny that it is possible for any woman, even when sustaining varied relations, to so manage her love affairs that she can be positive who is her child's father, if she chooses to so manage them. To deny this is to assert that women are utterly ignorant of physiology. The birth certificate is a much more sensible provision than the marriage certificate, and a woman is not obliged to possess the latter in order to avail herself of the former. To me it seems well to place the child's name, together with the name of its father and mother, on record for future reference. As to inheritance, I am not aware of the existence of any law forbidding a man leaving his property to others than his "legitimate" children. In fact there are other and even better ways by which the inheritance question can be disposed of, than by will. Space is limited, so I do not go into detail; but if Mr. Pleshet, though a lawyer, or any one else interested in this question, is unable to think of any such methods, I will cheerfully tell of ways in which details have been arranged to the satisfaction of all concerned.

So long as children come into the world at haphazard, without "visible means of support," there will probably be trouble, regardless of the existence or non-existence of a marriage certificate in the possession of the parents.

Marriage is an insurance concern which does not meet its liabilities. It guarantees support to the wife and children in return for the submission and loss of liberty of choice of the wife. But in case of non-support on the part of the husband, or in the event of his disability through disease or death, what becomes of the boasted "protection"? In how many, many cases does not the wife, after having borne more children than she desired, find herself forced, to support not only herself and children but often the husband whom society has promised should protect her! See the army of pale, haggard women in their shabby dresses and ragged shoes, their skirts pinned about their waists, down on their knees scrubbing the floors of office buildings, hotels and restaurants in any city. Does any one fancy they voluntarily choose such laborious, ill-paid and contemptuously-regarded occupation? Ask them why they are there—as I have done—and you will find that the great majority are there because they have large families of little children to support, and have never received education or training fitting them for other than unintelligent physical labor.

While it may be true that nothing in this world is certain, except "death and taxes," I claim that intelligent forethought in reproduction will minimize the risks far more than law-enforced marriage ever has done or ever can do; that while in marriage some people do exercise prudence and grant liberty, it is in spite of, not because of, the marriage. I hold that it is impossible for Mr. Pleshet or myself or any other individual or aggregation of individuals to devise any marriage scheme which will fit every case. With the individuals most immediately concerned should rest the responsibility of making their own arrangements, as upon them falls the greatest suffering if those arrangements prove unsatisfactory. Freedom is the natural, the essential condition of growth. Without freedom of choice "natural selection" is impossible and evolution is retarded.

Whether a man shall help support the child of a woman he loves, is a question for him and the mother to decide. As a matter of fact, if a man loves a woman he naturally feels an interest in her children, unless he is of that insanely jealous temperament which forbids the "loved" one to have any other interest in life. The same is true of women.

But the statement that a man "will refuse to support a child not of his own flesh and blood" is an amusing instance of how prejudice against the new will blind even the trained analytical mind to the plainest facts. Many men do not only support, but love, the children of their wives by former marriages; the children of their friends; and even the children of utter strangers.

Demise of James Gaylord Clarke.

Under date of Sept. 28, Dr. Morse, of 621 O'Farrell street, San Francisco, writes us:

"DEAR BROTHER IN FREEDOM'S CAUSE: The grand singer of our Israel, James G. Clarke, is singing the New, New Song of the perfect freedom of the 'Land O' the Leal.' He left us on Friday, Sept. 17 at 4 P. M. Will you write him a fitting obituary for the 'New Time?' We hold memorial services here for him and will sing him a tribute of praise. Urge people to send more money to pay his doctor bills and publish his latest poems. Address Mrs. Havens, 124 E. Colorado St., Pasadena, Calif. Yours sincerely, CORA A. MORSE."

Having known something of the genius and the worth of the poet-singer whose transition is herein chronicled I heartily second the suggestion that Lucifer's readers send a dollar or more to the address named, and get one or more copies of the book that is already published, and thereby help to publish more poems from the pen of one of America's sweetest singers and most earnest workers in behalf of the poor and disinherited.

As additional testimony of the merit of these poems and the worthiness of their author the following letter is gladly inserted:

FRIEND HARMAN: I write to thank you and Dr. Cora A. Morse for finding James Gaylord Clarke for me. For years it has been a puzzle to me why his beautiful poems have not been universally read and admired. I am a materialist and an atheist, yet I never tire reading Clarke's "Leona," one of the most, if not the most spiritual and beautiful of poems I read.

> I would not bend the pliant knee
> That thrift might closley follow fawning;
> No king, no priest, no God for me,
> Not faith's dark night, but reason's morning.
> When Nature speaks, if man will hear,
> With heart sincere and dutiful,
> He'll worship naught, but still revere,
> The True, the Good, the Beautiful.

The love of Truth makes me a materialist, but the Good and Beautiful would, had I Clarke's genius, make me a poet. As it is, my heart my feelings, echo the sweet, hopeful, inspiring words:

> "Our love is not lavished in vain;
> Each germ in the future will blossom to bliss,
> And the forms that we love and the lips that we kiss
> Never shrink at the shadow of pain.
>
> But the light of this faith I am taught
> That my labor is only begun,
> In the strength of this hope have I struggled and fought
> With the legions of wrong till my owner has caught
> The gleam of Eternity's sun."

In my library may be found Burns, Poe, Moore and Whittier, but no sweeter singer than James G. Clarke. The few poems of his that I have read breathe the true poetic spirit and I shall not rest until "Poetry and Song" adds its wealth to my library treasures. Let every lover of humanity extend a brotherly hand to our poet friend and "brighten his brief moments now." Fraternally yours,

HARRY HOOVER.

501 Preble Ave., Allegheny City, Pa.

I have no doubt there are many women among us, whom we treat with scorn and call prostitutes, who have become such through maternal or filial devotion so true and unselfish that angels, looking from above and seeing their motives, would pronounce their deed consecration rather than prostitution.—"Prodigal Daughter."

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LIX.

Thus Milton Nesbit left Maple Lawn and the charmed circle it contained, and another day brought him to old familiar scenes; brought him to the home where he had loved and suffered. It was Annie who opened the door in answer to his ring. Pale-faced, with a trace of tears about the eyes, with a gasp she caught her breath as she saw and recognized the man before her. He saw the effect of his appearance upon her and a great pity welled up in his heart for her. Calmly he greeted her with,

"Will you not bid me enter?"

Hesitatingly she did so; speaking never a word, only stepping back she threw open the door of the well-known little parlor. Within its cool shade he took both her hands in his,

"What is it, Annie? Trust me—tell me all. I have not come to censure you but to see that you are cared for. Has that scape-grace brother of mine—"

"Don't," she said, "don't blame him. He may be faulty, but he loves me. Ah, yes,—he love me more than I deserve. I made him reckless with my foolish cravings. Every wish of mine was satisfied. I could not realize that ten thousand dollars was not a limitless fortune, and when Robert, always delicate, broke down altogether we were almost penniless. I tried then to repay him. I nursed him and I worked for him. All the pretty things he gave me I again sold, but I am afraid I can not retain him. He is slipping away from my grasp, and oh! I love him so, I love him so."

Almost choking, the words broke from her in a smothered sob. Her hands went up to her face and the tears trickled down through the thin, white fingers as the sobs shook her frame. A lump rose in Milton's throat,

"Take me to him!"

"You will say nothing harsh or unkind?"

She asked it with a fearful tremor in her voice. He took one trembling hand in one of his, the other with a gentle caressing motion he laid on the brown head,

"When was I ever so unkind to you that you should fear me now? Lead on, little girl. He is my brother, and he is sick!"

With an effort she checked her sobs and dried her tears.

"Come," she said. He followed her up the stairway into what had once been their joint bedroom, and there reclining upon a lounge at the window, his eyes wandering wearily, lay Robert. Pain and care had made sad havoc with the delicate frame. Annie glided to him and knelt at his side laying her cheek to his hand.

"Robert," she said softly, "Robert, someone has come to see you!"

Turning from the open window his eyes fell upon the brother they both had so wronged; his face became ghastly,

"Milton, you here!"

Milton stepped forward,

"Softly, brother—no undue excitement. I bear you no ill will. I have learned to realize that it was not all your fault. It was all the outcome of circumstances over which none of us had any control. I have not come to censure you, but to look after your welfare. Without means, how can Annie give you the care you need?"

Robert scarcely could believe he heard aright.

"You do not hate me, then—me, the destroyer of your happiness? Oh, you mock me!"

"No! I do not mock you. True, you both have caused me suffering, but it was only the cleansing fire needed to purify the grosser part of my nature. I don't blame you now—it was only natural. What is it your doctor prescribes for you? I want to see you get well and strong, and you can not do so with the load of anxiety I know your heart is burdened with."

Annie bowed her head and wept, and Robert was too weak to restrain the tears that would start.

"O, Milton," said Annie, "you are good; you are noble; how can we ever repay your kindness?"

"Tush! tush! little woman; say no more about it, but answer my question. What is it the doctor prescribes?"

"Oh, he prescribes what is far beyond our means," sobbed Annie. "An ocean voyage may do wonders for him, the doctor says; and a tour in foreign lands. The sunny skies of Italy, the mountain breezes of Switzerland—a summer's sojourn there might give him such health as has never been his."

Milton stepped to the nearest window and gazed meditatively into—nothing. This would take more money than he had at his command, although he had quite a snug sum saved with which many necessities could be procured for the sick brother, but that was all. Should he call for aid upon the friend who had already been all too generous to him? Why not? Did he not know that his call would not be in vain? and was not the life of his brother at stake, and also the happiness of the woman who had once been all in all to him? These facts were now uppermost in his mind; all else was forgotten. Yes! he would ask Owen to aid him. So turning from the window he said:

"Cheer up, Annie, Robert shall have his voyage and tour, and you shall go with him. And when you return I hope to see the roses blooming in your cheeks. Possibly it may be wisest for you to remain abroad several years, spending your summers in the mountain air, your winters in the sunny south, in balmy Italy. In return I only wish to be kept posted as to all of your movements. I want regular reports as to the state of your health and when you are ready to return I may have something to tell you which I think will surprise you as much as you have been surprised today."

In this strain he went on leaving them neither time nor opportunity to say much. Preparations were immediately begun. A telegram was sent to Owen. In a few days the required amount in ready cash was at their disposal, and two weeks from the day Milton first appeared at the side of his brother he saw him and Annie safe on deck the steamer "Anchor," surrounded with every comfort money could buy.

"Be judicious with your supply of money," was his parting injunction. "Let past experiences be a warning. It is to regain your health you are taking this voyage. Remember and be wise."

And Robert's answer had been,

"I will! so help me the memory of my noble brother."

As Milton bade Annie good-bye, clasping her hand in his, he for a moment looked deep into the starry eyes, then bending he touched his lips tenderly to hers. Thus he left them. "Will it be for their good?" he asked himself. "Ah, well; time will tell!" Twenty-four hours later he held Alice in his arms, pressing burning kisses upon her sweet lips, while Lawrence saw and understood all. For Lawrence, in company with the others, had returned during Milton's absence, and could well afford to smile, for had not a pair of serious gray eyes smiled him a welcome which had the promise of heaven in it?

What had been the result of the prospecting tour? A rare, sweet spot of Mother Earth had been found, with just enough of rugged wildness to show to advantage nature's grandeur. Mountains in the distance; a rolling, undulating country; a winding river and the glassy bosom of a lake. Last, but not least, the towers and chimney pots of a distant city. All this could be seen from the rounded knoll upon which the ideal co-operative home was to be built, which knoll gently sloped to its base, around which wound a merry rippling brooklet.

Thence a level meadow land which could be laid out in lovely lawns, parks and drives. Still farther on patches of woodland to the right and left; meadows with lowing cattle; a charming spot indeed, surrounded by nature's loveliest scenes. Only about ten minutes walk to the little station-house south of the knoll, where almost every hour of the day trains passed and stopped, and which in forty minutes would carry you to the heart of the city. But it was not until the early days of August that ground was broken and work begun upon the mansion that was to stand a pattern and a beacon for the generations to come. The winter months put an end to the work and the long stormy evenings were again spent as before. But again spring returned and again the work was resumed.

At the same time hot-houses were built; a vineyard laid out; orchards planted with rare fruit trees, and berry patches cultivated. Grounds were laid out; drives made; miniature lakes appeared; grassy knolls; groups of trees; charming arbors; inviting summer-houses; cozy retreats and lovers' nooks. To produce all this meant work—work to many willing hands; bread to hungry mouths. Owen paid the bills with generous hand, while each day at lunch time the workers enjoyed an hour or two of repose and shelter from the sun.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. C. Harris, New Denver, British Columbia:—Through the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Kerr Lucifer is becoming pretty well known in these parts and is very much appreciated.

C. M. Moe, Spokane, Wash.:—I enclose one dollar; fifty cents to renew on Lucifer, the balance to apply on the "Adult" from No. 2. It is really astonishing to see so little of the true liberal spirit among these so-called liberals. We shall hope they are growing to deserve the name they prate so much of. Your mode of expression should be a good example for all of us.

F. Gorton, Fenton, Mich.:—I need not tell you I want Lucifer. Its light has made me calm, peaceful and willing to take my long rest. My eighty-two years warn me that the end is near. "Hope's starlight shines through darkest night." "Hilda's Home" is better and better. The world would be better for reading it. "Rosa" is a trump! Vive la "Hilda's Home"!

Mrs. S. E. A., San Jose, Calif.:—The story, "Hilda's Home," is just grand. A neighbor lady is quite as deeply interested as I am. When I cannot get away she trudges to the post office to get the paper. If you publish the story in book form we will take at least three copies, as three ladies here say they will take a copy each. Discontinue the paper—I cannot get the money to pay for it. I should have written you sooner, but could not bear the thought of missing an issue. I will pay what I owe as soon as possible. I am a free lover to the core, but not a free luster. I despise the man—or the woman—who is a sex maniac—living only on the animal plane, and trying to cloak his or her sensuality by taking the name of free lover. To me there is something inexpressibly pure and exalting in the freedom to love whatever is lovable. The thought spiritualizes my entire being. To be tied for life to an unloving or unlovable mate, by man-made law, perhaps at the same time loving another, is awful, and yet how few are brave enough to break the bonds of slavery!

"A Physician in the House." By Dr J. H. Greer.

This book is up to date in every particular.

It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.

It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.

It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.

It teaches simple common sense methods in accordance with Nature's laws.

It does not endorse dangerous experiments with the surgeon's knife.

It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.

It is entirely free from technical rubbish.

It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.

It teaches how typhoid and other fevers can be both prevented and cured.

680.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

It gives the best known treatment for LaGrippe, Diphtheria, Catarrh, Consumption, Appendicitis, and every other disease.

It is the best medical book for the home yet produced.

It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.

It tells you how to live that you may prolong life.

It opposes medical fads of all kinds and makes uncompromising war on vaccination and the use of anti-toxine.

It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.

It has sixteen colored plates showing different parts of the human body.

The chapter on Painless Widwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.

It has a large number of valuable illustrations.

The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.

It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine and Water as medicines.

It contains valuable information for the married.

It advises people with regard to marriage—tells who should and who should not marry.

Those contemplating marriage should get this book at once.

This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it.

Address all orders to M. Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes,	.75
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
"actical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.10
a Hell and the Way Out; H. F. Allen,	.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury,
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.10
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoke,	.05
Vistæ Vitæ; M. T. Martin,	.10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.,	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.01
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	.25
Degeneracy; C. L. James,	.25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Causes of Hard Times; Chavannes,	.05
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.10
Henry George Examined; J. K. Ingalls,	.05
Christianity and Progress; G. W. Foote,	.10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.
Her Sinister and Left Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone portraits of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages.	.75
Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe.	.25
The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution.	.25
The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper,	.50
Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference.	.15
Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker.	.25
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price,	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " "	.50
A Sex Revolution, " "	.25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " "	.75
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth,	2.00
When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations.	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen.	.15
Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies	.05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 25 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEA!.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Free Inkhorns and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Electricity,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

THE ADULT.

A journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Bedborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League, Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscene Jews and Distracted Sons, by Leighton Pagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

We all need comradeship of thought.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of Ignorance and serpentine Superstition. The most fearless, radical, and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free. Box 94, Portland, Oregon.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 131 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co. Room 1035, Unity Building; Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 131 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

PRICE, 5 CENTS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 42. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 20, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 681

At Napoleon's Tomb.

BY WILLIAM FRANCIS BARNARD.

Surrounded by rent banners, in their gloom
Napoleon's bones crumble in mold and must,
What guerdon has he, dead, who living, thrust
All wills aside, till nations feared their doom?
The world, which all but knelt to make him room,
Marveling o'er the wonder of his lust,—
What yields it now unto his silent dust?
The grudged glory of a splendid tomb.
Honored? These things for aye attend him here:
Two shadows, which were once of awful form,
Alive in those who fought or were ensigned;
Dark monstrous memories lingering year on year,
Born of his blasting progress like a storm:
The hate, and trembling horror of mankind!

Paris, Sept., 1897.

Plumb-Line Penographs.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The "American" is the most patient—or stupid—of men under oppression. Of course he will howl vociferously when there is no occasion for it, but when it comes to real outrage he is either silent or takes part against the victim. At the New York Debating Club the other night, it was most humiliating to a native American to contrast the reception accorded by Germans, Italians, Spaniards, Russians and other "ignorant foreigners" to the persecution of Pope and Addis in Oregon with the silence of the "American" press and people. These men and women were unfamiliar with Comstockism save as a name, and it was hard for them to realize that the Pope and Addis case is only the latest in a long series of similar horrible outrages. They thought that because there was no obscenity in the "Firebrand" articles, the paper could not be arbitrarily suppressed and its editors imprisoned, and it required a great deal of talk to convince them that it is a common occurrence in the United States for books and papers to be confiscated, even without legal process, and dealers and editors imprisoned when the publications complained of are no more "obscene" than is the "Firebrand." They were amazed, horrified, indignant. "But where is your 'free press'?" inquired a young man. The answer is, In the imagination of fools and the pretenses of demagogues. For the proof of it, take notice of the utter silence of the "great dailies" in this very instance. Where is their amazement, their horror, their indignation? When they are not doltish they are knavish; when they are not puritanical they are mercenary.

* * *

After much talking and long thinking over the Pope and Addis arrests, and Comstockism in general, a "foreign" laboring man said: "I think the reason Comstock can do as he does is because the most of the people are with him." That is the sad truth in a nut-shell. Comstock incarnates the spirit of Puritanism, the spirit of anti-naturalism, the spirit of asceticism. (And it should never be forgotten that asceticism is, historically, the twin of sexual inversion and the parent of sexual invasion.) Christianity has made the forces and organs of reproduction the synonyms of shame, in the minds of our people, and while under the domination of that creed, directly or indirectly, they will never tolerate open and healthful discussion of sexual problems. Whether they are church members, mere "worldlians," or nominal Freethinkers, does not matter—so long as they cling to supernatural moralism they will damn whoever handles sex in an unconventional manner. With minds thus poisoned, thus diseased, they will always hate the plain exposure of crime worse than the crime itself. The law would not touch the husband who cruelly wounded his wife, but it sent Mr. Harman to prison for printing a serious account of the marital outrage, and the public opinion back of the law execrated Markland for writing the account. So in the case of the Barcelona tortures—our papers thought them not worth mentioning until the responsible author of them fell under the hand of the avenger, and then they carefully eliminated certain statements which continental journals had printed as a matter of course, and now the "Firebrand" is suppressed, one of its offenses being the honest reproduction of the record, which, by the way, contained no word that could offend any rational man or woman. While the majority of the American people are the active or passive supporters of Comstock's "movement in favor of ignorance" it is useless to hope that any legislative body will repeal or even modify—in the right direction—the iniquitous statutes under which Bennett, Heywood, Foote, Harman and Waisbrooker have suffered, and which now hold Pope and Addis in their clutches. For decades, if not for centuries, there must be waged a campaign of education against the supernatural basis of morals, and most Freethinkers no less than practically all the rest of the population of the world must be our pupils. Sex is a foundation fact in life and there never will be healthy individual and social life until sex is studied, talked of, and written of without fear and without reproach.

* * *

One must ask the sticklers for legality why the "Firebrand" is denied access to the mails before a court has passed upon the charges made against its publishers? Even if it had been proved that a certain issue of the paper was "obscene," how could that adjudication shut subsequent issues from the mails? But no such proof has yet been produced in court. Pope and Addis are simply held awaiting trial, and until they are tried they must be assumed to be innocent, else there would be no use for a trial. While ethically no one had any authority to arrest these men and forbid the mailing of the paper, legally the suppression of the "Firebrand" is as great a travesty on justice. The seizure of the publication is plain vulgar theft.

* * *

In New York City recently a Mrs. Marguis was arrested by two policemen on the charge that she had accosted them. Such arrests are one of the most common crimes of our policemen. Mr. Marguis protested against this wanton arrest of his wife.

For this inexcusable exhibition of natural feeling he was savagely beaten by the policemen, and then arrested. When the case came before Magistrate Deuel it was discovered that the woman who was accused of saying in English certain things to the policemen could speak no English! Thereupon the magistrate discharged the two, saying that the arrest of Mrs. Marguis was a "mistake." The "Evening World" responds: "It was obviously nothing of the kind. It was an infamous outrage for which the policemen should be sent to state prison. The outrage was the result of a pernicious system, and that system stands condemned today in the minds of all honest men. But none the less the policemen who committed it ought to be punished with all the rigor of the law." The difficulty in the case is that the "law" has no very severe "rigor" for men, officials or private citizens, who commit crimes in the name of conventional moralism. If they happen to victimize an "innocent" person their act is passed by as a "mistake" which was probably unavoidable in the prosecution of a vigorous crusade in behalf of "good morals." As the "Evening World" says, it is the system which is wrong, and the system is the legitimate product of the twin evils of supernaturalism and authoritarianism. These are the snakes that must be starved to death.

* * *

At the Casino theater in New York the management has just issued a ukase forbidding other males than relatives to meet the chorus girls at the door at night. The girls must go away alone or accompanied by females or male relatives only. Now begins the fabrication of "cousins" and "uncles" and "brothers." And the manufacture of male and female hypocrites, i. e., liars must necessarily keep pace with the fabrication of male relatives. This is invariably the effect of suppressive moralism. In the eyes of Grundy, any vice is less offensive than unsanctioned sexual relations, or even the mere suspicion of such relations or of associations that may lead thereto.

* * *

A New Jersey justice has decided that if a person is injured while riding a bicycle on Sunday he can not recover damages, no matter how gross the carelessness nor how clear the maliciousness of the person responsible for the accident. This is logically a license to commit murder. However, if the injured person was going for medical aid or to church he can recover for his injuries. Another premium on hypocrisy! This musty old New Jersey law, resurrected and enforced today, proves, of course, that the church no longer dominates the state! And it also establishes the fact that the American people love liberty more fervently than life. We are the richest in boasts, the most poverty-stricken in deeds, of all alleged civilized peoples on the surface of the globe. We are hypnotized by the reputation of our fathers.

* * *

Now and then a man shows he has a little of the old genuine grit. At Denverside, an East St. Louis suburb, the congregation of Rev. R. J. Kellogg is small and poor. It had not the money to pay for the building of a parsonage, and so decided to buy the lumber and then do the work itself, each man contributing his share, as in the old house- and barn-raising days. But soon along came the walking delegate of the carpenters' union and ordered Mr. Kellogg to discharge all non-union workmen. Mr. Kellogg naturally replied that he could not discharge his neighbors, who were in that manner contributing their dues, and, what was more, he would not if he could. One night after that the parson was at work alone when he was assaulted by a gang of seven men and forced to quit. Now he keeps a shot-gun at his side and consequently is left in undisturbed possession of the premises.

* * *

In Mississippi, on October 6, Henry Crower, a Negro, was taken from the Hernando court room by a mob and lynched. He was accused of having "accomplished the ruin of fifteen-year-old Dovie Ferguson." To "accomplish the ruin" of a girl does not mean to ravish her. It is an orthodox technical phrase, descriptive of the association of an unmarried girl or woman with a man. She may be fifty years of age, and yet she is "ruined" in the moralistic vernacular if she have not secured the consent of some parson or justice of the peace. It is more than suspected that a very large percentage of the rapes of which the negroes of the South are accused and for the committing or alleged committing of which they are put to death in various cruel ways, are in reality simply free associations to which the women in the case have as readily consented as the men. It is not often, however, that the telegraph is permitted to "let the cat out of the bag" as in the present instance. The treatment of the sexual question by mobs in the South, like its treatment by court and Comstock societies in the North, is according to what Mr. John M. Robertson calls "the traditional religious ethic, of which the type is the tabu of savagery," and in direct contrast with which is "the ethic of reason, which seeks to solve conflicts of moral bias by the tests of utility and sympathy." Federal judges and jurors doing the dirty work of the Comstocks and McAfees are at one with the Hernando mobocrats in cordial detestation of the "ethic of reason" in the realm of sex.

Mr. Ruedebusch Rejoins

To the Editor of Lucifer: A "free platform" is a good thing, if it is used only for decent discussions of important subjects, but it seems to me that an article like that by Mr. Walker in No 679 ("The Two Sides of the Shield") should have been promptly rejected by you. It is nothing but an acrimonious attack upon my personality, for which there was no justifying provocation. However, as you deemed it advisable to accept this, I must ask you, for justice' sake, to publish my answer also:

I must begin with an explanation: The "Call" was sent to me by Lillian Harman. I returned it to her together with a letter in which I explained my reasons for declining to sign and requested her to forward this letter to Mr. Walker. Some time thereafter Mr. Walker informed us that he had heard but from one dissident and I had to suppose, of course, that I was the one.

And now let me expose the shallow sophistries with which Mr. Walker tries to prove my unreasonableness:

1. He devotes almost a column to demonstrating the fact that there is "nothing antagonistic to the New Ideal in the Call for Concerted Action,"—although neither I nor any one I know of has ever disputed that fact! I never doubted it and can add that I do not intend to antagonize his plan for concerted action any further than to express the opinion that I do not believe in its efficacy and do not consider a repetition of a free love movement of this kind practicable or advisable. (For reasons see my last article).

2. He ridicules the vanity of claiming certain ideas as being exclusively my own,—while I have never thought of making such a claim. I happen to know positively that Mr. Walker has read the paragraph in my book (page 136) which concludes as follows: "I certainly do not care to claim the honor of a new discovery"! The fact is that the question, how old or new my ideas and propositions are, is a matter of utter indifference to me.

3. He dares to offer to Lucifer's readers the mean and untruthful insinuation that I preach one thing and practice another. Read pages 292 to 295 of my book and you will know that the acceptance of the New Ideal does not call for a legal divorce or the dissolution of an economical or a comradeship contract in the case of a couple who were legally married before their emancipation. That the majority of the good Mayvillians, like Mr. Walker, cannot comprehend the immense importance of the change in our relation, is probably due to the fact that they also decline to argue with me! It is awful, of course, to be called "a respectable married man," but if I can make all true New Idealists understand the situation, I will bear the stigma quite bravely.

With the discussion of these three subjects Mr. Walker fills an entire page of Lucifer. Is it possible that any argumentation (in reference to my assertions in No. 677 offered by him) could be of less value than these utterances of his?

I hope that you, dear editor, will decree henceforth that Lucifer's columns are too valuable to be used for such utterly "profitless" personal attacks. Emil F. Ruedebusch.

[Referring to the above I am inclined to think that Friend Ruedebusch takes Mr. Walker's criticisms much too seriously. I read most of the offending article, in copy or in proof, and did not get the idea that it was a personal attack upon Mr. Ruedebusch. Whether the arguments used were pertinent or applicable to the subject in hand, is a matter that the readers of Lucifer are presumed to be able to judge for themselves. It seems impossible to carry on discussions in regard to matters of human conduct without bringing in, more or less, personal illustrations. That all should try to avoid offensive personalities goes without saying. The following paragraph by Lillian Harman will show to some extent the causes of what now seems an unfortunate misunderstanding:

"Had I been in the office when the previous articles of this discussion were published, one misapprehension would have been avoided. When Mr. Walker sent the 'Call' to me he requested me to forward it to Mr. Ruedebusch, which I did. It was not returned until several weeks later, when it came with a letter explaining that Mr. Ruedebusch had been absent on his vacation and his mail had not been forwarded to him. He asked me to forward the letter to Mr. Walker, but I, being very busy, delayed writing for some days, and before I wrote, Mr. Walker mentioned the fact that he had learned the cause of Mr. Ruedebusch's unusual delay, and as I thought that explanation the most important part of the letter I did not send it. So Mr. Ruedebusch's inference that he was Mr. Walker's 'one dissident' was natural. Of course I am very sorry that my neglect has been the cause of this misunderstanding."

Without casting censure upon anyone I would now request that the personal part of this controversy be allowed to rest.
M. H.]

A Queer Ideal.

by A. Warran.

I am glad that Mr. Ruedebusch has undertaken to explain to the readers of Lucifer, the meaning of the title of his book. If his definition of the new ideal is less perspicuous than the average reader might desire I think he has proven beyond controversy that he is not a free lover. He believes in freedom, in general, and is with us once and forever, against any and all compulsory, legal laws; but with applying the principle to the sexual relations of men and women he is not concerned.

We cannot charge our author with inconsistency in this, for he goes on to allege, emphatically, that new idealists want no sexual relations whatever. By this he does not mean that there is to be no sexual intercourse between the sexes, but only that such intercourse shall not involve relations of any kind. New idealists will desire private interviews with their friends of the opposite sex, and these interviews may result in sexual enjoyments, with one or with many; but in any case there is no reason why society should or could know of it.

Of course, there must be no parentage, or if there be parentage there must be no paternal relation; for that would reveal a prior sexual relation, and would subject the parties to the liability of being labelled as sexual partners or mates, a result which a new idealist detests most fervently.

As a basis for social reform these conceptions are unquestionably new. Always, since the dawn of history, the practice of the the male sex has been very much in accordance with this ideal; but it has remained for Mr. Ruedebusch, after many thousand years of the unhappy experience of the race, to discover the beauty and desirability of such a life.

The ideal of the free lover is different. He believes in the sexual relation. He may believe that sexual intercourse may be indulged with many, without costing more than the added pleasure is worth; or he may think it pays to reserve the most exquisite expression of love, to express the central, most exquisite love; but with whichever class he may align himself he insists that these manifestations shall be forever voluntary and reciprocal. Free lovers do not advocate monogamic relations, nor polygamic, for the reason that we do not believe in marriage. We have regarded freedom as the new ideal in love. We have thought ourselves in advance of the big world, which still clings to the notion of enforced relations; but it seems we are old fogies, after all. The real new, the very newest ideal is to discard all sexual relations and go in for a good time, being careful to conceal our doings with the other sex, in order to avoid complications and unpleasant responsibilities.

It is not my aim to criticise Mr. Ruedebusch without reading his book. I have no such queer notion. I never proposed to do so. In my former article, I was discussing the variety question. I did not have to read his book in order to inform myself on that subject, and my allusion to his book cannot be construed as a criticism. I do not need to criticise Mr. Ruedebusch. A clear statement of his views is all that the readers of Lucifer will require. If I have not stated them clearly I trust that, on another trial, he may be able to do so.

Call for the Congress of 1897.

To the Secularists and Freethinkers of the United States:

You are hereby requested to meet in Convention at Hardman Hall, in the City of New York, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, the 19th, 20th and 21st of November.

Friends: We shall meet in this Congress under favorable conditions. The times are auspicious. Heresy is becoming popular, even in ministerial circles. The spirit of Secularism is pervading our ecclesiastical institutions, our literature, our whole social life.

Religion, giving way before continual bombardment and repeated assaults, has abandoned the strongholds of dogmatic theology, and is seeking refuge in the fields of humanitarianism. It may be that it is in this way that it is gradually to disappear—by becoming absorbed in broader phases of thought and action. In the meantime, we must continue the work before us.

It is important that Freethinkers should combine. With so many examples around us, illustrating the power of organization and of combined effort, it would be the height of folly in us not to have the benefit of such methods. There are important questions demanding our attention. The God in the Constitution Amendment was again introduced into Congress at the last session. Our National Association, with its allies fought this Amendment before the Congressional Committees and, for the time being, defeated it. The Amendment has been reinstated, backed up by a petition which is claimed to have attached to it the names of millions of signers. We must meet the conspirators again the coming winter. The people must be aroused to the impending danger, and educated in the principles of liberty and justice. The Sabbath question, and that of the Bible in the public schools, also require consideration. The efforts of bigotry and intolerance must be thwarted wherever possible.

In our discussions there should be the broadest latitude in the expression of opinion. There must be absolute freedom, subject only to such regulations as may be necessary to conducting the Congress in an orderly manner, and with due regard to the rights of all the members.

Let us meet and consult in a spirit of friendship, of conciliation, and of cordial co-operation. If we do this, we shall have a grand and glorious Congress; from which we shall retire refreshed in spirit, confirmed in our convictions, and stimulated to more effective action and to greater achievement during the coming year.

E. E. Reichwald, Secretary. — C. B. Waite, Acting President

Otto Wettstein, Treasurer

Vice Presidents:

T. B. Wakeman, New York
John E. Remsburg, Kansas
Franklin Steiner, Iowa
Pearl W. Geer, Oregon

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 Congress St., Thursday evening, Oct. 21.

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$315.25
J. K. Ingalls,	11.00

The "previously acknowledged" sums have been subscribed, not all paid, as yet—nearly one half are promised to be paid when the sum of five hundred dollars shall have been subscribed to the fund to extend Lucifer's influence by sending the paper on trial, three or six months, to those who are not yet acquainted with its work, but who would probably become interested if their attention could be directed thereto. The money received up to date on this fund has been expended in the manner just mentioned and while it is too soon to look for much by way of return for the investment we have reason to believe that the results will amply repay the outlay.

A part of the amount subscribed to this fund has been in contributions and promises of books in our line of work. J. K. Ingalls, for instance, has sent his books "Social Wealth" and "Unrevealed Religion," and now he offers to fill orders for his latest work, "Reminiscences of an Octogenarian," for the benefit of the "Extension Fund." The price of this book is forty cents for flexible cloth cover, and twenty cents in paper binding. The long life and extended observations of this veteran worker are of peculiar and lasting value to freethinkers and social reformers.

From the originator of the "Extension Fund" plan, the following is received just as we go to press:

"I am much pleased to see the good response made by our friends for financial aid to Lucifer's circulation. I now send the other fifty dollars promised, feeling sure that your supporters will go on and complete the five hundred dollars desired. No persons better deserve a helping hand in humanity's work than you and Lillian."

The Oregon Arrests.

Considerable space in this issue is taken up with protests against the arrest of the publishers and editors of the "Firebrand" at Portland, Oregon, and in appeals for help to defend them in court and to keep the prosecuted paper afloat. From a private letter from Mr. Pope, and from other sources of information, we learn that he is now alone in the jail, and that Addis and Isaac are out under bond for their appearance at court. In Chicago a well attended meeting of sympathizers with the persecuted editors was held at Uhlich's Hall on Wednesday evening, Oct. 13. The chief speakers were Emma Goldman, Max Baginsky and Mrs. Lucy Parsons. A little was raised for the defense, after paying ten dollars for the use of the hall—just how much I did not learn. Again we ask all who would preserve the remnant of liberty we now possess, to send what they can to sustain the persecuted paper. Money can be sent to Henry Addis or to A. J. Pope, Portland, Ore., or to this office.

The Arrest of A. J. Pope and Henry Addis.

BY CHAS. B. COOPER.

As soon as the news reached New York of this latest attempt at press censorship the necessity of making some prompt remittance of money to sustain the "Firebrand" group and provide for the defense of the imprisoned comrades was felt. The New York Debating Club (Anarchist-Communist) gave up its Sunday evening meeting of Oct. 3 to the consideration of the steps it was necessary to take.

Previous to the receipt of this news the Jewish groups of Anarchist-Communists and "unorthodox" of various kinds had fortunately arranged to hold their annual Yom Kippur meeting (under auspices of the New York Debating Club this year.) The proceeds were already meant to go to the "Firebrand" group, and it was fortunate that the arrangement for the meeting had already been made.

The meeting was held Tuesday evening, Oct. 5, at Clarendon Hall, and was largely attended and a success from many points of view. It brought the English speaking and foreign speaking elements together better than hitherto, which was one of the first objects. It was a thoroughly free thought affair and brought Anarchists, Communists, Freethinkers and Social Radicals together for mutual help on the underlying principle of Freethought.

T. B. Wakeman, as a representative Freethinker, was the first speaker and spoke in English on the primary necessity of freedom of thought in the work of freeing the world from the various forms of slavery under which we live and of the importance from an evolutionary point of view of this new fashion of turning old "holy days" of gloom, austerity and horror into the modern "holidays" of recreation, instruction and joy.

John Edelman and H. Kelly also spoke on appropriate topics and both introduced the subject of the Portland arrests, and made earnest appeals for help for defense of the imprisoned comrades.

Dr. H. Solotaroff and Dr. M. Cohn also spoke, alas in Jewish, so I cannot speak as to the matter of their addresses except to say that from their reception it must have been very much to the point. I. Rudash was the chairman.

Beside the usual entrance fee a collection in aid of the "Firebrand" Defense Fund was made.

There was an unusually large sale of literature. Comrade A. Levin, with others looked after three literature stands, and E. C. Walker was on hand with a large supply of English literature. All the proceeds were handed over to the New York Debating Club for the "Firebrand."

At this writing the accounts are not yet made up, but fifty dollars was sent off to Portland at once and balance will go as the subscription lists are returned.

Among the "hits" in literature was a new translation of Ingersoll's "Mistakes of Moses" into Jewish, of which a great number were sold.

The Italian and French groups in the city report that they are at work, as the groups at Newark and Patterson, N. J. also do.

Murdered by Society.

BY J. M. C.

John Peters, an industrious young man who supported his widowed mother by his earnings as a driver of an express wagon, was shot dead in Chicago last week by Sophia Klouger, a handsome girl, eighteen years old, because he refused to marry her. After killing her lover the girl put a bullet into her own brain and died instantly. An examination of her body revealed the fact that she was pregnant.

Charge up two more human lives sacrificed to the insatiable and blood-thirsty Chastity fetish. As long as society regards maternity outside of wedlock as a crime these human sacrifices will continue to be made.

For the Release of A. Berkman.

The long projected appellation to the Pennsylvania Board of Pardons in the case of Alexander Berkman, for a reduction of the excessively long sentence of twenty-two years will be submitted to the Board, this or next month. In Pittsburg, Pa., a committee under the name of the Berkman Defense Association has taken the matter in hand and now request all friends of justice to assist the committee morally and financially; morally by passing resolutions favoring the release of A. Berkman, and financially by sending contributions to the Secretary,

CARL NOLD,
73 Spring Garden Ave., Allegheny, Pa.

A subscription list can be found in the office of Lucifer.

Sociologic Lesson. No. LI.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

AN INVARIABLE STANDARD. To form a standard, a schedule of existing market prices should be drawn up, and an estimated weight assigned to each. It should include a large number of those substances in most extensive and uniform use and capable of permanent classification; such as gold, silver, iron, lead, copper, tin, wheat, corn, molasses, sugar, cotton and wool. The weights assigned should depend upon the estimated freedom from liability to fluctuate, and the relative value of the amount sold. Let A B C etc. be the weights assigned; a b c, the prices ascertained; and a b c, the change in market prices at a subsequent time; then Aa plus Bb plus Cc etc. should be kept equal to 0. After a series of years, there would undoubtedly be developed permanent changes in some of the prices. The adoption of a new standard, based upon these changed prices, and with changed weights, might then make the adjustment more convenient; but it would still be the same invariable standard, merely expressed in different terms.

While the purchasing power of money would remain uniform with regard to the list of articles selected for the standard, which might be very much extended if thought best, it would continually increase with regard to manufactured articles not on the list, in consequence of improvements in machinery and new inventions. Yet there could hardly be found any article in general use, not upon a well selected list, the price of which would increase with the lapse of time.

[While it seems unfortunate, and to some extent unjust to Mr. Parkhurst, that the "Sociologic Lessons" have not been printed in consecutive issues of Lucifer the pressure of other matter more directly in line with our work has made this a matter of necessity. Many others besides the author of these Lessons have been compelled to exercise the grace of patience. In regard to the subject matter of Lesson LI., while not attempting a reply as such, it seems to some of us that in regard to standards of value the only rational and equitable thing to do is to eliminate all attempts at regulation of standards, give to every commodity, money included, a free field and no favor, and the problem of "values" would soon adjust itself. M. H.]

THE "ADULT" for October contains, as leading articles: "Prostitution," by Orford Northcote; "Two Haymarket Plays," by Victor Martell; "Sexual Freedom and the Alleged 'Mutability of Sex Love,'" by Sagittarius; "Free Thought and Free Love," by Lucy Stewart. There is also a leader by the editor, George Bedborough, on the objects of the "Adult," and why so named, together with "Answers to Correspondents" by the same. Altogether it is one of the best numbers yet issued of this young but brave and thoroughly independent exponent of Equal Freedom for All, and especially freedom and justice in the most important of all human relations, those pertaining to sex and reproduction of the race. Sent from this office, price 5 cents.

A Few Observations.

BY JAMES F. MORTON, JR.

Mr. Ruedebusch is entirely successful in replying to the critics of his valuable contribution to the literature of sexual emancipation. Let the New Ideal be once fully comprehended and its superiority must become manifest to any liberal mind. Exclusiveness in love, so far from proving an exalted purity of heart, is mere evidence of narrowness and selfishness. Far from being uplifting, it is degrading to the extremest degree. No contributor to Lucifer's columns has yet presented one tangible argument against variety in sex expression; although of mere sentimentality and cant borrowed from pietistic sources, we have had abundance.

If Mr. Ruedebusch is open to criticism on any side, it is on that of giving too little credit to other advocates of sexual freedom. While his book is, in my judgment, the most lucid and valuable contribution to the subject in our entire literature, it by no means represents an altogether new discovery. We must not quibble about names. The New Ideal is simply common sense applied to love relations, and as such, has long been accepted by the more logical varietists of this country. Mr. Ruedebusch is not the first to enunciate it; and there are at least a few of us who have proved in our own lives its superior beauty and nobility, as compared with all the old ideals. The thought of sexual ownership, either one-sided or mutual, either temporary or permanent, ought to be revolting to any rightly constituted mind. There are dicta in Mr. Ruedebusch's book, as for example much in the chapter on Ebriosity, from which I would dissent; but, taken as a whole, "The Old and the New Ideal" is worth more to the student of sexology than any other one book yet published.

It is, however, disappointing to find Mr. Ruedebusch unwilling to associate with others in the more effective propaganda for sexual freedom. The broadest and highest views cannot be attained by all at a single leap. All knowledge is relative; and even on the sex question the whole truth is not yet capable of being reduced to axiomatic formulae. Let us have freedom of inquiry and discussion; and between the clashing views the truth will come to light. The "Call to Concerted Action" should appeal to all who love freedom, and believe that the time has come to make a stand in behalf of the most sacred of human rights.

The arrest of A. J. Pope furnishes renewed evidence that the foes of liberty are not slumbering. Is it not indeed time for "concerted action" against the hideous laws and customs which make such outrages possible? We are too timid in the expression of our views. There are thousands who are secretly convinced of the truth of sexual liberty, but dare not say so. An active public propaganda will prove our strength, and win over many who are now ignorant or half-hearted.

A. Warren is a shining example of the fact that "there are none so blind as those who will not see." I know of many cases of successful "experiments in variety," and can from personal experience testify that "its ways are ways of pleasantness." Where the reverse proves true, it is where monogamist prejudices have been carried over into varietist practice. Let Mr. Warren read "The Old and the New Ideal," and then refute its arguments—if he can. Until he has done so, let him not impugn the experience of others who have occasion to know whereof they speak.

1 Lynde St. Place, Boston, Mass.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LX.

Another winter came and still the home was not finished, but now the work on the buildings could still go on, as it was mainly within doors and under shelter. In the heated rooms the skilled workmen found their tasks easy, and under their hands the rooms were rapidly turned into bowers of beauty. The gardeners were kept busy during all the winter months and in the early springtime commenced their outdoor work of beautifying the place. Fountains, statues and other objects of beauty and use grew as if by magic. The hot houses and conservatories were indeed bowers of beauty and elegance. Then came the work of furnishing the building. Again money was not spared to make everything perfect. Every nook and arch contained some rare piece of art—of sculptured work. Exquisite paintings graced the walls. Breakfast and noonday meals were to be taken in what was called the breakfast room. This room was arranged simply for comfort—warm and cozy for the winter, cool and shaded for the summer. In the embrazures of the windows hung the cages of rare singing birds, filling the room with their melody. The furniture was covered with leather. The breakfast was to be simple, consisting principally of milk, grain foods and fruits. The mid day meal to which it was expected few would gather was again simple—fruits and nuts playing a leading special part.

But in the evening when all should be gathered together to enjoy as well as eat—but we are anticipating—too eager to lift the veil from the future. Let us wait, rather, until all our dear friends shall be gathered, to partake of their first evening meal here in the new home; for the present let us go on with our description of this glorious structure.

And yet, how shall we describe it? The most vivid fancy fails to do it justice. The corridors, whose floors are inlaid with tile; the marble staircases; the painted walls; the carved ceilings; the cozy private rooms—each in itself a gem; books and music to be found in them all; each a sanctum for the owner thereof. The library, the music room and the drawing room, each perfect as to form and dimensions; each flooded with brilliant light, or softly toned down as the fancy would demand or occasion call for, yet all arranged so as not to cause needless work.

It was the desire and expectation of this happy household to have only such move about the rooms as were fairly intelligent and cultured. "We don't want them to be servants, who do the work in this home," Owen had remarked, "but comrades and mates, each doing a share. No drones. Drones and idlers do not deserve to enjoy."

Among the details worthy of particular mention were the bath rooms. Not little tubs wherein one person could scarce recline, but a bath in which the bather could splash and swim and romp; not a bath in which false modesty would allow a single occupant only, but one in which a bevy of bathers could enjoy the luxury at the same time. Hot and cold water; steam baths and shower baths—O what a blessing in the cleansing, purifying element! bringing health and strength to all who are wise enough to rightly use it. Just watch the healthy babe in the bath, as it kicks and splashes and screams with delight. Was there ever a more beautiful sight?

Then we come to a wing of this grand building which as yet was, and for a little while would be, closed. Not that this wing was not furnished or completed in every little detail, but the use to which it had been dedicated was not yet here. One or more hearts were waiting and hoping for love's crown—in more than one breast the expectation was strong that at their knock the mystic door would open. What was this mysterious wing? The sanctum of the prospective mother!

Here she was to be surrounded by every beauty and comfort that art could supply and that money could buy. Wherever her eyes should turn they would rest upon representations of nature's most perfect work—the nude human form! From the little dimpled cupid to the graceful undulating curves of the perfect woman and the outlines of the strength and beauty of the perfect man. Here was the workshop of art. The expectant mother would here be taught to mold the clay, to use the pallet and brush or in the quiet and rest secured her here she could learn to wield the pen. Her gems of thought would thus influence and mould the mentality of her unborn child, and would leap like flashes of sunshine to the world without. Here the builder of the coming child could withdraw to perfect rest and quiet, and here she could steep her soul in music and poetry, and the child which was asked for, which was longed for and demanded, as a pledge of love—the child which was begotten under holiest influences and gestated under such perfect surroundings, could such a child be anything else than ideal? anything less than divine? Released from all the old superstitions of right and wrong; seeing absolutely no wrong in holy love, with a conscience that waits not for sanction of church or state for the consummation of love, but follows only nature's dictates,—who would dare to set the seal of impurity upon the product of such desires, such holy aspirations, such hopes and such longings! Gently, reverently, we close the door of this holy of holies until it opens again to the knock of the favored one.

Is there still more to tell? O yes, much more, but language fails. We cannot tell you half there is to tell. There is the concert hall, the lecture hall, the dancing hall, the theater—all awaiting their turn to be unlocked, for hope is strong within the breasts of the little band that their number will not always be so small, but that in a few short years every room in the spacious building will have its occupant, every hall its throngs of visitors.

In still other rooms beyond, where baby-life is to thrive, the cooing, kicking, little mortals will not be wanting. Where the nurse, to whose care the little treasures are to be entrusted, fully understands the responsibility of her work. No gorging her little charges with sweets, souring their little stomachs; no dosing with soothing syrups and paregorics, sleeping potions, horrid teas and what not, dulling and stupefying their brains and destroying the natural brightness of the child's mentality. O no! This nurse understands better what is for the good of the dimpled, rollicking morsel of humanity entrusted to her care, and as a result she can sleep soundly the long night through. The babes do not disturb her. The perfectly healthy treatment they receive lulls them to sleep and they lay coiled up like downy balls, the chubby fists resting on the dimpled cheeks. What heart would not such a picture gladden?

Are we anticipating again? The picture is so alluring that we cannot help letting our imagination wander, sometimes, but we must return and bring our friends to the now finished home.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Thomas Higgins, Monmouth, Ill.:—Will take one copy of "Hilda's Home," or if published in cheap form will take five or more copies.

J. J. Lason, Forty Mile, Alaska:—Enclosed find a five dollar bill to pay arrearage and renew on Lucifer. Everybody seems to be getting rich here except yours truly.

[Glad to hear from our gold-hunting friend in the region of the Klondike. Hope he will not share the fate that seems to threaten hundreds of adventurers in the far northwest. Not all who are now in arrears on Lucifer's books can do as well as friend Lason has done, but if all would send us a little co-operative aid it would relieve us of much anxiety. M. H.]

G. P., Vineland, N. J.:—I always feel when reading the articles in Lucifer that the writers are just like their orthodox brothers, giving a great many theories on the one great subject, making many positive assertions as if they knew they had the whole Truth, the same as Christians do when they talk about that of which they really know nothing—God. Lucifer's writers devote their abilities, they think, to the "sex principle," of the real reality of which I doubt their capacity of forming any correct idea.

[Sex force is so closely allied to life force that it is hard to distinguish the one from the other, and because they are in their essence alike inscrutable is no valid reason why they should not both be considered proper subjects of investigation or inquiry. The force called electricity seems inscrutable as to its real essence, and yet we have learned how to make it minister to human happiness. Ignorance in regard to the working methods of this inscrutable force has caused much suffering and waste of life, and ignorance in regard to sex—its methods of expression or manifestation, has caused still more suffering and waste of life force. Lucifer's writers may not always use the best forms of expression of their ideas, but we know of no better way of getting at truth on any subject than to allow free expression of honest thought. M. H.]

Cyrus W. Coolridge, Oyster Bay, N. Y.:—The arrest of A. J. Pope and Henry Addis is an outrage against which all lovers of freedom and justice should protest. I have read the "Firebrand" for the past two years, and while I did not always agree with the views expressed in the paper, I do not remember of having seen anything in it which could be called indecent or obscene. To be sure, we can never tell what in the opinion of Anthony Comstock and his minions may be considered "improper" matter, but must we consult Mr. Comstock's taste before we can express our views on the marriage question? Do we live in free American or in Russia? Where is the freedom of which we hear so much? If Comstock is to decide what we shall or shall not print in a paper, we might as well confess that there is no freedom of press in this country, and stop boasting of our glory. That the American people at large can stand Comstock and his infamous methods in suppressing "vice" without uttering an emphatic protest is not very complimentary to their intelligence. If we are a "free" nation let us be free in fact, not in name only. Let Comstockism be wiped out of existence and let every man have the right to express his honest opinion.

Mrs. Dora Boss's letter in Lucifer of Oct. 6 is, indeed, "a very good text from which to preach a long sermon," as Mr. Harman says. I wish, however, to make only a brief remark. My opinion is that when girls and boys receive rational instruction on sex matters, no girl will succumb to the "attraction that is stronger than gravitation," unless she has carefully considered the matter and is ready to meet the responsibilities of motherhood, and no self-respecting young man will associate sexually with a girl who needs to be protected against herself. Under the present conditions no man can be justified in impregnating a girl, unless the girl has a strong will of her own, that is to say, unless she wishes to have a child and is not afraid of the consequences.

Elizabeth Johnson, Massilon, Ohio:—I must take exception to the letter in our last issue, 676, of Lucifer, from Col. Chas. Gano Baylor. So long as woman is considered a "moral regulator," "a spiritual illuminator," or man's conscience, instead of a rational human being, with impulses, desires and rights equal with man, just so long will man struggle with animalism. But when equal rights are recognized then will woman have a chance to do her best work as race-builder. But woman as a slave and dependent certainly can not bring forth free men, either spiritually or mentally.

Another thought—How do people apply the word animal to humans? Is not the female of brute animals as independent of the male as the male is of the female? Again, if Col. Baylor will look around him and see the "feminine sanctity," as it is today polluted, I think even he would admit that it could be no worse if women were free to do with themselves and their lives as they choose. If Col. Baylor has proven to his satisfaction that one woman is sufficient for him, by what right does he say to a woman, "One man is enough for you;" or to another man, "One woman is enough for you." Never having himself been a woman, nor even another man, how can he be so positive, that he is right in laying down the law to them? Until woman takes her right to use her functions as she pleases, where and when, she will give very little thought to the use of those functions, as regards race-building.

Woman has never been free; consequently liberty never existed in the United States, and therefore it could not decay. It was only the semblance of liberty. Stop setting woman on a pedestal; recognize her as an equal, and half the problem would be solved.

In the colonel's last statement he makes a distinction between woman, the race and society. Woman is not considered as an individual but as a thing, or an instrument to make the race or society, which consists of men only.

Till women have equal rights with men man can enjoy only half the rights that are his, and the sooner he sees this the better. His special privileges will never gain for him what he is seeking.

Little Harry—Mamma, did papa ask you to be his wife?

Mamma—Why, of course, darling.

Little Harry—And was you acquainted with him then?

Mamma—My dear child, what makes you ask such absurd questions? Certainly I was acquainted with him.

Little Harry—The way you and him talks sometimes I thought you mustn't a been acquainted, or else one of you needed a home purty bad.—Cleveland "Leader."

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

* * *

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue," By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman," By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom," By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell, By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?" By X.
"Love and the Law," By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches," By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

OUR NEW HUMANITY.

Of all rights, the greatest is—to be born well.

Vol. II., No. 3 contains: The Rights of Children; by R. B. Kerr. An interesting presentation of the other side of the question. Incineration; by Walter Street. Startling theories, facts and figures. What are Women Here For? By R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. What the Young Need to Know.—A Primer of Sexual Rationalism; by E. C. Walker. The New Martyrdom; by Lillian Harman. The Will—From the French of Guy de Maupassant. A Free Man's Creed; by Moses Harman. Price, 25 cents.

THE UNREVEALED RELIGION.

An address of great depth, strength, and beauty. By the veteran, J. K. Ingalls.

"The rainbow is not less beautiful and wonderful to me than to Noah, or to the aborigines, because I understand something of optics and the refraction of light. The rose is not less attractive because botany has taught us to analyze and classify it. The Good of Truth, whether we worship it as an entity or as a personality, or conceive of it as impersonal, is an ever-living and persistent principle man can never cease to revere and admire. And his growth in knowledge and progress in all things refining and elevating to his nature will be promoted, not retarded, by the true but unrevealed, and as yet "unloved religion, 'The Religion of Progress'."

Price, 5 cents each; Address LUCIFER, 1304 W. Congress Street, Chicago

The Red Heart in a White World.

A Suggestive Manual of Free Society, proposing the Comradeship of all those who believe in the Spirit of Liberty as the essential element in True Society, and the immediate inauguration and practical realization of the Free Life. Price, 20 cents, 10 copies $1. For sale by M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

681.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetarion; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .03
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .03
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
n Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury, .10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake, .10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .70
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
Degeneracy; C. L. James, .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

PROHIBITION AND SELF-GOVERNMENT

Their Irreconcilable Antagonisms.

A COLLECTION OF FUGITIVE PIECES BY E. C. WALKER.

Physical and Moral Ills Cannot be Cured by Legislative Enactments.

"Partly to save men from the same hereafter hell, partly to keep them out of the hells of the here and now, the patrat moralists, prohibitionists, obscenists, and all others of that genus, seek to force their views of morality and temperance upon all, regardless of all differences of organization and environment; not only their views but their methods of reform, their cure-all specifics."

"When you resort to force you confess yourself beaten in the arena of science, reason and love, and thus establish your incompetence to deal with so tremendous a problem."

Price, five cents. Or send twenty-five cents with the name of one new three months subscriber and we will send you one copy of this interesting and instructive pamphlet free.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governer has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasions; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter V., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, 5 cents.

A DVERTISER affectionate, musical, desires to hear from ladies living in or near New York who believe and practice the New Ideal. D., care of Lucifer.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson Barker,
Box 138, San Jose, Cal.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.

Bar Sinister and Licit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .25

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and Iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .10

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .50

Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50
A Sex Revolution, " " .25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .15

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Eugenics,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

THE ADULT.

A journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Holborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League, Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscure Jews and Distracted Sues, by Leighton Pagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

W. all need comradeship of thought.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free. Box 94, Portland, Oregon.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

PRICE, 5 CENTS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., NO. 43. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 27, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE NO. 682

Concord.

BY J. WM. LLOYD.

Ah, Musketaquid, idyllic village,
Thoreau's wild garden, Emerson's homestead,
Hawthorne's hermitage, beautiful dream-soil;
Life-cup of visions deep as the waters
Of white-pebbled Walden, source inspiration;
Poets, philosophers, prophets and heroes
Find in thee parent, leave thee illustrious,
Sacred and shining, calm as thy river,

Concord thy name is.

Thou art a flower
Out from the Center growing and blooming;
Here in the West-world we are not voiceless;
Life is not nearer in Delphos or Athens;
Infinite wonder no wider in Asia;
Holy of Holies hides in no temple;
Earth hath no climate sole for the seer;
Self no need of a priest at the altar.

This is thy message, home-rest of bright ones,
Emerson's inkstand, birth nest of Thoreau.

April '97.

Intolerance.

BY REV. SIDNEY HOLMES.

Intolerance slays freedom.
Intolerance is the foe of progress.
Intolerance crushes individuality.
Intolerance crucifies the world's saviors.
Toleration is merely the absence of coercion.
Tolerance of error must precede its refutation.
Tolerance of ignorance is the evidence of wisdom.
Intolerance drives genius to despair and starvation.
Intolerance can have no place in the freethinker's creed.
Intolerance crushes the grandest impulses of humanity.
Intolerance fills the statute books with oppressive laws.
Truth demands toleration; it should grant as much to error.
All persons are fallible; hence the necessity of tolerating error.
Tolerance and calm reasoning are the best eradicators of error.
Intolerance has bathed the world repeatedly in human blood.
Intolerance places a premium on ignorance, stupidity and servility.
Intolerance fills prison cells with the benefactors of humanity.
Intolerance dooms millions of women to lives of bodily prostitution.
Intolerance strives continually with its fetid breath to extinguish the lamp of reason.
Intolerance murders countless thousands of unwedded mothers and their innocent children.
If a man's belief is wrong, it is because his mind is not clear. Intolerance will not enlighten him.

Toleration of truth alone is impracticable; because many who believe they have the truth are in error.

A man who disagrees with you is not necessarily wrong. Seeking his reasons for disagreeing is wiser than to decline to tolerate him.

The Suppression of Needed Knowledge.

BY E. C. WALKER.

According to the reports printed in the New York "Herald," "Journal," and other dailies, the committee of the Philadelphia Board of Education which looks after the girls' high school in that city has just heard of a work called "Les Miserables" and written by one Victor Hugo. The book has astonished, grieved, shocked and excited the gentlemen of the committee. Of course the offense of Hugo's masterpiece is "indecency." "Indecency" is one of the most conveniently flexible of epithets. Any man can say that any book or picture is "indecent" and you can not dislodge him from his position. You can never prove that it is not indecent—to him. He looks upon the book or picture as in a mirror and you must get at his angle of incidence before you can see the image given by his angle of reflection. That is why the Comstocks and Chases and Burts and Grannises find so much more "obscenity" and "indecency" than is discoverable by some of the rest of the human family.

"I regard 'Les Miserables' as perfectly shocking," says Commissioner Wright, of the Board, "in relation to the French side of life. It is wholly an improper work to put into the hands of pupils, even if they are French students." Chairman Morton agrees with Commissioner Wright, and is not sure that Shakespere should not be sent to the lumber room. The New York "Journal" comments:

"There are some benighted people who have thought that the lesson of morality was never more clearly conveyed than by the story of the pathetic self-abnegation of Jean Valjean and his devotion to little Cosette, but these are not members of the Philadelphia Board of Education. The usual objection to books that touch at all on objectionable phases of life is that these paint vice in too attractive colors. Fantine's fate is hardly alluring. The news has not yet come that the study of ancient history is to be discontinued in Philadelphia because of Cleopatra's unconventionality, or that Catherine of Russia's connection with European affairs has resulted in the elimination of modern history from the curriculum. . . . . Poor Hugo! How glad he must be that he is dead!"

Some persons have expressed doubts as to the truth of the reports coming from Portland, Oregon; they have said that there is nothing obscene in the description of the Barcelona horrors nor in any number of the "Firebrand," therefore it must be there is something back of these arrests of Pope, Addis and Isaac. The persons who say this are unfamiliar with Comstockism; they do not realize that the agents of the morality inquisition find obscenity and indecency where normal persons would perceive no trace of either. The utterances of Morton and Wright of the Philadelphia School Board may help open the eyes of our friends to the real nature of the federal and state statutes and the methods of the agents of the vice societies. Our skeptical comrades must see now that if such men as Morton and Wright were in the position occupied by Comstock and his associates they would quickly enough find obscenity in almost anything they wished to suppress. Put Wright and Morton on the jury set to decide the fate of Addis, Isaac and Pope, and who believes they would vote for acquittal? These men live in another world than ours, the world of medievalism and anti-naturalism, and what to us is natural, normal and innocent is to them degenerative, diseased and vicious.

The letter which follows and which was printed in the New York "Journal" of the issue of October 13, suggests the inquiry —How much longer will the inaugurators and emmissaries of "The Movement in Favor of Ignorance" be permitted by the American people to clog the channels of progress with the rotten debris of dead creeds?

ANOTHER CHANCE FOR COMSTOCK.

To the Editor of the "Journal":

Being in doubt, I turn to the "Journal" for enlightenment. The criticism of Max Nordau's latest novel in Sunday's issue, together with your immense cartoon apropos of Mr. Anthony Comstock, both point to the open question: What constitutes morality or decency, etc., in New York City and the country at large? For ten years I have been gathering data for my book, nearly completed, entitled "Woman, Her Heart, Soul and Body; or, the Ethics of the Marital Relation." I have studied sociology and collected authorities to prove the necessity of the new education of women, to be met with the statement that Mr. Comstock will not allow any such plain statement of facts to be put in print. I desire to have the "Journal's" opinion as to whether the constitutional right of free speech and the freedom of the press is to lapse into innocuous desuetude in this year of grace 1897? What I want to ask is, how far the prurient egoism of a self-constituted art critic, mentor and moralist is to muzzle the public utterance and restrict the expression of their views; and, furthermore, if the exposition of physiological facts and the immutability of natural law also are within the unlimited sphere of Mr. Comstock's power of legal restriction and suppression?

ALICE LAM MOQUE,

Of Mothers' Congress, Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.

It is simply amazing, the indifference and apathy of most of the men and women of this country. Not merely their indifference and apathy, but often their pleased acquiescence in outrages that set on fire the blood of the few persons who at this time really think and feel. That a "law" against "vice" should be allowed to exist which operates to prevent the publication and circulation of books and papers which deal in utmost seriousness with subjects of vital importance to the race, is a phenomenon so tremendous in its significance that one is absolutely awed by it into something akin to respect for a stupidity too dense and mountainous to be weighed or measured. Were it not for the few who have brains and hearts our battle would not be worth the while, for these cowardly cattle are fit only for the shambles to which they eagerly hasten. Pity them? Yes. Respect them? No.

The Old Maid New Made.

BY R. B. KERR.

Most of the writers in Lucifer direct their attention to the wrongs of those who are married. To me the worst effect of the marriage system is the injury it does to those who are not married.

One day the servant of a Scottish minister came into her master's study and said,

"I would like, Sir, to speak to ye about a maitter of some importance. I'm gauna get mairried."

"Janet," said the minister, "it's a solemn thing to get married."

"Ay, Sir," said Janet, "but it's a faur mair solemn thing no to get mairried."

The condition which Janet deplored is now the condition of about thirty per cent of the women of England, for that is about the percentage of those who never get married. Moreover, the last returns of the Registrar-General show that the average age of marriage even of those women who do marry is twenty-six. That means that even the more fortunate of the women of England have to submit to ten years of celibacy after the age of puberty, at that time of life when the feelings are strongest and the consequences of celibacy are most disastrous. If Sir Benjamin Brodie was right in saying that "the evils of celibacy were so great he would not mention them, but they quite equalled those of prostitution," then the condition of the women of England today must be about the most serious condition in which any human beings were ever placed in the history of the world.

In some classes, however, the situation is much more serious than the above figures would indicate. Some weeks ago an English lady and I went over the list of all the English and Scottish women of our acquaintance, to find the proportion of the married and unmarried. We selected only those cases in which we knew all the members of the family, and in which the women were all above thirty. We found that eighty-four women were unmarried, and sixty-six married. Most of these women are the daughters of clergymen, or of army or naval officers. Many of them are, in mind and body, the cream of the human race.

What is the explanation of this miserable state of things? It is not due, as some allege, to the inequalities of numbers of the sexes. In the British Isles there are eleven adult women to every ten adult men, but this disparity is chiefly due to the greater number of old women than old men, caused by the greater vital tenacity of the female sex. No statistics of population can account for the above results.

The real reason why there are so many unmarried women is that there are so many men who will not marry. At least twenty-five per cent of the men in England do not marry. It is not because they cannot, for the poorest are those who marry most. It is simply because they will not. A life-long bond is too tame and too irksome a thing for the men of England, and twenty-five per cent of them will not bow their necks to such a yoke.

The results are two in number, prostitution and celibacy. A vast number of men satisfy themselves with a small number of prostitutes, who are replete and disgusted with too much sex. A vast number of women are doomed to sexual starvation, with the option of marrying men on any terms which men will condescend to offer them,

This arrangement is very pleasing to most men, because it produces that most desirable of all commodities, cheap womanhood. The law of chastity causes great numbers of women to be cast out from society every year, and these women have to sell themselves cheap to men to keep body and soul together. Later on, the majority of men want wives, and then it is most important to have plenty of surplus women, so that they may have to compete and sell themselves cheap. Moreover, it is an excellent thing that young girls should be brought up in ignorance, to furnish an easy prey to men who are a little tired of prostitutes, and beginning to pine for something more piquant.

I am strongly of the opinion that the sex revolution will come, not from married women, or women who have the monopoly of a man, but from the vast army of celibate women who have no logical position in our social system. Much as I admire the Edith Lanchesters and Wardlaw Bests, I no more expect such as they to destroy sex slavery than I expect a few artists and poets to overthrow our economic system. Only a few people have the martyr spirit. Everyone admits that if women would generally refuse to pay taxes, woman suffrage could be brought about in a month. But it has never been possible to get a sufficient number of women to perform even so simple an act of resistance to establish rules. It is much less likely that any number of women who are happy in having secured the love of a man will be willing to risk their happiness by the most heroic act a woman can commit. To a woman a happy marriage is like an ark in the midst of the ocean. Not only will women refuse to give up their chances of entering it when they can, but those who have got into the ark will be very angry with those who seem to want to destroy it.

The women who will do the fighting are those who are left out of the ark. Revolutions are always made by those who have nothing to lose. Socialism has been started by philanthropic men like Morris and Bellamy, but it will take a strong and effective industrial proletariat to realize it. The fight for sex freedom will likewise be fought by the sexual proletariat. To the great army of unmarried women one may truly address the famous exhortation of Marx to the workers: "You have only your chains to lose. You have the world to gain."

In order to win their battle, unmarried women need three weapons, Liberty, Education and Contracepts. Liberty they are now getting very fast, and nothing has done so much as the bicycle to help them to get it. Education they are now beginning to get through the novels and plays of advanced writers. They are now learning that they are slaves, which is the first thing they need to learn. The virtues of contracepts are too evident to require comment.

When unmarried women have Liberty Education and Contracepts, marriage will not last very long. It will not need to be abolished or even modified. It will remain a venerable legal curiosity, and a few cranks will still utilize it. But the great majority will pass by on the other side. The sweet, smiling faces of millions of old maids, happy and proud in their spinsterhood without virginity, will be the damnation of marriage; and that ponderous institution will in a few years be laughed out of existence.

The Family Ideal.

BY LEROY BERRIER.

The article, "Ideals, Old and New," by Emil F. Ruedebusch arouses me to that point where I cannot refrain from writing a brief refutation of the ideas therein stated, and which I should term "A Very Old Ideal;" one that has existed before the human race had reached the degree of civilization and development of today. Such incoherent, unstable, and inharmonious living as advocated in this article, is only fit for a race which has not the higher psychic qualities, love, sympathy, the desire to provide and care for offspring, and surround life with modern embellishments.

I wonder what kind of women will accept such relations? Women in a normal condition and free, are not so constituted. Their love natures are highly developed and they focus their love on some one individual of the opposite sex. This individual, this one alone, is the one with whom they desire to enter into life's greatest relations, the one they desire to have as the father of their offspring, and with whom they desire to unite for life. This is also the case with the highest type of manhood. If there are men and women who are in a reverse condition, it only signifies the undeveloped and uncultured conditions of their gender (sexual) sense. Varietists say much of the temporary character of love. Why is love in many cases temporary instead of enduring? For the reason there is not a high stage of development, refinement and culture. Breadth of character and mental life are essential to the endurance of love. This man would have us kill out of our natures the ideals we cherish. He tells us they are wrong; that love and home are the causes of ills, misery and unhappiness. To me this is wrong. In reply to me, he will say, as others have, "You are so steeped in the conventional customs and thought of established society that you are blinded." This is no answer. Of course any state of development, education and surroundings have blinded me to the ideas that the lives of uncivilized peoples are preferable to that of the civilized. The only reason I look upon theft, robbery, murder, etc., as wrong, is because I have inculcated my consciousness and ideas from "conventional society" indirectly through parents and teachers.

The family instinct is as deeply imbedded in the human race as any of the higher instincts. It has developed. Nor is it alone connected with the sexual instinct. It is connected with labor which is a distinguishing factor between the civilized and uncivilized. Where there is no family, there is fighting instead of work. Instead of production, there is robbery and destruction.

The family, as I have stated in my forthcoming book, "Creative Force and Sexual Natures," is the basis of civilization. It testifies to stability, coherency and harmony of character. It accumulates, through production, the wealth necessary to sustain life and surround it with the embellishments of modern civilization. Lastly, and of greatest importance, the existence of the family makes possible the rearing of offspring in such a manner as to serve the best interests of society. These facts are sustained by observation. In every country, no matter how civilized, there is an analogue of every plane of the world's progress, from the lowest to the highest, and it is therefore possible to see this practice in any part of the world. The distinction between advancing civilization and barbarism is that the parents of advancing civilization remain united for their own pleasure, financial welfare and the welfare of their offspring and society.

It makes no difference what part religion has played in the establishment of the monogamous union and the family. If religion has been the factor that has accomplished it then religion has prepared the way for science. The science that removes all basis of moral desire is not worth much. Fortunately I have never been fettered by denominational religion. I was reared by liberal parents and have always been a liberal. I believe in freedom, but not license. My life is being spent in efforts to elevate the ideas of the sexual natures on to the same plane the ideas of our other natures occupy, and in teaching sexual and procreative science. It will therefore not do to reply to me, with the very common statement that my ideas along these lines are "perverted and degraded." In my book above mentioned, I have shown that with variety there can be no scientific regulation of quality in procreation. I court a disproval of this fact.

[Note by the editor: If Mr. Berrier were not a writer of books on sexologic science—books well advertised and extensively sold,—I should have taken the liberty to change the wording of the above article, for greater clearness, in several places. I have made a few changes of punctuation and of orthography only, preferring to adhere closely to the rule of permitting every writer to have his say in his own way,—if admitted to a hearing at all. The questions discussed are important—none more so,—and to get at the truth on any subject all sides must be heard.]

The Mistakes of Aaron.

BY A. WARREN.

Of course, Aaron is liable to err, as well as Moses. I make some mistakes, myself, though my name is not Aaron. It may be that Brother Harman does not seek to mystify his opponents by concessions. It looked that way to me; for I could imagine no more creditable motive to account for his being on both sides of so many questions. I am sorry to find that by taking what I considered the most charitable view, I seemed to question his honesty. I protest that such was not my intention. I thought, too, that he impugned the motives of others, in his allusion to Grundy pottage; but I am rejoiced to learn that, in this also, I was mistaken.

I wish, before dismissing this unfortunate discussion, to correct an impression that seems likely to be entertained by others, besides Brother Harman, that duality is my ideal. I have not said so. What I said was, that to reserve the divinest manifestation of love, to express the divinest love, was my cherished ideal. In other words, I have no use for side lovers, as safety valves for passion. My protest was against debasing the ineffable sacrament of love, and not against love itself, with one or many. I hope my words on this point will not be lightly passed over. See Lucifer, No. 675.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon each individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 Congress St., Tuesday evening, Nov. 2.

☞ IDA C. CRADDOCK requests us to say that her address is P. O. Box 2093, Philadelphia, Pa., instead of 1093, as recently stated in Lucifer.

"The Physical Basis of Love."

According to previous announcement Prof. William Windsor, phrenologist and physical scientist, delivered his lecture on the "Physical Basis of Love" before "Lucifer Circle," on Thursday evening, Oct. 14. Attendance was gratifying in size and especially so in quality. About a dozen practicing physicians and "specialists" being among the hearers. Opening lecture occupied about an hour and was followed by a fusillade of questions from the auditors, for all of which the professor had a ready answer, although many of these questions were in the line of sociology, in its broadest sense, rather than in the line of sexology as such. A brief but necessarily inadequate synopsis of the lecture is herewith presented to Lucifer's readers.

The fundamental principles of the philosophy upon which this argument is based are as follows:

SPACE is the eternal, omnipresent persistent female parent of all that is.

MATTER is the eternal, limited, consistent male parent of all that is.

Matter does not fill all space as is commonly supposed. If this were true there could be no mutation. There is always some space that is absolutely empty, and which furnishes the receptivity or drawing power which makes motion possible.

The emptiness of space is electricity. The force usually called electricity is magnetism. Magnetism is developed whenever matter is caused to vibrate, and consists in the radiation of force from every atom composing the vibrating body. When this radiation is currentized a force is developed which may be directed, and this is erroneously called electricity. It should always be called magnetism and we should speak of "magnetic currents," "magnetic shocks," "magnetic lights," etc.

Electricity is the negative degree of sexual passion developed in space and is manifested by the attributes of gravity, receptivity, coldness and darkness.

Magnetism is the positive degree of sexual passion developed in matter and is manifested by the attributes of vibration, radiation, heat and light.

Thus the eternal principle of LOVE is manifested between the fundamental elements of existence.

Wherever the attributes of vibration, radiation, heat and light are found, there is a passional manifestation of desire for the corresponding attributes of gravity, receptivity, coldness and darkness, and vice versa.

Applying this doctrine to humanity we find temperamental conditions giving the same attributes.

The dark complexioned brunette is called the Electric Temperament and this temperament possesses the attributes of gravity, receptivity, darkness and coldness.

The light complexioned blonde is called the Magnetic Temperament and this temperament possesses the attributes of vibration, radiation, heat and light.

It is natural for these temperaments to blend because each opposes the other with required conditions. It is the radiation of magnetism into the receptivity of electricity which constitutes life.

The electric or magnetic state does not necessarily pervade the whole body. An individual may be electric in his cerebrum, magnetic in his cerebellum, electric in heart and lungs, magnetic in digestive organs, from which fact arises the great diversity of complexion observed in different persons.

As important conclusions from the foregoing premises the speaker claimed that in order to reach the highest development of love or the strongest manifestations of sexual pleasure it is necessary to select a companion agreeing in all the affinities of temperament and that the sexual association should be a permanent one in order to enable the parties to master the harmonies. The speaker also claimed that there were sixty-four different departments of knowledge represented by as many organs of the brain and that continued authoritative discipline was necessary to develop them into complete and harmonious action, and that complete and intelligent love is impossible without the recognition of these principles and the creation of men and women in the possession of complete brains.

The lecturer gave a number of blackboard illustrations of complete and incomplete heads which were very striking.

The professor seems eminently fitted, by nature, by study and training, for the business of lecturer and writer on phrenologic, sexologic and general sociologic questions. Possessed of a magnificent physique, good voice and pleasing delivery, apparently in perfect health, in the prime of mature manhood, he is in position to do much to help the race of which he is an integral part, to higher and better planes of living. Prof. Windsor is the author of a number of books on phrenology and allied sciences, chief among which works are "Science of Creation and Art of Reproduction," and "Loma, a Citizen of Venus." The latter book is written in story form—a "story with a purpose"—that purpose being to show the ideal life, the better way to live, and the better way of transmitting or of perpetuating life, human life, on the planet earth. The writer introduces a "citizen of Venus," brings him to Chicago to tell us what social evolution has done for the inhabitants of Venus, our nearest planetary neighbor, and, according to the newer astronomy, the older and more mature orb in cosmic development.

The story proceeds upon the hypothesis that, being the older and more mature planet, Venus sends thought waves, thought germs to its younger brother Earth, and that at long intervals messengers, teachers, are sent bodily from Venus to Earth, and having fulfilled their mission return bodily to their native planet. Loma is represented as one of these super-mundane or extra-mundane teachers.

The astronomic theories propounded by the author lecturer, are not, as he himself tells us, original with him, but adopted from the "Genetics" of Samuel T. Fowler of Philadelphia, published about the year 1885, and as yet but little known to the reading world.

Next week we expect to review "Loma" at some length, and give extracts therefrom. The book can be had by addressing the author at Rushville, Ill. It is a well printed and attractively bound volume of four hundred and twenty pages. Price $1.50.

Notes.

BY OMAR.

The notorious Charlotte Smith is running amuck in Boston against the bachelors. She wants them all married, and of course her maternalistic mind can think of no way of reaching the desired end save the short cut of the law. For once she is logical. If the law may rightfully forbid those already married to separate when they grow tired of their partnership why may it not compel those to marry who prefer to remain single? The wits of the press who are ridiculing Charlotte have something to learn from her after all, but I doubt their ability to receive the lesson. The gentlemen of the press are as superficial as the Smith is mischievous. She is never happy except when meddling with the affairs of her betters and the newspaper men are in their element only when treating the most serious sociological problems with the levity of one-night stand clowns.

* * *

Compulsion has an evil magic about it which turns every good into evil. Our educational and our sanitary reformers are in that perverse mental state that they can do nothing, or rather that they think they can do nothing, without compulsion. Instead of our reformers being a blessing to the world they are rapidly becoming the other and the opposite sort of thing.—Auberon Herbert.

Naturally; attempted compulsion distracts attention from the bad condition to the victim of it, who then becomes the victim of the law, and whose last state is worse than his first, while that of no one else is bettered. Compulsion sets the "reformer" and the man he wants to reform into jail at swords' points and so, prevents all understanding between them. The average moral and temperance reformer is as blind as a bat and as awkward as a bull in a china shop. He knows no more about human nature and growth than "Moses" did about science.

"Little Freethinker" Revived.

DEAR FRIENDS: "Little Freethinker" will hereafter be published by H. L. Green, 213 East Indiana St., Chicago, Ill., and as heretofore, Elmina will be editor. Subscriptions may be sent to either of us. We need twenty dollars at once, and I hope all who can, will send in a subscription for the little paper. It is only twenty-five cents a year, published monthly, and much improved. It is now on a firm and permanent foundation.

Cordially and truly, ELMINA D. SLENKER.

Snowville, Va.

The Big Black Cat and the Little White Cats.

BY CYRUS W. COOLRIDGE.

"I cannot stand it," said the big black cat. "These little white cats insist upon catching mice without my consent. Something must be done to stop it."

"But, gracious master," said the white cats, "is it a crime to catch mice?"

"No, it is not, if you do it with my consent. Otherwise it is one of the greatest crimes of which a cat can be guilty."

"And what will the gracious master do if we keep on catching mice without asking his permission?"

"I will put you outside of the pale of catdom. I will declare the mice that you may catch impure and not fit to be put in the common pantry. I will allow no decent black cat to associate with you."

"The gracious master is very magnanimous. Will he teach us the proper way to catch mice?"

"In order to catch mice you must constantly be accompanied by a black cat."

"And what shall we do if we cannot find black cats whose presence would always be pleasant to us?"

"Then you cannot catch any mice. This is all that I have to say. Good morning!"

When the black cat was gone, the white cats said: "To be persecuted by that mean black cat is not a pleasant thing, but after all what harm can he do to us if we all agree to ignore his command? Let us do what we consider to be right, and the big black cat will either die or become harmless."

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LXI.

It was at the close of a sultry summer day, late in August, when Owen, stepping abruptly into the midst of our friends at the Westcot mansion, said:

"Our home is finished! When will you be ready to start for the new quarters?"

This question, though long expected, was not readily answered. All were eager to start, yet much was still to be attended to. The Westcot home had been sold, as it stood, with all its handsome furnishings. The younger Wallace children had lived, during the past year, almost wholly at the Westcots, though Mrs. Wallace had at first demurred not a little. But as the change in them grew daily more apparent she had fully consented, and had left them almost entirely to the management of her step-daughters. In the spacious grounds of the Westcot place they were taught to play and romp and enjoy themselves in a style they had never known. The plan of sending them to boarding school had been given up. A boarding school education was fashionable—yes, but horribly demoralizing. It was to be purchased at the expense of sparkling eyes and glowing cheeks. "Better not," Edith had said. "Mrs. Westcot's little girls are taught at home; why not give these girls home lessons also?"

Accordingly Edith taught them their grammar, their arithmetic and geography. Hilda heard their reading and spelling and superintended their writing. Imelda taught them music and drawing while Cora cultivated their voices.

They were now no longer overburdened with study, keeping them at it long hours when body and brain were weary. There was now plenty of time for healthy romping games, long strolls in the shady woods where they became interested in the mysteries of botany, and when evening came, though the day had been so pleasant—nothing like work had been required, yet the curly heads scarce touched the pillows ere sleep had closed the tired lids, not to open again until the morning sun peeped in at the windows, announcing the advent of another day.

The boys received the same treatment. As Paul's clear and experienced eye had almost instantly detected the seat of the evil that was threatening to make a wreck of their young lives, the same methods had from the first been made use of to fill their unemployed hours. Homer was now a youth the sight of whose sunny and intelligent face caused the light of gladness to beam from many a pair of girlish eyes.

Elmer, too, with his sixteen years, gave promise of a royal manhood. Their minds had been relieved of the teaching that had given them false notions of what is pure and what is impure. The beauty of the human body had been taught them, from that of the little cooing babe to that of manhood and womanhood. They no longer felt a foolish sense of shame as they had done when first asked to join their older friends in a bath, and had learned to appreciate it as a rare pleasure, not even disturbed when one day our bevy of girls, both small and grown up, surprised them while laving their bodies in the cooling waters. Such laughing and screaming! It would only have needed, to make the pleasure perfect, that the girls should have joined them. Yet to this the girls would not consent. The fear of discovery was strong upon them, and their lovers did not wish them to run risks that could as well be avoided.

Such had been the lives of our friends, and now came the task of moving, or of emigration. The old familiar scenes, the walks and drives, the groves and the cooling fountains, would know them no more. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace had long since known of this project and it was with sincere regret they saw the day approach when they should say good bye to these elder, and at one time considered burdensome children. But far worse than they had expected—their younger children refused to remain behind, but insisted on going along to the new home.

At first Mrs. Wallace would hear none of it, but they begged and entreated so hard, and were seconded by all the members of the "colony,"—as they were pleased to call themselves, that finally with the promise of a yearly visit she gave consent.

Of course it is not to be supposed that Mr. and Mrs. Wallace, especially the latter, should fully understand the nature of the home to which her children were to be taken. She was too thorough a woman of the world; too completely imbued with its doctrines, its customs and its prejudices; too thoroughly orthodox to countenance for one single instant a scheme so unconventional, so outlandish. She only knew and understood that it was a co-operative home her children were going to; that they had become bright, healthy and strong; that they had developed wonderfully since she had given them into the care of her step-daughters, and as she knew she would now have to send them away again to complete their education she wisely concluded it was better to send them where she felt assured they would be properly cared for, and more so as it was just as easy for them to come home on a vacation from the co-operative home as from any other school. And—yes, she could go to see them. The invitation had been tendered her, so that matter was satisfactorily settled.

Another member of our little band had a severe battle to fight, and that one was Osmond. His life for the past two years had been a series of battles. His father had soon discovered the presence of his former wife and Osmond's mother, and knew of his visits to her. With a volley of oaths he had issued the command that Osmond should never go near her again. To his surprise the boy not only demurred to this but firmly declared that he would go to see his mother as often as he desired. Almost dumb-founded the father shouted:

"What! Court the society of that outcast! that shameless creature who knows not the meaning of the word decency? the woman who——"

"No more of that!"—came in firm, almost defiant tones from the lips of the boy. "You have slandered the best and purest of women long enough—the woman I am proud to own as my mother! An accident made me acquainted with her and with those she keeps company with, and never until then did I know what purity meant, what true manhood and womanhood meant. My mother and my sister are women whom any man might well be proud of; proud of the privilege of holding their hands; proud of being able to claim kinship with them. Do your worst, if you must, but I will not give up their companionship. I would rather cut loose from you!"

Mr. Leland stormed, fumed and cursed, but to no avail. The boy was firm.

"I will disinherit you!" he exclaimed. "I will cut you off without one cent!"

"Do so!" was the calmly uttered reply. "Then I will find some work to do and will transfer my life altogether to the side of my mother."

At this point Mr. Leland wisely desisted. Somehow he hoped to circumvent the boy; hoped to regain full control, forgetting that Osmond's mind was daily developing, and that he was now able to think for himself. So when the son's intention of going away with his mother and sister became known another storm broke loose. But Osmond was firm, and on the morning that witnessed the departure of the colonists he appeared with the rest, equipped and ready for the journey. Meta's dark head appeared beside him. She was growing to be quite a big girl and all along the journey she was his especial care. His "little sweetheart"—she had been termed long since, and the grave-faced child was proud of the title.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Mrs. H. S. Tyler, Fulton, Ill.:—Your paper, Lucifer, came to my address today. I am interested in some of its teachings and would like to read it for a while, so please send to my address. Find enclosed twenty-five cents in stamps. Count me as one who is seeking and striving for the upbuilding of the backbone of Civilization—Honesty and Purity.

Ella Slater, St. Louis, Mo.:—Having read today your "Great Combination Offer" I enclose thirty cents in stamps for literature under that heading and also October number of the "Adult." I know the "Adult" must be good but not better than Lucifer. I can't do without Lucifer. I enjoy it more than all other papers I read. Dr. Hatten wants a copy of "Hilda's Home," yes, two copies.

Myra Peppers, Ottumwa, Iowa:—I want to enter my protest against the outrage perpetrated upon the "Firebrand" group. So fearful is plutocracy that the masses will learn a few lessons in Freedom that every means is taken to crush out the voices of those who dare to speak. I wonder how many of our freethinkers will rally to the support of the "Firebrand"? Let every reader of Lucifer who believes in free speech and free action make a protest against the press censorship that has deprived our brothers of liberty.

Swan Imcrou, Nine Mile, Mont.:—My subscription to your excellent little publication expired some time ago and I neglected to renew my subscription at that time. I am glad that you kept on sending, however, because I have no idea of stopping it. I became a subscriber through the controversy between yourself and the editor of the "Free Thought Magazine" and am glad of the fact, although I am in what people call hot water all the time on account of my outspoken Liberal ideas. Enclosed, please find twenty-five cents. Kindly continue sending the Light-Bearer to yours for liberty.

Chas. Gano Baylor, Providence, R. I.:—Anarchism has two sides,—the philosophic and the revolutionary. The philosophic side is based upon the belief that man may become so civilized as to need neither the policeman or police station; the jailer or the jail; neither the soldier, the judge, the law-maker nor the sheriff to make him do his duty to himself, his fellow-man and the dumb creation.

Are you such a man? Or do you need the policeman, the jail and the soldier to make you do your duty? If you do you are in savagery, and need to be civilized.

The revolutionary side of Anarchism is produced by oppression of humanity—such as that through the Inquisition revived at Barcelona, Spain, by the mass- and confessional-attending Spanish brute, Canovas; and who was righteously executed by the revolutionary Anarchists of Europe.

Luna Hutchinson, Mt. Bullion, Calif.:—I have just read "What the Young Need to Know," by E. C. Walker, and feel to say that it is a lucid presentation of the facts that all should know, both young and old,—facts so long kept hidden by prudery and false ideas of sexual relations,—that this presentation is like viewing the Promised Land of Freedom from moral heights more elevated than was Pisgah's top of old.

When reading the chapter on the universal uses of sex life all around us, making lovely this dreary world of ours, which would else be a veritable desert to us, I felt to blush at the false pride that had crucified the savior Love, not knowing that the kingdom of heaven, or harmony, was in living in the knowledge of and obedience to Love's requirements, governed only by mutual desire and purity of thought.

Ashamed of Love's kisses; just as soon
Let midnight be ashamed of noon.

When, O when shall the purity of life and love be redeemed from the vileness and condemnation of ecclesiastical teachings and superstition? How long shall the ways of life be hedged in on the one hand in order to keep it pure, and wide open on the other hand, a slum-way of pollution, carrying down to destruction the bodies and souls of over fifty thousand annually of young girls to say nothing of the demoralization of a still greater number of men, causing disease, crime and death! Get this book and read it.

J. G. Truman, Lemon City, Fla.:—I rise to a question of privilege, as a debater would say.

In Lucifer, No. 678, Amos R. Smith gives a quotation from a previous article of mine and then jumps away off from the point, and still gives the impression that he is combatting what I said. He forgets the premise and goes off on the conclusion to something that sounds like it, but which in sense is nothing like the same. He says, "That is merely another way of saying what the Theist has so often said to the Atheist: 'If I believed as you do I would have no aim in life except to get sensual enjoyment out of it; I would pay no attention whatever to the rights of others, I would lie, steal, rape, murder,'" etc. Now I did not say that I would have any less regard for the happiness of others, nor feel any the less grieved by their sorrow. On the contrary, I think that I should be more impatient at seeming wrongs. I said that I should be as one lost in the woods without a compass or guiding star. That is, if I did not believe in some intelligence greater than mine I should not know whether I am progressing or turning backwards. I can see no guide but Nature. Take that away and I should be lost, in the sense of this word in which the context shows that I used it. Often when I have combatted a Christian on his idea of the infallibility of the Bible he has replied: "If you take away the Bible, what can you give in its place as a guide?" If he is intelligent I point to science, but if he is not I have no reply, for he knows nothing of science. But if Nature is not intelligent, then science is no guide, and I have no answer. Now, somebody else may have some other guide, but I have not found it.

And now, another argument that Mr. Smith brings up: The good Atheists and the bad Theists. The good Atheist only shows that a man may be better than his creed. The bad Theist counts for nothing since it is well known that a bad man will lie about his belief as well as about other things, when it suits his interest to do so. It is well known, also, that Atheism is not considered "respectable," therefore we may expect that a person who avows belief in Atheism is more honest than an Atheist that claims to be a Christian. But how many that claim to be Christians are followers of Christ? If they are not they are not Christians, and what are they?

Now I hold that a man with very large benevolence, large conscientiousness, hope, firmness and self-esteem will be a very good man whether he is a Theist or an Atheist, but all men are not so constituted. Then what? What check has Atheism for the man born with large selfish tendencies and small moral sentiments? He says that "Death ends all, and what does it matter if I cannot have what I want?" So he tries to get his fill regardless of consequences. Even Mr. Smith and his infidel farmer admits this. Then is the bad Theist to blame for a low hereditary condition, or can he make himself over anew? But he is a fact to be dealt with, and not a theory; and the logic of facts cannot be refuted by personalities.

Then with all due respect for the few noble reformers who are Atheists who have inherited strong humane feelings from pious ancestors, yet for the weak in moral sentiments who need inspiring with better motives and who comprise the great mass of humanity, I hold that Atheism is demoralizing and degrade ing, and that Atheism, in and of itself, has nothing to inspire good deeds. And in corroboration of this I find men who are really Atheists, yet outwardly hold to Christianity, and not from any bad motive, but because they think that Atheism is not good for the world in general. And I believe that the great mass of Atheists profess to believe in Christianity, or the prevailing religion in their locality because they see nothing worthy of contending for in their own lack of faith.

Then I object to the classification of those who contend for Atheism, when they count intelligent men and women who have studied Nature from scientific standpoints with the ignorant who profess to know nothing of God except a superstitious veneration for old traditions and legends written in a book. I regard it as an insult to my intelligence to be so classed. And the different moral effects of such beliefs can be no more alike than the differing ideas of God. Then when advocates of Atheism attempt to show the influence of Theism they put together two classes of persons no more alike than daylight and darkness, with the probability that they include, also, a class of Atheists in disguise. Thomas Paine was a Theist, and Constantine, called the great, professed to be a Theist, yet what had these two persons in common that they should be classed together?

What marriage may be in the case of two persons of cultivated faculties, identical in opinions and purposes, between whom exists that best kind of equality, similarity of powers and capacities with reciprocal superiority in them, so that each can enjoy the pleasures of looking up to the other and can have alternately the pleasure of leading and of being led in the path of development, I will not attempt to describe—to those who can conceive it there is no need, to those who cannot it would appear the dream of an enthusiast. But I maintain, with the profoundest conviction, that this and this only is the ideal of marriage, and that all opinions, customs and institutions which favor any other notion of it, or turn the conceptions or aspirations connected with it into any other direction, by whatever pretences they may be colored, are relics of primitive barbarism. The moral regeneration of mankind will only really commence when the most fundamental of social relations is placed under the rule of equal justice, and when human beings learn to cultivate their strongest sympathy with an equal in rights and cultivation.—John Stuart Mill.

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue," By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman." By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom," By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell, By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?" By X.
"Love and the Law," By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches," By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

OUR NEW HUMANITY.

Of all rights, the greatest is—to be born well.

Vol. II., No. 3 contains: The Rights of Children; by H. B. Kerr. An interesting presentation of the other side of the question. Incineration; by Walter Green. Startling theories, facts and figures. What are Women Here For? By R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. What the Young Need to Know.—A Primer of Sexual Rationalism; by E. C. Walker. The New Martyrdom; by Lillian Harman. The Will. From the French of Guy de Maupassant. A Free Man's Creed; by Moses Harman. Price, 25 cents.

The Red Heart in a White World.

A Suggestive Manual of Free Society, proposing the Comradeship of all those who believe in the Spirit of Liberty as the essential element in True Society, and the immediate inauguration and practical realization of the Free Life. Price, 20 cents, 10 copies $1. For sale by M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

682.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury, .10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake, .10
Vitae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
Degeneracy; C. L. James, .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

PROHIBITION AND SELF-GOVERNMENT

Their Irreconcilable Antagonisms.

A COLLECTION OF FUGITIVE PIECES BY E. C. WALKER.

Physical and Moral Ills Cannot be Cured by Legislative Enactments.

"Partly to save men from the same hereafter hell, partly to keep them out of the hells of the here and now, the patent moralists, prohibitionists, obscenists, and all others of that genus, seek to force their views of morality and temperance upon all, regardless of all differences of organization and environment; not only their views but their methods of reform, their cure-all specifics."

"When you resort to force you confess yourself beaten in the arena of science, reason and love, and thus establish your incompetence to deal with so tremendous a problem."

Price, five cents. Or send twenty-five cents with the name of one new three months subscriber and we will send you one copy of this interesting and instructive pamphlet free.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races. Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasions; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter IV., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, 5 cents.

ADVERTISER, affectionate, musical, desires to hear from ladies living in or near New York who believe and practice the New Ideal. D., care of Lucifer.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
Box 122, San Jose, Cal.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.

Bar Sinister and Lorit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .25

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .15

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .50

Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50
A Sex Revolution, " " .25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25

Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 1.50

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .15

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Effeminacy.—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda. In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

THE ADULT.

A journal for the advancement of freedom in sexual relationships, and the organ of the Legitimation League, London, England. Edited by George Bedborough. No. 1 is now ready. Contains Manifesto of the Legitimation League, Facing the Enemy, by Oswald Dawson; Prostitution and the British Army, by Victor Martell; Some Sex Problems Considered, by Orford Northcote; To the Obscure Jesus and Distracted Ones, by Leighton Pagan; etc., etc. Price five cents by mail from the office of Lucifer.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

We all need comradeship of thought.

The Firebrand, For burning away the cobwebs of Ignorance and superstition. The most fearless, radical and outspoken Anarchist paper printed in the English language. Eight pages, clear type, good paper. Unlike any other paper in the United States. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, or desire to better the social conditions subscribe for the Firebrand. 50 cents per year. Sample copies free. Box 94, Portland, Oregon.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Medical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

PRICE, 5 CENTS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., NO. 44. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 3, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE NO. 683

Humankind.

BY WILLIAM FRANCIS HARNARD.

Being, long slumbering in the womb of time,
There passing through the shape of lower birth
To come at length upon the waiting earth
And be its glory supreme in every clime;
To thee the boon of praise the singing rhyme:
To thee at last, confession of the dearth
Of utterance worthy to announce thy worth,
Of honor worthy of the soul sublime!
Thine infancy is done, yea, thou art near
The peaks that crown the difficult way of youth;
Beyond high plains of manhood wait thee where
Thy soul shall gain its birthright; where in sooth,
Thou shalt have Liberty nor think to fear,
Deep gazing in the very eyes of truth.

Paris, France, Sept., '97.

The Lesson of Luetgert, etc.

BY C. L. JAMES.

The trial of Luetgert is a stupendous object lesson in Anarchism—one of many such—whose moral the time appears propitious for pointing. It has cost the people of Cook Co. Ill. some $18,000 to fail in finding out whether Luetgert murdered his wife. If he is tried again, as proposed, it will cost them at a moderate estimate, $30,000. Result—they may perhaps hang him—perhaps not. Now, if the people of Cook Co. Ill. had been quite sure from the first that he murdered his wife—if the only difficulty had been getting him to hang—would they have given $30,000 for his head? Probably not exactly. What tolly, then, to spend that sum for an exceedingly doubtful prospect of getting his head!

If a man is positively known to have committed a crime like that of which Luetgert is accused, clearly he is a dangerous madman or degenerate whom it concerns the public to take care of. Nor would there be the slightest difficulty in such a case. Taking care of him would be unanimously agreed to as in the case of any dangerous maniac—no legislation, trial, or other expensive governmental machinery needed. But if he is not known to have committed the crime, clearly applying this machinery to find out if he committed the crime pays no one but those who run the machine. That he is suspected of committing it furnishes every one else all the protection that under such circumstances is necessary, and supplies that protection gratis. The pretense that governmental machinery affords any other is a lying trick of those who run the machine.

And what means they adopt to line their pockets! The indignation of Lawyer Vincent against Schaak's bulldosing of the witnesses and jury is most just and natural and should not stop where it rests at present, supposing the occasion for it to be as alleged, which no one who remembers the Anarchist trials will think very unlikely. But probably Lawyer Vincent was among those who approved the infamous precedents of the Anarchist trials, which have been worrying all who did so ever since. Thus do the assassins of the law teach

"Bloody inventions, which, being taught return To plague the inventors"— till they work out the destruction of those wrongs which gave them birth.

* * *

I apprehend that free lovers are not as helpless before a case like that of C., as Dora Boss imagines. C. is very fortunate in having the "bread and butter question" satisfactorily answered. But "she has no wings for heaven and no status on earth!" What's the matter with Dora's giving her the latter by continuing to behave toward her as if nothing had happened? Or the former by telling her that "mother" is the holiest of names, and that the indecent ceremony of informing a priest or magistrate that she would go the right way to become a mother was very properly omitted? Is Dora afraid the black would rub off perhaps? We free lovers will assure her that we have tested it, and that it is white. Or does she think the job too big? We have not found it so. Let but a few neighbors treat women with justice, as all free lovers do, and they will find others do the like. Mrs. Grundy is a tyrant only because a slave. Defy her and she will obey you.

* * *

I don't suppose it necessary to defend such a writer as Ruedebusch against A. Warren, and dislike saying anything more to rattle Mrs. Chandler; but I cannot help noticing one very threadbare fallacy they have in common—viz.: assuming that the "new" or varietist ideal is a masculine ideal. "Always, since the dawn of history," says Mr. Warren, "the practice of the male sex has been very much in accordance with this ideal." "If," says Mrs. Chandler, "the ideal of these men who claim to be reformers is that polygamy is the only solution of freedom in the sex relation, it is not probable that women will be freed very speedily." Now I assert that the practice of the male sex has been no more and no less in accordance with the "new" ideal than that of the female. Any doctor, lawyer, priest, or other person with professional means of information, will tell Mr. Warren that variety is just as common among married women as married men. Why then not as common among single women as single men? Clearly, because they are more likely to be found out, and thus to fall under the ban of certain laws against variety, which laws, as Mrs. Chandler witnesses, are men-made! What a slander then to say that men, under the same circumstances, are any more varietists than women! As to polygamy, the men (and women) "claiming to be reformers" (varietists) advocate no such thing. Polygamy, whether openly instituted or practiced under a flimsy pretense of monogamy, means denying, as far as possible, to the weaker sex a privilege which simply cannot be taken from the stronger. Variety means absolute personal liberty for both. Let me add that I have found plural relations among such men and women to be always plural on both sides. It is also in my experience that women of another kind, though themselves living in adultery, go into paroxysms on finding that their husbands have done likewise. Satyriasis and nymphomania are in perfect harmony, so far. To make a long story short—the ideal of pigs, whether male or female (I have noticed that these animals belong to both sexes)—the ideal equally of the bull-necked brute and the feather-headed fribble—is "Freedom for me, but not for my mate." The only difference is that one sex cannot be deprived of freedom, and the other can. If then freedom for both were a masculine ideal, that would be much to the credit of men. But it is not a fact—only a cant.

How Mr. Warren can pretend to be a free lover and yet so misrepresent Ruedebusch, I certainly am at a loss to imagine. I had always supposed it a central doctrine of free love that each man's and woman's sexual affairs were his or her own business, not to be "carefully concealed," but defended by refusal to account for them before anyone, which, so far, is just Ruedebusch's ideal. Will Mr. Warren explain how love can be free if anyone has a right to inquire into it when not wished to?

Concerning the Propaganda.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Pressure of other work has interfered with the preparation of reports of progress; my last previous article on this subject appeared in No. 678 of Lucifer, and should have been followed by one in No. 680. The membership has again doubled, but, although this rate of accession is very encouraging, the aggregate membership might be much greater than it is, and would, be greater if all those who intend to join "soon" had come in in the beginning However, procrastination, hindering though it is, is not a characteristic peculiar to social radicals.

Among letters from Contributing members and from those who have not designated the class into which they wish to go, are these:

I want to join your national association of Social Radicals, but I can not do it at present. Every dime at my command is engaged for three months ahead unless it happens that I can earn something beyond present prospects. —From California.

As our organization is not yet perfected, it is not necessary to send the membership fee with the name; the money can come later, after the election of the treasurer and other officers. I hope no friend will hold back because not able to forward the dollar at the moment of joining.

Please enroll me in the Contributory class of your new "national propagandistic association." I would prefer to be in the Active class, but circumstances make that impossible now. I have been a subscriber to Lucifer for ten years.—From Indiana.

One of the comrades, from whose first letter I made an excerpt in No. 678, writes that he is surprised that more of the old stand-bys and leaders have not enrolled themselves. They are coming in, I am confident; even our disappointed friend was far from being among the first to join, and yet no doubt he had good reasons for the delay, and the same is true of the Indiana worker and of others, it is very probable.

Inclosed find check for one dollar, for which put my name down as one of the members of the new Freedom association. . . . In answer to yours of the 22nd inst. would say, Put me down as Contributing member, but that don't mean that I will not do anything else. I shall do all in my power to further the end. I have not the education to be an Active member if you mean by that, as I suppose, one able to think and write. When necessary, I can, in my own way, go as far as any one else, but am unable to express myself.—From Pennsylvania.

In last week's Lucifer my attention was attracted to an article by its allusion to one in in No. 672, "A Call for Concerted Action," which I had failed to notice in my haste to give it to another to read. I have hunted it up, read and approve. I am past the age for active work, even if not lacking the ability; but am willing to give my sympathy, influence and material mite, as a Contributory friend of the cause of sexual liberty; hence inclose you one dollar.—From Ohio.

If these two friends—and others—will read the "Call" a little more carefully, they will see that they have misinterpreted the meaning of the word "active," as used in this connection. An "Active" member does not, necessarily, possess greater intellectual ability nor greater capacity and willingness for work than does a "Contributory" member; he or she differs from the Contributory member only in being both able and willing to stand out before the world as a free lover; as will be seen upon reading these paragraphs in the "Call for Concerted Action:"

"We would suggest that there be two classes of members: First, the known, active workers, those who can afford to come out into the open and frankly take part in the struggle, and Second, the passive, contributory, friends of the cause, those who, because of family, business or other considerations, cannot afford to align themselves in the division of public propagandists.

"The membership fee is to be one dollar per year in each class. In the public class the payment of this sum gives the right to vote for the election of officers and upon all issues brought up for determination in the annual and other conventions. Contributory members are assured inviolability of confidence, but may not vote. At any time, upon written notice, a contributory member may be transferred to the active class, or a member of the active to the contributory class. If deemed advisable, there may be a life membership, upon payment of from fifteen to twenty-five dollars, the rights of life members to be the same as those of annual members, in the two classes, respectively, of active workers and contributors."

I trust there will be no further misapprehension regarding the status and functions of Active and Contributory members.

Please put me down as in favor of national organization.—From Illinois.

I fear you think me but a poor worker in the field of Progress, as I am so slow in responding to your Call for enrollment. But the delay was enforced; I had to wait for the dollar, and now as I send it, I scarcely know in which class to go. It may be best, for the present, to have my name merely in the Contributory class, as it would, most likely, not be very wise to take active measures, because I hold a position as public teacher, and you know a person of that kind is not quite free—if he wishes to retain his position. Though I live under the old regime—in holy wedlock—I feel and know that the views advocated by you and others like you are correct. Unrestricted freedom alone can produce true happiness. I think the "friends" should know each other, though it may not always be best to have those who oppose us, or freedom, know the names of those who are striving to demolish the idols of a so-called civilized world.—From New Jersey.

I read your "Call" some time ago and immediately wrote my approval to Comrade . . . and should at once have forward my name, but my dollar was lacking. This morning, however, I received a letter from . . . of . . . saying he would send two dollars to Lillian, paying membership fees for him and myself. A few comrades are talking of forming a group in New Orleans this winter after quarantine is lifted, and so have a pleasant stopping place for any of the faithful who come that way. Like you, I think the day will come when we will be proud to say our names were down as charter members of the organization, but I think many of us will go into hot water before that time—but I don't mind that; I am used to such things.—From Louisiana.

Like so many others, this woman forgot to say in which class she wished to be enrolled.

For the present, I will go into the Contributory class. While I do not make any attempt to conceal from my intimate acquaintances my views on religious and social questions, open connection at this time with your grand association might draw down on me the wrath of the officials of the corporation of which I am an employee. I would be glad to see the last vestiges of the hypocritical social and religious system disappear, and I hope that the "concerted action" of all Liberals will be the beginning of the end. Liberals certainly cannot afford to indulge in recrimination when there remains so much to be accomplished against the common enemy.—From Wisconsin.

Yours, in compliance with Lillian Harman's request, received, and you have my thanks. I will add that you can place my name on the Active roll. Though remove from you, or "headquarters," I am sure the way will be open to meet and act.—A. A. Caswell, California.

I do not think I can take a very active part for some time, as I have another project in view, viz., the starting of a colony in Central America, which will take my attention mostly outside of the United States. But if you are willing to co-operate with a branch in Central America, I may be of more use to you in the not very remote future. In this you can help me and I think that we can be of service to you in several ways. However, I wish to be known to the front and to have the privilege of taking an active part if convenient.—J. G. Truman, Florida.

I want to be a member of the Comradeship of Social Radicals. I want to be counted among the Active members in this most important work. I expect to devote all my time not needed in obtaining subsistence to the advocacy of sex reform.—Myra Peppers, Iowa.

I am heartily in sympathy with the movement, and therefore inclose one dollar and request you to place my name on the list as an Active member of the organization and hope you call a convention as soon as possible, although I will not be able to attend.—F. J. Affhauser, California.

Since my last report was written, several men and women in this city have handed in their names, some as Active and others as Contributory members, and there will be further additions soon.

Yesterday this letter from British Columbia came to gladden me, and I know that it will delight our friends everywhere.

I have had some hesitation about joining your proposed organization, because I have noted how ephemeral such alliances are apt to be, how one is liable to be held responsible for all the vagaries and indiscretions of the members of a society professedly composed of "cranks." I have thought it might be better to work individually on one's own lines without being hampered by possibly entangling alliances. But reading of the arrest of Abner J. Pope and Henry Addis makes me decide that if there is any society whose object it is to resist the invasion of the right of free expression of opinion, I will join that society openly and actively. I do not know what has been written in the "Firebrand," nor do I care. I only know that these men are friends of freedom and that whatever they have published must have been with an eye single to good's glory and that their arrest must be an act of oppression by the allies of superstition and tyranny. Ever since I saw the bars of Charleston prison separate Ezra H. Heywood from his dear children, I have held the firm resolve to oppose the power that commits these outrages. The imprisonment of yourself, of Lillian Harman and Moses Harman, and this latest act of bigotry add to the reason why all who believe in the right of utterance should unite to assert themselves in opposition to the priest, politician and prude (the big G's—God, Government and Grundy).

Yours for the three big L's, Liberty, Learning and Love,
ROBT. C. ADAMS.

One dollar inclosed for membership fee (Active).

The letter of Captain Adams rings out like a bugle call in the gray of the battle morning. "I DO NOT KNOW WHAT HAS BEEN WRITTEN IN THE 'FIREBRAND,' NOR DO I CARE." That is the keynote. It is the prophecy of ultimate victory.

As the education of the people is the surest of defenses, the Propaganda is in fact a defense association. Its aim to show to all the necessity for freedom of thought, of speech, of press, of the mails, of life. Are you with us?

244 West 143rd St., New York City.

On Love Ideals.

BY J. WILLIAM LLOYD.

In Lucifer, No. 677, Mr. Ruedebusch appears to feel hurt and indignant toward varietists in general, and toward myself somewhat in particular, for what we have said or left unsaid about his book. He claims a general misunderstanding of his "Ideal," and takes pains to re-explain it as consisting simply in the doctrine that sexual relations should be entirely private, as a detestation "of the idea of ever being labeled as the sexual mate or partner of anyone."

I think I did rather fail to comprehend that his ideal consisted wholly of this, although I realized that he advised privacy, and I herewith apologise. Such ideal, however, is not novel, as divers of my free-love friends held it before the "New Ideal" was thought of. And it has always seemed to me that an ideal should be adapted to an ideal state of society. My ideal is to pay no taxes, but under present conditions I pay them without kicking because resistance would cause me trouble. Just so, under present conditions, I keep my sex-relations private, but see no reason why under ideal social conditions they might not be more openly spoken of.

My ideal state of society is one in which all non-invasive sex relations will be regarded as innocent and as matter-of-course as eating, sleeping or any other physical function. What need, then, at such a time of keeping them private?

Mr. Ruedebusch affirms dogmatically "there is no reason why society should or could know of it," i.e., your sex relation, but I must disagree on both points. The tremendous need of sexual knowledge is the reason why society "should" know all it can about sex relations, and (to take only one illustration) the having a child is one way in which society "could" know of a sexual embrace.

So far as present conditions of society render it politic I am very much in accord with his ideal of privacy, and, therefore, I too have not signed the "Call for Concerted Action" because I feel that anything like public organization or open and aggressive propagandism of free love would, at the present time, be most unwise and probably actually hinder social emancipation. I feel, with Mr. Warren, that freedom in the broad sense what we should all work for now. When we get that, "sexual emancipation" is a matter of course. But just now "sexual emancipation" is the tender point in the epidermis of a sexually superstitious public. It is not good policy to try to lead a mule by his hind feet. But lead him by the head and the hoofs follow. At present the pressure against sex freedom is comparatively speaking light. It has become the fashion of all novelists to treat sex problems, and the public as a rule resents interferance with any one treating sex from a scientific or artistic standpoint. Divorce is obtained with greater ease than ever before. By the use of a little policy and care in selecting language very free books and papers may be printed ("The Old and The New Ideal," and Lucifer, for example) with comparative freedom. Things are by no means ideal, but they might be infinitely worse. But get up an organized, active, defiant propaganda of free love, distributing "millions of leaflets and small pamphlets," systematically increasing the circulation of free love literature and establishing bureaus in the legislative centers to "antagonize" and "repeal" invasive legislation and you will soon see "what's what." All the slumbering sex superstition of the country will be aroused to fever heat. Thousands of pulpits will thunder the alarm and battle-cry against the "corrupters of youth" and "seducers of women." The vice societies will at last have full justification in the public eye and will be given a new lease of life. Not only will all "existing archaic and reactionary statutes" be enthusiastically affirmed and enforced but new ones will be eagerly passed to blot out every sign of the "virus." Papers like Lucifer will be thoroughly suppressed and all free sex publications prohibited with relentless vigor. Novelists and poets will have to please the public by tabooing sex, and everywhere there will be a revival of Puritanism invoking the mob and the law against the "vile" and the "sensual." Martyrdom or silence will be the fate of all who now so bravely "Call." Personally I am warmly friendly to those who issue this "Call." I would like to see free lovers quietly organized and made acquainted with each other. I approve a free love propaganda and work for it. But I would use all the strategy and privacy honest human nature is capable of. I hate to see a naked man go into a den of tigers to draw their teeth, however sublime the spectacle.

Therefore, because the "New Idealists" advocate a propaganda of combined activity and privacy I am with them. Their methods, I believe, promise greater success with less reaction. Drop the "National Propaganda," comrades, and join the "New Idealists."

But this is a digression. Mr. Ruedebusch, amusingly enough, forgets all about his ideal of privacy when he turns to my ideal, and manifests a very "Old" sort of curiosity as to the sexual relations of my "central" and "side lovers." Really I do not see that sex relations have any more to do with my ideal than with his. It is simply no body's business what kind of association a man has with his "central" or his "side loves," with all of them or none of them. Love is love, with or without sex expression.

My claim is that human love naturally flows into the form of a central and side loves; that this is the type, from which, of course, there are all sorts of individual variations, as from all other types; and my ideal is that this should be generally recognized as scientific fact and normal affectional evolution by lovers everywhere. Such recognition will be the death blow to jealousy.

And for the life of me I can see no reason why any one should object to being called a "side lover" more than a friend or younger son. It is a natural fact, that's all. Especially as when the ideal, where fulfilled, makes every "side lover" of one person the "central lover" of some other. Only the holding of the old ideal, which Mr. Ruedebusch seems himself to hold, that every love should be a central one, or pretend to be, can make objectionable the frankness of side loving. Personally when I meet some queenly woman, whose intellect, virtues and beauty render her lovely in my sight, I am very proud to win any interest in her regard. It is her due that many men should love her and that the one man, best fitted, should hold her innermost love. And it is no "depreciation" of me if I am not that man, seeing that the whole question is not one of superiority or inferiority but of peculiar fitness.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus: so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, upon Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 Congress St., Tuesday evening, Nov. 2. Subject for discussion, "The Evolution of the Family."

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$376.25
Howard Tuttle,	1.50
Eliza D. Luce,	12.00

Albert Chavannes contributes ten copies of his novel, "In Brighter Climes, or What Samuel Bascom saw in Socioland," one of the newer dreams, or prophecies, of what human society will be under freedom of opportunity, and when, as a race, we shall have evoluted above the plane of cannibalism. The price of this path-finder in social science is only twenty-five cents. Sent post paid from this office, on receipt of this amount in postage stamps, or any other form of United States currency.

How to Train the Young Sex-wise.

Confessedly the most difficult and perplexing of all the problems relating to the education of the young is that which pertains to the uses and abuses of sex. So fearful is the average parent and teacher that knowledge of sex will be misapplied that most guardians of the young prefer to leave their charges in utter ignorance of this most powerful and most important of all the appetites and passions. In the book called "Loma," a brief review of which will be found in this issue of Lucifer, there is much space given to a discussion of this problem. Among other things Loma is made to say to his host, Dr. Bell:

"Another condition which is in our favor, is that the natural desires of the affectional nature are satisfied from infancy to old age. The very first impression that is made upon the young citizen is, that he is loved, and that his affection is desired in return. He is kissed, caressed and encouraged to exercise his own affection by both sexes from the beginning to the end of his life. Now, on this planet you violate the law of the development of love by instructing your young people that it is dangerous and indecent to express love freely. As soon as the young citizen passes out of his swaddling clothes he begins to despise the caresses of his mother, and he is taught that it is unmanly and babyish to be affectionate. Your girl is taught to absolutely strangle her affections until marriage, in order that she may then gratify the selfish whim of the tyrant who is to own her, by being what he calls 'chaste;' that is, that she has never given expression to a single impulse of love to any fellow-creature of the opposite sex, except his arrogant, ignorant and selfish self. As a consequence of this sentiment and doctrine, there are thousands of your young men and women who are in a state of sexual starvation, and as they have been starved from their youth up, they have no conception of what is right. With the larger liberties you allow your boys, the majority of them become rakes, and satisfy their passions whenever and wherever they can, without taste or discrimination, and after a few years of such dissipation they are utterly unfit for a pure sexual association with any woman. On the other hand, your girls either become sexually paralyzed, or, yielding to the dictates of strong impulses, they violate the customs of your society, and, if discovered, they are disgraced.

"Now, upon our planet we have no such conditions. The fact that love is made a subject of study and instruction, the same as music or any other department of knowledge, has enabled us to obtain the same desirable results. The affection which exists between the parent and child is never allowed to grow cold. You will see a mother of advanced age surrounded by stalwart sons and beautiful daughters, and perhaps a score of grandchildren, and by actual count you will see that she receives as many, or perhaps more, demonstrations of affection in the course of a day as she received when she was a beautiful young baby in her mother's arms. As between the sexes, and persons of the same age, the same spirit of affection prevails. Young persons become attached to each other in infancy, and continue through life to give and receive kisses and caresses with the greatest freedom.

"As a consequence, we do not have the condition of starvation to contend with, and the affectional natures of our young men and women being satisfied by these conditions, they are ready to consider the sexual relations with sound judgment and to adopt that course of action which the experience of the race has proved to be in accord with the law of mathematical equity and the best practical results. Another fact which conduces greatly to the establishment of correct moral conditions is, that sexual intercourse is not considered forbidden fruit. It is regarded as a purely natural function, and the imagination of the young citizen is not inflamed by its being surrounded by the air of mystery which pervades all classes on the earth. The destruction of the belief in the supernatural, which was the first principle of Gallheim's code, rendered all subjects free to the investigation of the people, and as soon as the curiosity of the young citizen is satisfied with reference to his sexual functions, and he understands them, he dismisses the subject from his mind and engages himself in the pleasures which are suitable to his age, with the full belief, that, when he reaches maturity, he will have all of the enjoyment intended by nature in the exercise of those parts of his constitution.

"With these explanations, you can readily understand that it is not difficult to enforce the doctrine which is universally accepted on Venus, that sexual intercourse should not take place until the participants have reached maturity. We find that our male citizens usually become fully mature at the age of twenty-five, and the female citizens about five years younger. Hence the question of indulgence does not present itself to the consideration of the young members of society until they are sufficiently mature to meet it with sound judgment."

"Loma, A Citizen of Venus"

Startling in its audacity, interesting in its theories, and ingenious in its construction is the 400-page novel written by Professor William Windsor, the well-known phrenologist and psychologist, entitled "Loma, a Citizen of Venus." The story is of surpassing interest and few persons can read it without gaining new and valuable ideas on sociology, sexology and the absurdity of conventional morality.

The hero is Loma who is translated from the planet Venus to the earth just in time to save the life of a girl who has jumped into Lake Michigan to drown herself and kill her unborn babe. Loma and Dr. Bell, a broad-minded practitioner, take charge of the girl and instruct her in the true nature of the sexual desires and functions. Loma tells her that her child is to be a great teacher and will revolutionize society. In his conversation he gives utterance to new and startling astronomical theories. He contends that physical astronomy as now taught is radically wrong in its principles and statements. He disputes Newton's theory of gravitation, declares matter does not attract matter and that the sun does not radiate light and heat. More than this, he gives reasons for his statements.

Loma also says the wearing of clothing is productive of disease and that the prudery generally called modesty is a crime, rather than a virtue. In speaking of the expression of love he says:

"It is not only the right but the duty of every sane man and woman to cultivate and express love for as many individuals as possible. The larger the number of lovers, the richer becomes the life. This does not mean promiscuous love, nor promiscuous sexual association, but it does mean the largest possible freedom in social intercourse. It means that if a woman loves a man, or if a man loves a woman, that they should have the privilege of meeting as often as they please, when and where they please, and expressing their love for each other in any language they choose, whether it be spoken, written or expressed in kisses, caresses, or merely friendly greetings. This right is inalienable, according to all dictates of sound public policy, and any contract which deprives a man or woman of this liberty is void.

"Under your present conditions, if a man and woman meet each other freely, or a married man or woman is seen to any great extent with some other person of the other sex, you assume that they have met for sexual intercourse, and a scandal is the result. This is greatly augmented if there is the slightest evidence that they have kissed or caressed each other. All of this grows out of a degraded conception of love which has been forced on the human mind by the fact that man has been trained to regard woman as solely an object for the expression of sexual passion, and your men of the present generation cannot understand any other relationship.

"As soon as woman escapes from the bondage of marriage she will regulate this matter herself. She will demand that men recognize the purity of her motives, and she will teach them that if they wish to find favor in her eyes, they must be capable of enjoying all the other pleasures of life with her, without associating her with the gratification of mere passion. When men and women learn to associate on this plane the espionage of women will cease. As it is now, a man is suspicious of his associate, because his own conscience tells him in many cases that if she is not unfaithful to her marriage vow, it is not because she has not ample provocation.

"Men establish an espionage on women, because they are suspicious and selfish. Women assist in this espionage with incredible zeal, because they are jealous and selfish, and every woman who can be crowded off the social stage makes that much more room for the degraded slaves who do the spying and gossiping. When this slavery and degradation is abolished with marriage, and men and women associate upon an equal plane, the artificial crimes of adultery and fornication will disappear, friendship and love will be cultivated, better men and women will appear, and harmony will exist where discord now prevails."

Persons who have read Grant Allen's "The Woman Who Did," and "The British Barbarians" should by all means read "Loma," for it is more radical and consistent in its opposition to the sexual slavery of women than is either of the noted English author's books. "Loma" is handsomely bound in cloth with an illuminated cover. Price $1.50. Address orders to this office.

It seems so clear to me that all our laws, customs and traditions bearing on the relations of the sexes had their rise in barbarism, that I wonder all do not recognize the fact.—"Prodigal Daughter."

In Memoriam.

Etta Galvin closed her eyes in the last mortal sleep, Saturday, Oct. 23. She was a member of "Lucifer circle" and her life was an exemplification of her belief in high endeavor unrestricted by the regulations of church or state. She was born in Boston, Mass., Sept. 7, 1864. Although her mother was a Roman Catholic and her father a Protestant Methodist, Etta's clean conscience and humane disposition rose superior to the formality of religion and the impulse of her gentle life she expressed in the words, "A great hope of larger opportunities for spiritual unfoldment and a development of that which is best in human endeavor."

With such a hope she looked forward to the termination of her long illness with joy. Her ten-year-old boy was drowned at a picnic in July, 1896, and she never recovered from the shock of that bereavement. Her own words were, "At that moment something went out of my life which left me weaker than I was before." Consumption was her last illness.

Etta was a thorough radical and her funeral, at her request, was conducted with simplicity. A single red rose was placed on her breast. A brief sketch of her life was read by Moses Harman who also spoke of his acquaintance with her and of her beautiful character. He referred to the simplicity of the funeral and incidentally spoke of the great and unnecessary expense that usually attends such services. J. M. C.

Prof. A. B. Severance.

The month of October, Era of Man 297, has chronicled the demise of not a few of earth's denizens who had made their mark among men, as leaders of thought and of action. Prof. A. B. Severance, for many years a well known citizen of Milwaukee, Wis., a pioneer worker in all humanitarian reforms, passed peacefully from earth-life at North Chicago, Oct. 8. He was nearly eighty years of age, and yet with the exception of the color of his hair he carried the impression of youth, or rather of the prime of vigorous manhood. The papers of North Chicago and of Milwaukee have had much to say in praise of his exceptionally courageous, honorable and useful life. For many years he was a subscriber to and earnest co-worker with Lucifer. To his many personal friends, scattered over many states, as one who knew and loved him I extend sincere sympathy in this hour of their bereavement. M. H.

Sociologic Lesson. No. LII.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

STABILITY OF MONEY. A government or association having the power of taxation, can keep its bills in strict agreement with a fixed standard, as shown in No. 35. For instance, if it is found that actual prices are above the standard, it will show the necessity for calling in part of the outstanding currency by increased taxation. This mode of regulation is effective but needs to be supplemented by a process which will be more prompt; preserving an equilibrium, like the fly wheel in machinery. The government should keep always for sale interest bearing bonds, at a fluctuating price. When currency is to be called in, to reduce prices, a slight diminution in the price of the bonds will produce the effect. As soon as the standard is restord, the price should be raised again. The amount of taxation will then be regulated so as to make the total issue of the bonds as small as practicable.

The issue of such bills by an association would be much facilitated from the fact that there would be a large issue in payment for services, and a large withdrawal in payment for articles of consumption furnished to members, while prices would be chiefly fixed by the association itself.

As stated in No. 38, increasing the amount of currency by checks or other forms of currency, would not affect prices; for they would depend solely upon the volume of the notes liable to be withdrawn by taxation.

After full consideration I have abandoned the attempt referred to in No. 37, to base a currency upon labor. I have found no remedy for the defects of that system; whereas the system now proposed embraces all its advantages, with the additional advantage of stability in prices.

[The question of money, the problem of a circulating medium to facilitate exchanges of commodities and for the more speedy transaction of business of all kinds, is a question that so nearly concerns all social reforms that I do not think it necessary to offer an apology for devoting a part—though necessarily a small part—of Lucifer's limited space to the consideration of this problem. Friend Parkhurst asks but little space, and if those who care to reply to him will confine their remarks to similar limits, there will probably be little complaint from publisher or reader. Not wishing to take the space that others might better occupy I will only say in regard to the above "lesson" that from the libertarian standpoint, as I see it, any issue of "interest bearing bonds," with the sheriff, the army and the navy at their back, is simply a form of despotism, of robbery under the guise of legality, and no nation or people can ever be free, politically or otherwise, while they submit to such legislation, such government. Whatever the name the essential principle of all such government is monarchy. M. H.]

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LXII.

At the close of a warm sunny day they alighted at "Willow Grove," the name of the station nearest their future home. Wagons were in waiting, upon which their effects were loaded.

"But we will walk!" said Owen, "only ten minutes. The exercise will do us good, after our long confinement with scarcely any movement."

And with an arm encircling Cora's waist he led the way. Many were the exclamations of delight as beauty after beauty unfolded itself before their eyes, but when a turn in the roadway brought in full view the imposing stone structure with its many arches and turrets, its profusion of vines and flowers, a long drawn "Oh!" escaped from each beholder.

Owen drew Cora aside so as to permit the next couple, Lawrence and Hilda, to be first. Silently every man bared his head. Lawrence kissed the little hand resting upon his arm,

"Our Hilda's Home!"

With hands clasped above her heart Hilda stood and gazed.

"My dream realized! Mine the dream, but yours," turning to Owen, "the realization. To you belongs the honor and greatness of this hour."

"Tut! tut! little one! How worthless my millions without the plan,—without the work of the mighty mind. Have you no wish reserved for the architect?"

With tears suffusing her sight she turned and extended both hands to Lawrence, who reverently knelt and bowed his head over them.

"Mine own! I may hope to win you now. To be worthy of your sweet love!" Edith and Paul saw, and a quick glance of comprehension flashed from eye to eye.

Owen's arm encircled his precious Cora and a mystical silence fell over this band of lovers. Who of them all could resist the supreme eloquence of the hour? Margaret leaned her head against Wilbur's shoulder and Wilbur's dark head was bowed over Margaret's fair one, reminding us of "Faust and Gretchen." Imelda's wine-brown eyes were drinking in the adoration of Norman's blue ones. Her hands went up to his face, taking it between them,

"You understand me now?"

"Long, long ago, my dear one."

And a kiss followed the words, a seal, the emblem of his love and trust.

Milton's hand pressed a blonde head to his breast and the bright, happy face that is turned up to him promises oblivion for the dark hours in his past life.

Our stately Edith must not be forgotten. A warm glow suffuses her cheeks as she also is drawn closer to a manly breast, and glancing up her dark lustrous eyes meet those of the young physician in unutterable love and trust.

Mrs. Leland is looking on; her eyes wander from the grand structure over the spacious grounds and thence from couple to couple, every face illumined with a commingling of love, hope and joy, as they stand knocking at the door of an unknown world. Will it fulfill all their expectations? Her eyes fill with tears. Unconsciously she folds her hands as she reads the love-lit faces and sees there the fond hopes that unite each lover couple. Presently an arm steals about her neck and a cherished voice says,

"I will be your lover, my own mother. You are too young, by far, to be thus left alone!"

She smiles as she answers:

"I know you are that, my boy, but in time you will be a true lover of a true and perfect woman."

Meanwhile the younger portion of our band make themselves more noisily heard. They feel the influence of the surrounding beauty, and, as is natural, give vent to exultant cries and shouts. Presently Elmer's voice is heard demanding:

"I say, why are we all standing out here? I am hungry and tired; a bath and supper will go good, I'll wager."

Thus admonished a forward movement was again made, and in a very few minutes the welcoming portals had opened and received them. Flowers! flowers! A profusion of flowers everywhere. Each room had been furnished and decorated with a view to being especially adapted to the tastes of its future inmate. Owen took delight in pointing out each room to its owner. When all had sufficiently admired their sanctums a half hour was spent in baths and other refreshments. Pretty, airy and comfortable dresses were donned. Some of the rare flowers that filled the vases were fastened in the hair and at the waists of our happy girls and on the coat lapels of those of the masculine gender. Then the way to the drawing room was found, or simply the "parlor," as was the term for this surpassingly beautiful room.

Soon all had gathered in. The lovely "salon" had been duly admired—such comfort and ease, so cosy and homelike. Everything beautiful. Rich, but not too grand for use. Dinner, supper, or whatever you might choose to call the evening meal, was then announced, and all repaired to the dining hall. Have we already described this room? No! Then we must enter with our dear friends and while noting the effect upon them we will try to describe, just a little, what kind of place it was that had been selected in which to partake of the main meal of the day.

An apartment ample in dimensions; high and arched; with walls of glass to permit the light of day to flood the place; for other life was here to thrive than that alone of our free love circle. Rare plants; palms and cactus; trailing vines; sweet scented flowers in great profusion and under canopies as in an alcove. The dining table had been set, covered with snowy linen and decked with flowers. Flowers in all shapes and forms, and of all colors. Above the table suspended from the ceiling was hung a large bell, formed of white carnations, held in place by two cupids floating in the air. The center of the table held a huge basin of finest porcelain, forming a miniature pond containing a delicate fountain showering coolness into the sweet-scented air. The basin itself filled with the most perfect of water lilies, the golden centers gleaming in the snowy depths. Vases filled with rare roses; delicate green wreathings; the various dishes; while the air was filled with delicious music,—low and sweet. Luscious fruits, nuts and sweet new milk, and such simple fare, formed the chief part of the repast that had been prepared. Meats and rich pastries had been dispensed with. But when had the participants ever enjoyed a meal more keenly? The folding doors of those transparent walls had been thrown wide open and the pure refreshing evening air was wafted in to them, bearing with it the promise of golden future; while jest and wit and mirth flashed and sparkled like costly jewels in the bright gas light.

But time was gliding by on tireless wings. The sun was nearing the horizon, casting its last golden rays aslant upon distant waters of the river, and farther on the lake, causing the waters to be replendent with the reflection of the setting orb. Like a living, glowing, quivering mass of liquid fire were the dancing, rippling waves, and all looked on this display of nature's charms with a feeling of awe and veneration. Silently they stood grouped, loving forms were drawn closer and firmer together as they watched the grand and glorious sight. Slowly the glowing orb sank beyond the distant heights; slowly the waters changed their gleaming brilliance to a more somber quietness; and as daylight disappeared ushering in the twilight with its fantastic shadows, the coming night sent forth its heralds. The weird humming of the near insects and the occasional hoot of the distant owl. The rising moon cast its mellow rays on the peaceful landscape, causing the waters of the lake in the distance to gleam with a silvery sheen. All these brought with them a quiet peace that could never be felt in the heart of the busy city.

No music or song thrilled the air on this first evening in the new home. Hearts were too full for utterance; too full for mirthful joy. Tired with their journey, filled with grave and subtile musings our friends sought quiet rather than mirth. Here and there a tear glistened on the lashes of some bright eye, to be kissed away by the lips of love. The new life had begun. Dreams were now to be tested, verified, and each and all looked anxiously to the future—a future filled with hope, with trust, with high anticipation, and yet never for one moment forgetting that this same future would bring grave duties and responsibilities—duties and responsibilities that would show whether or not this little band of reformers, of innovators, was composed of the right elements to achieve success in a comparatively untried field of human endeavor.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Editor Schilling in "The Advance," Milwaukee, Wis.:—We have no liberty of the press. Moses Harman served several years in Kansas state prison, because he dared use plain language in advocating the emancipation of woman. Several young men are in jail in Oregon today because they published a paper called "The Firebrand" favoring abolition of rule; and thus many cases could be cited.

Howard Tuttle, Milwaukee, Wis.:—I enclose two dollars. Apply this to six months subscription. The balance as you please, and notify me when the subscription expires and I will renew. Your paper is worth far more than the price. I am sorry not to be able to send you one hundred dollars. I have always hated the interference of church or state, and many years ago took a wife without consulting them, and we are still happy and well mated and our children are not taught superstitions and dogmas.

Albert Chavannes, Knoxville, Tenn.:—While I do not entirely agree with you, as you know, I am much interested in your work and think you are doing much to help progress. If I do not take as active a part in the same lines it is because I think I am better qualified for other work. I like the broad spirit of the editors of Lucifer, and think that the free thinkers and progressive minds of the United States, have in past few years learned a great deal as to toleration, and how to work together even when there are important differences in their views. There is yet too much of fault finding, but the right spirit is growing.

William Croston, Bradford, Mass.:—Enclosed find fifty cents for Lucifer thirteen weeks, and the enclosed list of pamphlets. Would you be so kind as to negotiate for me a year's subscription to "Firebrand"?—for which I enclose fifty cents.

[We gladly take subscriptions for, and forward money to the "Firebrand," the paper whose editors are now prosecuted for having opinions different from those now considered right and proper by the privileged classes, and for having the courage to print and circulate those opinions through the what should be the common mail. It is sincerely to be hoped that all who value freedom and justice will join hands and voices in protest against this latest act of governmental suppression of speech and of press, and that all who can afford it will send substantial aid to keep the "Firebrand" brightly burning, until the cobwebs of superstition and ignorance that enmesh the popular mind shall be utterly consumed. M. H.]

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

* * *

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue," By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman." By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom," By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell. By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?" By X.
"Love and the Law," By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches," By Tolstoi.

Help spread the right by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.

This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE, MARRIAGE, AND DIVORCE

And the Sovereignty of the Individual.

A Discussion between Henry James, Horace Greely, and Stephen Pearl Andrews. There are here included the final replies of Mr. Andrews, refused by the New York Tribune, and a subsequent discussion, occurring twenty years later, between Mr. James and Mr. Andrews.

"The great lesson for the world to learn is that HUMAN BEINGS DO NOT NEED TO BE TAKEN CARE OF. What they do need is such conditions of justice and freedom as to enable them to take care of themselves. Protection, provided for by another, and subject to his will as the return tribute, they pine, and sicken, and die. This is true equally of women as of men; as true of wives as it is of vassals or serfs. Our whole existing marital system is the house of bondage and the slaughter-house of the female sex. Whether its evils are inherent or incidental, whether they belong to the essence or the administration of the institution, whether they are remediable without or only by means of revolution, are the questions that now have to be discussed."

Price 25 cents. Address LUCIFER, 1304 W. Congress Street, Chicago.

OUR NEW HUMANITY.

Of all rights, the greatest is—to be born well.

Vol. II., No. 3 contains: The Rights of Children; by E. B. Kerr. An interesting presentation of the other side of the question. Incineration; by Walter Breen. Startling theories, facts and figures. What are Women Here For? By E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. What the Young Need to Know.—A Primer of Sexual Rationalism; by E. C. Walker. The New Marryrdom; by Lillian Harman. The Will: From the French of Guy de Maupassant. A Free Man's Creed; by Moses Harman. Price, 25 cents.

The Red Heart in a White World.

A Suggestive Manual of Free Society, proposing the Comradeship of all those who believe in the Spirit of Liberty as the essential element in True Society, and the immediate inauguration and practical realization of the Free Life. Price 2* cents, 10 copies $1. For sale by M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. *  Pages.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whitnick. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Babcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

683.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
Practical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.03
Sexual Enslavement of Women; " "	.03
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.10
n Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,	10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury,	.10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	25
Degeneracy; C. L. James,	.25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

PROHIBITION AND SELF-GOVERNMENT

Their Irreconcilable Antagonisms.

A COLLECTION OF FUGITIVE PIECES BY E. C. WALKER,

Physical and Moral Ills Cannot be Cured by Legislative Enactments.

"Partly to save men from the same hereafter hell, partly to keep them out of the hells of the here and now, the patent moralists, prohibitionists, obscenists, and all others of that genus, seek to force their views of morality and temperance upon all, regardless of all differences of organization and environment; not only their views but their methods of reform, their cure-all specifics."

"When you resort to force you confess yourself beaten in the arena of science, reason and love, and thus establish your incompetence to deal with so tremendous a problem."

Price, five cents. Or send twenty-five cents with the name of one new three months subscriber and we will send you one copy of this interesting and instructive pamphlet free.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races. Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasions; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter V., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, 5 cents.

A DVERTISER, affectionate, musical, desires to hear from ladies living in or near New York who believe and practice the New Ideal. D., care of Lucifer.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson Barker,
Box 128, San Jose, Cal.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.

For Sinister and Licit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .20

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .10

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10

Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50

Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00

Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50

A Sex Revolution, " " .25

Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25

Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, $ 1.00

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .5

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEA.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Free-thinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Ebriety,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

THE UNREVEALED RELIGION.

An address of great depth, strength, and beauty. By the veteran, J. K. Ingalls.

"The rainbow is not less beautiful and wonderful to me than to Noah, or to the aborigines, because I understand something of optics and the refraction of light. The rose is not less attractive because botany has taught us to analyze and classify it. The Good of Truth, whether we worship it as an entity or as a personality, or conceive of it as impersonal, is an ever-living and persistent principle man can never cease to revere and admire. And his growth in knowledge and progress in all things refining and elevating to his nature will be promoted, not retarded, by the true but unrevealed, and as yet unloved religion, 'The Religion of Progress'."

Price, 5 cents each; Address LUCIFER, 1394 W. Congress Street, Chicago

Ladies who are willing to write to gentleman on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Emma Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

We all need comradeship of thought.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 131 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64, office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 131 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

PRICE, 5 CENTS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 45. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 10, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 684

"Whom the Lord Loveth, He Chasteneth."

BY E. C. WALKER.

This thought is about the only present comfort of Comstock the Censor. The superservicable Agent of the Vice Society some time since began a prosecution against Meyer Chinsky, a bookseller on Ludlow Street, New York City, for selling a book entitled "Massa Solo," meaning "The Story of the Crucified One." Mr. Rosenthal, attorney for the defense, said that the prosecution was inspired by the Hebrew Missionary Union, an organization formed for the purpose of converting Hebrews to Christianity. Comstock did not deny this, but introduced a witness whose translations of portions of the incriminated book tended to sustain the charges made by the Censor. In rebuttal, Lawyer Rosenthal presented another expert, who made a translation of the same passages which made them appear entirely innocent. Staggered by the two contradictory versions, the court (Special Sessions) continued the case.

In the meantime, the "Truth Seeker" discovered that "Massa Solo" is only the Hebrew work a translation of which D. M. Bennett published two decades ago under the title of "Sepher Toldoth Jeshu, or Book of the Generation of Jesus." The "Truth Seeker" remarks: "It has been on the shelves of 'The Truth Seeker' book store ever since that time without the incendiary character of it being suspected. Examination now fails to reveal anything that need to make Mr. Comstock feel immodest."

On the 21st of October the hearing was continued. As usual, the vice promoter was very officious in giving his advice to the prosecuting officers. This was the cause of his sorrows. The New York "Herald" of the 22nd inst. tells the story of the discomfiture of the meddler in this way:

"Anthony Comstock sat within the railing in a space usually reserved for the District Attorney. Whenever Assistant District Attorney Aldrich was stumped by a condition of literature for which his ignorance of Hebrew excused him, Mr. Comstock, who had had a translation of the objectionable passages made, leaned forward and prompted him as to what questions he should ask.

"The hearing finally simmered down to a question of providing the court with an adequate translation of the work. Mr. Rosenthal said that he would accept one that had already been made by Mr. Levy, with the exception of those passages which were regarded as immoral and which he contended were not accurately translated, and could not be properly construed without a consideration of the whole work.

"This started Assistant District Attorney Aldrich to consult with Mr. Comstock as to the advisability of accepting this proposition. After the two had discussed the matter for a short time Mr. Aldrich said that after consultation with Mr. Comstock they had decided that it might not be advisable to accept Mr. Rosenthal's proposition. Mr Jerome at once indicated that he was exceedingly impatient at Comstock's interference. Regarding the Assistant District Attorney with considerable severity, he said:

"'The impression of this Court is that you, as District Attorney, are the law officer of this county, and that it is not necessary for you to receive instructions from Mr. Comstock as to the manner in which this case should be conducted, inasmuch as Mr. Comstock is absolutely ignorant of all the law in all its various phases, and assumes a position in this court to which he is not entitled.'

"Mr. Comstock turned pale with astonishment at this unexpected assault upon his dignity, and, half rising from his chair, began to protest against the words of Judge Jerome. He got no further than the phrase, 'I protest,' when Judge Jerome, leaning forward over the desk in front of him and pointing his forefinger at the astonished censor, exclaimed in tones easily audible in the main corridor:

"'Sit down, there! Sit down!'

"'I won't sit down,' said Mr. Comstock, 'and be insulted'—

"'You sit down!' declared Judge Jerome with an emphasis which brought all the court officers toward Mr. Comstock. 'You sit down at once or get outside the rail! You have no business where you are! Get outside the rail, anyway, and at once!'

"'I'll go outside the rail,' said Mr. Comstock, quivering with excitement, 'but I insist that I have a right in this court, and I protest against being insulted in the way that I have been.'

"'Go outside the rail!' commanded the presiding Judge with a determination in his tones which Mr. Comstock apparently recognized, for he arose and, throwing his overcoat over his arm, swung himself through the little gate and took a seat, with a formidable shock, on one of the benches reserved for the witnesses. 'Sit down there!' continued Judge Jerome, 'and don't interrupt the proceedings of this court, or we will see if we can't compel you to keep quiet.'

"Mr. Comstock kept quiet, Judge Jerome's lips curled a little as he proceeded with the hearing of the case. It was finally agreed by the contestants that Mr. Rosenthal should provide translations for the Court, and the case was adjourned until December."

At the adjournment, Comstock was boiling with wrath. He said:

"I have evidence which I will produce in the proper time, showing that the law is not properly administered in this court, and I will see whether Judge Jerome dares to insult me as he has done. I am an officer of this court, and I have as much right to be here and to take part in the proceedings as he has, and I propose to maintain my rights."

It is certain that Comstock was never elected to any judicial office, and if he holds an appointment from any competent authority, what is it? So far as I know, he is not a lawyer, and hence he is not an assistant district attorney, for all he assumes the prerogatives of such an officer. Is he anything more, as regards the local courts, than an informer in the employ of the Vice Society, by sufferance giving advice to the prosecutors?

One of the Censor's statements lets us see into his mind by a side window, as it were, and the revelation suggests to us how extremely flexible the law against "indecency" is in the hands of such a man. He declares that he was "indecently assaulted" by Judge Jerome! No wonder that one of the accusations against "Massa Solo" is "profanity," which, presumably, brings the book within the purview of the law prohibiting "indecent" literature!

It often has been said—I have said it myself—that Anthony Comstock is merely the executor of the law; that if he was not at the head of the Vice Society there would be some one else there, who might be much worse than Comstock. While it cannot be disputed that the stupid prudery and anti-naturalism of the people are the powers "behind the throne" sustaining this iniquitous legislation, it is equally true that Anthony Comstock is the father of the statutes as they stand today. They are veritable "Comstock laws." He got them through Congress in 1873, he had since had them strengthened for evil, and to him is largely chargeable the discredit of the recent extension of their inhibitions to inter-state commerce by express. He enforces the law, but he, more than any other man, also made the law. He cannot take shelter behind that convenient refuge of cowardly politicians, the plea that, as a "law-abiding" citizen and officer he is dutifully enforcing a statute, regardless of his own feelings. He created the job that feeds him.

By the Way.

BY WILLIAM GILMOUR.

For some time past I have thought that a form of association for the promulgation of the principles of freedom in sexual relationships as against bond marriage, in Glasgow would be helpful in extending the work of the Legitimation League, and I herewith ask all, in or near the city, who may have strong sympathies in this direction to let me know, by postal card, if they are willing to join such an association.

The "Call" to action by Mr. E. C. Walker, the editor's comments re "organization," and the approval of such action by Mr. Dawson has stimulated me to make the present appeal. Mr. George Bedborough has promised to bring the matter before the Committee of the League in London, and I am hopeful that I shall have their support.

I do not doubt but there are plenty of friends here who can give a practical shape to this union, but pro tem I make no allusion as to rules, contributions, etc., I prefer awaiting responses.

Apart from the question of economic freedom—for men and women, there is one argument which is being used just now by Secularist lecturers to the effect that if the women of the future wish to be free they must go on agitating for "the freedom to vote." Well, voting is a most conventional thing nowadays; so also is the bond of marriage; and so too, in many countries, is the overburning of children with physical degradation to the mothers, but that the respectability of the thing, in the exercise of this inalienable right, will ever free women from the anomalies—social and sexual, under which they suffer, I am extremely doubtful. What on earth can the dropping of a bit of paper into a ballot box do for anybody? All it can do, as is seen daily in America and Great Britain is, for one section of the people to enforce their desires or whims on another section; not settling any particular point satisfactorily, but rather, I should say, creating more enmity between those who are already the slaves of governmental officials, and strengthening as it were the raison d'etre for governmentalism itself.

The facts, as they appear to me, lead me to the conclusion that the more we have of manhood and womanhood suffrage, i. e. voting, etc., the tighter become the cords which bind us. More than one hundred years ago the world was aflame with the "Declaration of the Rights of Man," and while the political vivisectionist with his local caucuses and cliques sings the same song, we are still, practically speaking, in the mud of politics. And a sorry job the men have made of the voting power! Why should women seek such a way out? Those who are seeking freedom should spurn the idea of forcing others, either by voting, or clubbing, or imprisoning. Yet, truly, does not voting lead that way? I am certain it does.

Why does the church not regulate your hours of worship, your beliefs, your ethics? Where it does not 'tis only because it is too feeble; but given the necessary support and strength it will do so.

Why does government in the political aspect, fail to regulate your every act? Why? Because it, too, is feeble here and there; but where it is strong it does so strongly and tyrannically.

This panacea, then, is a fallacy. Of course voting and forcing is still in demand amongst some Secularists. They seem to have forgotten all the tyrannies perpetrated on a Holyoake, a Taylor, a Bradlaugh, etc.; they seem to forget that the voting power have still the "Blasphemy Laws" to fall back upon; that there is still no "Freedom of Bequest," and that a committee is actually working daily to influence members of Parliament to relax such unfair statutes; that they even use the latter fact against their Christian opponents who ask for the Freethought Hospitals, Endowed Institutions, and so on ad lib. Then, in the next breath they will call out, and vote, for a "purely secular education," ay! and approve of prosecutions wherever a parent refuses to send his child to school. I say to such Secularists, don't babble about freedom so long as you are a tyrant in your methods, a "priest in your intestines." The real Freethinker would scorn to force anyone to accept his system of education as he would scorn to force anyone to accept his anti-theological opinions.

If the Secularists will go on with their forcing in the name of improving humanity, I for one will have no sympathy with them when the priest's turn comes to improve them, and I call on every free-minded woman to watch this latest bid for popularity with the greatest suspicion. If women have rights, the vote won't make them any more sure than a direct appeal—an intellectual appeal, to all to consider the great question of their relation to their male companions in the most intimate relations of social and private life. Associations can be formed for the discussion of those questions which will, I am sure, be far more profitable and, indeed, far more honorable than an appeal for any phase of political favor.

Glasgow, Scotland.

"In this Land of the Free."

BY CYRUS W. COOLRIDGE.

The following gem of a reporter's wit and wisdom is taken from the New York "Journal":

"The local Anarchists, who sell the minimum quantity of beer at the maximum price, are pretending to be in hysterics of joy over the hoodwinking of Immigration Commissioner Powderly by two notable foreign Anarchists. These are Prince Krapotkine (pronounce as if lacking the final 'e,' please) and Jose Ventra, both of whom are said to be in this land of the free, despite Mr. Powderly's determination to keep them out.

"Herr Schwab, our own Anarchist, who keeps a beer-saloon, says that while the authorities have been searching every incoming trans-atlantic steamer for Peter Krapotkine that frolicsome prince slipped into Canada from England, that he has already visited Boston and Buffalo, is now on his way to Washington, will arrive here on Saturday, and on Sunday will lecture in Chickering Hall on 'Socialism and its Modern Development.'

"Herr Schwab is a very good press agent himself, you see.

"The Prince, according to other advance press work, was concerned in one of the plots to terminate the reign of the present Czar, for which he was sentenced to Siberia for life. He escaped from Siberia, was hustled out of Western Europe, and is now open to engagement to thrill American audiences at a reasonable charge per thrill. If he slips a cog in that programme, he will doubtless open a beer cellar."

Peter Krapotkine, to be sure, is a Russian revolutionist who escaped from a Russian prison, but he certainly was not concerned in a plot to kill the present Czar, for he has lived in England for the past ten years or more. An account of his escape from prison was given in Stepniak's "Underground Russia" which was published about fifteen years ago.

The reporter who gave us such a sensational and untruthful report of Krapotkine's past life is perhaps not to blame. He perhaps had never heard of Peter Krapotkine. It is true that as a scientist Krapotkine is a man of international reputation; it is true that his scientific essays are published in the best English and American magazines, such as the "Nineteenth Century" and the "Popular Science Monthly," but what of it? Can you expect an ordinary reporter of a daily paper to know these things? The "Journal" reporter heard that a certain Anarchist named Peter Krapotkine is in "this land of the free" and not knowing anything about him, he came to the conclusion that he must be one of those "miserable foreign Anarchists" who spend their time in drinking beer and damning all the governments of the earth.

The reporter, I repeat, is perhaps not to blame; but what shall we say of the editor? Is it possible that he is so ignorant that he never heard of Krapotkine? An editor of a "great" New York daily cannot plead ignorance, he cannot lay the blame upon the reporter's shoulders. But if the editor of the "Journal" is not ignorant, what is he? I do not wish to accuse him of dishonesty and so I leave the question unanswered.

But, after all, why should we find fault with a stupid reporter or a stupid editor? What a "great" daily may say about Krapotkine is a matter of no importance in comparison with Mr. Powderly's "admirable determination" to keep him out of the United States. Think of a man or of a government that would not allow so distinguished a man as Krapotkine to visit "this land of the free"? Can a country where such things are accepted as a matter of course be called free? Where is our freedom and where are the defenders of freedom? Need we wonder that many an "ignorant foreigner" is disgusted with us and has very little admiration for our "glorious" institutions?

Let us not deceive ourselves. Let us stop praising "this land of the free" until we have real freedom. Let us banish falsehood and tell the truth about ourselves.

A Tragedy, Its Causes and Lessons.

[In Providence, Rhode Island, Miss Ruth Phillips, a member of the Presbyterian church, a mother but not a wife, abandoned by the father of her babe, and unable to bear the odium visited by society on free motherhood, burned up her infant in the furnace of her home. John H. Cook sent to the "Sunday Journal" of Providence some pertinent comments on the case which, refused insertion in the "Journal," I condense below for Lucifer. E. C. W.]

Editor Providence "Journal":

The charge lately made against one of our women citizens and reported in the daily papers, seems to me should attract more than passing attention, not so much because of the quality of the act itself as because of the antecedent prompting to it, nay, driving of her on headlong to her own moral degradation, so that she can no longer look upon herself with respect. I refer to Ruth Phillips.

Now, sir, to me it is plain that we, the people who form society, are entirely to blame for her crime. If society held, as it should, that motherhood is the supreme ideal of womanhood, to be enjoyed, with all that is incident thereto, outside of the indorsement of either church or state, then might the woman conceive and bear children without the stigma of "illegitimate" being borne all through life by her love child ("natural") and without herself being branded as "fallen." How shameful the current false morality! At the same time the other scale of this double standard is in full operation, conceding to man license (not liberty) in such matters, so that while he degrades woman he does not degrade himself, in public estimation, but, rather, is accepted and often lionized in good society and later marries a respectable woman. How passing strange is this sort of reasoning! Surely, no self-respecting woman capable of sound thinking could ever become the partner of one who has so far forgotten his manhood. Neither can any man lay claim to real manhood who holds any enmity against one who has been thus victimized. Nor should pity prompt his forgiveness, or, better, forgetfulness of such natural act. Nay, rather, it is her right and must not be denied her. When this is recognized, then these crimes, born of the denial of this right, disappear.

Now to the conventionalist who asks, What would become of such children? That question will be answered later on, in its proper place. Here crops up the reason of the man's deserting the girl in her hour of need. This also falls under the law of cause and effect. Not that I would at all shield the individual in question, but a milder degree of the same public censure that rests on the mother rests on the father of such a child, notwithstanding the fact that these love (natural) children are always the best in every way. He seeks to escape this censure and ridicule. If this couple could have been allowed to pair like the birds knowing no law (rulers), all would have been well; they would have been happily and permanently joined together. Was not this possibly what Jesus meant when he said, "What therefore God hath joined together let no man put asunder"? The free play of this higher law of natural selection and sex attraction, which is the universal law of life, operative even in the vegetable kingdom, would prevent our depraving divorce exhibitions, decrease the number of children in the various homes for foundlings, and thus surely help society to emerge gradually out of the quagmire of legalized prostitution where it wallows in marriage debauchery and groans in sex-bondage which the church sanctions and sanctifies and the state legalizes and enforces.

40 Hanover Street. JOHN H. COOK.

Divorce.

BY ELMINA D. SLENKER.

The greatest boon humanity now needs is easy divorce; cheap divorce, and divorce as free as marriage. Marriage is a simple contract, and divorce should be the same.

To compel two to live as husband and wife when they are antagonistic to each other, or even indifferent, is a wrong to all who are involved.

The papers are brim full of wife-murder, husband-murder, murder of the whole family,—all because of enforced marriage ties. In many cases there seems no way pointing to freedom from unwelcome companionship and partnership but the death of one or the other.

And probably not one fourth of these murders is ever found out. The old saying that "murder will out" is far from true. Because now and then a secret murder is discovered, is no proof that ten times as many do not pass undiscovered.

Easy divorce would unravel many a sexual problem that now puzzles the people. It is very likely monogamy will be the rule for hundreds of years yet, and while it is so, all contracts between such couples should be easily dissolved.

A few simple laws regarding the children and property are all that would be needful. A few good laws well observed, are better than innumerable ones evaded and broken.

So long as social rules and regulations are needed for the general good, just so long will marriage and divorce be needed. A few are capable of living above the law, but the masses need to be guided, led and restrained, while being educated for the higher plane of thought. Whitman says, "Whoever you are, claim your own at any hazard." But what should be our own must be labored for and won.

Free divorce is the first step towards freedom in love.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, Arthur Wastall, Cranbrook House, High Road, Chiswick, London. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar st., Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-SHINING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1304 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

Lucifer Circle met Tuesday evening, Nov. 2. Alfred B. Westrup spoke on the relation of the money question to woman's emancipation. On Tuesday evening, Nov. 9, the subject will be "The Evolution of the Family." M. Harman will open the discussion.

"Hilda's Home."

The continued story that has been running in Lucifer for more than a year last past, is nearing its close, and now again we request all who would like to own a copy—one or more—for their own use or for missionary work, to let us know, by postal card or otherwise, how many copies in book form they will take. If published the book will contain about four hundred pages and will cost the reader one dollar in cloth binding or fifty cents in paper cover. We now have perhaps one hundred names of those who have said they would take one or more copies, but as some of these names have doubtless been overlooked, and some have moved away, or ceased to take Lucifer, we ask that all will once more let us know how many copies and of what binding, they will be responsible for. This plan is made necessary by the fact that we have not the means, outside of other demands, of publishing in book form, and cannot afford to take risks in the matter. The following is part of a letter recently received from the author of the story, and will perhaps be of interest to those who have patiently followed the fortunes of "Imelda," "Hilda," "Edith," "Cora," "Alice," "Margaret" and their lovers, through the many months the serial has been a leading feature in Lucifer's columns:

"As 'Hilda's Home' is drawing to a close I feel it my duty to return thanks to the writers of the many kind comments which have been published in Lucifer. My daily work is very confining and leaves me little time to myself, else I would have answered personally many of these letters. Instead of letters to each I now beg to tender sincerest thanks to all for their kindly expressed sympathy and appreciation, and would add the hope that if it is possible to publish in book form they will be as good as their word, and will take as many copies as their means will allow, to help our good friend Mr. Harman along on the hard road he has to travel. I myself am not expecting any pecuniary benefit from the publication, though I am as poor as any of you. I have donated my story to the cause, and hope it will do all the good possible. Not that I despise money, I need it as much as any, but saw no way, after the story was written, to turn it into money, as publishers who would be willing to bring out a story of this kind are 'scarce as hen's teeth.' We all know our friend—friend of woman—Moses Harman, is not burdened with 'lucre,' so I decided to donate it to Lucifer's cause, as my contribution to the work of woman's emancipation from the worst of all slaveries—the enslavement of sexhood and of motherhood. ROSA GRAUL."

Two, or at most three, issues more will finish the story in serial form, and it is important that we know very soon, whether the demand for the work is sufficient to justify its preservation in a more permanent form.

"The Adult" for November

Surpasses its previous issues in size and interest. The most important of its contents is "The Judgment of Paris, Up to Date," a lecture delivered by Leighton Pagan before the Legitimation League. This lecture alone occupies fourteen pages, and is a most instructive and entertaining production. Following are a few paragraphs, taken almost at random:

"Logically, if these people, [the 'moralists,'] are right, young men and women should not be allowed to make a choice of mates at all. For when a choice is allowed, the thin end of the wedge has entered, and the parties may prefer other companions later on. People who exert a choice in love are educating themselves in æsthetics—unconsciously or consciously, they are making comparisons and exercising their tastes—forgetting that marriages are made in heaven they are upsetting the divine calculations. . . . ."

"To acknowledge the full benefits of sexual selection—a selection necessarily mutual, and, therefore, non-invasive, wherever its scope is unlimited—is, at once, to run counter to the authority of all legal, religious and moral conventions. . . . ."

"He who would bind himself, or his wife, or his child, or his grandmother, to keep of the same mind to the end of his or her days, whether in religion, or marital preference, or political views or what not, has closed his mind to all new influences, made his will, and is, to all intents and purposes, dead. . . . ."

"It is noteworthy that people who like to consider themselves advanced Rationalists, and who sometimes advocate with enthusiasm freedom in religious opinions or free trade between nations, and who even look upon diversity in religious, commercial or medical ways and means as a good thing, feel quite shocked at the bare mention of diversity in sexual relationships. These people would gain much if they looked abroad and contemplated not only the diversity actually existent, but the authoritative sanction at the back of each custom or system. . . . ."

Other articles in this issue are: "Sex Love and Mutability," by Orford Northcote; "The Last Citadel of Authority," by Robert Braithwaite; "Spiritual Love," by William Platt; "Wanted: A New Dictionary," by Ess Tee. Our English coworkers deserve the gratitude of every libertarian for their valuable contributions to the literature of freedom.

The "Adult" is for sale at this office. Price, 5 cents.

Sundry Criticisms.

BY C. L. JAMES.

I see by Lucifer of Oct. 27 that E. C. Walker still thinks Comstock & Co. "live in another world than ours, the world of mediævalism and anti-naturalism." I must repeat my suggestions that Anthony Comstock, agent for the Society for the Suppression of Vice, which society, according to his public statement, receives money from the publishers of the "Police Gazette," lives very much in a part of our world called blackmail; and that, if we still have a Defense Association, employing a lawyer, it should be easy to accommodate him with apartments in another part of our world called Sing Sing.

Leroy Berrier remarks that "women in a normal condition and free, are not so constituted" as to accept Ruedebusch's ideal, new or old. "They focus their love on some one individual of the opposite sex." "This is also the case with the highest type of manhood." It would be much more to the purpose if Leroy Berrier gave us some examples in proof of these dogmatical assertions. Will he do so? Will he select, for instance, George Washington, Queen Elizabeth, Henri IV. of France, Catherine II. of Russia, Alexander Hamilton, Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, "George Sand," William Shakespeare, as examples of his normal and free women, or his highest types of men?

"Varietists," remarks Berrier, "say much of the temporary character of love. Why is love in many cases temporary instead of enduring? For the reason there is not a high stage of development, refinement and culture." Berrier's career as an author has not gained him celebrity for clearness of expression. Does he mean that the love of varietists is enduring and not temporary, whence it follows that varietists are in "a high stage of development, refinement and culture"? So far, I could agree with him. But then, of how gross an inconsistency he was guilty, when, only four lines before those words in italics, he said that if men and women were in a reverse condition (to his exclusive love ideal) "it only signifies the undeveloped and uncultured condition of their gender (sexual) sense"! Or does he, perhaps, mean that varietists say much in praise of the temporary character of love? That is false. Affinity-seekers do; but the love of varietists, according to all my experience, is permanent, though plural.

In another place Berrier says, "The only reason I look upon theft, robbery, murder, etc., as wrong, is because I have inculcated my consciousness and ideas" (I suppose he means had his ideas inculcated,—as for inculcating consciousness, I give that conundrum up) "from conventional society." Poor devil! Does he mean it? I should be sorry to confess as much. Never mind "etc.," for I don't know what that means; but my reasons for thinking theft, murder, rape, and other kinds of invasion, wrong, are, first, that I inherited an aversion to them, matured through natural and sexual selection, whose beneficent operation "conventional society" has always, to the fullest possible opportunity, resisted; and, secondly, that I am taught they are pernicious by induction;—the thing "conventional society" most hates and fears.

And here I might express a doubt whether Leroy Berrier has not mistaken his vocation in "teaching sexual and procreative science." I have kept pretty close track of his effusions on these subjects, and find in them little useful and nothing original, except his "punctuation and orthography," grammar and vocabulary—"innovate" e. g.,—which certainly are rather novel. From my own acquaintance with his writings, I might infer that sawing wood was his specialty. But Lucifer informs me that they are "well advertised and extensively sold." In that case, Mr. Berrier probably knows his own business. The hundred dollars he paid to Uncle Sam for circulating obscene literature, may have been the price of an advertisement, judiciously invested to catch purchasers among radicals. And it is not at all improbable his writings sell. That very able man, Archbishop Whateley,—scientist among theologians, theologian among scientists—remarked, long since, that, to make money by writing on subjects which disturb "conventional society," there is no qualification like an addled head. He gave his reasons for thinking so, with admirable characteristic lucidity. "Conventional society" is the majority of men and very much larger majority of dollars. "Conventional society" will not buy what stirs it up on those subjects. It will buy only what soothes it. But a clear-headed man cannot treat such subjects so as to soothe—not even if he is a hypocrite. That takes a muddled-headed man, who, while writing nonsense, supposes it to be sense. Therefore, Berrier, vive et vale! Only, don't advertise without paying for it, in radical publications, like Lucifer; because, there, you are liable to run against a stump.

Thus, then have I covenanted to let Berrier, as an individual, rest in peace. But in his last article appears something else which is not Berrier as an individual. I don't mean to say that anything he writes is; but this is a sufficiently circulating cant to deserve attention as such. "The family," Berrier observes, "is the basis of civilization." Of our civilization—true. "It has developed." Just so. It was not by any means the basis of Grecian civilization, in many respects higher than ours; nor of several others. "Where there is no family there is fighting instead of work. Instead of production there is robbery and destruction." I totally deny it, and appeal to that very persistency of every plane in the world's progress, to which Berrier has appealed. There is work, not robbery and destruction pervading the state of the proletariate, who commonly have no families, and there is no destruction in that of the modern aristocracy, who care nothing about family life. There is cheating and, when convenient, war proclaimed—where? Among the bourgeois, above all others the family class.

The truth about the family is as follows. First, it did develop. Secondly, it developed, like other institutions, specially in certain habitats, viz., in the Roman and Teutonic civilizations—or barbarisms. Thirdly, it has been especially the basis of western civilization, since the fall of the Roman Empire, because that civilization is Roman and Teutonic. But if there be any significance in factories, railroads, boarding houses, divorce, women's higher education, property right, bread-winning occupations, suffrage, it is that the family, like all things which had a beginning, has also an end, and that that end is at the door. We stand amidst the very focus and crisis of the most momentous of revolutions—a revolution in the relation of the sexes. But how few grasp its significance! I have heard of French petroleuses shouting "Abas la famille." That seems unnecessary. But when a Colonel Ingersoll expends his breath in roaring, "Vive la famille!" the suggestion seems suitable that he had better keep it to cool his porridge. He wants that to live which is evidently dying.

[The propriety of inserting criticisms like the above will be seriously questioned by some of our readers; and likewise the propriety of inserting, unedited, such articles as that to which Mr. James replies, will be questioned by others equally honest and earnest. To both of these classes I would briefly reply: From the initial number Lucifer has been published in the interest of freedom of speech—the right of every one to say his say in his own way,—if, in the opinion of the editor he has anything to say worth saying, on the question or questions that may at the time be up for discussion in Lucifer's columns. The question as to whether the writer is logical or illogical, or whether his language is in good taste—whether grammatical or rhetorical, etc., have been largely ignored by him who has been its editor, or senior editor, from the initial number. Lucifer had its birth in protest against censorship, and has persistently refused to be itself a censor—libelous or slanderous articles have been excluded because they are invasive, and contravene the basic principle known as equity, or equal freedom. Application to the present case: I inserted Mr. Berrier's article because it treated upon a very live question, and because he represents, fairly well, a class, a majority perhaps, of the people now known as secularists or freethinkers. The faults of his article are largely characteristic of this class of thinkers—viz.: a lack of clearness, illogical, conservative, reactionary and wholly inappreciative of the arguments, the objects and animus of social radicals, or the class represented by Mr. James. As to the criticism by Mr. James—while in ordinary cases the language used might well be regarded as objectionable I am not sure that it is so in this case. The physician is sometimes compelled to use "heroic" methods of treatment. Mr. James has been for many years a pioneer in the work of sex-reform, including all that grows out of the sex relation—family life and kindred lines of social ethics. Mr. Berrier is young in years, and comparatively young in sex-reform, and will himself, no doubt, admit that he has yet much to learn. While apparently widely differing in methods I feel sure there is a common bond of sympathy and of purpose existing between the veteran worker, C. L. James, and his younger but no less earnest and honest brother, Leroy Berrier. Hence

I sincerely hope they will not magnify their differences, but remember always the old maxim, "mild in manner but strong in matter." EDITOR.]

A Voice from Portland Jail.

DEAR LUCIFER READERS: As I lay musing last night it was said to me, You have neglected too long your many friends, the readers of Lucifer. So will now try to give some account of myself.

On the 17th of September, 1897, upon my taking the 19th of September issue of the "Firebrand" to the post office and before it was taken out of the express wagon, G. Humphrey, the United States Marshal interviewed me, and under the guise of friendship for the "Firebrand" and H. Addis, drew from me the information that I was the main owner of the paper, and that Addis was up hop-picking near Scott's Mills, and that I was looking for him back that day or the next. We parted, I went out in town, did some business and went back to the post office to pay the postage on the previous week's issue, when Humphrey asked me to go up and see the United States Commissioner, McKee, and the United States Prosecuting Attorney Murphy, and introduced me to them.

Murphy said to me, "You have violated the postal laws by sending unmailable matter—that vile, indecent sheet, the 'Firebrand' through the mails."

I replied, "Well then, I will take it home."

"No you won't. We will keep that as a witness against you."

I had not even taken it out of the express wagon, but some one had done so, and they had opened it and looked at the contents.

McKee questioned me in regard to my connection with the "Firebrand" and got information similar to what I had given to Humphrey.

Then in default of bail in the sum of $2,000 he committed me to jail to await the sitting of the United States Court, which from present appearances will not be until Congress meets and makes an appropriation to meet expenses.

They have suspended the circulation of the "Firebrand" through the mails. That is the great calamity, and not my imprisonment.

Now, dear friends, do not worry about me, but give me your best thoughts. Thoughts are things, powerful both for good or evil.

I have a humane jailer; jail well ventilated, steam heated, moderately well lighted by windows before the cells. Electric lights at night and of dark days. A bath tub for hot and cold water; and water closet, in each corridor, and the place kept sweet and clean by scrubbing and mopping with hot water daily. My friends furnished me a good cotton mattress which with three pairs of blankets make a good bed. Sleep well, and rise refreshed every morn. Have plenty of good food three times a day. Am not troubled with tobacco, foul language, etc., for which favor I am truly thankful. Am on good terms with the jailer; all my mail sent direct here will be punctually delivered. I am well, cheerful and happy, and send best regards to all my friends. I am constantly sustained by the hope that my imprisonment, at the age of seventy-four, will do much to arouse the masses to investigate and see what a horrible thing Government backed by the Sword is.

More anon. Yours for reform,

ABNER J. POPE, a prisoner for righteousness sake;
Cell 5, County Jail, Portland, Oregon.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LXIII.

Five years have passed since the dedication of that beautiful home; years that have brought their changes, as time invariably does. The mystic rooms—the sanctum of the expectant mother—have been occupied, again and yet again. Our royal Margaret was the first to come under the spell of its sweet and wonderful influence. Giving herself up to the delightful occupations provided for in these secluded rooms, keeping ever in mind the grand result which was to come of it, one morning after a night of pain and suspense Wilbur kissed a fine, beautiful, healthy boy that was laid in his arms. Kneeling at her side with his head resting on the same pillow with the fair white face of his peerless Margaret the whisper greeted his ear

"I am blessed today beyond the measure of woman."

Who shall say that his happiness did not equal her own.

Another had not been long in following her brave example. When Cora's baby girl was laid upon her breast Owen's measure of happiness was filled and tears blinded his eyes as he kissed the mother of his child.

The two sisters, Edith and Hilda, both brought joy and happiness to their lovers' hearts by presenting them with a miniature reflection of themselves, and Norman had held Imelda's boy to his fast and wildly beating heart.

By this time the babies that came first to the new home were making glad the hearts of their mothers by their childish prattle; some of the mothers were watching the first trembling footsteps, and one was waiting, watching for the coming hour. That one was Alice. Milton watched with worshipful tenderness the little fairy whose love was life to him.

New faces also now greet us. New comers have helped to fill the precious home, who were just as good and worthy as those whose fortunes we have so long followed.

But to return to the young mothers. They did not devote all their time to their darling babies. O, no! Dearly as they loved them they found that they had other work to do while the little ones were left in the care of those who were perfectly trustworthy. Not to be petted, not to be pampered and spoiled, but left to those who understood how to get to the depths of each baby nature.

When it is remembered what preparation had been made for their advent it is not surprising that they were wonderfully good babies. When it is remembered with what joy they were welcomed—welcomed while still in the first stages of foetal growth; how carefully the prospective mothers had been kept under calm, sweet and pure influences; how their minds had been kept active without taxing their strength; how constantly their souls had been bathed in the luxury of sympathy and love; how every part of their natures had been keept teeming with life—overflowing life; how carefully undue excitement had been warded off; how they were given every opportunity for cultivating the higher human instincts,—the spiritual nature;—when all this is remembered we cannot help seeing that, on the principle of natural causation, the children of such mothers and of such influences could not be other than exceptionally well endowed and exceptionally well behaved.

But when the months had passed, during which the mother should give her personal care and attention to her cherished babe, it was transferred to the sole care of the experienced nurse, and she herself returned to her usual work, whatever that work might happen to be. There were so many fields open, and each made her choice. The head gardener was glad to get help in the tending and nursing of his plants and flowers. Nimble, dextrous fingers were needed to fashion the garments to be worn by the occupants of the home, and this large and beautiful home needed many willing hands to keep it beautiful. All this however was work which could be entrusted to and performed by stronger hands, if other work should prove more attractive, work in which more than ordinary intelligence and skill were required. Among our band were teachers of music and song, as might be expected of the artist soul seeking expression. Margaret had kissed her lover and baby good-bye and had given another season to her loved profession, and had returned again with, O, such longing and love for the home and the circle of loved ones it contained.

But there was other work. The forty minutes required to reach the heart of the city were used by quite a number, morning and evening. In the heart of the city rose a grand emporium many stories high, where many hundreds of young women and men were employed, and which was the property of the home circle; an emporium which had been built by Norman and Lawrence and fitted up by Owen, and which was one of the largest business places in the great city; an emporium where people of all ages and sizes could purchase for themselves an outfit from the crown of their heads to the soles of their feet. There was the tailor's department and that of the dressmaker. There the milliner fashioned pretty headgear—"loves of bonnets" and "darling hats," and there all the beautiful artificial flowers, of which countless numbers were used from week to week were made. There the visitor would go from floor to floor, from department to department, and would find every place to have its own attraction, its own work.

But the most beautiful department of them all was that of the florist's, where nature's handiwork was heaped up in wild and charming confusion, and where these floral beauties, by deft and cunning fingers, were arranged into designs without number, and in this department it was that you could see our own fair girls moving about, giving orders here, lending aid there, and again seeing that patrons were promptly served. All was life, all were busy, yet none were overworked, as none worked longer than five hours here. At seven o'clock in the morning when the doors were opened, they admitted what was termed the morning "turn." And when twelve o'clock announced the noon hour the merry throng, laughing and singing arrayed themselves for the street and went trooping out like a merry flock of birds, for their day of work was over. It was a day's work, and thus they were paid. With the striking of the hour of one, the afternoon "turn" began, and others filled the places of the morning workers. So the faces of the saleswomen and salesmen were always fresh and smiling with none of that tired, wornout appearance that is so often noticeable in the young faces you meet behind the counter.

Where were all these employes housed? Heretofore as these people generally are housed. Those who still had a father or mother or both living, lived with them; in most cases large families crowded into two or three rooms. Others who were not so fortunate, had to submit to all the discomforts of cheap boarding houses, or lived in some stuffy back room or bleak attic. But a change was about to take place. Today the large business building is closed. Not a living soul moves about its wide halls and its many departments. It is a grand "fete" and gala day. Today is to be dedicated the grand new home which has been erected for them.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Susan Reicherter, Nortonville, Kan.:—I receive the dear old Lucifer all right, every week; am very much interested in "Hilda's Home"—who would not be? and am reminded of my duty to help you a little, materially, but my means are so scant. Maybe you won't believe it but it's true all the same. I am ailing very much all the time. O how foolish I was when young and strong not to take better care of myself. But it's too late now to lament. I am almost ashamed to send so little, one dollar, when others do so much better; but am like the poor widow of the Bible; I give all I can at present. I wish I could get even with Lucifer which I must confess contains splendid articles. If we had had such papers as Lucifer forty years ago how much better off would be the world by this time. But for some of us its teachings come too late. It will be the greatest boon for woman to be able to free herself from sex slavery.

Kate Austin, Caplingers Mills, Mo.:—The American peasants, dwelling among the wooded hills of this corner of southwest Missouri, have had a revelation of radical ideas presented to them, by that dangerous member of society, Emma Goldman, who recently delivered four lectures entitled, "The Aim of Humanity," "Religion," "Anarchy" and "Free Love," to a large audience for a farming community. Each lecture was presented fairly, plainly and eloquently, as only the master tongue of Emma Goldman can portray. Anarchy was received with surprise, so different was it explained from the popular conception. Very few in the audience had ever beheld a true picture of the "Ideal of Liberty" so many have died for. Radical ideas, so far, have not penetrated into country districts. The farmer is the foundation stone of the producing class, and yet he has been neglected by the Propagandists. But I have faith to hope for the intellectual advancement of the farmers along all lines of liberty. Emma Goldman is a grand woman. One who will live unflinchingly for the cause or die as bravely as the martyrs of old, if need be.

Stella Campbell, St. Louis, Mo.:—We have had the good fortune to have with us Comrade Emma Goldman who has been lecturing here for the past week to thousands of people. Oct. 20 Miss Goldman lectured at Walhalla hall on "Why I am an Anarchist-Communist." The hall was crowded to overflowing, and hundreds of people who could not gain admission to hear her stood on the sidewalks in front of the hall and on the opposite side of the street. Oct. 21 Miss Goldman lectured on "Revolution" in spite of the police and without a permit from Mayor Zeigenheim.

Some comrade called on Mayor Zeigenheim without the knowledge or consent of Miss Goldman and asked permission for her to speak on a public square—he was refused a permit. Still we are told that this is a land of "free speech." Free indeed! Free to murder, rob, prostitute in the name of "Law and Order." But when a sweet little woman like Emma Goldman wishes to tell the people that murder, robbery and prostitution are wrong then the hirelings of the capitalists turn out one hundred and fifty strong in order to drag her to jail if she attemps to speak.

Miss Goldman spoke, however, every night that she intended to speak, in spite of Mayor Zeigenheim and police interference, and the hall was always crowded.

Comrade Goldman had a lot of Lucifers which she distributed. We could have used many more.

Emma Goldman is a brave woman and she is doing a good work.

Luna Hutchinson, Merced, Calif.:—The "Call" upon the advocates of sexual freedom, in Lucifer No. 672, I have read, and approve the plan of organization of all who believe in the love of liberty and the liberty of love.

I would suggest that all who sign their names as active members be requested to state their views on this subject, the better to learn how much of unity of thought and purpose there may be among the thinkers as to what can be done to obtain sex freedom.

My conviction, from long years of experience gained under the present restricted conditions, is that woman needs first to be free from man's ownership of her by any law or custom—the right to accept or reject any man as she may desire; to grant or refuse his offer of love or of sex association, according to her own feelings and judgment, and to have the right to defend her person from force or rape under all circumstances whatsoever.

There must be but one law or rule of chastity for both women and men. No blame or shame to be put upon anyone doing as they like if not injuring any others. Less than this is not freedom for either sex.

Love, to be free, to flow on and ever on toward the higher and more ideal life, must cease to be a mountain torrent or stagnant pool—with channels sought out by its increasing volume of desires and aspirations, which can only be found in the love light of other eyes, responsive to the magnetic heart throbs of love.

The real prostitute is one that yields to sex association without love or desire; that is, for money or other considerations than the natural attraction and requirements of sex magnetation, which is necessary to health and growth in beauty of person and harmony of mind.

684.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

This is the true elixir of life, the fountain of youth, giving health and happiness, or disease and death just in proportion as rightly or wrongly used. This great truth of creative life when understood and obeyed, will put the last enemy of man under his feet, even death itself. Let us strive to be wiser and live a higher life.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .75
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Ecclesiasticism vs. Civil Authority; Parker Pillsbury, .10
Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake, .10
Vitae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
The Shadow of the Sword; G. W. Foote, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .10
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .25
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .10
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
Degeneracy; C. L. James, .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

PROHIBITION AND SELF-GOVERNMENT

Their Irreconcilable Antagonisms.

A COLLECTION OF FUGITIVE PIECES BY E. C. WALKER.

Physical and Moral Ills Cannot be Cured by Legislative Enactments.

"Partly to save men from the same hereafter hell, partly to keep them out of the hells of the here and now, the patent moralists, prohibitionists, conscionists, and all others of that genus, seek to force their views of morality and temperance upon all, regardless of all differences of organization and environment; not only their views but their methods of reform, their cure-all specifics."

"When you resort to force you confess yourself beaten in the arena of science, reason and love, and thus establish your incompetence to deal with so tremendous a problem."

Price, five cents. Or send twenty-five cents with the name of one new three month subscriber and we will send you one copy of this interesting and instructive pamphlet free.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governer has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 25 cents.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published. .25

Bar Sinister and Lieit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains five half-tone portrees of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .20

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .10

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker, .10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50
A Sex Revolution, " " .25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .15

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free-love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Finally,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

THE UNREVEALED RELIGION.

An address of great depth, strength, and beauty. By the veteran, J. K. Ingalls.

"The rainbow is not less beautiful and wonderful to me than to Noah, or to the aborigines, because I understand something of optics and the refraction of light. The rose is not less attractive because botany has taught us to analyze and classify it. The God of Truth, whether we worship it as an entity or as a personality, or conceive of it as impersonal, is an ever-living and persistent principle man can never cease to revere and admire. And his growth in knowledge and progress in all things refining and elevating to his nature will be promoted, not retarded, by the true but unrevealed, and as yet "unloved religion, 'The Religion of Progress'."

Price, 5 cents each; Address LUCIFER, 1394 W. Congress Street, Chicago

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.
We all need comradeship of thought.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department D, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co. Room 1107, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 46. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 17, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 685

Popular Follies and Crimes.

BY JAMES S. DENSON.

There was a terrible accident the other day on the New York Central Railway; an express train went into the Hudson, and twenty lives were lost. At this writing, the cause of the disaster is not known, but Mr. William M. Habirshaw, a chemical engineer of this city, whose train followed the one that was wrecked, says he is satisfied the slaughter "was an act of God." Had it been the act of known men they would be indicted for murder; as Mr. Habirshaw says "God" did it, I suppose he will, as a law-abiding citizen, swear out an information against the guilty person.

* * *

"The Woman's Rescue League" (Mrs. Charlotte Smith) is waging war against bachelors. The latest object of Smith's wrath is Judge Van Wyck, recently elected mayor of New York. It is declared that "Robert A. Van Wyck, an American and a bachelor, with a pedigree, has shirked his duty to the human family when he failed to select a wife from out of the one hundred thousand surplus women of New York City to enjoy his luxurious home." The bad grammar, impudence and general foolishness of this deliverance are neck-and-neck for the goal. Will not some marrying man please propose to Widow Smith?

* * *

The Rev. Madison C. Peters, a Catholic baiter, is now turning his attention to the bicycle. "If the wheel is going to keep people away from church," he declares, "I would rather see it forever wiped out of existence." He is an enthusiastic rider himself, but it is the Sunday use of the wheel that so moves him to wrath. A fetich worshiper, doing homage to a certain twenty-four hours of the week, Mr. Peters would sacrifice the happiness and health of millions that there might be a larger attendance on Sunday at his place of business. "The man who rides his bicycle on Sunday, and for this reason absents himself from the house of God, is infinitely less prepared to go to his business on Monday morning than is the man who spends his Sabbath in the worship of the Almighty." Flub dub! Does this Protestant bigot suppose that any person who knows anything about the salutary effects of outdoor life upon those who have to spend most of their time in confining occupations will be deceived by his transparent special pleading in the interest of his own trade? He gives himself dead away when he says: "The Sabbath was never intended as a holiday. It is the day set aside by the Almighty as a day for his worship. And if the Sabbath goes, farewell to Protestantism." Ah! Just one more measure of clerical folly, dear reader: "The usual everyday bicycle costume in indecorous on the Lord's Day. It is irreverent."

* * *

As science and rationalism undermine the foundations of religious belief, the ecclesiastical organizations turn to the state for succor, and they generally get what they demand. It is the failure to see this that makes so many men who are entirely outside the church, especially economic reformers, declare that religion has practically ceased to be a retarding factor, a dangerous element, in society. To the initiated, thoughtful observer, the news columns of our papers furnish evidence every day that the church is still mischievously alive, bidding for hypocrites by making seeming conformity a condition of preferment in public and private vocations. Take, for instance, this cablegram from London, bearing the date of October 25, 1897:

For the first time since the Reformation, the reopening of the Law Courts today was initiated by a special service in Westminster Abbey, which was attended by the Bench and Bar, all wearing their robes. . . . The Catholic Judge and barristers attended "Red Mass" at the Sardinia Chapel.

"For the first time since the Reformation"! The words are very significant. They show that England is following in the footsteps of reactionary America, where for some time a tendency to open courts with prayer has been increasingly manifest. This performance is a natural extension of a similar canting habit in political conventions and celebrations and in legislative bodies, and is conterminous with a decreasing respect for substantial justice, shown alike by legislatures and courts.

* * *

Rev. Henry Varley, "the butcher-evangelist" of England, has been in America for some time. He is now in New York. In a recent discourse he said that he was saddened by the habit of living in hotels and flat houses, which he found so prevalent here. He found it destructive of the home ideal, cherished by Englishmen, "for married people to congregate in big houses instead of creating separate homes for themselves." Then he asked: "How do they do it? How do they do it?" And he answered: "By an organized system of child murder, which would depopulate this country in a few years, if it were not for its immigrants."

If Mr. Varley will spend some few hours in those parts of the city where the very poor live, I think he will discover that dwelling in flats is not necessarily antagonistic to large families. If he will investigate further, he will learn that, broadly speaking, the size of the families of very small children is in an inverse ratio to the intelligence and prosperity of the parents. Reasoning upon this, he can conclude either that intelligence and prosperity tend to limit the size of families or that small families give better opportunities for becoming intelligent and independent. Perhaps he will reach the wiser conclusion that these influences are inter-active. But if he continues to moralize upon the facts as they present themselves, testing everything by the standard of the "ideal home," his investigations and discourses will be fruitless of good. Effects follow causes. When men and women find that small families give greater opportunities for the development of the children and parents alike, that infant mortality is reduced by prudence in procreation, the average number of small children in families is bound to decrease, despite all the ideals, English or other that may be set up as scarecrows.

If Mr. Varley will delve still deeper it will dawn upon him, if he can think at all, that church- and state-fostered monopolies of land, credit, exchange and knowledge are chiefly responsible for ignorance, poverty and infanticide. I suspect that he classes together as "child murder," prevention of conception and abortion, which, of course, is wholly unwarranted. It is quite likely that he does not know the difference, physiologically speaking, between the two acts, nor that our blessed paternal government directly promotes infanticide by making the imparting of information concerning prevention of conception a criminal offense.

Finally, it is useless to rail against the fiat; it is here to stay until there is a radical change in industrial conditions, and I doubt if it will disappear when monopoly of land and money ceases. Improved it will be, though; much improved. At present, however, it is better than the isolated cottage in the village or country, after we have conceded all that we may as regards certain manifest advantages of suburban and rural life. With less superstition and more sanitation in the pagan districts there could not be said so much for the relative advantages of the city as can truthfully be said now.

"The Old, Old Story!"

BY WILLIAM GILMOUR.

The letter by Mrs. Dora Boss in Lucifer whole No. 679 under the above title embodies an interesting, and probably a difficult problem to solve; yet, as the editor has suggested a "symposium" on the question: "Now, what is C. to do,—having no wings for heaven and no status on earth?" and I feel that I should like to have my say.

In the first place, I am not at all sure that I can give any satisfactory explanation of C's act, or a clear answer to the question cited; chiefly, I should say, owing to the social atmosphere which I habitually breathe. Surrounded as I am here with many phases of Christianism; many diverse concepts of morality, duty, right or wrong, hearing at one moment a good Roman Catholic pronouncing judgments, and, at another, a Calvinist discoursing on the pains of hell and the merits of salvation by the blood of Christ, I am apt to get confused and thereby fail to discriminate between the operating factors with anything like logical acumen, especially in such a case and under such circumstances as C. and her partner are placed.

Secondly: I am perfectly satisfied that the same act, accompanied by similar results, is secretly performed and outwardly denounced every day, and not, as is too often supposed, by the illiterate portion of society alone. Illiterate people are —in like cases, usually passive as to the act—the goodness or evil of it, although villainously cruel (as a rule) in their outward condemnation. In the case of—to all appearance, well-educated, intelligent and generally accomplished people the same thing goes on, and the world out yonder hears very little about it; yet, the penalty, or penalties, for such acts may be quite as severe in some cases, but are, I would venture to say, usually thought to be "an unfortunate occurrence" and the easier it's got over the better for all concerned.

Third: Education, as it is taught the rising manhood and womanhood, is no preventative of such cases, for, given normal or healthy physiological conditions, given undisturbed opportunities of meeting—"where eyes look love to eyes," and where, as in this affair, the desire for physical sexual intercourse is strong in healthy young people (more so, I believe, in unhealthy people) there is nothing in this education, or indeed in a far more rational education, to avert this most natural occurrence.

I say most natural occurrence for the reason that those who, in the pursuance of their theologically-warped morality, in their strenous endeavors to square all their actions with a particular standard of right and wrong—who deem fatherhood and motherhood outside of the bond marriage sinful and abhorrent, suffer more disastrously mentally and physically, than those who, without the priestly "sanction," pluck love's choicest fruits in obedience to nature's promptings.

Fourth: "What is C. to do?" According to Mrs. Boss it is not "a question of bread and butter," and in such fortunate economic circumstances (a great source of help in the solution of the question) all I can advise her to do is, if the "amorous young customer" cleared out just because he became a father—and yet was not threatened by "law" and was in a good financial way, to give him a wide berth; if C. is in love with him still, and is sure that he is with her but has been only temporarily scared by the conventional methods of the "law," she should, if she desires a renewal of his companionship to soothe and cheer her in her hours of pregnancy, try to communicate with him. If he responds and agrees—good and well; if not, good and well again.

He, like herself, is simply following his desires, tastes or ways, as both were doing when the ho'y and pure act was crowned with success. But on glancing at the article again I find that C. has lost all her "illusions" about him. That settles it—though they were not "illusions" to her at the time.

Mrs. Boss says that C. has "no status on earth." What? No status on earth! Perhaps not in the eyes of the already enslaved married friends, in the eyes of religious morality, but I do maintain that she has a noble status—that of mother outside the "bond" circle, and each woman who follows her example is, like her, a forerunner of the age of freedom for her sex. What higher status is required?

It is not stated that there was any mutual contract between them. Each acted egoistically (for self-satisfaction) therefore, no condemnation for either of them. Let C. strive to do all she can for her child's physical and mental welfare, and the performance of each motherly act of care, the steady growth of her child, its good health, its early words, its sweet smile, and its companionship will, I venture to think, be a compensation or reward which she will amply value as certain physiological and psychological conditions cause some mothers to destroy their children; so other conditions, happily more prevalent, cause them to care for them.

I dare say, dear editor, my thoughts are a little wide here and there, but I've jotted them down as they occurred to me: and good or bad, accept them as my contribution to the suggested symposium.

Some Criticisms Considered.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Secular Thought," of Toronto, recently reviewed several works treating of the sex question. Referring to the Legitimation League, it said that its "prime object" was the legitimation of "natural" children. "Secular Thought" is slightly belated. That was the prime object of the Legitimation League, but quite a while ago it took a forward step, and now its first object is the promulgation of the principle of Social Freedom, it having relegated the demand for legitimation to a secondary position, as "Secular Thought" might have learned by a more careful examination of the "Adult," which journal it somewhat sharply criticised.

Noticing "The Old and the New Ideal," "Secular Thought" says that it looks upon the arguments in favor of variety "as simply the outcome of a morbid and abnormal mind." Mr. Ellis does well to frankly express his opinion, and if he will stand stanchly for the right of the varietist to express his, we can all get along very well together. Given freedom of discussion and experimentation, the world can be trusted to approximate nearer and nearer to the truth. Such freedom is all that any Freethinker, varietist or monogamist, can demand, and if he demands and defends less he lacks so much of being a whole Freethinker. I am just a little afraid that Mr. Ellis can not stand the test, for he says, in his notice of the "Adult": "In this journal, Free Love and 'butterfly' relationships are advocated, and some of its pages show the same coarseness as [that] we noticed in many of Mr. Ruedebusch's chapters. We see no necessity for this, and if we were not opposed to all press censorship, we should say that this sort of literature would be the most suitable subject for it we can imagine." With all due respect for my Canadian friend, I should hesitate about trusting my defense against Comstockism to a man who finds "coarseness" in "The Old and New Ideal" and the "Adult." I can not help feeling that he is too much under the influence of anti-naturalism to be always kept by that feeble "if" out of the ranks of the persecutors.

Dealing with "What the Young Need to Know," the reviewer of "Secular Thought" affirms that that pamphlet "is another work in favor of the Free Love or Varietist view of sex relationships." There are two errors in this statement, one of implication, the other of definition. The misleading implication is that the work is devoted chiefly if not wholly to the consideration of the question of variety versus monogamy. As all careful readers of the treatise know, but a few of its forty large pages are given over to this phase of the subject. The error of definition consists in the making of "Free Love" synonymous with "Variety." By his own affirmations in re legitimation and divorce, the reviewer is himself a free lover, for he puts himself on record as opposed to all compulsory sexual relationships. The term free lover describes all who are against the forced association of men and women, all who stand for the right to correct mistakes in choice. The term "varietist" is much narrower, covering only those who believe that it is possible to love two or more persons of the opposite sex. Broadly speaking, there are two main divisions in the free love camp, the monogamists and the varietists. But "Secular Thought" continues:

> We advocate the utmost amount and the most rapid extension of freedom that are possible under present circumstances, but we cannot blink the fact that the great bulk of the people in every so-called civilized country are far from being fitted for self-government, and need marriage laws as well as other laws. To postulate an ultimate Utopia as the outcome of a reversal of our present marriage ideals is simply Quixotic.

This is no more and no less than what any advocate, two hundred years ago, of an exclusive state religion would have been justified, from his own point of view, in affirming concerning the proposition to cease trying to force men to believe alike. He would have declared that they needed laws prescribing their religion "as well as other laws." He would have said that "to postulate an ultimate Utopia ["heaven," would probably have been the word then] as the outcome of a reversal of our present [legal religious] ideas is simply" an impious dream. Because the vast majority of the people of Canada still think they need some kind of religious legislation does not prevent Mr. Ellis doing all he can to teach them better. Because they still believe in the Christian religion does not lead him to abandon his efforts in behalf of science and rationalism. Because they are at present utterly unfitted to be Freethinkers does not induce him to give up his attempt to fit at least a few of them for the responsible freedom of the Liberal. Cannot he see the application of these truths to his own objections to the propaganda of social freedom? We who stand for social freedom know that existing superstitions, customs, institutions and laws limit our liberty, increase our sufferings, menace the happiness of our children, and dwarf and disease the race, physically, intellectually, emotionally, morally. Therefore, in self-defense, following the line of least resistance, we seek to weaken the sway of and ultimately eliminate these superstitions, customs, institutions and laws. Of course we know that "the great bulk of the people in every so-called civilized country are far from being fitted for self-government." That is just what is troubling us. If they were fitted for self-government they would have self-government, we would be free, the battle would be won, the shot-torn flags would be furled. The less persons are fitted for self-government the more they try to govern others. No minority can be wholly free while the majority is in slavery to ignorance and superstition. Hence the educational labor of the minority is in no sense a work of philanthrophy—it is a purely defensive measure.

"Secular Thought" argues from the imperfection of men and women the impracticability of the ideal of Social freedom. It is passing strange that the editor does not see the self-destructiveness of such a method of reasoning. Under marriage, he has to deal with the same imperfect men and women. If they are individually incapable of self-government, how does their mere aggregation give them greater wisdom? One bushel of corn and one bushel of husks, put together, do not make two bushels of corn. Under majorityism, the average of intelligence and progressiveness is certainly less than the intelligence and progressiveness of the most intelligent and advanced individuals. Under majorityism, the constant tendency is to restrict the usefulness of the real leaders of thought, while under liberty the constant tendency is to augment their usefulness. Through example and emulation men are ever led upward. Granting all that Mr. Ellis says of the imperfections of the masses, his conclusion that they are the real conservators of the race is an absolute non sequitur. It does not follow, it can not follow. In the history of evolution, not the sluggish masses, but the alert individuals who could adapt themselves to changed environments, are found to have been the preservers of any given race. If in the all important matters connected with the reproduction of human beings, liberty and its consequent responsibility are not desirable, are dangerous, are destructive, where does Mr. Ellis find a place for liberty and and responsibility? If the rule of the relatively ignorant masses is here to be sought, why not in the realm of religion? I respectfully ask the editor of "Secular Thought" to answer this question.

About Gods and Angels.

BY ZENO.

A writer in Lucifer lately said that an atheist may be better than his creed. Will he please state what there is bad about atheism? What virtue is there in believing that a great and powerful god rules, and allows war, murder, crime, injustice, suffering, prostitution, disease, famine, and many more evils, and does nothing to stop them? Or is he straining every nerve, so to speak, to stop them, and cannot? If so he is not supreme, hence is a creature of Nature, like the rest of us, therefore not god.

Those who deny this impotent god who does not even take the trouble to place the question of his existence beyond doubt, are said to worship Nature. Why should man worship anything? Nature must be opposed where not in harmony with man's welfare, and made a servant when it can promote human happiness. Only Woman is to be worshiped.

* * *

During the present year Dr. Noel of the Harvey Medical college, Chicago, delivered a lecture in which he mentioned incidentally that the drug known as Cannabis Indica, or Indian Hemp, is frequently given to patients who are nearing their end, to cause an easy death, and said that the drug produces pleasant visions even while the patient is conscious. He sees angels, hears music, etc.

If all the death-bed scenes of this sort are caused by Cannabis Indica, then the chief prop of the religionist is knocked away. But we have here proof that the learned professions have worked together for years past in perfect harmony. The doctor has, no doubt, been receiving a per cent from the preacher just as he does from the druggist. The preacher could afford to pay something for such skill as it helps his business amazingly. Without it he would have no proof whatever of another world. I advise Lucifer readers to inquire of doctors whom they know to see if this drug is given whenever a death is particularly happy.

"The Adult;" Organ of the Legitimation League of England, contains in its fourth number: Editorial; "Sex Love and Mutability," by Orford Northcote; "The Last Citadel of Authority," by Robert Heathwaite; "Spiritual Love," by William Platt; "Wanted, A New Dictionary," by Ess Tee; "The Judgment of Paris—Up to Date," by Leighton Pagan. "The Adult" is a neat magazine of twenty-four pages, with attractive cover. Price, 5 cents. Order of Lucifer, 139 Congress st., Chicago, Ill. Price per year, 50 cts.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 121 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LUCIFER CIRCLE met Tuesday evening, Nov. 9. The question, "The Evolution of the Family"—was considered in its general relation to the evolutionary hypothesis, or to the "ascent of life" on the planet earth. The same subject will be continued at the next meeting, Tuesday evening, Nov. 16, at the same place, 1394 West Congress St.

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$389.75
Amy Scudamore,	1.00
Louis Roser,	1.00
A. G. Lengberg,	.25

November Eleventh.

The large hall at Halsted and Twelth Sts., Chicago, was filled to overflowing on the evening of Nov. 11, by women and men to hear Emma Goldman of New York, L. S. Oliver of Maywood, Ill., and others, speak in honor of the men who bravely died in defense of human liberty and justice, in this city, ten years ago. Lucifer goes to press the day following this anniversary and we can only say now that the meeting was a gratifying success in all important respects, showing that the interest in the cause for which these heroes went triumphantly to their death has not yet abated.

"The Light-Bearer Library."

Number one of the first volume of this publication is now ready for subscribers and purchasers of single copies. The subject matter is "Variety vs. Monogamy," an address delivered by E. C. Walker before the Ladies' Liberal League, of Philadelphia. The Library will be published monthly, and the subscription price will be 25 cents a year. Single copies will be sold at prices differing according to their size. The first number is small—only eight pages—and will sell for three cents a copy. Reduced rates will be given, when ordered in quantities. The next of the series will be at least sixteen pages,—possibly thirty-two—but subscribers will have the advantage of the price of a fraction more than two cents each, regardless of size, or of single copy price.

Those who are interested in "missionary" work will find this series a very useful addition to available literature. It is also in excellent form for binding.

We hope those intending to subscribe will send us their names as early as possible, even though it may not be convenient to pay at once. If all such will send a card, ordering the Library sent to their address, they will confer a favor on us. We need the names of subscribers to enable us to enter the Library as second class matter when we mail No 2.

Will you subscribe for the "Light-Bearer Library"?

As to Mr. Lloyd's Error.

BY JAMES F. MORTON, JR.

J. William Lloyd is a true and tried worker in the movement for sexual emancipation; and it is a disappointment to find him now ranged among the disbelievers in an active and vigorous propaganda. His plea, hardly to be termed an argument, is that renewed activity on the part of the friends of liberty will rekindle the smouldering fires of persecution, and subject all concerned to a profitless martyrdom. Such a view would have strangled in its infancy every reform movement the world has seen.

What is it that the signers of the "Call" propose to do? Simply to extend and render a thousand times more effective the work now being carried on. We have no intention of acting in a spirit of bravado, or of exercising, for the purpose of propaganda, any rights not acknowledged to belong to us. We will simply follow the example of the early Abolitionists, in the time when their reform was "a byeword and a hissing" in the mouths of all but a mere handful. We know that united action is far more profitable than disintegrated effort. This principle is recognized in every other department; but, singularly enough, many free lovers seem to believe that by skulking in corners and acting as if ashamed of our convictions, we best serve the cause of sexual freedom, and hasten the day when the principle shall be universally accepted.

But it is claimed that increased activity on our part will awaken relentless persecution, and result in the utter annihilation of what little freedom we now possess. No greater mistake could be made. "Eternal vigilance," not eternal cowardice and compromise, "is the price of liberty." Constant tameness invites increased usurpation. One unresisted encroachment on liberty leads inevitably to another; and the point where determined resistance begins is the only point where encroachment ceases. The whole history of radical movements proves the truth of this principle. Come, Messrs. Lloyd and Ruedebusch, do not maintain a position which, logically carried out, would make it impossible for you to express your own views to more than a handful of private friends, and which would call for the immediate suspension of Lucifer, and put an end to the sale of "The Old and the New Ideal." Your place is side by side with your comrades in the concerted action for human freedom.

Side by side with the public propaganda for the universal principle of sex liberty, may and should go the more private and advanced educational work among Libertarians, that we may learn and adopt the most rational way of using this liberty. The two movements are complementary, not hostile, and both of the highest necessity. We need not, and ought not, to "drop" one, in order to "join" the other. For myself, I am a thorough New Idealist, and ready to work along the lines of the New Ideal, with Mr. Ruedebusch and all others interested. I wrote as much to Mr. Ruedebusch months ago; and whenever I receive word from him as to definite plans of action, he may count on my hearty co-operation. In the meantime, I desire to hear from all who believe in and practice (or are willing to practice) the New Ideal, not necessarily to lead to a continued correspondence in each case, but to know who and where my comrades are. I should especially like to have all New Idealists in New England and New York send me their names and addresses. They will be treated as confidential, when desired.

1 Lynde St. Place, Boston Mass.

Sociologic Lesson. No. LIII.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

DECLINE AND FALL OF THE GOLDEN EMPIRE. It is necessary, at first, to make all bills redeemable in gold. The reign of fraud and violence, not yet ended, requires a basis which can not be tampered with, and which will not be endangered by the failure of the government which issues it. This circumstance has given to gold an increased value, from the demand for it for a currency, beyond its value as a useful metal. The successful operation of the plan now proposed would tend to diminish the use of gold for money, and destroy this factitious element in its market value. The people having once reached the honesty and intelligence necessary to introduce the new plan, could not again become fraudulent and ignorant, and would not care to provide for that contingency. Gold would therefore fall below par, with no probability of its again reaching its former exchangeable value. Holders of bonds or notes redeemable in gold, already depreciated and liable to further depreciation indefinitely, would be glad to exchange them for notes which would be certain to remain of uniform value.

Gold has also been largely used for ostentation; and a more highly cultivated taste will forbid that. Its use to avoid corrosion is largely supplanted by metals less liable to attrition; so that it would not be surprising if its market price should fall below that of other metals in common use. To hoard against danger of political revolution, it is still far above all other substances; to hoard for its inherent value in the co-operation of the future, it would be the poorest of all investments.

[If the object of the author of "Sociologic Lessons" is to destroy the reign of gold, and with it the "reign of fraud and violence," his efforts will be welcomed and seconded, doubtless, by all of Lucifer's friends and supporters. To many of us it seems useless to try to dethrone gold so long as it is made the basis of legal tender money, and that hence the first thing to do is to inaugurate equality, or equal freedom, for all commodities, gold included. M. H.]

Sexual Morality.

BY LOIS WAISBROOKER.

Those who do not obey the arbitrary standard of sex morality enforced by church and state are counted immoral, but Edward Bellamy, in his recent work, "Equality" says we have no moral basis for sexual relations. Those who have read "Looking Backward" will find in this later work the same characters through whom the author explains his views conversationally. Dr. Leete in response to a remark from Julian West as to the effect of woman's economic independence upon the conventional standard of sexual morality says:

"Say rather, that the economic equalization of men and women for the first time made it possible to establish their relations on a moral basis. The first condition of ethical action in any relation is the freedom of the actor. So long as women's economic dependence upon men prevented them from being free agents in the sexual relation there could be no ethics of that relation. A proper ethics of sexual conduct was first made possible when women became of independent action through the attainment of economic equality."

Further along he says of our present system of sex relations:

"But, because entirely based upon considerations not suggested by the natural sanctities of the sexual relations in itself but upon prudential considerations affecting economic results, it would be an inexact use of terms to call it a system of ethics. It would be more accurately described as a code of sexual economics—that is to say, a set of laws and customs providing for the economic protection of women and children in the sexual and family relation."

On the last page of the book, in disposing of Malthus and his population theory, he speaks of Nature's check to an excess of population, and says:

"But, in order that Nature's check should be properly operative, it is necessary that the women through whose wills it must operate, if at all, should be absolutely free agents in the disposition of themselves, and the necessary condition of that free agency is economic independence. That secured, while we may be sure that the maternal instinct will forever prevent the race from dying out, the world will be equally little in danger of being recklessly overcrowded."

Those who have not read "Looking Backward" will need to understand that Mr. Bellamy is supposing we live a hundred years from now, and that woman's economic independence has become a fixed fact, hence he talks of what now is, as if it were in the past. In speaking of the natural elimination of crime through the new order of things, Dr. Leete is made to say:

"In former ages a great number of crimes have resulted from the passions of love and jealousy. They were consequences of the idea from immemorial barbarism that men and women might acquire sexual proprietorship in one another, to be maintained and asserted against the will of the person. Such crimes ceased to be known after the first generation had grown up under the absolute sexual autonomy and independence which followed from economic equality."

These are but a few of the extracts I might give to show Mr. Bellamy's position on the sex question, and when so liberal a writer is so much liked that the first edition of "Equality" was exhausted in thirteen hours after it was ready, it looks as if things were moving pretty fast.

[I have not read the book, "Equality," but from the several reviews I have seen it is a work of great educational value. "Absolute sexual autonomy and independence" whether a means to "economic equality," or a result of economic equality is a matter of detail, or of opinion. To some of us the order of nature is that the desire for freedom, for economic independence must precede its fruition, its practicalization, and that the best way to kindle that desire and to create the determination to achieve it, is to convince women, the creators of the race, that they cannot give birth to a race of self-reliant, self-respecting freemen so long as they are themselves the slaves of men in the sex-relation. Hence the prominence given by Lucifer to sexologic problems. M. H.]

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LXIV.

After two years of life in their co-operative home its inmates were convinced of its success and felt almost like thieves that they should enjoy so many privileges which were beyond the reach of those to whom they gave employment, and then the plans were made for a new home, and again Owen's millions did service and now a beautiful, grand structure had been erected. But not so far away from the place of work as their own. That would have been cruelty to the morning "turn" who were expected to be at their post at the hour of seven, and equally unpleasant for the afternoon "turn" as it would cause them to be late for their evening meal.

Right on the outskirts of the city, where fifteen minutes would be all that would be required to bring them back and forth, a site was bought upon the brink of the beautiful river, elevated just enough to be beyond the reach of any possible flood. A park had been laid out which in time would be one of the handsomest the city could boast of, with its miniature lakes, its splashing fountains, its dense shrubbery, its gleaming statuary and flowery banks. And right in the midst of these beautiful surroundings this monster home was built. For three long years the workmen toiled, until when finished it was the finest of its kind that fancy could depict. A place where home pleasures would be given the workers, such as they had never known; where every arrangement had been made to amuse, to instruct, to educate, to develope the inmates. It boasted of its school rooms, its college, its sculpture hall and artist's studio, its lecture hall and theater, where the best of traveling troupes were to be engaged, with perfect arrangements for the accomodation of those troupes. Here the players would not have to undergo the extra fatigue, after their tiresome work, to again dress for the street, catch the last cold anreary car that was to take them to their place of lodging. No, indeed! The theater of the workers' home was a marvel of its kind. Large, airy, comfortable and well furnished rooms were attached to it, a room to every player, so near and convenient to the stage that it was not required to dress in little boxes or holes for their work. Here they could dress in quiet and comfort and then rest until the signal to begin was given.

When through with their work, in the pleasant, comfortable dining room connected with the theater for the convenience of this hard-working class of people—how hard working few, not of the profession, ever realize—a simple but refreshing repast was served, which repast was so restful and had so much real comfort in it that the traveling bands invariably forgot that wines and liquors were absent from it.

Then there was a library with its thousands of volumes containing reading matter of every kind, but always choice, always select, always instructive. A large billiard room was also there. Then came the gymnasium for the development of physical strength and where both sexes were expected to participate. There was to be a singing class and dancing school.

The baths were not forgotten. Larger, more complete than at the first home, so many more were to make use of them here.

All arrangements were complete. A large, airy hall where breakfast and the mid-day meal were to be served. But here, as in that other home, the evening meal, which would be the chief meal of the day, was to be taken amidst nature's beauties in a large and beautiful conservatory. Owen had spent a fortune in furnishing it with the required plants which were of the rarest kinds. A miniature lake was formed in its center, wherein the little golden speckled beauties were dashing and splashing about in their merry chase. A fountain was reared in its center composed of a half dozen nude mermaids holding their hands aloft, their finger tips forming a circle from which the water was flung aloft in showering spray. Sweet voiced songsters filled the air with their thrilling music. Flowers bloomed in wild profusion; huge vases were filled with their brilliant treasures wherever they could be suitably placed.

At several places small artificial hills had been erected, ferns and grasses growing amidst the rocks. Through a small rocky ravine the water came tumbling into a basin below, forming a small lake. Palms, cactus and other plants were grouped at convenient places. Nooks and alcoves without number had been arranged wherein the tables had been placed and were now spread and awaiting the hungry guests, each table seating about a dozen and through it all rare, sweet music, coming from some hidden source lulled the tired senses to rest and quiet.

The last preparations had been made. The last garlands had been hung. To every room its inmate had been assigned, which promised them all the same sweet privacy when privacy was desired, as in the first and smaller home. Every room was furnished cozily and comfortably, and every inmate, if so they desired, could claim some musical instrument for their private use, besides which there was a music hall where first class musical instruments of all kinds abounded. A number of the best teachers had been engaged to supervise the different departments, to teach and bring to light the hidden talents that none might be lost, but all shine in their full glory.

The grounds were something wonderful, or in time would be so, when the years would have done their work. The drives were beautiful, so wide and clean. Ponds covered with water-lilies. Fountains everywhere. Lover's nooks and cozy retreats. Plants, shrubbery and flowers in glorious profusion, and artistic designs wherever the eye might rest. Down the sloping banks of the river wide, spacious stairways of hewn stone had been made which led down beneath the laving waters. Skiffs, large and small were moored here, inviting and wooing lovers of the watery element to trust themselves to its glassy bosom, to be rocked on its silvery, rippling waves and be borne whithersoever they might wish.

Owen had made a deep hole in his millions. Lack of funds should not prevent it from being a success. And now the new inmates of this wonderful home were waiting the summons to their first evening meal. All the "salons" of the lower floors were swarming with gayly dressed maidens and with young men attired in their best. Instinctively they knew that henceforth they must always put their best efforts to the front, and the blending of youthful voices in merry laughter made the heart glad as you listened.

But not all were young that were assembled here tonight. Many there were who had seen the darker side of life and who in all probability would often prefer the solitude and quiet of their own rooms to the noisy merry-making of a careless and care-free youth.

And among all those who found a home within the walls of this magnificent structure those had not been forgotten whose labor had produced it, had made it the thing of beauty it now stood. And where could be found those to enjoy it in its completeness more than those whose patient labor had constructed it? As might be expected they had grown to love it as they worked, and the knowledge that they should enjoy its beauties and comforts when finished had helped, not a little, so that they worked eagerly and with extra skill until the day of its completion.

To be continued.

"Isabel's Intention," by Mariette, is an extraordinary story of a girl—an innocent, but thinking, sympathetic and justice-loving girl—who, being told by her mother that society could not get on without prostitutes, and that she herself is indebted to them, determines to take the place of one of the victims, and become the degraded sacrifice for the welfare of society. Twice she attempts the awful task, but happily remains "the woman who didn't." This very unconventional little tract, however apparently absurd its story, is unmistakably from a feminine hand, and an indication that women are bent on squarely facing the facts of life and will not acquiesce in the degradation of a large number of their sex. The story is graphically written, and calculated to make its readers pause to think.—"London Freethinker."

For sale at Lucifer office. Price, 5 cents.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Dr. Alice B. Stockham, Chicago:—I am today in receipt of a letter from a gentleman to whom I sent the last copy of Lucifer containing Mr. James' criticism on Dr. Berrier. The gentleman who writes the letter is an old war-horse in reform. He is alive and wide awake to all the interests of humanity; one of the most progressive souls I know. He is personally acquainted with Dr. Berrier, and as Lucifer stands for freedom of speech, I think it is no more than just to the doctor that the words of our friend should be published.

"And now here comes Lucifer, 'Son of the Morning,' Child of the Light, Prince of Love, illuminating Humanity. I have just read it all, commencing with the article on Saint (?) Anthony, and especially the article on Dr. Berrier. I never met a seemingly purer minded man than Leroy Berrier. The form of criticism indulged in is not pleasant to me, and coming from an old thinker, as I understand C. L. James to be; our differences of opinion where parties are equally honest are not harmonized by remarks of this sort. There may be, and doubtless are errors of thought, expression and methods but the object is one, namely the Freedom of the Sexes. This I believe in and yet I can see how a fine ethical code (unwritten) must be the rule of action. However, I would not lay down any law, limit or observance. W."

Sada Bailey Fowler, Torresdale, Phila., Pa.:—Thanks to Prof. Wm. Windsor, who (see Lucifer, Oct. 27) has been inspired to give to the world the grand fundamental truths of S. T. Fowler's Genetics; that at last justice may be done to the grandest philosophy and to one of the greatest philosophers this planet has ever produced. Oh, how I have worked and prayed for this; and since I have been a student of the thought power and spiritual science, what strong thoughts I've sent forth for this result, which now shines brightly through the blessed beams of our Light-Bearer. And how appropriate! how germane to its especial work—sex purity and freedom! No wonder motherhood has not been understood when the philosophies and religions of the world are based on heisms. Thanks to "Genetics" which teaches of our divine mother as equal with the father, as follows:

Space and matter, the primative actualities of existence. The spirit of space, electricity—the mattine; the spirit of matter, magnetism—the malline. And behold! it is the sexualization of this eternal mother and father that harmonizes and moves all solar systems. When this is understood, then will society look upon sexuality in purity and freedom.

S. T. Fowler gave all that a man could give; but it was reserved for one of his women disciples, to unfold the inner and spiritual truth whose unsealed vision beholds that—interiorly and superiorly—within these outward elements of space and matter rests the omnipresent and infinite spirit—the Mother and Father God. My forthcoming book gives the mystic key to the practicalization of this truth in a harmonious system of social, industrial and pure—love-life, manifesting the reality of spirituality, the truth of the scriptural quaker doctrine—God is spirit. Let us worship in spirit and in truth.

Flora W. Fox, Rochester, Minn.:—I send my choicest and best greetings to you and Lucifer now, and later will send a filthy lucre greeting which you need, in our barbarous civilization. Money is so useless, yet so needful. What practical assistance are our comrades, Addis, Pope and Isaac getting? I hope their case will not be ignored by our freethought papers, for these men were battling for the same fundamental principles of liberty—liberty first, last, right along and all the time! They took their own way of doing this needed work, to be sure, and those of us who have not "sand" enough to be martyrs, ought to see to it that these same martyrs are well protected and sustained in our courts of (in)justice and speedily released. Let us not be deceived,—the courts are not against these men in any way, but against their progressive, active "Firebrand," which sweeps the cobwebs of bigotry and superstition from off the earth. The opposition seek to kill and bury all such papers because they are dangerous—to the foes of human advancement!

Now, friend Warren, just what do you mean when you say, "I have no use for side lovers, as safety-valves for passion"? Who does? Surely not the New Idealists. Where can you find a greater number of legalized "safety-valves of passion" than in our present marriage system, and where they claim to have "no use for side lovers"? Are you an advocate of marriage as it is?

One does not need to advocate variety to substantiate a claim for full liberty of choice in all matters that appertain to human welfare. Woman does not yet own her body, for marriage makes her a slave to the "marital rights" of some one man owner. This is a beautiful freedom (?) for our self-respecting women of both continents, and strange to say, most of them are perfectly satisfied!

Yes, friend Chavannes, "the marriage system does need reforming,"—by being abolished! It is too hol(e)y to be patched up or mended. The men and priests of past ages have made a terrible muddle of it and now want to change it by law, while not yet willing to grant one-half the race any voice in the matter.

> More law; more law!
> To fill greed's capacious maw!
> That is the song they sing,
> For they are swallowed up by Tammany ring!

Anton Niedermeier, Trenton, N. J.:—I have been reading the various criticisms of friend Ruedebusch and of his book, and am grieved that some have been impressed unfavorably with the writing of our friend. I am grieved, because adverse criticism, especially when expressed over-forcibly, are not productive of the unity which is desirable and necessary. Yet all these criticisms do really not prove anything for or against friend Ruedebusch or his book. They only prove that a book, a theory, or a sentence, nay, even a word, may convey a different meaning to each person, let the difference be ever so trifling. They prove further how often our best efforts are misjudged, and how prone all of us are to misunderstand others and to be misunderstood by them.

Yes the opposing criticisms or opinions only emphasize the fact that every person perceives everything about him or her in a different light from every other person, and that therefore every thing seen, heard or felt, every thought uttered, every idea expressed will make a different impression upon each person. By the force of habit or by long custom many of us are unable to think of certain things or conditions without associating them with certain other things or conditions, while others are able to think of new things or conditions and surround them with the corresponding essentials. Such, I think, are the facts in friend Ruedebusch's case. Some are unable to see a state of society as pictured by him without some of the stigma, without some of the blemishes attached by most people to all lives not in accord with the prescribed custom.

First of all, I think, friend Ruedebusch is honest. And have we then an over-abundance of honesty? Scarcely any one will think so. He is furthermore brave in putting forth so fearlessly his views (they are his whether others held or hold the same or not) which, as he well knows, are greatly in opposition to existing things. But then his "ideal" does not exclude love, nor responsibility for love's act, but merely gives to both the widest latitude possible. I read the book, and read it with much pleasure, and think that only a noble, brave and fearless person could write such a book. "Unrestricted Freedom" is its central thought. Do we not all strive for the same?

I hold that the very expectation of a life-long partnership robs love of its freedom, and thereby of its sweetest joys. It makes such a "living-together" irksome if not outright detestable, and in many cases love fades and dies but a short time after the parties have entered into a life union. The cultured mind will, if at all possible, always respect the partner of his or her pleasures, and will therefore continue to live with such partner because expected to do so, though the heart may feel a strong yearning, or longing for another and perhaps more responsive love.

Friends, let us have freedom. For this let us work with might and main. But to be successful we must join hands. Do not fear, but let each one be fully emancipated, for then and then only shall we be able to grow into full man- and womanhood. Once free, each can live up to his or her own highest ideal, and compulsion and rape in or out of the marriage bed shall no longer be known. Sexual brutalities and outrages of all kinds will cease, and men and women walk side by side, always respected and respecting. Yours for Union.

Letter to a Prospective Bride.

BY IDA C CRADDOCK.

"Direct and delicate, and contains information of great value to both parties."—The Medical World," Philadelphia.

Pamphlet; twenty-five cents. Address, Ida C. Craddock P. O. Box 2003, Philadelphia.

"Loma"—A CITIZEN OF VENUS," by Prof. Wm. Windsor. A story of surpassing interest, heavily devoted to Sexologic and Sociologic problems. Like Bellamy in his "Looking Backward," the writer of "Loma" believes in the "state," as a factor in social evolution, but individualists will probably forgive this feature for the sake of the radically revolutionary ideas in regard to popular theories—sexologic, theologic, cosmologic, etc. Substantially printed and artistically bound. Price, post-paid, $1.50. Address this office.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.50.

685.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,		.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetism; Albert Chavannes,		.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,		.10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker,		.10
Practical Co-operation;	" "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism;	" "	.10
Love and the Law;	" "	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman;	" "	.05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,		.05
Digging for Bedrock;	" "	.10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,		.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr,	.10
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.25
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel E. Wacht,	.10
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.25
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.01
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	.20
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	25
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

* * *

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue," By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman," By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom," By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell. By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?" By X.
"Love and the Law," By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches," By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.

This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.

Bar Sinister and Licit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .50

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .50

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper, .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .10

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10

Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50

Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00

Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50

A Sex Revolution, " " .25

Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25

Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .10

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Ebriety,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda. In "Appendix; Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whitlock. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 25 cents.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Emma Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.
We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the cure of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
Box 122, San Jose, Cal.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 47. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 24, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 686

The Elections, etc.

BY C. L. JAMES.

From the Anarchistic standpoint, safely everlooking the sea, the battle and the vagabondage of theories lacking an inductive basis, what is the moral of the fall elections, A. D. 1897? By common consent of all parties, the great battle ground was Greater New York. Counting out Henry George, who fell in the harness too soon to be a factor in "the annual ballot boxing squabble," the contestants of Greater New York were (1) The democratic Tammany Machine represented by Boss Croker's man, Judge Van Wyck; (2) the republican McKinley Machine, represented by McKinley's man's, Boss Platt's man, Tracy; (3) the puritanical, I-am-holier-than-thou Machine, represented by Rothschild's man's, Boss Grover Cleveland's, man's man, Seth Low. Moral:—It may be observed that the man who had fewest men and bosses between himself and headquarters "got there." Result, so far, an unqualified condemnation of middlemen and bosses by the masses,—"miseres hominum menteis, pectora cæca,"—blind and miserable though they are. But, furthermore, the puritanical, I-am-holier-than-thou, Machine—represented by Rothschild's man's, Boss Grover Cleveland's, man's man, Seth Low, has met with an annihilating defeat. This is very significant. Among all those hinges whereby the Knave works the Fool into that union with himself whose lack would make each of them as useless as half a pair of scissors, none is more adapted to the Fool's instincts, nor (consequently) capable of catching more votes, than the I-am-holier-than-thou Machine. Its total defeat in the Greater New York election, after its practical trial for four years, means that the fools, though by no means all dead yet, are very far from a majority. Surely an encouraging conclusion, which all the "great" secular papers have failed to notice!

The Knave "can fool all the people some of the time." He did when a D. D. who hired unfortunate women to perform indecent actions while misrepresenting his purpose to them, posed as a great reformer. He can fool "some people" (the "great" secular papers e. g.) "all the time." But he cannot "fool" even a majority of "the people all the time." The true inwardness of the Greater New York election has been ignored by the "great" secular papers, admirable specimens of those whom the Knave can fool all the time! Some of these blind guides have, indeed, gotten their eyes far enough open to see that, from an early stage in the canvass, the republican and Tammany machines were essentially but one. The Party Machine has therefore shattered the I am-holier-than-thou Machine. What gave it victory in such a contest? Truth and Honesty! Strange words to use in connection with Tammany? Yes; but misery makes acquainted with strange bedfellows now, as much as in Trinculo's days. Four years of the Strong-Roosevelt-puritanical-I-am-holier-than-thou Machine, made almost everyone prefer anything else, as all did in England, after twenty years of the same machine under the Long Parliament and Cromwell. Tammany's war-cry "to hell with reform!" was the perfection of candor compared with Leap-frog Parkhurst's plea for "good government"—God save the mark!

The fight was between the proverbial honor of thieves on the one side, and on the other a loathesome hypocrisy, sordid and canting, cruel and obscene. The easy victory of the thieves over the "double-cross-coves" forbodes a much more decisive victory of those opponents of law who do not steal over those eulogists of law who do. The crushing defeat of "good government" in New York means the death of the "goo-goo" swindle everywhere else. I, individually, have much reason to rejoice in such a result. For, two years ago, this humbug was being worked everywhere by those who had a private axe to grind; and it was I who, single-handed, prevented its being even tried in Eau Claire—by the bondsmen of a defaulting city treasurer, now in the penitentiary. Never, in any city will raids on saloons and brothels be made to cover public robbery again! At least not if the crushing defeat of the "goo-goo" swindle is properly followed up. We used to have a Defense Association in New York. I should like to suggest to that association that the time is auspicious for getting the Blue Laws repealed entirely, and for putting a notorious blackmailer by the name of Comstock behind the bars—which would destroy Federal "goo-gooism" as effectually as Van Wyck's election has destroyed municipal.

* * *

As concerns E. C. Walker's "Call for Concerted Action" and Mr. Lloyd's criticism of the scheme—count me favorable to Walker's project every day and all day long. Mr. Walker will remember that I have been trying to do something in the way of organizing friends to social freedom for some eighteen or twenty years, but, having no great talent for such work have reaped little but the credit of being among the first to propose it. I hope Mr. Walker will succeed in getting all the social radicals of America registered; the passive ones even provided with work of the "E. C." type; the active engaged, as he proposes, in issuing tracts, circulars, lectures and other instruments of agitation in ever increasing quantity; and all who wish it made known, by name and address, to all others. The difficulties and hazards of such organization are already known to him, to me, and to many others; but I apprehend that twenty years' experience in a small way has taught all likely to be engaged in the management of this enterprise how all who have any work in them can be got to work, and traitors made harmless by letting no one of them know enough to betray. The considerations which have prevented me from personally answering his call, hitherto, are in part familiar—want of "the needful," which I understand him to say now is not needful—and the reflection that no one who ever heard of me was likely to doubt my being an active social radical. Mr. Lloyd's idea appears to be that we are protected by obscurity.

and that concerted action would draw on us an annihilating persecution. I think he is quite mistaken. The smallest spark of truth is plenty large enough to attract the lynx eyes of "goo-goo" swindlers, whose whole stock in trade is stamping it out; but whom either fear or purchase promptly reduces to innocuous desuetude when the flame becomes larger. And the more dense the surrounding obscurity, the further a small spark can be seen. When Mr. Lloyd talks of mobs, he must surely forget the Whitecaps. Such organizations as theirs are treasonable at common law; they are expressly within the purview of the Federal Ku Klux statutes; and yet they were allowed to work their deviltry for years, because they appealed to the pseudo-moral prepossessions of a large class. Puritanical I-am-holier-than-thou wickedness during the last ten years without raising in general revolt all that large majority of the people whose private pleasures it endangers. The amazing thing is that they bore so much of it. And with the Greater New York election before us, we may be sure it has past its zenith, and will henceforth trouble less. Then, when Mr. Lloyd speaks of Lucifer and other radical papers as being tolerated now but expresses fears that they would be suppressed if concerted action were taken, he must forget that everyone has had to fight through a most determined effort to suppress it. Lucifer itself, and even the cautious "Truth Seeker" obtained some measure of toleration only when, and because the Puritanical-I-am-holier-than-thou gang found it had done its worst, and was hurting itself by continuing to attack them. In this glorious war the boldest policy always proved the best. Heywood, with less suffering than Bennett, forced the Puritanical-I-am-holier-than-thou gang to tolerate much more radical utterances. If his life had been prolonged a few months, he would have forced them to tolerate the Three Words. But the struggle has been exceedingly severe—much harder than it is likely to be under even equal conditions now that the I-am-holier than-thou wickedness has so evidently brought on a reaction and gone out of favor. The editor of Lucifer, if I remember right, was in prison or in jeopardy for eight years; and a trial of eight years' duration has been described as quite punishment enough for any crime. The only publications obnoxious to the Fool part of the I-am-holier-than-thou gang, which the Knave part really tolerates, are those which buy their immunity from Comstock & Co. as the "Police Gazette" does. We, who disdain to do that, have had to fight so hard because we were weak; and we were weak because we were scattered. United, we could defy any mob; and, as for Comstock, we might, if we chose buy him up; after having thus caught which hare, it would be quite proper and feasible to make jugged hare of him.

The Cheap and Nasty as a Monitor in the Schools.

Victor Hugo versus the Philadelphia Board of Education. It is always ordained that in the due course of time and nature the despot should appear. The despot is always blind. Nothing could be done by any resistant that is so fatal to his power as the things he does for his own undoing. By the code of this latest censor, "Les Miserables" is a bad book. There are a thousand and one estimable people of more or less competency to repeat the alphabet who believe this book to embody principles and pictures of exceptional nobility. Some of them believe Hugo was a regenerator and that this book especially was and is regenerative. It is even believed delusively by daring free-booters in morals that no text-book with idiocies of rote can do for youth what youth can find done for it in the pages of this enlightened treatise. Here, however, is a snare, against which Principal Rorer, who has in his charge the virtue of the girls of the High School, will set his shield. It is interesting to note that the one official protest is from a woman.

"We cannot be too cautious in setting before the young girls and boys anything which detracts from their ideals of virtue and purity." By these signs it may be understood that the Principal realizes the awfulness of his responsibility. The trouble is that his first exercise of authority should have been so ludicrous. It is brave, admirable, even mad, but it lacks that saving salt which would have reserved the Principal for his own morals, left Victor Hugo the morals which are Victor Hugo's, and left to the girls intrusted to his unsafe hands the morals of the girls. If there is a girl to whom "Les Miserables" is not familiar who does not now straightway get the book and more diligently apply herself to it than to any text-book whose virtue her guardians could approve, then girls are not what they have been and what they must be to be wholesome and brave, then the Edenic apple was eaten in vain, then history has won a hold up, and then the cheap and nasty is the worshiped monitor of schools.—Horace L. Traubel, in "Conservator."

There is no sleep so profound as the sleep of a dead book. Men should write—yes, they should write much. But they should write for message and not for style. They should make the average interest their own, the struggle of society indexing their personal struggle, so that somehow the line marking them off today, cloistering the sympathies of the scholar, should all be destroyed. I would more willingly aid him with his public. But the man who makes of a book a grave wherein he pours the dead bones of a dusty scholarship has no public and may proceed with his funeral unaccompanied by the general mourning.—Horace L. Traubel, in "Conservator."

The costumes of the Hindus and Mohammedans [in India] are comfortable even to look at; they are the natural dress of man in a warm country, made delightful to the eye by grace of drapery and loveliness of color. The only essential part of the men's dress is the loin-cloth, which is usually white or has been white originally. But their smooth brown skins are adornment enough; the eye soon learns to appreciate the tint and to prefer it to our blanched aspect. The shades of brown are innumerable, but it never approaches the blackness of the coast Negro. The people are naive in their ways, but carefully observe there own limitations, and never are immodest. I have seen a man clad in loin-cloth, jacket and mantle, saunter up to the corner of the public garden opposite the hotel in Bombay on whose veranda I sat and take off everything he had on; shake out and refold the garments and replace them; but he managed so well there was no undue exposure. Still more remarkable was the case of the young married woman on the platform of a railway station, who also took off every stitch of her clothing and clad herself in other robes; but from her shoulders to her heels not an inch of bare skin was revealed throughout the process; I watched her from the window of my compartment in the train, which was waiting, as did two or three hundred other persons—or they might have done so had not similar spectacles been too familiar. Imagine (thought I) an American lady doing the same thing under similar circumstances in America! The savoir faire of this people is incomparable.—Julian Hawthorne, in "Cosmopolitan."

The gait of Indian women in walking is the perfection of easy grace; they have been barefooted since the dawn of time, and are accustomed to carrying weights on their heads. I have now and then seen an American or an English girl walk well; but never in a way to bear comparison with them. The trunk poises lightly on the hips, the legs glide forward smoothly, one elastic foot after the other is planted on the ground and spurns it. Their delicate waists have never felt the deadening pressure of a bodice. The vest worn by most Indian women does not come below the curve of the breasts; the body thence to the loins is bare; in some parts of the country no vest at all is worn. The women are uniformly of small stature; and most of the poorer classes soon lose their symmetry of form, owing to child-bearing and other labor. But nothing can be more beautiful in all respects than an Indian girl of the higher caste in her prime; there is a glorious delicacy of loveliness in every contour and feature; a splendor in her eyes and hair and in the mellow tints of her exquisite skin; a fitness in her garments and a fascination in her motion that belong to no other woman.—Julian Hawthorne, in "Cosmopolitan."

It is obvious that to do the best we can under existing conditions is about all that any one is doing, as a practical expression of being, and to do the best we can under these conditions is to do the best we can for consequent conditions.—Horace L. Traubel.

The Coming Tyranny.

BY H. E. ALLEN.

The Agricultural Press League in its annual session in Chicago, Nov. 8, unanimously indorsed the Loud postal bill, and nearly all the agricultural editors are now requesting their readers to write their congressman, or senator, requesting his vote for the bill at the coming session of congress.

If the Loud postal bill becomes a law I do not believe it will be possible for such papers as Lucifer, "The New Time," "The Coming Nation," "The Appeal to Reason," and hosts of others of this class of papers to circulate through the mails. This is only another proof that force is invariably employed where argument fails—or, I should say, where there is no argument force is the requisite thing.

The coming tyranny is to be the suppression of all argument. Socialists, anarchists and others are now denied the liberty to speak in many cities. But this is not enough. They must not even be allowed to circulate any printed matter. "Free press"—what a lie! Lucifer's readers, are no doubt familiar with the provisions of this infamous bill. But I will take space to call attention to some of its features for the benefit of those who may not be:

Certain corporations are to have their letters carried at a reduced rate by using stamping machines placed in business houses; and postmasters at delivery offices are to keep a record of all these letters they deliver, report them to the department, and the government collect the postage from each corporation less a certain discount.

It will be seen that this would open the way for any amount of frauds, as the honesty of postmasters in reporting the correct number of letters might be influenced by friendship or money. It gives the big concerns a reduced postage rate which of itself is bad enough, but the most dangerous part of the bill is purposely hidden in its provisions which will exclude from the mails a large amount of so-called liberal publications, both books and newspapers, by constituting the delivery postmaster a censor over all printed matter he delivers, and he can deliver or not at his pleasure. Under this law I feel very certain the lady who now officiates at my post office would refuse to deliver me Lucifer and at least three other publications of somewhat similar radical views.

Russia has no postal regulation more infamous or tyrannical than this. Are we ready to make a postal censor of every village postmaster? Then the friends of freedom of publication cannot act too quickly or too wisely. If the abridgment of liberty in this direction continues the dominant party will ultimately tolerate no criticism of its administration of government. This new tyranny must be averted—it must be hurled back by every liberty-loving, patriotic freeman. This outrageous assault on natural rights must be resented at all hazards and the miserable spawn of plutocracy who advocate such a measure must be taught that this republic is not the place to trifle with the liberties that all right-thinking men have come to admit are inalienable. Without the freedom of speech and press no people can be free or government secure. So why should we not look with alarm on every assault on natural and individual rights?

Berwick, Ill., Nov. 15, '97.

Love Ideals.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

I wish to express my approbation of the position taken by I. W. Lloyd, in his article in No. 683 of Lucifer, and give my reasons for believing that his Ideal, and not Ruedebusch's, will prove to be the one which society will adopt.

Ideals, to be effective, must be in the line of natural desires, and capable of realization through obedience to natural laws, and those new desires are not controlled by the will, but come from a process of natural development.

Lloyd's position is, that we are naturally sexually attracted by many different persons, by some more than by others, and that instead of fighting this natural tendency, we must accept it as normal. He would classify it as central and side loves, a classification which may or may not be correct, which is a matter of little importance. The chief point of his teachings being that such attractions are right, and can be gratified without doing violence to our nature, and with benefit to the welfare of society.

I not only believe that Lloyd is correct, but I claim that it is only the application of a general law to the realm of the sexual relations. As men and women develop they enlarge the scope of their affections—the result of attraction—in all directions. The developed man loses his intense and narrow patriotism, and can see much to praise and approve in other nations. The same is true of intellectual pursuits; the more we know, the more we can appreciate the increase of knowledge in several directions. It is even true of foods; the ability to enjoy a variety of foods, served in a variety of ways, is a proof of development. This applies to all things. The state of development of a people or of an individual, can be ganged by the number of things which interest and attract them, and it must follow that the men and women who are attracted by several persons are more developed than those who are attracted by only one or two.

The want of progress leads to the diffusion of attraction, and this diffusion leads to an increase of the social bond, and to the betterment of humanity, so I contend that Lloyd's Ideal is in the line of progress, and will in time displace and replace the present Ideals.

As for Ruedebusch's Ideal—so far as I understand it—it can be defined in two words: Secrecy and Disintregration. I take Ruedebusch to be a very clear-headed man, but he makes the common mistake to suppose that success in sexual relations is secured by other means than in any other relation. He knows, as well as anyone, that constructive success in all branches depends upon diffusion of knowledge—the opposite of secrecy—and upon organization. And yet he soberly proposes, not as a war measure, to be adopted so long as we are surrounded by adverse conditions, but as an ideal condition for humanity, a state of things which shall tend to as complete a disintegration of society as possible, and where general mistrust shall be the ruling spirit.

Ruedebusch is a fighter, who bids defiance to the world, and says in substance: "I shall do what I please and it is none of your business what I do," which is all right for him, but is a poor ideal for the improvement of society. Lloyd is a philosopher who carefully studies the laws of progress, seeking to take advantage of them, for his own benefit and that of others.

One word now as to the "Call for Concerted Action." I hope that its leaders will heed the word of warning which Lloyd gives in the same article, and believe that they have enough experience and judgment, to remain within safe limits in their propaganda. My own impression is that those who favor more sexual freedom, have in Lucifer the best means to extend their work, and that our best plan is to help its publishers to sustain its burden, and to use our best efforts to extend its circulation. If the new movement results in so extending the field that Lucifer will increase its subscription list, and reach more readers, I shall look upon it as a success, but if as too often happens, it only leads to a division of forces, and drawing from Lucifer's support, I shall look upon it as a mistake, and that it would have been better for the cause if it had not been started.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Bulcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 121 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 Congress Street Tuesday evening Nov. 24. Dr. C. S. Wood will make the opening address.

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$392.09
A Friend,	5.00

"Firebrand Fund"

The following sums have been received at this office for the benefit of "The Firebrand Group," one of whom, A. J. Pope, is now confined in the county jail at Portland, Oregon, charged with violating the postal laws by depositing for mailing, copies of the "Firebrand" dated Sept. 19, '97.

George Bedborough,	$2.00
F. F. Holiday,	1.00
Helene Hochstein,	.50
Louis Roser,	.50

To which is added, as a contribution from Lucifer's office, 5.00.

THE EVILS of our miscalled representative government receive fresh emphasis in the statements made by H. E. Allen in this issue, in regard to the impending infliction known as the "Loud Postal Bill." People who have all they can do to mind their own business are perpetually victimized by those whose only business it is to rule and to rob their industrious and peace-loving neighbors. To this class the ears of legislators and judges are always open because they, too, are interested in government and—in robbery; the two words meaning much the same thing.

Readers of Lucifer who may object to being still further robbed of their equal rights,—imprisoned, etc., through the government machine called the post office, would better look after their rulers—miscalled servants—at Washington, D. C.

Close of the Story.

One more short chapter only, and the long continued serial "Hilda's Home" will be finished. In last Lucifer the request was made that all who now wish one or more copies of this story will let us know without delay. This request is made for several reasons:

First—Many of the letters asking for the book if published were written more than a year ago and we think it possible that the writers may have changed their minds, since, or that circumstances may now prevent them from fulfilling their part of the implied contract.

Second—It is very important to us, for reasons not necessary to mention in detail, that a decision be made now, as to whether the book is to be issued or not, and if to be issued, how the necessary funds are to be raised. Our means, our type, etc., are so tied up in the publication of Lucifer and the various pamphlets already promised that we cannot afford to take risks in the matter of "Hilda's Home." Responses to last week's request are coming in but most of those who have from time to time expressed a wish for one or more copies have not yet responded.

Among feasible plans for getting out the volume is that of A. Isaak, Jr., of Sellwood, Oregon, one of the "Firebrand Group,"—see "Various Voices." If there are others of like mind we should be glad to hear from them. But whether favorable or unfavorable we again ask an early expression of opinion, so that the matter may be definitely settled pro or con.

Extra Holiday Offer.

Do you want a bound volume of Lucifer for 1897? Lucifer is never out of date because it is devoted to sexology or the science of homoculture. Almost all its articles are in the nature of essays on sex problems, a theme which can not be too fully discussed. Hence a bound volume of this paper for any year is a valuable mine of information for students of sexology, sociology and allied sciences.

The subscription price of Lucifer is ONE DOLLAR a year, but, in addition to the paper, the subscribers are usually given pamphlets worth at least one-fourth the price. This year we make an extra special offer.

To all new subscribers who send one dollar to pay for Lucifer until January 1, 1899, we will sell a substantially bound volume of Lucifer for 1897 for only $1.25. This is little more than the price of the papers alone, the binding being given as a premium to the new subscriber. The volume will contain fifty-two numbers—416 pages. The value of such a book to persons interested in sexology can scarcely be over estimated.

To present subscribers who send us the name of a new subscriber for the year 1898 together with one dollar for the new subscription, we will sell one substantially bound volume of Lucifer for 1897 for only $1.25.

Both these offers are limited and will only hold good until January 1, 1898. The number of bound volumes we can supply is limited and only the early applicants for them can be certain of getting these valuable premiums. If the supply is exhausted before January 1, money will be refunded.

The bound volumes, alone, will be sent for $1.75 each.

Revealed Morality and Its Exponents.

BY E. C. WALKER.

While Protestants take the ground that sex association outside of marriage is immoral and not to be tolerated, their religious progenitors, the Catholics, maintain that a Protestant marriage is only a sham, no better in fact than unlicensed association, and is a heinous sin from which the highest dignitaries alone of the church can absolve the principal or witness. Recently Archbishop Cleary of Kingston, Ontario, issued this pronunciamento from the pulpit of St. Mary's Cathedral:

"We hereby dec'are, with all the authority of the Church vested in us as Archbishop of Kingston and your chief pastor, that any Catholic in our metropolitan city or diocese who shall hereafter presume to enter any non-Catholic edifice to assist at what is termed a marriage ceremony, or a service for the dead, even though he shou'd not take an active part in the performance, renders himself guilty of mortal sin by dishonoring the religion of his baptism and defying the laws of the holy Church and giving public scandal before society; and we furthermore reserve to ourself alone the power to absolve from this heinous sin."

This broadside was called forth by a marriage in a Congregational church in Kingston, in which a Catholic woman was one of the bridesmaids and other Catholics were witnesses.

Archbishop Cleary speaks of this as "a marriage ceremony which was a mere secular contract not a whit more sacred than the marriage of any two heathens," and he says this Catholic woman was one of the "actresses" in the drama; that she paraded herself on the platform as one of the "principal performers." No doubt our exclusive friends of the Oregon Secular Union will hold up their hands in horror at this exhibition of Catholic bigotry, but the impartial observer is compelled to maintain that the boycott of social radicals by said Union is every whit as bigoted as the "performance" of Archbishop Cleary, while it is utterly lacking in the logical consistency which marks the conduct of the Catholic priest. Archbishop Cleary's action is fully justified by the traditions and canons of the church, by the spirit of the authoritarian religion whose minister he is, and by the fundamental dogma of a revealed morality to be enforced on earth by an apostolic organization. On the contrary, the boycott of the friends of sexual freedom by the Oregon Secular Union is diametrically opposed to the traditions and principles of Freethought, to the spirit of that Liberalism which stands for liberty of expression and investigation, and to the basic concept of evolution according to which all systems of morals are the result of human growth and agreement and therefore subject to constant revision as man's reasoning faculties quicken and his experience widens and deepens.

Hear All Sides.

BY ELSIE COLE WILCOX.

Permit me a few words with Mr. Berrier concerning his article in No. 682.

Mr. Berrier declares Ruedebusch's New Ideal to be very old, and to involve "incoherent, unstable and inharmonious" living. We must, then, suppose that he regards his, Mr. Berrier's, ideal as being coherent, stable and harmonious.

Having read Mr. Berrier's ideal as embodied in his "Love and Procreation," I confess I am at a loss to see wherein it differs to any extent from the ideal of Charlotte Smith or any other advocate of exclusively monogamic relations. It is true Mr. Berrier advocates Dianism very mildly, but allows a large loop-hole for those who differ to slip through. And now that he has expressed himself so forcibly in Lucifer, regarding the life-long duration of sex relations, it seems evident that he sees very little need of reformation in the present system.

It is a great mystery to me why he was ever jailed. As his views are in such perfect harmony with those of the powers that be, it seems as though they must have made a mistake and accidentally (?) wounded one of their own number.

And yet he assumes to stand on a "higher psychic" plane, and to look down with pity, if not with contempt on those who, like Mr. Ruedebusch, regard personal liberty as the "pearl of great price." Mr. Berrier declares himself to be a believer in "freedom, but not license." That is to say, he believes in the freedom (?) of every individual to act according to Mr. Berrier's ideal. Thanks! Freedom is a glorious thing! And yet we must believe this to be his conception of liberty, as he characterizes those who differ from him as lacking in a "high stage of development, refinement and culture."

Again he says "breadth of character and mental life are essential to the endurance of love." Just so. And even more breadth of character and mental life are essential to free love. A breadth of which Mr. Berrier seems to have no conception.

But the genuine free lover can tell him of a more potent reason than he has given, why love is so often temporary. It is because of the lack of liberty, the chains with which such pseudo-moralists would bind it.

"Love's wings moult when caged and captured:
Only free he soars enraptured.
Can you keep the bee from ranging?
Or the ring-dove's neck from changing?
No, nor fettered love from dying
In the knot there's no untying."

Do not fear, Mr. Berrier. If two people are drawn together by the power of love they will stay together as long as it is mutually agreeable to do so. And when it is no longer agreeable they are better apart. Neither Mr. Ruedebusch's ideal, nor any other free lover's seeks more than liberty. It is the contract, the binding force of either law or public opinion we rebel against.

But do not misrepresent Mr. Ruedebusch! Nowhere in his book can I find any such assertion as that "love and home" are the "causes of unhappiness." It is the fact that the present home is usually devoid of love, that causes the trouble, and that, as I understand him, is what Mr. Ruedebusch would try to remedy. "The family instinct is as deeply imbedded in the human race as any of the higher instincts. It has developed," you say. Well—yes. The family has developed. But, in the processes of evolution many things have developed that have served their purpose and passed away.

Polygamy was an evolution. Polyandry another. In some respects the present system is an improvement on both. But must we take it for granted that we have developed to the last stage of progression? Perhaps the time is ripe for another step forward.

Are you so well satisfied with the present generation, Mr. Berrier, that you think nothing can improve it? You say the "family makes possible the rearing of offspring in such a manner as to serve the best interests of society." Now it seems to me that the offspring of the present system is not quite all that can be desired! No doubt we are in advance of some savage tribes, but isn't it barely possible that there may be a still better way, and that the future generations may better "serve the interests of society?"

If so, is it not better for so-called liberals to stop pulling each other's ears, and to pass over slight differences of opinion regarding methods, and work together for freedom to test any theory that may seem plausible to the individual, realizing that so long as differences in climate and other environments exist, so long will human beings differ, and will require different conditions to develop the best that is in them.

Do not be afraid of liberty. Rest assured that under freedom from restraint and censorship, we shall not fail to evolve the best conditions, and to develop the higher faculties.

Lawrence, Wash.

Our Purpose.

BY ALBINA L. WASHBURN.

I miss the little "Firebrand" very much, as I have but the two radical weekly papers, Lucifer and the "Firebrand." I have learned much from both and can but respect the general tenor and purpose of each to keep on its own beat. True Anarchism, absolute liberty, especially the right to obey natural law, ignoring all other, while sometimes discussing the sex question as an important part of the liberty to be achieved, this seems to be the field of the "Firebrand;" while Lucifer, making a specialty of woman's absolute right to herself and all her faculties without legal interference, and the right of her children to be well born by virtue of her own choice, love and best judgment in selecting their father, still claims the whole field for human rights which necessarily includes obedience to natural law to the exclusion of all other. Both stand for advancement in all ways possible toward human happiness which can be attained only through freedom.

Like many others I have had great respect for men's laws,—for the institution of marriage,—have dutifully paid taxes and worked for years to help attain the ballot for women, yet now I find it difficult to realize or understand the "point of view" of those who consent to the imprisonment and persecution of their fellowmen and women because of a difference of opinion, though law books mountain high furnish venerable precedents. I wonder, too, how men and women who truly love one another "for better or for worse" can "take" each other legally and bodily "until death do them part," under the system of marriage which constitutes a deeper, vaster network of legalized prostitution than that outside of marriage laws, which fetters their wills, retards their development and brings them into classification with those who marry for convenience, for money, for lust, for position, for title and all the category of unworthy motives for the protection of which mating has been "legalized."

I refuse to pay taxes and urge others to refuse, seeing that "government" is already outgrown, having degenerated from national, state and county economic management to a system of fee taking, official robbery and boughten decisions where the greatest financial investment brings the largest returns, exactly like an investment in cattle, coal mines, real estate or banking, the workers paying the cost and the more they work to improve property or increase their products the more they are assessed to pay. It is a monstrous disorder of things and the sooner dropped the better.

For similar reasons I no longer use the ballot, for which we women struggled so long and anxiously in Colorado, and are still struggling in most of the other states. We imagined it meant self-government, but such are the tricks of politicians who constitute the vast army of engineers for the monied interests of our country that the ballot cuts very little figure in elections, and after our "periodical insanity," as one of our clear-headed thinkers calls it, and after much waste of printers' ink and debauchery of voters we are surprised to find that notwithstanding a majority voted for reform in various ways the old conditions still prevail, the disgraceful history of dishonesty is still repeating itself, yet people are still hoping and expecting through governmental methods to win peace, justice and what they call civilization.

Why marry under such corrupt laws and fee their officers? Why pay more taxes to support a system of robbery, and why vote in new masters when the old ones are bad enough?

The old ideal of our republic was self government; now let us achieve it—singly, collectively, co-operatively, lovingly. Let us put aside all thought of our legal wrongs and press forward bravely to a social and economic union, of purpose at least, which shall secure to the worker his products and untrammeled interchange with others, bringing light, hope, energy into his life, education to his children, art, beauty, comfort and love into the lives of all.

Impossible, say you? Yes, it is impossible under present conditions. Men and women, cast off your chains; work cheerfully and lovingly for one another, replace fear with faith, servility with independence, faltering with courage. Leave wage-working for self employment; dig, delve, dance and sing for those who love you but never sell your labor or its products to those who work not for you in return.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CHAPTER LXV.

But now all are ready. At last the signal is given, the doors are flung wide, and just as the music of a brass band clashes through the resounding halls, playing a march from one of the master composers, the workers, all the workers, pour into the monster conservatory.

They thought it was fairy land opened to their view, floating in a sea of light. Among the rest you see the members of our own circle, scattered about here and there, every face resplendent with happiness reflected from within.

No waiters are in attendance. At every table one of the fresh young maidens plays the part of hostess. On a smaller table near at hand, all the side dishes have been arranged. Tanks with new sweet milk, ice water and hot water; nothing that is likely to be desired has been forgotten or omitted. The next evening another of the young ladies will be detailed to preside.

When supper was over the tables were let remain as they were. The day's work was over. In the morning many busy hands would restore order, and by noon everything would again shine with tasteful beauty; the tables reset, fresh flowers filling all the vases, and the dishes awaiting refilling.

After they had all steeped their senses in the beauties of the surroundings and had satisfied the cravings of appetite the evening's pleasures began. Music, song and tableaux had been arranged with exquisite skill. Cora's voice had lost none of its richness, none of its charms. On the contrary it was more flexible, more sweet and full, more perfect in every respect, and well it might be. Had she not spent two years in hard study after they came to the home, in making herself perfect in her art? At many a concert, during these years, had her sweet, thrilling voice been heard, and tonight she almost outdid herself. She was perfectly happy and threw her whole soul into her work; deafening applause rewarded her.

Margaret's rendition of "Debora" met with equal favor. She never failed to please.

Then followed some renditions of music wherein Imelda and Milton both excelled, for they too had been spending time in developing their precious talents.

The evening's entertainment then concluded with a series of tableaux, three in number, entitled 'Progress," which were received with a storm of applause. They represented "The Past, the Present and the Future."

There was one feature that had not been announced upon the program. One whom we have almost forgotten to mention had opened the evening's festivities with a short address, dwelling on the object, the aim, the hopes that were to follow the evening's work. That one was an old time friend, probably forgotten by most of our readers. It was an old, white-haired gentleman with a well preserved air about him. It was the Mr. Roland, of the lecture-room of the olden days and the fatherly friend of our Margaret and Imelda, and who was followed by another almost forgotten friend, the lecturer "Althea Wood."

When the curtain had dropped on the last tableaux the assembled audience refused to be satisfied. They well knew whose money had erected the palatial building and "Owen Hunter! Owen Hunter!" was now the cry. In response to this call Owen stepped upon the stage and in a slow, graceful manner sauntered up to the footlights. Waiting for the stormy welcome to subside, then in slow even tones he began:

"Friends and comrades! You do me far too great honor in thus calling me to the front. What you term an act of greatness is simply one of justice. No merit is due to me that I control millions of dollars while millions of my fellow human beings this night are starving. My early years were droned away in luxury, ease and pleasure hunting, and in all probability I would have gone on thus to the end had not circumstances given me a shaking up, thereby showing me something of the darker side of life.

"What these circumstances were, what the means by which the awakening was brought about I cannot here tell you. The story would be too long. But I awoke to a sense of the fact that I was of no use whatever in the world. With the aid of minds superior to mine a home was planned, one for a small number of congenial friends who wished to try co-operation, and having proved it a success, this one for the busy bees of our hive was next planned.

"You have, until now, been the employees of the 'Home Company.' From this day forth you are partners therein. You will receive your salaries just the same as heretofore. At the end of the year the accounts will be squared and a dividend declared with which you are to pay your rent, so-called, for your home, but which in reality you are buying. For when you have paid rent amounting to the sum it has cost to erect this building, you will be the owners of it, not I. Moreover, you shall not be taxed with a shameless interest, and when your home is paid for and the original capital again garnered in, there will be countless other employees who are in need of a home like this, and which it will devolve upon us to erect. Do you see?"

And see they did! Such deafening shouts of applause never filled a hall before. It was a perfect uproar and it took some time ere quiet could again be restored. Owen smiling shook his head—

"You do me too much honor, as I have before remarked. Believe me, you have much more reason to thank the bright minds and gentle hearts of the ladies of the "Home" than—

"Three cheers for the ladies!"—someone shouted, and three rousing cheers were given, and then three more, and yet again three.

Owen saw that they were getting excited, and that he would have but little chance to say more, so he determined to end it at once.

"That is all, comrades. With the best of wishes for the future well-being of your home, and with the sincerest hopes for the happiness of each of you I bid you good-night—as I see it written on many bright, young faces that their restless feet are anxious for the dance to begin."

Another deafening round of applause followed. They would have recalled him but Owen would not respond.

The crash of music was then heard, sending forth its inviting strains, and soon the light footsteps tripped to the measured chimes and the hours sped in happy merriment.

With such surroundings, such inducements, it would not be difficult to keep the young, bright maidens fresh, healthy and pure minded, and to keep the young men away from the influence of drink, of vice, of demoralization. No danger that they would unsex themselves through starvation of their sex natures. The needed magnetism was theirs through this constant mingling, and while this was only the beginning, while they had so much yet to learn, there was every hope, every evidence that the home would develope fine, healthy and intelligent women, strong, brave and noble men.

Already Owen has another home planned, to be situated farther out in the open country. "Products of the soil" will furnish the chief employment of this group of workers. Not all men and women prefer the bustling city life. There are many who cannot live and enjoy life away from nature. They would pine for the open air, the green fields, the cool shade of the woods. Only under the blue vault of heaven can happiness come to them. And for such as these it is the desire of our friends to secure also the advantages that only the co-operative home can supply. Owen is determined that his millions have not been vainly entrusted to his care, and that the advantages that wealth can procure shall be theirs to whom the wealth justly belongs—the producers.

Here we must leave the inmates of the just completed and dedicated home, on the threshold of their new life, and take one more farewell glance, speak one more farewell word to our friends of the "F. L." home—the children of my fancy, who have grown under my care, and who have become inexpressibly dear to me.

To be concluded.

VARIOUS VOICES.

W. A. Elick, Millersburg, Ind.:—Enclosed find five cents in stamps for "Isabel's Intention." I received this week a copy of Lucifer, and think it the best paper I ever saw or read.

H. Bernegger, Bridgeport, Conn.:—Enclosed find twenty-five cents in stamps for a three months trial subscription to Lucifer. The two copies I received this week, the first ones I have ever seen, are a source of intense interest to me; the subjects treated therein are timely as they are important. Please send me also a sample copy of the "Adult," organ of the "Legitimation League." Beg to avail myself of the splendid opportunity you kindly offer to trial subscribers and ask you to send me "Vital Force," by Albert Chavannes.

A. Isaak, Jr., Sellwood, Oregon:—I am very much interested in "Hilda's Home." I see that there are quite a few who wish to have it printed in book form. I would like to make a proposition:—Let all those who wish it in book form help it along a little. Probably something like this would do:

"I hereby state that I will take one (or more) copy of 'Hilda's Home' in —— binding, and will forward the amount three months ahead of time set for delivery of the book, provided pledges enough can be obtained to justify the publication of same."

An edition of one thousand copies would, I believe, go off like hot cakes. It would also help Lucifer along, as I think there is some profit in books.

Mattie Cuddie, Wathena, Kan.:—I cannot begin to tell you how much I appreciate the Light-Bearer, but I am pained to see so much of its valuable space taken up in the war now raging among our Idealists. Come, let us reason together, and all join hands in the noble cause of liberty and reform. Let all live up to their highest standard of right and give to all the freedom to enjoy it, is what I say.

I truly sympathize with the "girl graduate," "C," and wish I could comfort her. I think all might and should see the great wrong of a system that crushes the lives of loving, trusting women. Why should we be condemned for loving all that to us is lovable? Does not the great fault lie in making ignorance instead of knowledge the safeguard of the young? Oh mothers, let us be up and doing in regard to the training of our boys as well as our girls, and thereby, help to bring about that much needed reform.

I would like to correspond with a few liberal friends on matters discussed in Lucifer.

C. de Maupassant, Otter Lake, Mich.:—Although I suspect that we do not agree on every point with regard to the sex question I hope you will allow me to enter my protest against Mr. Kerr's views on the subject. It is most humiliating to women to imagine that their emancipation from male thraldom will be abolished through the use of contracepts. Are they simply, in the eyes of men, the tool most convenient for the satisfaction of their lowest instincts? No, Mr. Kerr, the time is not coming when smiling old maids armed with contracepts will replace the mother in the family. The family will stay, and when once purified from "marriage law" and the interference of the church the race will progress without the use of contracepts.

I copy from a clipping kept in my scrap book the following passage from Mrs. E. J. Wiswell, a letter printed in Lucifer at the time of your second imprisonment.

"Licentiousness, in other words desire for sex intercourse as it stands today, is a disease transmitted from generation to generation. Although the most sacred of all the attributes or powers it has through ignorance been robbed of all its sacredness and has been erected the foundation of all crime, sin, sickness and disease of the material world."

I was much interested in J. W. Lloyd's ideas on the uselessness, or rather the danger of the "Call for Concerted Action." I no more agree with Mr. Walker's views on the subject than Mr. Lloyd does. With respectful sympathy believe me ever yours.

Letter to a Prospective Bride.

BY IDA C CRADDOCK.

"Pure and delicate, and contains information of great value to both parties."—"The Medical World," Philadelphia.

Pamphlet; twenty-five cents. Address, Ida C. Craddock, P. O. Box 2093, Philadelphia.

"Loma" -A CITIZEN OF VENUS," by Prof. Wm Windsor. A story of surpassing interest, largely devoted to Sexologic and Sociologic problems. Like Bellamy in his "Looking Backward," the writer of "Loma" believes in the "trade," as a factor in social evolution, but individualists will probably forgive this feature for the sake of the radically revolutionary ideas in regard to popular theories—sexologic, theologic, cosmologic, etc. Substantially printed and artistically bound. Price, post-paid, $1.50. Address this office.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Marsette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

686.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
"ractical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.10
Is Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,	10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistæ Vitæ; M. T. Martin,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.,	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

* * *

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue,"	By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman,"	By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom,"	By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell,	By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?"	By X.
"Love and the Law,"	By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches,"	By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.

This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published. .10

Bar Sinister and Lucit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .25

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .25

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper. .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .15

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10

Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50

Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00

Occult Forces of Sex. " " .50

A Sex Revolution. " " .25

Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25

Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .5

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Chastity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Heriosity,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 15 cents.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 180 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 417 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell at $2.00. We are selling the same book for $1.50.

"The Adult:" Organ of the Legitimation League of England, contains in its fourth number: Editorial; "Sex Love and Mutability," by Oxford Northcote; "The Last Citadel of Authority," by Robert Braithwaite; "Spiritual Love," by William Platt; "Wanted, A New Dictionary," by Ess Tee; "The Judgment of Paris—Up to Date," by Leighton Pagan. "The Adult" is a neat magazine of twenty-four pages, with attractive cover. Price, 5 cents. Order of Lucifer, 1304 Congress St., Chicago, Ill. Price per year, 50 cts

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Emma Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O 131 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co. Room 1037, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. C. S. Wood, 131 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dotson Barker,
Box 132, San Jose, Cal.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 48. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 1, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 687

If Men were Wise.

What might be done if men were wise—
What glorious deeds, my suffering brother,
Would they unite,
In truth and right,
And cease their scorn of one another?

Oppression's heart might be imbued
With kindling drops of loving kindness,
And knowledge pour
From shore to shore,
Light on the eyes of mental blindness.

All slavery, warfare, lies and wrongs,
All vice and wrong might die together;
And wine and corn
To each man born,
Be free as warmth in summer weather.

The meanest wretch that ever trod,
The deepest sunk in guilt and sorrow,
Might stand erect
In self-respect,
And share the teeming world tomorrow.

What might be done? This might be done,
And more than this, my suffering brother—
More than the tongue
E'er said or sung,
If men were wise and loved each other.

—Charles Mackay.

Is Uncle Sam in Favor of Nudity?

BY CYRUS W. COOLRIDGE.

From an item in a New York paper I learn that a certain clergyman has discovered that Uncle Sam's five dollar bills are "indecent." By examining one of the objectionable bills I find that it has a picture representing a group of semi-nude women. A horrible picture, indeed! How can Uncle Sam be so impudent as to circulate such vile matter? Is he not afraid of Anthony Comstock? Where is Mr. Comstock, anyway? Why does he not prosecute Uncle Sam for sending "indecent" matter through the mail? Strange! Our Christian friends can circulate an "indecent" Bible; Uncle Sam can circulate an "indecent" picture, but Lucifer, the "Firebrand" and similar publications must be suppressed. Consistency, thou art a jewel!

By the way, why does not the reverend gentleman start a crusade against the two dollar bills as well as against five dollar bills? I have before me a two dollar bill on which I find a picture of a nude boy. Is the nude figure of a boy less "indecent" than is that of a woman?

But after all I must say that the reverend gentleman is right and that, as a matter of fact, the picture on the five dollar bills is "indecent" and must be improved considerably before it will cease to be "indecent." If you examine the picture, you will see that some parts of the women's bodies are concealed by drapery. I do not know how it would strike you, but to my mind it is positively "indecent." The nude in art must be completely nude in order to be pure. Semi-nudity is suggestive of "indecency." Why should some parts of the human body be concealed if not for the purpose of intimating that these parts are "indecent" and must not be seen? Give me a nude body without the slightest vestige of clothing and I can admire it; but I confess that I have very little admiration for nudity protected by aprons and fig-leaves. I hope Uncle Sam will listen to the complaint of the reverend gentleman and make the picture on the five dollar bills less objectionable by removing the drapery from the bodies of the women.

Inversions of Fact and History.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Before commenting upon Mr. Berrier's article, "The Family Ideal," in No. 682, I wish to offer a few words concerning the correction of manuscripts. The lexicons say that an editor is "one who edits"; he gives out, he publishers, he "revises." Editing is "the act or business of superintending and preparing for publication." Then, the editor's vocation is editing. Leader writing is a different kind of work, which may be performed by the editor or by another person. It is the editor's business to put in presentable shape the periodical or book he is editing. If he is conducting a paper and fails to eliminate errors in grammar and flagrant obscurities he takes the responsibility of burdening his columns with and imposing upon his readers the fruitless discussions growing out of misconceptions caused by these obscurities. He thus does what he can to defeat the very end he may have in view, the fair presentation of "all sides" of a subject. When an editor refuses to correct errors of the kinds mentioned, he is really acting upon the assumption that the writer wishes to be ungrammatical, and involved and obscure. Of course this is not true, one time in a thousand. Authors desire to do the best possible; that they are so often the reverse of clear, concise and grammatical in their compositions is due to their lack of knowledge. The editor is a trained specialist, whose work it is to "prepare for publication" the contributions he accepts, taking care while doing this to preserve the meaning of the writers. Speaking for myself, I must say that the editor who declines to remove solecisms from my contributions to his paper is doing me anything but a kindness. It makes no difference whether I am or am not the writer of books—my brain may not always work well, my pen may fail me at the most critical moment. Therefore, when an editor refuses or neglects to eliminate from my articles the errors he detects, I must resent his conduct as an unwarranted failure to perform a duty voluntarily assumed. The business of the editor is to edit, as that of the proof-reader is to mark the mistakes of the compositor.

Asking in advance the reader's pardon for an answer which is mainly a repetition, I will set over against Mr. Berrier's assertions a somewhat lengthy excerpt from my pamphlet, "What the Young Need to Know."

"Nature is stronger than theory, in the long run. The trend of evolution is toward wider and wider and more and more full expression of emotion. As we conquer the forces of the universe to our use, as we lengthen life by progressively limiting the number and intensity of diseases, as we round out our natures by the development of the intellectual and aesthetic faculties, so we increase our capacity to enjoy pleasurable sensations, and therefore we shall ever strive to increase the number and prolificness of the sources of pleasurable sensation. This is why no theory of sexual denial can long be accepted, much less acted upon, by any considerable number of rational people, who have good health.

"Q.—'As man develops, his attractions become more precise, and, where on the animal plane, his attraction was promiscuous, on the perfected human plane a few only, and ultimately but one will attract and hold him sexually.' Is this statement probably true?

"A.—It is based upon a very one-sided study of the problem of sex attraction and repulsion. In the first place, touching the phraseology employed, we cannot draw any sharp line between the 'animal plane' and the 'human plane,' while as to a 'perfected human plane,' the words are unmeaning because perfection is unthinkable in regard to finite beings. We might justifiably speak of an improved human plane if we were always careful to have it understood that 'human' was not used in contradistinction to 'animal,' but was employed to indicate an animal more highly differentiated than the others. Again, it is not true that the attractions of animals of the lower orders are entirely promiscuous or varietist; some are monogamic, and more are partially monogamic, that is, some animals and birds go in pairs for one breeding season. So we perceive that no more here than elsewhere can we set the lower organisms on one side of a clearly-defined line and the more complex organism, man, on the other side.

"Now as to the contention itself: It is true that as civilization advances men and women grow more particular in their attractions; in other words, something more than the mere difference of sex is required to draw them to each other. In still other words, a man of culture does not care for association sexually with all women, and a woman does not care for association sexually with all men. It may be said in passing that it has probably been a great many thousands of years since men and women began to have their preferences as to sex mates; that is to say, here and there a man or woman very early learned that some one of the opposite sex was more attractive than the others of that sex; differentiation was already doing its work in the mental and aesthetic domains of human life—there had ceased to be promiscuity for at least a few of the genus homo. And man was not the pioneer in sexual selection, as could easily be shown, if it were necessary. But the two fundamental errors of the objector are the making of promiscuity synonymous with variety (multi-selection), and the assumption that increasing precision in selection will not be accompanied by increasing frequency of attractive attributes. Each of the errors is a glaring one. Promiscuity signifies without selection, while the varietist is of all men or women the most particular as to the qualities of the one loved, or the ones loved. The varietist requires the best for which his or her nature calls, and all of the best. The varietist is not satisfied to be chained for life to any one person, for there is not to be found in any one person the complements of all the qualities of one's self. The monogamist selects once, in a blind, hap-hazard way; the varietist continues to select all through life. The monogamist makes no allowance for changes of character in himself or his companion, for differences in development as the years pass, nor for the equilibration of attractions which is bound to come to every couple depending upon each other alone for magnetization. In a word, the monogamist is promiscuous in his sexual relations, as he is not free to select from different persons what his nature requires. Opposed to him stands the varietist always selecting, under liberty, what his nature demands. If the laws, and the bad organization of society, deny the liberty essential to selection the varietist does the best he can under the circumstances.

"As to the second fundamental error of the critic, it is self-evident that he stopped his cogitations prematurely. It needs no argument to prove that, as men and women grow more particular as regards the qualities demanded in those they can love, so must there be a corresponding increase of the qualities in themselves which can be loved by men and women of equal mental power and equal refinement. The more there is asked for the more can be given. So demand and supply will keep pace with each other. As neither human perfection nor uniformity is supposable, the rationalist cannot imagine a time to be coming in which a man will find in one woman all that he needs of the opposite sex, or a woman find in one man all that she needs."

I think the bearing of these fundamental facts upon the "family ideal" is self-evident. If, as I contend, culture brings with it the capacity to appreciate and love the qualities commensurable with our own, then it follows that the broader our intellects and sympathies become the farther from us will recede the ideals of barbarism and semi-civilization. One of these fading ideals is the patriotism of the clansman, of the inhabitant of a certain part of the earth's surface. It is no longer useful in the processes of socialization; on the contrary, it is directly in the way of progress. So of the ideal of family devotion. It, like patriotism, was born in barbarism—yea, below that, in savagery. It has many of its roots in distrust, hate, spoliation. What is beautiful and useful in it will survive the changes that are inevitably coming, some of which are already here. As every really seeing student knows, the family as now constituted enslaves all without giving to the young the protection and nurture which it is commonly supposed it alone is capable of bestowing. The ideal of exclusive devotion to one man or one woman makes men the enemies of men and women the enemies of women when they might be friends and mutual helpers. The single-pair home creates widows and widowers and orphans. It is wasteful and anti-social. In my opinion, it will be succeeded by larger co-operative associations, by the free group, with interests more or less closely interwoven, according to the temperaments of the associates. Sometimes this co-operation will be formal; at other times, wholly informal.

Says Mr. Berrier: "Where there is no family, there is fighting instead of work. Instead of production, there is robbery and destruction." This, presumably; is intended to carry the implication that where the family is there is neither fighting nor robbery. If it does not mean this, it has no meaning. But what are the facts? Within the historic period, where will Mr. Berrier find the record of a familyless nation that has waged a great war or robbed by wholesale? Right here under our eyes in Cuba, hundreds of thousands of men, women and children have been slaughtered or starved to death within two years in a war waged between a family-loving nation and its family-loving colony. This is only the latest illustration of the fallacy of Mr. Berrier's argument. The life-blood of Europe is drained to support the armed camps of family-worshiping nations. But, really, Mr. Berrier could not have meant what he seems to mean, so I will not further criticise that paragraph.

[So far as the above criticism may apply to myself I would say that, adhering to the general principles frequently enunciated in Lucifer I simply decline to be governed by specific rules, in applying said principles to the various articles offered for publication. The physician who understands his business wants few if any rules. He takes each case by itself, and treats it with little reference to any other case. The same may be said of the teacher, the judge and the editor, who aspires to be something more and better than a mere routinist, a mere intellectual automaton. M. H.]

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 417 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $1.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

"Our New Humanity."

"Ecrasez," Oakland, Calif., for Ootol er.

Vol. 2, No. 3, of "Our New Humanity" was published some time ago, but it is a number that will not be outdated. The matter is not transient but permanently of interest. The principal article is "What the Young Need to Know—A Primer of Sexual Rationalism," by E. C. Walker. It should have a good sale for many people are asking What the Young Need to Know, and are waiting for someone to answer them. Walker's title is rather misleading, for instead of applying his answer directly to the young—as one would infer, he takes the parents "through a course of sprouts," which is necessary in case of any parents who are seeking such information. It is not applicable to the kindergarten. It does not answer the questions for the parents, but is a course of reasoning intended to free their minds from sex superstition and prepare them to comprehensively answer the inquiring young according to their ability to understand. I fancy "A Primer of Sexual Rationalism for Adults" would have been a more descriptive title but would not have so nearly met the demand, for the adults do not realize that it is they who really need to know.

"The New Martyrdom" by Lillian Harman is a study of the involuntary martyrdom of man's paternal desires to woman's change of base. A medical journal's report that the men, who have been inveigled into marriage by the new women who refuse to bear children, and are greatly concerned for fear they have lost what had grown to be looked upon as their perpetual right to become papas, attracted Lillian's attention to a phase of the sexual transition which she had not before considered. Her sympathies swayed her so far toward the childless men that in the commencement of her article she questions whether "our freedom is worth its cost so long as our car of progress grinds beneath its wheels our male loved ones," but by the close she regains her equilibrium and tries to console them with the assurance than instead of losing they will gain by woman's emancipation from sexual slavery; that they will thereby have companions instead of dollish slaves, and that women are not liable to completely change from their incubator position into that of non-childbearing, but that after a vacation, the maternal desire will rise again, and then instead of being at sea in the dense fog of sexual superstition will be at least tempered by judgment. The medical journal asked: "Is it nothing at all that man's desire for offspring should be disregarded?" Could those millions of women upon whom unwelcome children have been forced, give the answer I fancy they would reply: "Is it nothing at all that woman's aversion to over-childbearing should have been so long disregarded?" and that they would be tempted to "even up" with men before they would get too sorry. But I do not favor the course of women who marry for support and then refuse to fulfill their "wifely duties." Support implies obligation to and control of, and violation of this tacit understanding is the same as violation of any other contract and deserves whatever censure is due for securing money under false pretenses. If women desire liberty instead of privileges there is no more reason why men should support them than that they should support men.

I guess this is as good a place as any to enter my protest against the almost universal womanly condemnation of manly passion. Wherever women are subject to more passion than they can digest the cry goes up against man's "lust" and "brutal passion." In my opinion, man's superior passion is just as legitimate, and really more so, than woman's lack of it. Women will hang onto men for support and strenuously insist that they go no where else to satisfy their natures and at the same time condemn them as coarse and unfeeling if they fail to control their passions in order to protect the women from a surplus. Reasonable? Oh, yes! It will be no different, however, until they realize they are fostering a superstition that has brought about this abnormal sexual condition. Then, maybe, they'll get sense enough to understand each other, at which time I apprehend every one's desire for offspring may be satisfied.

Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., has an article on "What Women Are Here For," in which he says: "The catechism women have had drummed into them boils down to this: What are men here for? To glorify God and serve him forever.

"What are women here for? To glorify man and serve him forever.

"The coming woman wipes this off the slate and announces that she is here for her own sake primarily to follow out the purposes of her being whatever that may be."

There is an article by R. B. Kerr on "The Rights of Children." He treats the subject very well from his premise that children have rights as against their parents. But, since there are no natural rights, they must all necessarily come under the head of social compromise brought about by approximate equal intelligence. As the children at the age considered by him have practically no intelligence, they have no more "rights" than have kittens, pups or pigs. If he would base his arguments on some course he would consider best for the parents to pursue in relation to their children it would be interesting. All this talk about the "rights" of children and dumb animals makes me tired.

Order "Our New Humanity" from M. Harman, 1394 W. Congress st., Chicago, Ill. Price, 25 cents.

Happiness the True Standard of Conduct.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

In reading the criticisms of C. L. James upon Berrier's communications and publications, I thought it a good occasion to apply to it our recognized standard of conduct. All evolutionists—and I believe it embraces the majority of the readers of Lucifer—recognize in the attainment of happiness the only correct standard of conduct. Whatever is conducive to our happiness and that of our surroundings is right, what detracts from it is wrong.

From that standpoint, I believe Mr. Berrier to be right. All inquiries as to the best methods of sexual relations is a move in the right direction, for even if the best solution is not given, it eventually leads to the increase of human happiness. Besides I have no doubt that Mr. Berrier is happier for the performance of his work, and the fact that his books meet with an extensive sale is sufficient evidence that they help to increase the happiness of others.

As to the manner in which his work is performed, it is well to remember that words and phrases are only useful when they convey ideas to others. It might be more satisfactory to his readers if he expressed himself more clearly and grammatically, but if he succeeds in making himself understood, it is really all that which is needed. Too many persons think more of the appearance than of the reality, and like the followers of fashion, who value a man by the clothes he wears, and not by his character, judge of an author by his style, and not by the ideas contained in the book. Grammar is really a poor help to happiness, and has but little value in the eyes of the philosophical enquirer.

In answer to the remarks of the editor of Lucifer, I wish to say that to edit communications is ticklish work. There are some mistakes due either to carelessness or ignorance, which ought to be corrected, but no change should be made that might alter the meaning of a sentence. I used to write for a paper, whose editor, possessing more knowledge of style than of the subjects I treated, would every once in a while make some alterations—improvements as he thought—which entirely changed the meaning of what I had written. And every time it was because he did not possess sufficient knowledge to understand what I meant to say; and the actual result was to make me appear to his readers as ignorant as he himself was. As an editor of some experience, I must say that if a communication is worth printing at all, it is best to let the writer express himself in his own words.

On that account, I believe the editor was right to publish Berrier's communication as it was sent to him, and I want to say here that in the many years I have contributed to Lucifer's columns, I have never found a word changed, or a typographical mistake in any of my communications. I wish I could say the same of my contributions to other papers.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 121 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 139 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 Congress Street Tuesday evening Nov. 30. Dr. Stella Jacobi will make the opening address.

The Ideal Home.

It will probably be conceded, without argument, that home life, home influences, exert a greater force upon the formation of human character than do any other influences, or class of influences. To improve the home, to make better the home life, then, is the surest and best way to improve the character of human beings.

In all human enterprises, or undertakings, the ideal, the unseen, the imaginary, the abstract, the unsubstantial, must precede the actual, the visible, the concrete, the substantial. And before the ideal, the imaginary, the abstract, can be formed there must be discontent with the present and a desire for something better.

In the long story that ends with this issue of Lucifer, the object of the writer, Rosa Graul—which name is a real one, not a nomme de plume, has been

First—To show the evils that are unseparable from the home life, as our social and governmental institutions now make it.

Second—To arouse desire for something better.

Third—To outline an ideal home in which, or from which, the evils of our present home life will be eliminated, and preserving, at the same time, all that experience has shown to be good.

In carrying out her plan our author has traced the life history of a half dozen or more persons—children of her fancy, yet true to life, who are finally brought together in an ideal co-operative home, which she names "Hilda's Home," from one of the principle characters of the story.

That the elaboration of this ideal has been watched with much interest by a large part of Lucifer's readers is evinced by the letters, of which, from time to time we have inserted samples. Such expressions as "unique," "beautiful," "grand,' "superior to anything ever before published," "an epoch making story," etc., have been common.

That the times are rapidly growing ripe for practicalizing such ideals is evinced by letters like that of I. Jameson of Brinnon, Wash., published in this week's issue. The location proposed by Mr. Jameson, for an experiment of this kind, is certainly a good one. The chief difficulty in attempts to practicalize co operation in any line, is in getting the right people together; hence the greatest possible care should always be exercised in making selection of co-operators.

Time and space permitting, a brief synopsis of "Hilda's Home," will be inserted in next week's issue; meantime the request is renewed, to all who would like to own copies, in cloth or paper binding, to send us their names, and post office address. The book, if published, will contain about four hundred pages—price, substantially bound in cloth, one dollar; in good paper cover, fifty cents.

Another Letter from A. J. Pope.

Under date November 14, A. J. Pope, formerly of this office, but for some months connected with the "Firebrand," Portland, Oregon, writes us another letter in regard to his imprisonment on a charge of depositing for mailing the weekly issue of that paper. After giving a somewhat extended description of the jail and its surroundings and his own "solitary" cell which he describes as a "very nice room for criminals and prisoners," he proceeds to say:

"On Monday 1st of November one of my friends came and told me he had been sent for by Snauble, a post office official who has my case in charge, to know whether I could and would furnish bail, to which he said 'I think not.' 'Then will he sign a bond for his own recognizance?' He said, 'I think he will.'

"The next day whilst H. Addis, Charles L. Penhallow and I were discussing the probabilities of my going out, the jailer opened my cell door and said, 'Here, Pope, go along with this man and get your liberty.' It startled me at first, but we packed up my books, papers, clothes and bed and carried them out into the office, and with my two friends and this man went to the post office officials; after some explanatory talk with Snauble—my two friends at my side pleading with me to go and sign a bond, I consented, and went into Commissioner McKee's room away from my friends. I saw him write 'A. J. Pope' and 'two hundred dollars' on a printed bond which he handed over to me, saying 'Sign it, sign it'—his face flushed and hand trembling. I took it up, read the paragraph containing A. J. Pope and two hundred dollars, read it twice and then threw it down with contempt, and said, 'No, I will never sign such a thing. What! sacrifice a principle that has sustained me and made me happy for fifty or more years? No, never! I will stay in jail until my flesh drops off my bones first! I know you have the power to put a rope around my neck and separate me from my body, as you have frequently done others, but you can't make me sign that thing.'

"He then cried out, 'Take him back to jail!' and back to jail I went. They waited one day to see if my friends could induce me to recant and sign the bond, but as I did not, the next day, the 4th of Nov. 1897, the jailer put me in solitary confinement, and told me to stop writing, by orders from the United States post office officials.

"The next and first time Addis came to see me, the jailer would not let him see me; then he went to Snauble and talked with him, and Snauble gave him a written order to the jailer to let him come at any time; which order has been complied with. On Tuesday, 9th of November, I handed out through the peep-hole to H. Addis to mail four letters, one to Sada Bailey Fowler, one to Kate Austin, one to Myra Peppers and one to Gertie V. Meserve; the jailer took the four, and said he was ordered to give them to the United States court. Whether those parties ever get what is theirs, time will tell. It seems to me, that I am the first on record who has been placed in solitary confinement, my writings to my women friends taken by the officers and myself forbidden to do any writing, and that too, before I am tried and convicted.

"If I will sign a bond acknowledging that the government has a right to command me and to make laws for my government and that I will appear at the court, when they call for me, they will open the prison doors and I may go out. But as I read the Declaration of Independence it says the people have developed to a state or degree that they can govern themselves; are born free and equal, with the inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; but a set of monarchists, in secret and with locked doors, begot a constitution, that Wm. L. Garrison correctly pronounced a 'League with hell'—under which, our present sorrowful and suffering condition has been produced. 'For this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world that I might be a witness to the truth,' is, I think, applicable to my case. Each minding his own business, each governing himself,—the only one he has the right to control, and each constantly improving and developing self—this will beget a state of pleasure, of harmony and peace that has never yet been known; and that this may be brought about is the constant prayer of your friend and co-laborer,

ABNER J. POPE,
Box 94, Portland, Ore."

A Protest From England.

MY DEAR HARMAN: "The Firebrand" deserves all the support liberal thinkers can afford. My mite (two dollars) herewith is a token of comradeship, that's all. The attempt to muzzle the press is a sign that the suppressed paper is badly needed. "The Firebrand" is not put down for morality's sake, but in the interests of the mayor, the priest and the Grundy. When free expression is attacked, free thought is the victim and thought is the sufferer. When the anarchist, the atheist and the freelover are suppressed the police obtain warrants against the democrat, the dissenter and the social-reformer. The "Firebrand" today—the "Investigator" tomorrow, and every paper tinged with the slightest heterodoxy next week. Tyranny is cumulative as thought is progressive. Yours for freedom, GEORGE BEDBOROUGH, Editor of "The Adult,"

London, Eng.

Sociologic Lesson. No. LIV.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

WARFARE AGAINST CAPITAL. Before there can be re-organization, it is essential that the capital which will be necessary to provide the buildings and furnish them with the required conveniences and machinery, shall receive a compensation equal to that which it would receive if invested in other ways, taking into account all the risks incurred. The money which is invested is a permanent investment; and the capitalist can only expect to be repaid from the accruing profits. So long as there is objection to his receiving full compensation, the risk will be so great that the money will not be forthcoming. So long as the working classes keep up their warfare against the capitalists, they make it impossible for any capital to be invested in such a way as to fall under their control, and therefore they make the inauguration of any extensive social re-organization impossible. So long as they keep up their warfare against gold, they endanger revolution, and thus make it essential to continue the use of gold as the sole basis of money.

[As I see it the working classes do not war against gold as gold, nor against capitalists as such. The real cause of the complaint of the workers is that to gold (or to capital) is given an unfair, an artificial advantage over labor, and because the men who own or can control gold, are not slow to use that advantage for their own selfish benefit and to the destruction of those whose only capital is their labor. A "revolution" that would dethrone gold, and put all commodities on a plane of equal freedom, is devoutly to be wished, and is sure to come, in time—peacefully it is to be hoped, forcibly if the advocates of privilege will have it so. M. H.]

Extra Holiday Offer.

Do you want a bound volume of Lucifer for 1897? Lucifer is never out of date because it is devoted to sexology or the science of homoculture. Almost all its articles are in the nature of essays on sex problems, a theme which can not be too fully discussed. Hence a bound volume of this paper for any year is a valuable mine of information for students of sexology, sociology and allied sciences.

The subscription price of Lucifer is ONE DOLLAR a year, but, in addition to the paper, the subscribers are usually given pamphlets worth at least one-fourth the price. This year we make an extra special offer.

To all new subscribers who send one dollar to pay for Lucifer until January 1, 1899, we will sell a substantially bound volume of Lucifer for 1897 for only $1.25. This is little more than the price of the papers alone, the binding being given as a premium to the new subscriber. The volume will contain fifty-two numbers—416 pages. The value of such a book to persons interested in sexology can scarcely be over estimated.

To present subscribers who send us the name of a new subscriber for the year 1898 together with one dollar for the new subscription, we will sell one substantially bound volume of Lucifer for 1897 for only $1.25.

Both these offers are limited and will only hold good until January 1, 1898. The number of bound volumes we can supply is limited and only the early applicants for them can be certain of getting these valuable premiums. If the supply is exhausted before January 1, money will be refunded.

The bound volumes, alone, will be sent for $1.75 each.

HILDA'S HOME.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

CONCLUSION.

The evening meal is over. All have gathered on the broad veranda to watch the golden sunset as it dips its slanting rays in the river beyond. They are unusually quiet, even for this serious band. Last night's merry making has made them just a little tired, besides which their hearts are full of unuttered prayers for the future success of that new home.

Mrs. Leland is sitting in the comfortable depths of an easy chair. A sturdy little man of four summers perches upon her knee, patting grandma's cheek, tossing her hair in his efforts to smooth it, taking her face between both chubby hands and drawing her head forward so that he can kiss her happy, smiling lips and altogether making love in the most approved fashion.

Margaret is sitting at her feet, her arm thrown across her mother's knee, while her eyes with a happy, tender light follow the movements of her boy, and her heart swells with fond tenderness and pride at the knowledge that he is her very own.

At grandma's back stands Wilbur whose eyes also follow the antics of the boy when they for a few moments lose sight of the glorious sunset.

Mr. Roland is a visitor at the home tonight, and sits a little to the right of this group, quietly drinking in the scene before him in the pauses of the animated conversation he is carrying on with the brilliant little lecturer, Althea Wood, who also is a guest at the home tonight.

Farther to the left are various groups. The two pairs of sisters—Imelda and Cora, Edith and Hilda—have formed a circle, their babies forming the center of their attention. Three little prattlers and one sweet little cooing innocent, lying close to Imelda's breast.

O, the joys of young motherhood! And the group of men that were standing a little apart felt the influence of the spell and each thought his lady love had never looked more fair.

Alice in delicate health was reclining in an easy chair while Milton with adoring eyes stood over her chair ready to do her slightest bidding. O, if she were only safely tided over the coming hour of trial! And as the sigh escapes him his hand caressingly toys with the bright mass of shining hair.

Lawrence has his Norma perched upon his knee answering her many questions. She has grown to be quite a big girl now, but has never outgrown her early love for her papa, and ever with the old delight greets his coming. The two are so near to Alice that she can comfortably watch them, and while a smile of proud tenderness wreathes her lips, it is Milton's hand to which they are laid.

"My baby!" She whispers the tender words.

"A little longer patience," is Milton's whispered reply, "and your baby will be your own!"

Her hand went up to his face with a caressing touch.

"I know," she smiling said, "but it was Norma I meant this time."

He drew the hand to his lips as with a knowing smile h answered:

"Ah, I see!"

Lawrence now and then let his eyes wander to the mother of his child, then they would turn to the group of fair young women where a pair of sweet gray eyes met his in a tender glance, then to rest on the little one reclining against his bosom. Which did he love most? His eyes lit up with a glad tenderness as they rested on the little one and then he drew the fair curly head so near him, close to his heart and hid his face in the fluffy masses; could he himself answer the question?

Many other faces we see which are all new to us, but they are all men and women worthy to be called by these names.

A group of the younger people have strayed down to the sweet-scented gardens gathering flowers as they go. Osmond and Homer are fast friends. Both are young men untouched by the rough hand of fate. Their young manhood, so perfect in its strength and beauty giving them the appearance of young kings, so proud, so lofty, was their bearing. Elmer, too, could scarcely be termed a boy any longer. His twenty years sat well on his broad shoulders and the eyes of the fifteen year old Meta shone bright as stars, her cheeks flushed as he chased her through the winding mazes of the park, and when he had caught her and kissed the rosy lips she submitted as a matter of course with the most natural grace.

Osmond had thrown himself at the feet of Hattie Wallace whose nineteen summers sat lightly on her shoulders. She was such a fairy and with rosy hued cheeks she listened to the soft, love-freighted words that fell in whispers from Osmond's lips.

Homer's companion was a dark, soft-eyed young girl, timid and shy who had been an inmate of the home for one year, where she had come with her mother who had fled in the dead of night from her husband and sought refuge in this haven of rest, and Homer was teaching the sweet Katie her first experience in the mysteries of love.

Aleda, the youngest of the Wallace girls was also there, and seventeen years had developed a truly pretty and healthy girl from the delicate querulous child. Another new comer had engaged her attention. Reading from a volume of Tennyson, a boy scarcely older than herself was reclining at her feet. He too had been brought there by a mother, not one who had fled the cruelties of an unappreciative husband, as she had never applied the title to any man. He had been a child of love.

His mother, in the wild sweet delirium of a first love, had abandoned herself to her artist lover without a thought of right or wrong. And he, pure and noble had no thought of wronging her. But disease had early marked him for its own, and ere the child of his Wilma had seen the light of day his own life had closed in that sleep that knows no waking, and she was left alone to buffet the storms of life as best she could, an orphan and without friends. With a babe in her arms of "illegal" origin the path of her life had not been strewn with roses. But amidst all her privations and trials she had kept her love pure for her child and had fostered only instincts pure and holy in the young mind, and when she heard of the home she applied at its gates, telling her story in pure, unvarnished words, never dreaming of an effort to hide any of her past. Only by the light of truth could the delicate fair woman thread her path through the world.

As might be expected, she had been received with open arms. Wilma, the mother of Horace, our young poet, and Honora, Katie's mother, could now be seen as they stand arm n arm watching the golden sunset and the children whose future promises to bring with it less of the pain that has so early drawn silver threads through their own brown locks.

The world at large knew not the full meaning of this hom as yet. The world is yet too completely steeped in superstition and ignorance to have permitted its existence had the full meaning been known. The "Hunter Co-operative Home" it had been called, and thus it was known to the world. It was known that babes had made their advent therein, but none but the initiated knew that marriage as an institution was banished from its encircling walls.

Would you ask us if happiness was so unalloyed within those walls that no pangs of regret or of pain could enter there? Well, no! We are not so foolish as to make such claim. There are hours of temptation; there are moments of forgetfulness; there are sometimes swift, keen, torturing pangs that nothing earthly can completely shut out. Our heroes and heroines are not angels. They are—when the very best of them has been said—only intelligent, sensible and sensitive men and women—but men and women who are possessed of high ideals and who are striving hard to reach and practicalize them. They live in a world of thought. They do nothing blindly, inconsiderately; their every action is done with eyes wide open. In trying to gain the goal they have set themselves to reach they strive not to think of self alone. The future of those who have been entrusted to their care, the young lives their love has called into existence, exacts from them much of self-denial. They are individualists, yet not so absolutely such that they do not realize that sometimes the ego must be held in check so as not to rob another of his, or her, birth right.

You ask again, "Does this home life, as you have pictured insure against the possibility of the affections changing?"

And again we answer, No! Certainly not. Such changes will and must come. Yet is it not to be expected that where there is liberty, in the fullest sense of the word, life will be a constant wooing? Is it not the lack of liberty that deals the death blow to many a happy, many a once happy home? to many a home that was founded in the sweetest of hopes, the brightest of prospects, only to be shattered and wrecked in a few short years? aye, even a few short months or weeks? And when such a change does come, in spite of all efforts to prevent, how great a thing it must be to know yourself FREE? free to embrace the new love without the horrible stigma of "shame!" as our modern society now brands it, and which stigma causes such unspeakable misery, such endless suffering.

And if a woman desires to repeat the experience of motherhood, why should it be wrong when she selects another to be the father of her child, instead of the one who has once performed this office for her? Why should the act be less pure when she bestows a second love, when the object of this second love is just as true, just as noble, just as pure-minded as was the first one? Why should an act be considered a crime with one partner which had been fully justified with another?

Reader, judge me not hastily. Judge not my ideas, my ideals, without having first made a careful study of life as you find it around you. My words are backed by personal experience and observation, experience as bitter as any that has been herein recorded. Indeed I doubt if I should, or could, ever have given birth to the thoughts expressed in these pages had it not been for that experience—which is one of a thousand—and when you have carefully weighed my words, think of the good that must result to future generations when unions are purely spontaneous, saying nothing of the increase of happiness of those who are permitted thus to choose, and to live.

When, O, when will the great mass of humanity learn and realize that in ENFORCED MOTHERHOOD, unwelcome motherhood, is to be found the chief cause of the degradation that gives birth to human woe. When will they see that enforced motherhood is the curse resting upon and crushing out the life energies of woman; while on the other hand, the consciousness of being the mother of a DESIRED babe, a child conceived in a happy, a loving embrace, needs no other blessing, no other sanction, than such act itself bestows.

The end.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 30 cents.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Ambrose Sorenson, North Lake, Wis.:—I will take two copies of the book, "Hilda's Home," at fifty cents per copy, and remit anytime wanted. The paper gives good satisfaction—hope you may all live happy.

Helene Hochstein, Rochester, N. Y.:—Enclosed find fifty cents for Lucifer and fifty cents for the "Firebrand." I am very pleased with Lucifer. My sincere regards to Messrs. Pope and Addis, the victims of our so-called morality.

K. A. E., New York City:—Enclosed you will find money order for six dollars and twenty-five cents ($6.25.) Five dollars for the "Extension Fund." One dollar to renew my subscription to Lucifer, and twenty-five cents for the "Combination Offer," if it still holds good; if not, use it any way you choose. Please do not publish my name.

Oscar Johnson, San Francisco, Calif.:—I see you intend to print "Hilda's Home" in book form provided you can get enough subscribers. You can put me down for one one dollar copy and two at fifty cents each, money to be sent after Dec. 1. The story has been unusually attractive to me and I wish to express my gratitude and respect for the author. I want one of her photographs if there are any in the market.

J. G. Truman, Lemon City, Fla.:—As Lucifer opens its columns to the economic problem let me say a word in favor of friend Parkhurst. As his remarks are confined to the present condition of society, I think that he is right. The gold standard, bonds, interest, profits, legal tender, and, I may add, the legal marriage, are necessary timbers in the present social structure, and we cannot remove one without endangering the whole structure. And if we tear this down before another is formed, chaos and confusion will reign, and we shall find ourselves exposed to the weather, famines and pestilence. Tom Johnson, multi-millionaire and street railroad king, says:

"As long as you make laws to give franchises away you will find others, as well as myself, to take them. Any civilization in which every willing hand cannot find employment, is a failure. When you find some men owning all of Nature's storehouses you will find millionaires on one side and tramps on the other."

Tom Johnson is right, both in what he says and in what he does. As long as the people declare, by their votes and voices: "We don't want anything and will not have it. We are willing and glad to serve the capitalists for what they will give us;" just so long Tom Johnson, Vanderbilt, Morgan or anybody else, who is smart enough to get it, have a right to do so. So long as the people will not make improvements, build roads, steamboats and public buildings, nor lay the needed telegraph lines, some one has to do it, and if he does it he must have the means to do it with. So to take away the means of accumulating capital would destroy the present civilization.

The fault lies with the people, and not specially with the capitalists. The people are mentally like little children, incapable of taking care of themselves; so some one must provide for them. And whoever takes care of them must have the means to do it with, so he must "make money" out of the job, for it is done by money.

"Hilda's Home," it seems to me, is like the fabled mountain that "travailed and brought forth—a mouse." The writer still clings to the marriage ideal, and that, no doubt, will trouble and scatter the inmates of her home. It is all very well, on paper, where the writer can create her own ideal persons who love just as they are wanted to love, as well as the home, but when we come to real, living people, we find it very much different. I have tried "home building" and speak from experience. Ideal marriages are good so long as they are only in the ideal; but in the concrete—"O, Lord!" So long as marriage remains it is better to keep each pair in a separate home and out of society, for when you commence mixing them you cross loves and make trouble.

The most of us, poor humans, are so perverse that we cannot love a poor article while a superior one is in sight monopolized by another.

[So nearly universal, so constant, have been the commendations of "Hilda's Home" that an adverse criticism is freely inserted, if for no other reason than because it breaks the monotony. I think, however, that our critic seriously mistakes when he says, "the writer clings to the marriage ideal." In her first chapter she makes Imelda to say, when refusing to marry Norman: "I would fain keep my lover. Husbands are not lovers." This sentiment runs, as a leading characteristic, through the entire work. The "marriage ideal" is ownership. "Hilda's Home" was written to inculcate freedom, spontaneity, as the basis of sexual morality, not allegiance to another, not ownership by another. M. H.]

Isaac Jameson, Brinnon, Wash.:—I agree with Blenda Palm Reynolds that "Hilda's Home" is splendid. I do hope you can publish it in book form. It is the most soul elevating story I have ever read, though I didn't get the first of it. I have been thinking of late that Lucifer would be a good medium through which people of liberal views could get acquainted with those of the opposite sex with a view to forming sexual co-partnership; first, because the women who read Lucifer have sense enough to say what they mean without any false modesty, and second, because the men who read it are earnest and honest enough to take no unfair advantage of such correspondence. I have two sons who are twenty-six and thirty years of age, are radical, and I want to see them form congenial alliances. I wish you would incorporate into Lucifer a correspondence bureau for those who wish to get partners. You could charge a reasonable fee, and I think it would be a pecuniary benefit to the cause. What do you think of it?

Well, here is No. 683, and here we are, at last, at "Hilda's Home." Truly Rosa is a jewel. She paints with a master's hand. I wonder if she would like to lend a hand to help build such a "home" here on the shores of Puget Sound. We have some beautiful sites here, and several workers who are heart and hand ready for the work. Will any of Lucifer's patrons furnish capital to set some such an experiment on foot? Let us hear from you, all who feel interested in it. We don't expect to build so elaborate, so grand a structure as Hilda's, but we want to build a substantial, comfortable, commodious home, and factories or industries to furnish remunerative employment for all the members. We have a fine water front with a beautiful view of this far-famed inland sea, with a fine spring brook babbling down to the sea perpetually, furnishing abundance of cold, soft water for all uses. We are also close to a river valley one and one-half miles wide, (bottom land). It is a goodsite for a fish cannery, shingle mill, saw mill, tannery, etc.

Right here I must say a word to Mrs. Dora Ross and her "girl graduate." I can do no better than endorse C. L. James' advice in Lucifer 683. Yes, sister Dora, tell her and help her to feel that "Mother" is the most sacred name on earth. Help her to give the dear, wee thing a right royal, loving welcome, and come here, or to some place else, where Freedom's standard is being unfurled, and let us create a new "Heaven" where she won't need "wings."

Let us create a society where the three Gs—God, Government and Grundy will not be worshiped, and where their representatives, the three P's—Priest, Politician and Pride are impotent, and in consequence thereof the conditions that obtain under their rule, the three Rs—Religion, Rascality and Respectability will be wholly unknown. Where every man will feel the same paternal love for every lovable child, (and I hope there will be none other) regardless of "legitimacy" or "illegitimacy," as did the immortal Burns when he wrote,

Wee image of my bonnie Betty,
I fatherly will kiss and dast thee.

687.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

As dear and near my heart I set thee
Wi' sae gude will,
As a' the priests had seen me get thee
That's out o' hell.

When, O when will reformers cease their bickering and haggling over their "ideals" and get down to something practical like building a home—a refuge for the unfortunate outcasts of the three Gs? thus putting some of our "ideals" into use, thus testing them? That will tell which is best.

And in order to make a success of our enterprise we must each start in with a determination to not force his or her "ideal" upon others, but to "luff," or "bear away," as sailors would say, in order not to "run afoul of each others rigging. Let all have freedom.

Now, all who are anxious to help realize "Hilda's Home" on a small scale, please write to the above address.

Now let us gird our armor on
And fight as men ne'er fought before,
Our cause is just; in right we trust
To sweep corruption from our shore.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,		.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes,		.75
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,		.10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker,		.10
Practical Co-operation;	" "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism;	" "	.10
Love and the Law;	" "	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman;	" "	.03
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,		.05
Digging for Bedrock;	" "	.10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,		.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vitae Vitae; M. T. Marlin,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.,	.10
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.25
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.10
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	.25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1334 Congress St., Chicago.

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue,"	By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman,"	By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom,"	By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell,	By Mary Flo ence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?"	By X.
"Love and the Law,"	By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches,"	By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.			.10
Bar Sinister and Legit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains five half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages.			.75
Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe.			.25
The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution.			.25
The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper,			.50
Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference.			.10
Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker.			.10
Fountain of Life,	"	paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood,	"	"	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex,	"	cloth, price,	.50
A Sex Revolution,	"	"	.25
Helen Harlow's Vow,	"	"	.25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth,			2.00
When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations.			.10
Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen.			.10
Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies			.05

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Ebriosity,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda. In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Marsette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

"The Adult:" Organ of the Legitimation League of England, contains in its fourth number: Editorial; "Sex Love and Monstrosity," by Oxford Northcote; "The Last Citadel of Authority," by Robert Braithwaite; "Spiritual Love," by William Platt; "Wanted, A New Dictionary," by Esa Tee; "The Judgment of Paris—Up to Date," by Leighton Pagan. "The Adult" is a neat magazine of twenty-four pages, with attractive cover. Price, 5 cents. Order of Lucifer, 1334 Congress St., Chicago, Ill. Price per year, 50 cts.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in First Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson Barker,
Box 122. San Jose, Cal.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., NO. 49. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 8, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE NO. 688

If Love Be Dying.

If Love be dying, use no tender lie;
Say not his sickness is a brief eclipse
Of the too bounteous sunshine of his bliss;
Vex not his passing, trouble not his lips
With the sad satire of a loveless kiss:
Weep, if thou must, in passing, but go by
And let him die.

If Love be dead, feign not he cannot die,
Nor lay his body where all men regard
With half contempt thy tears upon his head;
But in the heart's most sacred spot close barred
Save of the rarest thoughts unvisited,
Where is the tomb of all glad things gone by,
There let it lie.

—Black and White.

Freethought and Free Love.

BY ORFORD NORTHCOTE.

"The world for the most part is ruled by the tomb, and the living are tyrannized over by the dead. Old ideas, long after the conditions under which they were produced have passed away, often persist in surviving. Many are disposed to worship the ancient,—to follow the old paths, without inquiring where they lead, and without knowing exactly where they wish to go themselves."—"Marriage and Divorce," R. G. Ingersoll, p. 5.

From the dawn of civilization there have been present in the world two antagonistic forces. The names in various ages have differed, their essence has remained unaltered. One of these forces is conservatism; the other is the spirit of innovation. The one seeks to uphold all established institutions and to resist all change. The other, the vivifying element of things, desires to throw off the material yoke that cramps the spirit, in order to aid man in his evolution towards higher ideals, higher modes of thought, higher planes of existence. In physics, one is inert matter, the other is living force.* In politics, one is the red tape of officialism, the other the efforts of libertarianism. In religion the one is represented by the Church, the other by the new religious teacher who breaks from the ossified dogmas of his creed. In science, the one is represented by the University Chairs, by the Royal Associations; the other by the new generalizer who defies orthodox views.

All institutions are finally conservative. The Church, the State, the University, the learned Associations, however they may have originated in opposition to orthodoxy, eventually crystallize into barriers to human advance. The Protestants made an attack on conservative Rome, but as soon as they established themselves, they resisted further innovation and have ever since been conservative to the core. The same is true of all heterodoxies which, as time goes on, become orthodoxies.

How do we explain this? All human progression is initiated by a few advanced spirits. The reformer when he first propounds his new thesis finds himself isolated. He persists in his advocacy and gathers round him a small band of earnest adherents. In the course of a few generations, these supporters having largely increased in numbers become banded together into a society. But by this time arises a new reformer, who has discovered new truths. In his position of innovator he is as much ahead of the followers of the reformer he has succeeded, as that reformer was ahead of his own contemporaries. And so he finds opposition from the society which has crystallized round the memory of the thinker who called it into existence. The same fate awaits the next of the line of prophets, and the next and the next, ad infinitum.

Perhaps the most potent of conservative institutions are those built round religion. The superhuman authority claimed for the creed and the threats of divine vengeance on unbelievers, exert a deadening influence of an unparalleled character upon the mind of man. The conservatism which appertains to religion is as it were doubly weighted. To the inertia which is characteristic of all long established institutions, is added that which is due to the fear of the unknown; to the respect which is paid to the commands of a society of individuals, is added the reverence which the supposed Divine origin of those commands creates.

Established religion, therefore, being bound with a double hide of conservatism, it cannot be denied that Freethinkers, in attacking its various strongholds, are doing a valuable and highly important work. But however important and valuable that work may be, it is equally certain that in their organized capacity, they, Freethinkers, are of necessity opposed to other lines of human progression. Especially is this the case when they (the Freethinkers), have passed the early stages of conflict and have become "respectable." Considering their own propaganda as the most important work of any, their aim is to include all men in the secular fold. But they clearly see that this can only be accomplished, if at all, by rigidly excluding all ideas which have not the sanctity of respectability. For otherwise Secularism will fall into bad odor and respectable people will not join the ranks, even though they disbelieve in God and the Church. Thus it may happen with regard to any other set of ideas which is battling for acceptance, that although the most advanced men of the Freethought movement are in accord with them, they must in nowise be given countenance, or the respectability of the Freethought movement will be endangered.*

Now, however important the work of Freethinkers may be, in engaging in war with religious superstition, it must not be overlooked that the abolition of priestcraft is not an end in itself, but a means to an end. Priestcraft is deadly, not so much because it formulates erroneous ideas, but because those erroneous ideas hinder men and women from getting the greatest possible good out of life. And if Freethinkers, while engaged in combatting one form of superstition which militates against human happiness, hinder the work of other reformers

* The last word of philosophy and science may be that force and matter are one; but the distinction as ordinarily understood will serve as an illustration.

* As an instance the lamented Mr. Putnam who held advanced views on sex morality distinct.) deprecated their advocacy on the grounds here given.

who are combatting other superstitions productive of misery, to that extent do they nullify the good they achieve in their crusade against the errors of priestcraft.

Religion has two main forces at its disposal, whereby it attains to its ends. On the one hand it commands belief in certain dogmas and on the other it commands obedience to certain moral laws. These are complementary, the one of the other. For example, Christianity declares that a certain day in the week is rendered sacred by the alleged facts that God created the world in six days and rested on the seventh; and that Jesus Christ, the incarnated expression of God, rose to life from death after having been crucified. Allied with this belief in the holiness of one special day in seven, is the command to keep that day holy. We all know what practical results have accrued from this combination. All work and all pleasure being interdicted, the priests have contrived to turn this moral prohibition to the advantage of their cult, by securing at their churches on that day the attendance of a large proportion of their believers; which unanimous gathering together has resulted both in pecuniary gain and in that power which is derived from solidarity.

The Romish church promulgates the doctrine that souls reside for a period in Purgatory. They turn that to their pecuniary advantage by insisting that it is the duty of relatives to endeavor to shorten that period of suffering; the afflicted mourners of the departed, being simultaneously taught that masses said for souls in purgatory will work to this end. The two dogmas of belief, and the moral command based upon them, are thus instrumental in adding largely to the coffers of the Church which imposes them.

Again, participation in the pleasures attending sex relations, being found antagonistic to the cultivation of the religious spirit, and the repression of sexual activity corresponding being discovered to develop mental conditions conducive to religious feeling, Christianity has consistently opposed sexuality. In mediæval times complete repression of the sexual desires was urged upon all. But average sexuality being stronger than spiritual belief it was found necessary to provide an escape for that insistent sexuality, which otherwise would override all restraining Christian precepts. Accordingly Christian marriage was constituted; that is to say, monogamic relations were made permissible under certain conditions. These conditions were that the union should be lifelong and not incestuous; and that it should be consecrated by a religious ceremony, not the least important feature of which consisted of the transference of money from the pockets of the contracting parties to the coffers of the Church.

Christian marriage once firmly established, the astute Churchmen readily discerned that they had hit upon one of the most effectual methods of retaining their power. Not only were they thus enabled to keep a close hold on one of the most important functions of life, but through that function and its attendants they were enabled to heavily load mankind with chains.

Digressing for a moment it is plain that the sexual evolution of mankind has been from monogamy to varietism.* Biologists are now almost unanimously of the opinion that variations come through the male line, and so it is not surprising to find that variations from monogamic instinct have been due mainly to the masculine sex. With the rare exceptions of polyandric customs, the early deviations from primitive monogamy have been polygamic. That is to say that while women have in the main been monogamic, men have increasingly cultivated polygamic relationships.

Sexual morality, prior to Christian influence, insisted on the faithfulness of a wife to her husband, but allowed to the husband promiscuity. This promiscuity has been provided for either by plurality of wives, concubinage, or prostitution; the departure from the feminine code of morality in the latter case being visited with loss of caste and various other punishments. It is obvious that this sexual regime meant slavery to the woman. While the man's sexual nature belonged to himself, he being free to use it how he pleased, the woman's sexual nature belonged to her lord and master. She was a sexual slave. Her sexual capabilities belonged to him, and he could sell them or lend them at will.

But Christianity introduced a new feature. Henceforth, property in sexual organs was to be reciprocal. The husband was to own the wife's body as before, but she in turn was to own the body of her husband. Henceforward, man, who had been breaking away from the monogamic type, was to revert to monogamy; no matter how urgent were his needs for variety. Woman, heretofore, had been the slave of man; Christianity decreed that also man was to be the slave of woman. This Christian decree has had two results. It has by its undeniable power, made many men monogamous in fact. It has made the remainder of married men hypocrites. For in spite of the potency of the decree, it has not been able to entirely stifle the growing demand for variety. This, so far as the man is concerned. But, with the woman, it has acted differently. It has revolutionized her sphere of power. The truth of the saying "The foot that rocks the cradle rules the world" is dependent upon the power Christian marriage has given to wifedom.

Now woman is by nature a conservative agent. The anabolic processes which go to make up her sex are conservative. In conception, it is the female elements which preserve the stability of the type; while the male elements introduce variations. Mentality is colored by sex, and women's mental processes are likewise conservative.

There is another point. Women are more religious than men. Religion and hysteria are in many ways identical, and woman is the hysterical sex.* More than that, women, by nature, worship authority, and are more amenable than men to the dictates of a powerful church.

---

* The currently accepted theory is exactly the reverse of this, but the view as I have elsewhere shown. See "University Magazine," December, 1897.

* I have no wish to disparage the sex. But truth must stand before sentiment, here, as elsewhere.

To be continued.

Has Lucifer Retrograded?

BY JAMES BEESON.

TO THE EDITOR OF LUCIFER: In a short time my paid up subscription to your paper will expire. You have always been generous enough to let the time run over until such time as circumstances would allow of my raising the money to pay you, and I have often thought I would continue to read and pay for the Light-Bearer as long as you continued to send it. My opinion in that respect has not changed—if you continue to send the paper I will pay for it out of the first money I get after the annual tax gatherer has been satisfied with my contributions to Shylock's blood money.

But my idea of your usefulness has changed. As long as you stood for liberty against organized greed; for freedom of speech and press against censorship; in a nut shell, as long as you stood for freedom of the individual as against governments and churches your power for good was felt and recognized by all. But when you take up an isolated case, and one, too, upon which the enemies of freedom have the greatest power to overthrow your exertions you then become as much a partician [partisan?] as the balderdash spouters of the two old parties, with little less chances of doing as much harm.

As a historian you ought to know that the tactics of the world renowned human butcher—Napoleon Bonaparte—was to divide the forces of his enemies and whip them by detail; and the same tactics will hold good in regard to the enemies of human liberty today. One victory has already been won by plutocracy in the controversy between you and H. L. Green, while you should have shown one solid phalanx to the common enemy. He is just as much a partician [partisan?] after the leadership of Ingersoll as you are after the old granny—"Aunt Elmina," while you both ought to see and know that the enemies of human liberty are gloating over your suicidal acts. He is working for universal mental liberty without considering how worthless it would be without liberty of the individual to use it; while you are laboring for sex freedom of women—and how the hell—to use a Christian phrase—do you expect to get it? Can't you see that the state, or government, is all that stands in the way of sex freedom, or any and all other kinds of freedom? Then why not unite the forces—instead of dividing them, on the all important question, which is the privilege of doing what we think best so long as we don't curtail the same privilege that equally belongs to others.

The great drawback is the defunct ghosts of ancient gods and devils, and before we can bury them we must meet the slavish cohorts of the state in battle array. A war of ideas and battles of words will always win for us, but the trouble is the despoilers of liberty know that as well as we, and when balderdash and poppycock fail their purpose they are going to wage a barbaric war of murder and robbery.

You have made allusion to your "critics," as you are pleased to call those that disagree with you, without giving them a hearing in their own defense, while you have accused people who treated you in the same way, of cowardice and stabbing you in the back. If I believed in the Christian idea of precious stones and metals I could exclaim "Consistency thou art a jewel!" But notwithstanding your faults I sympathize with you in your persecutions by the powers of church and state, although you could have avoided them and served humanity better.

Now suppress this, as you have everything I have written since you deserted the ranks of humanity's army and strayed off after frivolous matters. As ever your friend in the cause of Humanity.

Hytop, Ala.

But few words are needed, as I think, in reply to the above.

(1) It is not true that I have denied to my critics a hearing in their own defense. If I have not published all that friend Beeson has sent me for publication it is not because of the sharpness of his criticisms, the untruthfulness of his allegations, nor because of his bad spelling or incorrect use of words, but simply because the printing of all, or even half, that is sent us is impossible.

(2) Lucifer has always stood for, and still stands for "liberty against organized greed, for freedom of speech, etc., as all our careful readers know, and if we have given special attention to the freedom of womanhood and motherhood it is because we are convinced that this is the most important of all freedoms, and because we think that no other freedom can be practicalized until woman is aroused to a sense of the responsibility resting upon her as the creator of a new and better race.

(3) No. It is not true that the "state is all that stands in the way of sex freedom, etc." The "state" is but the outward expression of the inward status, mental, moral, and intellectual, of the people that make and support that state. The institutions of a people simply mirror the stage of development of that people. All growth, all development is from within, not from without. When the people have outgrown the institution called the state it will be "slufled," as a snake sheds its skin, or a caterpillar its shell. Behind the state is the mass of ignorance, credulity and superstition that makes the state possible. Destroy ignorance, credulity and superstition and you destroy the state. The most dense and deadly of all forms of ignorance, credulity and superstition are those which now cashroud the subject of sex and reproduction of the race. These have taken the form of a fetich called "marriage." Destroy this fetich and the citadel of the state (and the church) is captured. The most difficult part of the work of deliverance is to reach the ear and the conscience of woman. As in all slaveries the greatest sufferers are those who hug their chains the longest and hardest. This, Friend Beeson, is why we concentrate our forces on the marriage institution—because we believe it to be the citadel or stronghold of state and church despotism.

(4) The opposition of H. L. Green, R. G. Ingersoll and other defenders of marriage, is simply an incident, a minor incident, in the evolution. All men have their limitations. Green and Ingersoll seem to have reached theirs when they found they had no more use for gods and ghosts of the Jewish Bible fashion. On other questions they retain their fetiches, and like Micah of old, they would say, if we destroy marriage, legal tender money, etc., "Ye have taken away my gods, and what have I more?" But the defenders of the marriage fetich are not the whole of the freethought army, as we are glad to know.

M. H.

Legal Tender.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

To avoid a repetition I have allowed a misstatement made as a criticism upon my articles twice to pass unchallenged. It is untrue that there is not now "equal freedom for all commodities, gold included." The law defines the meaning of the term "dollar" but does not require people to use dollars. They do that for their own convenience. If a man promises to pay dollars, the law declares that the payment of dollars cancels the debt; and that is what constitutes legal tender. If a man promises to pay wheat, then wheat is a legal tender, and the only legal tender for that debt. Gold can no more cancel a debt payable in wheat, than wheat can cancel a debt payable in dollars. It is as fraudulent to declare anything else than gold to be dollars, as it would be to declare oats or barley to be wheat.

[It seems useless to multiply words over the "legal tender" question. I have maintained and still maintain that legal tender confers a privilege upon the commodity named by law as such, that is not enjoyed by other commodities; hence there is no equal freedom as between gold (or gold and silver) and other commodities.

(2) If it be true that "the law defines the meaning of the term dollar" to mean a certain number of grains of gold I ask, When did the people of the United States authorize the change from silver, or from silver and gold, to gold alone?

(3) Admitting (for the argument only) what Mr. Parkhurst says about wheat being legal tender I would ask, what chance has the poor man, (the debtor class) to pay his debts in wheat so long as the creditor class demand that all contracts be made payable in gold? It is the old story—only in worse form—of freedom of contract between the mine owner, the factory owner etc., and the moneyless employe. It is, "Accept my terms or you get no work"—the alternative being starvation for the employe.

M. H.]

No individual life can be truly prosperous passed in the midst of those who suffer. To the noble soul it cannot be happy; to the ignoble it cannot be secure.—Matthew Arnold.

The pamphlet edition of "Motherhood in Freedom" is nearly exhausted. The essay can then be procured in "Our New Humanity," the price of which is 25 cents. Those contemplating ordering our Combination Offer will take notice and govern themselves accordingly if they want "Motherhood in Freedom." While the present supply lasts the price is five cents each.

OUR NEW HUMANITY.

Of all rights, the greatest is—to be born well.

Vol. II., No. 3 contains: The Rights of Children; by E. B. Kerr. An interesting presentation of the other side of the question. Incineration; by Walter Breen. Startling theories, facts and figures. What are Women Here For? By Moses Harman. Starting theories, facts and figures. What are Women Here For? By E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. What the Young Need to Know.—A Primer of Sexual Rationalism; by E. C. Walker. The New Martyrdom; by Lillian Harman. The Will. From the French of Guy de Maupassant. A Free Man's Creed; by Moses Harman. Price, 25 cents.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 121 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 Congress Street Tuesday evening Dec. 7. Dora Hanna will make the opening address.

WE PUBLISH this week a number of specimen letters in regard to putting "Hilda's Home" into book form. The prospect for getting enough subscribers to justify the venture is brightening. Again we ask all who want one or more copies to drop us a card to that effect.

A REVIEW, somewhat extended, if not exhaustive, of the "Freethought and Free Love" question, is begun in this issue of Lucifer. It is written by a well known English Freethinker, and will be continued through two or more issues, and will then be published in pamphlet form. This review will show that the differences in regard to what is the logic of Freethought when extended to the social relations, are not confined to the American Secularists.

SADA BAILEY FOWLER, of Torresdale, Philadelphia, writes us that she is trying to publish a book,—long in preparation, that will, as she thinks, solve all the perplexing financial and social problems—a sequel to her "Irene," published and extensively sold some years ago. She says she has still some copies of that work which she would like to sell to raise the means of publishing her new book. The price of "Irene" is $1.00; six hundred pages, well bound. It can be ordered as above or from this office.

Causes of Pauperism and Crime.

A press dispatch dated New York, Nov. 30, headed "Causes of Pauperism; Careful Analysis of Five Hundred Cases Made," reads as follows:

A report that is probably the only one of the kind made in this country was completed today by the committee on statistics of the charity organization society. The committee is composed of Richmond Smith, professor of political economy and social science at Columbia university; Franklin H. Giddings, professor of sociology at Columbia university, and Frederick W. Halls.

The report consists of a careful analysis of the records of 500 families from the time they applied for aid in 1890 until Sept. 1 of this year.

In referring to the repetition of applications for relief the report says:

"There is a disclosure of chronic pauperism. This pauperism exists to a large degree because of the incapacity of men and women to support themselves. Their condition is due, investigation shows, to a lack of mental and moral development."

Of the persons who applied for aid the largest number were married men and women. Widows with children came next. Of the 520 applicants 170 were Irish and 132 were natives of the United States. Many of the latter were persons who have lived in this city less than a year.

The list includes 122 men of good character and 231 women of good character. The remainder were professional beggars, criminals and chronic paupers.

Assuming that this report is made in good faith, and not for the purpose of proving a preconceived theory, several questions seem naturally to suggest themselves, such as:

(1) Why should the largest number of applicants for charity be married men and women? Is it not the popular view that marriage is the normal condition of adult human beings and therefore productive of thrift, comfort and financial independence?

(2) How comes it that the greater number of applicants for aid are men and women of "good character"? (122 men and 231 women, or 353 out of the 500 cases reported.) Is it not the common belief that bad character,—vicious habits—is productive of poverty, while good character—virtuous habits—leads to thrift and to competence? Does not this statement indicate that in order to avoid helpless and hopeless poverty men and women must not be over scrupulous in business matters, or in their methods of getting money?

(3) Only one hundred and forty-seven "professional beggars, criminals and chronic paupers" in a total of five hundred "applicants for aid," is certainly a good showing for the moral character—including willingness to work for their living—of the poor of New York City, but what kind of showing is it for the industrial and financial systems of the great metropolis? In a country of limitless natural resources, with a chronic overproduction of all the necessaries, and even luxuries, of life, how comes it that only a small minority of those asking charity belong to the classes called "professional beggars, criminals and chronic paupers?"

An attempt to account for this state of things seems to be found in the statement that "their condition is due, investigation shows, to a lack of mental and moral development," but this solution suggests still other questions, such as:

Who or what is to blame for this lack of mental and moral development?

"Development" includes, presumably, natural endowment—hereditary powers, capabilities and tendencies—and also early training. The unanswered questions, the underlying questions, are,

Why should these people lack normal hereditary powers and capabilities, and who is responsible for their lack of proper training?

As to the first of these—heredity—it requires little investigation to show that the conditions usually attending and preceding the birth of the great masses of people—in cities, in manufacturing and mining towns, and also in agricultural districts—are anything but favorable to good natal endowment. Mothers are overburdened with work, and with the care of children for whose advent no proper provision has been made. Most of these children are undesigned, undesired—mere chance begotten, born of parents who have little or nothing to make life desirable, and who look upon each new addition to the family as a calamity, a curse instead of a blessing.

Then, when to these adverse conditions is added that other factor so very common, viz., the lack of love between the parents, and the presence of indifference, of aversion, of disgust and of hatred,—how can we expect, under such conditions, that the child can be born well dowered with the powers, faculties or tendencies that would fit it for success in the competitive struggle for existence?

Then, as to the after training: The associations of home life and of the streets, are not such as to inspire lofty aspirations, noble ambitions or pure lives. Compelled to work for a beggarly pittance, when work of any kind can be had, instead of being instructed in kindergarten and manual training schools, how can we expect good "mental and moral development"?

* * *

Speaking of "Crime's Reign in Chicago," Rev. Frank Dewitt Talmage, son of the famous T. Dewitt Talmage, in his sermon on Sunday, November 28, has this to say—as reported by the daily "Chronicle" of this city:

There are two causes for this: First, because Chicago is the dumping e

many of the moral sewers of the United States, and all the thugs and the thieves, and the loafers, and the rascals, and the anarchists, and the cranks and the general deadbeats at large make this city their rendezvous and the camp their winter quarters, and what they cannot beg they try to steal and I for one, stand here to say that it is about time that these outrages stopped.

If ten or twelve of these scoundrels were shot down in cold blood it would bring the rest of these murderers to their senses, and I call upon our courts and legislature to raise the penalty of crime higher and higher, even until the price, if necessary, be the gallows, so that an honest man can walk along the boulevards of this great city without carrying a pistol in his own pocket to save his own life. For I stand here to assert one of these two awful facts; either our police are in league with the robbers and they themselves are criminals, or else the law is too lax to grapple with the infamy.

Has this man Talmage looked beneath the surface of things? Has he searched for bedrock causes of vice and crime? Is his proposed remedy a rational one? Has not shooting men in cold blood, and have not the gallows, the rack and the dungeon been tried for thousands of years, and with the result that crime is steadily increasing?—increasing much more rapidly than population?

Mr. Talmage is the child of affluence—one of the pets of our social system. With like heredity and like environment would his record today be any better than that of the "thugs, thieves, loafers, etc.," whom he would like to see shot down in cold blood or strangled by the hangman's rope? He is paid a high salary to preach the religion of love, of forgiveness, of peace and good will; do utterances such as these show that he is earning his money?

* * *

It is pertinent here to ask, who are "the thieves, the loafers, the deadbeats and the anarchists" (in the popular but false meaning of that word). Can we, should we, in the name of justice, punish the petty thief who takes that which he or his family needs, and at the same time condone the theft of millions when stolen by a man who does not need them? Is it worse to steal a few dollars without the sanction of law than it is to steal hundreds of millions after securing through fraud the enactment of laws whereby the theft is made lawful and honorable?

Let us look for causes—the root causes, of poverty, vice and crime, and having found them, let us lay the axe of reason and common sense, to the root of the tree.

"The Free Propaganda"

Was organized on November 18, 1897. Its officers for the first year are:

President, Lillian Harman, Chicago.
Vice-President, Robert C. Adams, Montreal.
Secretary-Treasurer, Anna Stirling, New York.
Manager of Propaganda, E. C. Walker, New York.
Legislative Agent, James F. Morton, Jr., Boston.

The convention at which these officers were chosen was called to order by E. C. Walker, who briefly outlined the preparatory work already done. Charles B. Cooper was elected chairman and Ernest Winne secretary. A Committee of Constitution, consisting of Amy L. Scudamore, James F. Morton, Jr. and E. C. Walker, was appointed by the chair. The Constitution given below was reported, discussed article by article, and adopted.

"Art. I. This organization shall be known as The Free Propaganda.

"Art. II., Sec. 1. All persons believing in the right of private judgment in all matters pertaining to love, sex and parentage, and in the widest and most thorough discussion thereof, are eligible to membership.

"Sec. 2. Membership shall be of two classes—Active and Contributory. (a) Active members shall be those willing to identify themselves publicly with the Propaganda, and are entitled to vote and otherwise participate in all its proceedings. (b) Contributory members shall be those who sympathize with the objects of the society, and pay membership dues, but are not in a position to allow the use of their names.

"Sec. 3. Members may be transferred from one class to the other at their own request.

"Art. III. An Annual Convention shall be held at such time and place as may be determined by the Executive Committee, and notice shall be given to the members at least one month in advance.

"Art. IV. The officers of the society shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary-Treasurer, Manager of the Propaganda and Legislative Agent. These officers shall constitute the Executive Committee.

"Art. V. The duties of the officers shall be those usually appertaining to such offices. The Manager shall have charge of the distribution of all educational matter, subject to the supervision of the Executive Committee.

"Art VI. Dues shall be one dollar per year in each class. Life Membership in either class shall be twenty dollars.

"Art. VII. This Constitution may be amended at any regular meeting by a two-thirds vote, notice of such proposed amendment to be sent out at the time the meeting is called."

Members to whom Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of the Bulletin were sent will be glad to know that there has been a gratifying increase in both lists, especially the Active. Now that we are organized for business, we should soon have a large society, and get to work with ever-augmenting effectiveness. Let all who have not paid in their dues for the first year, do so without delay, remitting to the Secretary-Treasurer, Anna Stirling, 244 West 143 Street, New York City. And those who have held back until the movement is well under way, can now step into the ranks, knowing just what it is they are joining.

It is the opinion of the members of the Executive Committee who were present at the Convention that the Propaganda should as soon as possible own its printing plant. So equipped, the educational work can be carried on much more economically than it could be if we had to hire all our printing done. The Manager has now at his command sufficient type for present needs. Money is needed to pay for a job press upon which leaflet work can be rapidly done, for electrotyping, and for postage. Membership dues alone should soon give us all that we need to enable us to begin work on a relatively small scale, but if some of our better-to-do comrades will send us additional contributions we can begin our educational work earlier, and we can cover a much larger field, and more thoroughly. Who will first respond to this appeal, and how many before the first of January, 1898?

In sending in your names for enrollment, please be sure to say whether you want to go into the Active or the Contributory class.

The discussion in Lucifer of the pros and cons of organization of Social Radicals, has borne good fruit in one brain, at least, for which we are to thank those who have publicly objected to the movement. From a letter received yesterday from a friend in Connecticut, these excerpts are made:

"The first thoughts [after reading the Call in No. 672 of Lucifer] I had in reference to the matter, were that I didn't want to join any organization. In the first place, I am strongly prejudiced against organizations. I am thoroughly individual. I have my likes and dislikes. I have felt for a long time that I didn't wish to belong to any organization, where I should have to conform to some regulations made by somebody else, or where somebody else would be compelled to conform to regulations that I should have a hand in helping to make; consequently, I felt as though I would like to keep aloof from such organization. . . . . Now, I am feeling somewhat different. As I read Lucifer each week, I am more and more inclined to favor the idea of an association such as you and other Freethinkers are endeavoring to organize. . . . . I begin to experience a feeling that if Freethinkers really desire to resist oppression they will be compelled to form themselves into an organization, and work unitedly. I begin to feel that I would like to belong to such an organization. If some effort is not made to resist oppression by meddlers, then the time will arrive when an individual can't be an individual; he will not be permitted to be an individual; he will not be let alone, and he will be forced to do as others want him to do, whether agreeable to his tastes or not. Large numbers of persons with strong wills and strong meddlesome characteristics, will band themselves together to force everybody outside of their pale to conform to their ideas, to do as the meddlers want them to do, so if this thing goes on long enough, I shall lose my individuality and I shall be forced into the ranks of the oppressed or the oppressors. . . . . According to what I read in Lucifer, I am inclined to believe that in order to protect myself, even regardless of anyone else, I must drop my individuality for a time, and enter the ranks of your organization, which is intended to resist imposition. I believe this is the only "gang" that I can join voluntarily, so I will request that you enroll me as a member. If persons who wish to do as they want to do would only let me alone and allow me to do as I wish so long as I do not invade their rights, then I would not join your organization, would have no desire to, and I would still remain an individual, and go quietly and unobtrusively on my way without troubling any body."

Our friend reasons soundly, although he is mistaken in thinking that association implies the loss of individuality. Forced conformity involves such loss, but all we ask is free co-operation for education and defense. Of course there would be no need of combination for defense, if all persons attended to their own business and let that of their neighbors alone, but that is just what many of them will not do—and so we must consolidate our scattered forces or go down.

"I present my name as a member of the national organization of the friends of Sexual Freedom. I wish to enroll myself as one of the Active workers in this, the grandest of all reforms, the "bed-rock" foundation on which must rest all schemes for the real betterment of our race, viz., improvement of birth conditions. It isn't of worth, particularly, as I know of, to be "born again," but it is of much, I take it, to be really born well, and that in present conditions takes place only occasionally. Births are alarmingly fractional."—John Moseley Clarke, Tennessee.

Shall we have one hundred more names on the roll by the beginning of the new year?

E. C. Walker, Manager,
244 West 143 St., N. Y. City.

Propaganda Methods in Sexology.

BY J. M. CLARKE.

As a reader of Lucifer, "Firebrand," "Old and New Ideal," and other literature having the same general purpose, I have repeatedly asked myself, how can we utilize our ideas, how best practicalize what we advocate? Certainly little progress can be made without propaganda of deeds. Mere theories have no momentum, only deeds generated by them. I am aware that here arises what too many seems an insuperable obstacle, viz.: Mother-Grundyism and Government Tyranny; yet I think if we co-operate wisely and persistently, we can make opposition ineffectual, vilification harmless. Let "Epluribus Unum" be our motto: a unity resulting from free choice alone, held by no tie save that of mutual affection, kindred tastes and interests, uncoerced by formal agreement, unconscious alike of majorities and minorities, each additional one rendering each individuality more perfect, each one's freedom more absolute. Such associations or groups may be wherever two or more willing ones desire for mutual pleasure and profit in town and country. Then if a sufficient number of groups see fit they can locate headquarters in some large city, where may be established, as circumstances permit very many of those varied activities that render life desirable; all held together, not by compulsory compact but by that which is myriad-fold more potent, the love of happiness which perfect freedom gives, in all the strength of the old, all the fascinating charm of the new. Thus, I conceive, even under the most adverse circumstances, very many will gladly so associate and also group in larger but equally free combinations, to better realize the fact, "In union is strength."

I was glad to see outlined in Lucifer a plan for united action. Let us by all means seek to become better acquainted with each other. A very dear friend of mine, a gentleman of polished thought, reflective men and attractive personality once said to me, "I tell you, I believe in Nature!" And so say I! Not, however that Nature that has "plans, intentions, schemes," a la J. G. Truman, but that Cosmos Infinite, in which "we live, and move and have our being;" because I can conceive of no "mis," in the beginningless, endless activities forever immanent in every phase of existence. Such words as "mistakes" and "failures" in such a connection, I consider as utterly inapplicable and meaningless.

In Lucifer of Sept. 8, in an editorial this passage occurs: "Not until Church and State cease their meddling, can it be demonstrated whether duality is the law of Nature or not." Perhaps, (true; yet, I ask, is there any known instance in Nature where growth and fruition have been developed by duality alone? Is not the history of all that is, but the record of variety as alone evolving desirable unity, not only in the vegetable and animal, but in the material world as well? Are not all pleasing interchanges of mind coitional? Is there any natural law for exclusive duality in affections, either as felt or manifested? By what logic is duality applied to one phase of love, and inoperative as to all the others? In the more primary and general relations of acquaintance, when fewer points of individuality are likely to be disclosed, we seek for variety; but when the infinite harp of the full ego is or should be played upon, duality says, touch the strings of one heart-harp only; for, doubtless, "It is [not] fitting that all good things should be conferred upon one!"

I can but allude here to Mr. Warren's citation (in Sept. 8 issue of Lucifer) of a celebrated clergyman, who, when asked by his wife, if "They would love and recognize each other in heaven," replied, that he expected to be so enraptured by the glory of God that he would be unconscious of her presence!

How infinitely removed is that "Christian Ideal" from the apostolic one, "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us and His love is perfected in us!" Mr. Warren proceeds: "At last comes a love that satisfies the heart!" For sure? No further affectional yearning—no unfed social desire? Will you give us one such case, Mr. Warren? Till you do, I must conceive a multitude of at least probable "Facts detailed and definite that will weigh more than whole reams of ideals"! Is "Love's sweetest sacrament" limited by [to?] gratification of sexual desire? If so are such sacraments unknown "where they neither marry nor are given in marriage?" Is it proven that "old experimenters have slunk back" to a strictly monogamic state? "A few facts," etc.! Have there been many cases of monogamy "without pain"? It is asked, "Has there ever been a case of plurality without discord?" Perhaps not; has there been one of duality with constant perfect concord? At present, "Perfectum impossibile est"—the perfect is impossible.

I hope I may have been enabled to throw a little light on the path of some who would gladly avail themselves of the privileges of freedom, but who have not as yet seen any practicable way. It requires nerve, strength and devotion to principle that rise above all else.

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. W. Horn, New Denver, B. C.:—Put me down for five copies of "Hilda's Home."

E. C. Hart, Oberlin, O.:—I will take three copies of "Hilda's Home," bound in cloth, whenever they are ready.

Andrew Neris, Tacoma, Wash.:—I have received the book, "A Physician in the House." It's a daisy; it's just all right.

Louis Roser, Maysville, Ky.:—Put me down for five copies of "Hilda's Home"; one cloth bound and four in paper—three dollars. I will remit as soon as the book is ready for delivery.

M. Rowe, Redmon, Ill.:—Enclosed find money order for four dollars. Please take from the amount enough to pay for two copies of "Hilda's Home" and the remainder I would like to have sent to A. J. Pope of the "Firebrand."

H. W. Woodard, Lincoln, Calif.:—Enclosed find one dollar to pay back dues and extend subscription, as far as it will, if not fully taken up. Fifty cents place where most needed. Thank you for your patience. Work has not been plenty—sickness has.

W. N. Slocum, Los Angeles, Calif.:—You may put me down for ten copies of "Hilda's Home"—paper binding—five dollars. I did think of having a part bound in cloth, but as I am to give to friends I prefer the cheap binding, so as to get more copies. The enclosed one dollar and fifty cents is for a copy of "Loma." Please send as soon as you can. If I like it as I expect, I will order more.

E. J. Paul, Geneseo, Ill.:—Walker is right in organizing. United we are a force, divided nonentities. When man embraces a theory to the extent of ignoring all facts except those which agree with his theory he is in the same position as the believer in God. Let us organize to oppose the "coming tyranny." Send a dollar to E. C. Walker and write to your congressman. Let us try to defeat the Loud Bill.

E. W. Chamberlain, N. Y. City:—I send you a little bit of poetry [inserted on first page] which seems to me to be wonderfully adapted to publication in Lucifer. It is a very cogent way of stating one of the principles for which Lucifer has so long contended, and yet the statement is so made that many readers will overlook the principle. Possibly the writer even, did not look at love and jealousy as we look upon it, and yet he could not have done better had he tried to express our sentiments nor could we have done better ourselves. It is an element strength to be able to quote such sentiments from the current of literature of the day. It shows in what direction the drift sets.

I presume you are watching, as I am, with intense interest the progress of our old friend Pope. There is a very curious condition of affairs on the Pacific coast. I am still doing all I can to help the victims.

Sada Bailey Fowler, Torresdale, Phila., Pa.:—Do all of you who have carefully read "Hilda's Home" notice the deep undercurrent of grand thought—the great lesson between the lines which is preparing the way for the freedom of fraternal love? The freedom and purity of sex love is a mighty problem; but O, how much easier solved if we only had freedom on the fraternal plane. Yes, I hear the response from many of you: "We will have this freedom when there is no ownership."

True, but, my friends, what I want to impress on all our hearts now, is this: There is a fraternal sex attraction, and in associative homes where conditions would be favorable for its whole-souled expression, conditions for the purity of freedom and the freedom of purity, then might girls and boys, women and men demonstrate natural affection as innocently as little children.

This happy loving life would free all from the feverishness of animal passion, and would be as satisfying as that which Prof. Windsor describes in his beautiful story, where the generative life would not be yearned for only when all conditions were prepared.

And we will have these co-operative homes ere long. Meanwhile let me suggest—let me whisper an idea to those of you who believe in the thought power. Let me tell you what our Mothers' Silent circle in the City of Brotherly Love has done. We are mostly composed of women who believe that in this transition stage we sisters who are working in the vanguard need loving brothers more than sex lovers, and by the power of our concentrated thought we are attracting men to us on the fraternal plane who understand and appreciate. Do you comprehend? or shall I farther explain? Yours for truth, freedom and purity.

Thomas Lees, Cleveland, O.:—Emma Goldman is in Cleveland, has spoken many times—and by the time this reaches you the big little Anarchist will have left this city—and also a marked impression on those who attended the five or six meetings which she addressed.

Knowing Lucifer's readers are more or less interested in her work, and not knowing whether any report has been sent you, I enclose a clipping from the Cleveland "Leader" of the 22nd, adding a brief report of your correspondent's.

Miss Goldman on her arrival in Cleveland from Detroit on Sunday morning of the 21st was met at the boat landing by Mr. Fred Schulder, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Carr and their daughter, Daugherty, and escorted to Mr. Carr's office for breakfast; after which the distinguished visitor was escorted to Mr. Joseph Lee's, Forestdale Ave., whose hospitality she enjoyed while in Cleveland. Sunday afternoon, Miss Goldman spoke at the regular meetings of the Franklin Club—the hall which seats between four and five hundred proved entirely too small—hundreds not being able to gain even standing room.

The Cleveland "Leader" in describing her appearance said: "Miss Goldman's appearance is in her favor. She was dressed entirely in black, without a single fleck of color, from her collar to her stout shoes. She is small, rather angular, and her clothes fit her, and are becoming. Her hair is brown—parted on the side, and allows one lock or two to form a masculine curl over the left side of her forehead. Her eyes are dark and attractive, her nose small, her mouth large, rather than small, with thin lips, which when parted allowed a glimpse of even, white teeth. It is evident at first sight that Miss Goldman is not one of the 'sloppy' kind of strong-minded women," etc.

The description of her physique and dress was all the praise the "Leader" could accord her. Of her address, "What Anarchy Means," while reported at some length, conveyed a very imperfect idea of a very intelligent and interesting address, forcibly and at times eloquently delivered, to a particularly appreciative audience, if deep attention and applause signified anything. Miss Goldman spoke for two hours, and on finishing invited questions and criticisms from the audience. Had those who participated in the discussion which followed confined themselves to the question, the debate would have been more interesting—instead of which the disputants, Socialists and Anarchists, became personal and pitched into each other. As it was, all seemed to be glad to be there, and a good collection followed. Also a supplementary one for the prosecuted and persecuted editors of the "Firebrand."

Besides the two or three receptions tendered Miss Goldman while in the city, she was kept busy afternoons and evenings, addressing several of the leading liberal societies of this city. The liberal loving public are indebted to Mr. Fred Schulder for the opportunity of hearing the able champion of Freethought and Anarchy.

While the writer is by no means an Anarchist, (inclining rather to Socialism) he is very glad to have had the opportunity of hearing one of the best speakers he has yet heard on the subject, being one who glories in free thought and free speech for,

"While tongue and pen alone are free,
Safe from all harm is sweet liberty."

Our English co-workers know how to set forth their radical ideas in an attractive manner. In little more than a week seventy-five copies of "Isabel's Intention" were sold. There may soon be delay in filling orders, as at the present rate our stock will be exhausted before we can receive a new supply from England.

Free Society An Advocate of Communal Life and Individual Sovereignty. Ingersoll once said "Everyone can love, and love don't cost a cent." A postal card does cost a cent, but if you have one just write for a sample copy of our paper and "it won't cost you a cent." Free Society, Lock Box 2830, San Francisco, Calif.

688.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake, .10
Vitae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr., .25
The Right Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue," By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman," By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom," By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell. By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?" By X.
"Love and the Law," By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches," By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 18 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.

This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published, B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.50.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published. .10

Her Sinister and Lost Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .75

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .20

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .10

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper. .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .15

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " " .50
A Sex Revolution, " " .25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 2.00
When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10
Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .15
Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies .05

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will love relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Unbridled children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Ebriosity,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LIBERTY; Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

"The Adult;" Organ of the Legitimation League of England, contains in its fourth number: Editorial; "Sex Love and Mutability," by Orford Northcote; "The Last Citadel of Authority," by Robert Braithwaite; "Spiritual Love," by William Platt; "Wanted, A New Dictionary," by Esa Tee; "The Judgment of Paris—Up to Date," by Leighton Pagan. "The Adult" is a neat magazine of twenty-four pages, with attractive cover. Price, 6 cents. Order of Lucifer, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill. Price per year, 50 cts.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Emma Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.
We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1032, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if its mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson Parker.
Box 132. San Jose, Cal.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 50. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 15, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 689

A Ballade To Those Who Love.

BY WILLIAM FRANCIS BARNARD.

Happy lovers, man and maid:
All you who know how love can bless,
Listen, ere your ardors fade
And leave your lives in emptiness:
The rich kiss take, the sweet caress,
And every joy in its degree;
But on the heart no pledges press:
Love is only love, left free.

The moonlight hour within the shade,
When all your passion you profess,
And amorous words are held and weighed,
While all the soul breathes tenderness—
Be glad of this; enjoy; possess
Delight that in such bonds may be:
But have no law or rule's excess:
Love is only love, left free.

With doubts forgotten, fears allayed,
Clasped hands and softly spoken "yes,"
With each warm, strange desire obeyed,
Let love strain its fruitfulness.
Let heart with true heart acquiesce,
And raptures mingle and agree;
But strive not in bonds to possess:
Love is only love, left free.

ENVOY.

Take this wisdom. Aye confess
Your passion till the loved one see;
But ask no promise of love's stress:
Love is only love, left free.

Paris, France.

Plumb-Line Penographs.

BY E. C. WALKER.

In the "Musical Courier" George Allan remarks that "happiness in married life depends largely upon mutual reticence." Which being interpreted, means, I suppose, that the husband and wife refrain from expressing their opinion of each other and conveniently shut their eyes to more or less flagrant violations of the code marital. That is, they do not always torment each other so much as the peculiar institution gives them the opportunity and authority to do. When two persons thus rise superior to institutions we exclaim, How pleasantly Mr. and Mrs. A get along together! as though it is the most surprising thing in the world—and it is, considering the adverse conditions!

* * *

Gabriel D'Annunzio, author of "The Triumph of Death," which Comstock the Censor has in vain tried to suppress, is again in the public eye, having been elected to the Italian Parliament. He is not likely to take his seat. Emanuel Arene writes as follows in the "Figaro," as quoted in the "Musical Courier":

As usual in political campaigns, every leaf in his past has been looked over, every act of his private life has been revealed, with the result that he will probably be found ineligible because he was sentenced as a youth to six months' imprisonment for adultery.

We might suppose that Mr. Arene is in error in his deduction—we might think that D'Annunzio is ineligible to office because he has been a felon, not because his offense was adultery. I say we might suppose this, but the French writer adds that the Italian code is relentless against the act of adultery, even disfranchising one found guilty by the courts, holding it to be a heinous offense against good morals. Still, disfranchisement and deprivation of other citizen rights usually if not always following the commission of a felony, it well may be that "Figaro's" writer has jumped too hasily to a conclusion, and that the Italian law bars out D'Annunzio because he has been convicted of an offense, not because he has been convicted of the particular offense of adultery while it would permit him to enter parliament if his conviction had been secured for other cause. But the fact that in Italy adultery is a felony is sufficient in itself to challenge our attention. It reminds us that the country of the Popes is famous in history for its sexual irregularities and crimes; that all the existing persecuting laws do not prevent a very large illegitimate birth-rate, and that the statute which punishes the Italian novelist serves chiefly to make deceit and treachery fine arts, leaving church and state full of titled hypocrites who have been successful in evading the code they helped create and which they applaud, and enforce, when enforcement suits their purpose. For some years a determined effort has been made by certain fanatics to make adultery a crime in those States of the Union where it is not now recognized as such. While our laws do not treat adultery as a crime, our juries promptly acquit the husband who murders the adulterer. In this instance, our inherited laws are superior to our present citizenship.

* * *

Hon. Thaddeus B. Wakeman has enlisted as private in the army which Mrs. Charlotte Smith is raising for the invasion and spoliation of the domains of Bachelordom. He grows quite amusingly peppery in his language when expatiating upon the alleged shortcomings of the male spinster. He most emphatically declares that it is the duty of man to support woman, and that the man who does not fulfill his obligations by furnishing spending money for a family of his own, should be caught by the state, inverted with no more gentleness than is necessary, and his pocket emptied for the benefit of the bachelor girls. From my point of view, the really culpable persons were the progenitors of some of our paternal "reformers"; they were certainly much remiss in their duty in failing to teach their children that no woman who respects herself as a human being of normal capacities and powers asks for support from man individual or man collective. All she demands is the opportunity to make use of her physical and mental powers and to receive the full reward of her labors. She is sick unto death of "worship"; she has had more than enough of man's "adoration," and she knows she is a woman, not an "angel." By the way, I would remind Mr. Wakeman that there is just one kind of "angels" who accept without question his dictum that woman should be supported by man—Rev. C.

H. Parkhurst can furnish him with some addresses, if they are required. The prostitutes—married or unmarried—are ready to exchange their angelhood for hard cash. But this Old Woman is getting out of date; the New Woman—the woman who earns her living and spends her own money, giving love only for love—is taking her place. And the Old Man—the man who talked of "angels" and held marital slaves—is also giving way before the New Man, who knows that woman is no better than he is and is entitled to every liberty and opportunity he demands for himself. It is time to quit canting and flattering and begin doing substantial justice.

* * *

The latest defender of Comstock is the "Torch of Reason." The alignment of forces is proceeding very satisfactorily. It is well for the cause of liberty and justice that the men of kindred ideas and methods get together. Better always an open foe than a weak or treacherous ally. Comstockism is the quintessence of all against which Freethought does battle, and hence it is a cause for rejoicing when papers which have abandoned the fundamental principles of Freethought range themselves frankly under the black flag of the Censor. I claim no prophetic gifts, yet I will hazard the guess that these editors will live to see the day when they will discover to their cost that it is not "a sham battle" which loyal Freethinkers wage against "the movement in favor of ignorance" of which Anthony Comstock is the universally recognized mouthpiece and leader. Mr. Hosmer talks about this matter like a Sunday school girl teacher of fifteen, who knows absolutely nothing of the history of Comstockism. If he will examine certain publications which circulate by the tens and hundreds of thousands and which the Censor does not molest, and compare them with the radical books and papers which have been persecuted by the same Censor and his assistants, he will discover, what wide-awake Freethinkers have known for years, that this movement in favor of ignorance (and degradation) is both positive and negative; that it is radical literature that is most hated and feared by the enemies of free publication and transmission, and that trivial and vulgar papers, magazines, and books are largely ignored by the very officials and spies who talk most loudly of "purity." Mr Hosmer should take a course in the history of Freethought. If he were better informed, he would not say this:

> Is there any danger of being robbed of the privilege of expressing one's honest thought at present, provided we use decent language? We think not. "The Torch of Reason" has no fear in that direction, and we notice that the Boston "Investigator," the "Free Thought Magazine," the London "Freethinker," the Australian "Liberator," et al, seem to be undisturbed in their radical statements.

What is "decent language"? What was there indecent, even from the viewpoint of Mr. Hosmer, in the "Firebrand"? What was indecent in "Cupid's Yokes" for mailing which D. M. Bennett was imprisoned? What was indecent in the "Marland letter" for printing and mailing which Moses Harman was twice sent to the penitentiary? Does not this reactionary know that epithets change as the generations come and go and that the issues of yesterday are not the issues of today or at most, only partly the issues of to-day? We have partially won the liberty to discuss theological dogmas; now we are fighting for the liberty to discuss social and sexual systems. The problems we are at present trying to examine are vital to human prosperity and happiness. Their investigation and discussion involve the use of a vocabulary in many respects differing from that employed in the canvassing of theological assumptions. Who has the authority to decree that we shall not be understood? Are the lips of serious men and women to be padlocked to please the belated representatives of church and conventicle and the Oregon Secular Union? Again: Has Mr. Hosmer forgotten or has he never known that Abner Kneeland the founder of the Boston "Investigator" was imprisoned for the expressing his opinions? that Foote, Ramsey, and Kemp of the London "Freethinker" have served time in prison and that Joseph Symes of the Melbourne "Liberator" has for years been persecuted most outrageously by the saints of Australia? The latest pretext for the prosecution of Freethinkers is "obscenity." Sexual science is called "indecent." Very well; we accept the issue.

Does Marriage Protect Women?

BY LILLIAN HARMAN.

Mr. Van Deventer (see "Various Voices") does not approve of the women portrayed by Rosa Graul in "Hilda's Home." If he will re-read the last chapters of the story, however, he will see that the women do not bear children as rapidly as he thinks they do. Instead of four children, Imelda had only one. The other three were the children of Cora, Margaret and Alice. And why should not these girls "prepare to become mothers, before the first blush of womanhood faded from their cheeks"? All the years of young girlhood and young womanhood are not too many to fit women for that most important office. Surely Mr. Van Deventer would not advocate the old idea that girls should not even think of the possibility of maternity until they learn by experience. Because these young women understood the risks and responsibilities they did not dare to become mothers until they were mature women, and until they had a home in which to bear and rear their children.

As Mr. Van Deventer gives a personal turn to the discussion of principles (which is said to be a feminine failing) I would like to ask him a few questions: Did he love his wife because, and only because of the legal tie? If so, why does he still love her when that bond is broken by death? Will he admit that the legal tie made him honorable and that without it he would have been a treacherous scoundrel? If not, what does his experience prove that is favorable to marriage? Did the fact that Mr. Van Deventer's wife was the mother of two children retard her development, make her only a plaything and gratifier of her husband's passions, as he asserts would be the inevitable result of motherhood in freedom? Perhaps he will say that because of the legal bond he protected and cared for her, and furnished the home which was always "overflowing with life's brightest sunshine." Did he alone fill the home with sunshine? Would that home have been equally bright without the home keeper? If not married, would he, if he desired a home, ask a woman to keep his home in order, and yet say that her work is of no value and require her to support herself at outside employment while keeping house for him? Mr. Van Deventer knows that such work has a money value when performed by free labor instead of wife labor.

Imagine two self-supporting "bachelor-girl" friends who decide that it would be pleasant to furnish a little flat and live together. But there is no law regulating their relation—how can they arrange their affairs when such a possible partnership has been overlooked by the legislators? But by and by they become dissatisfied—they can easily live on the salary of one, and as Margaret likes housekeeping she remains at home and is the housekeeper. But is it probable that Margaret will give up her salary, act as household drudge, and be grateful to Mary for so generously "supporting" her? What an absurd question!

By and by these girls feel an important element lacking in their little home. They want a baby to care for and to love. Being conventional, they adopt one. Here another question confronts them. Who will support the child? To whom shall it belong? These questions are popularly supposed to be unanswerable, when a man and woman loving each other regardless of the marriage law, desire a child? But these two women are able to manage their own affairs. Margaret devotes her time to the care of the home and the child, Mary's time is given to money-producing labor. Mary therefore gives Margaret a mutually-agreed-on proportion of her salary in compensation for the loss of time. Both make a sacrifice of money (for Margaret's time represents money) for the comforts of home life which both desire. I say the arrangements are mutually agreed on. If they were not, they would not make them, for there exist no legal restrictions enforcing them.

They are happy in this little home, but still something is lacking. Each "falls in love." John has a little house and steady employment, and he offers Mary a home. She loves him, and gives up her work and marries him. She has not prepared for marriage and maternity in the "first blush of womanhood"—she has been thinking of other matters. She believes if a woman marries a good man she is safe. John, too, is conventional. The babies come. Mary no longer has a steady income, and the fact that she is "supported" by a man, even though her husband, is galling to her proud spirit. By and by John has an accident which incapacitates him for life, and she is thrown on her own resources with a husband and helpless little children to support. True, she has a marriage certificate, but as I have previously remarked in these columns, marriage is an insurance concern that does not meet its liabilities. She has trusted to it, but when left helpless it is not worth so much as the price of a loaf of bread.

It will be noted that I have assumed that John was honorable but unfortunate. This is only one of many possible mishaps. The husband may die and leave his family destitute, as many do. He may treat his wife and children cruelly and finally desert them, and what can the woman do? If he has no property, she may, at the cost of lawyers' fees and a humiliating trial, have her husband sent to jail—if she can catch him—but that is done in scarcely one of a thousand cases. If he has property, she may succeed in obtaining some of it; but by keeping her feet free of legal snares and attending to business in a business way, a law suit would be unnecessary.

Now to return to Margaret. We will assume that she has done some reading and thinking while caring for her house and baby. When Margaret leaves her, Robert proposes that they, too, get married. But Margaret tells him that though she loves him and would like to live with him she cannot think of giving up her freedom. She says if he will consent to a business arrangement such as she had with Mary, she will be pleased. She will try to make home pleasant, and herself companionable. She will gladly have a child of her own as soon as she has enough money in her own hands to make it seem prudent for her to do so. She will consider herself free to dissolve the partnership at any time that she thinks best, and will recognize his rights to do the same. Love is too precious to her to make it a thing of contract, of ownership, an article to barter for bread. All other conditions of their living together can be settled on a business basis exactly as when two women only are concerned.

What "Hilda's Home" Means.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

I have before me the criticism of J. G. Truman in Lucifer 687. I am glad you published it. Although up to the present time nothing but favorable comments have been published I never for a moment believed that all readers of "Hilda's Home" would see it in the same light. It is exceedingly difficult to make all understand exactly what one means. Though you have well answered Mr. Truman I would like to add a few words.

You are right. I do not cling to the marriage ideal. If I have "mated" my characters I have not married them. I have mated them because it seems natural to the vast majority (radicals not excepted), when they have found some one in whom they see more to admire than in anyone else, and who exerts over them that peculiar magnetic influence we call "love"—it seems natural to cling closer to that one, while that love lasts, than to anyone else; even to becoming absorbed in such loved one to the exclusion of others.

In the present order of things such people marry. I have simply mated them for the time being. I have made no character say, "I love you now and will love you forever."

I have not ignored nor forgotten the possibility that other loves in time may fill these hearts. I have not forbidden them to admire and caress others. But I have sought to bring together a group of intelligent people who as a whole are congenial to each other.

I believe that in this lies the cause of the failure of many co-operative homes. The component elements are not truly congenial. We need many homes such as Hilda's.

All free lovers are not varietists; though I believe that the most of them, in time and under proper conditions will develop into such, to a greater or less extent. Mixing the two elements in a common home, the extreme varietists and the monogamists, would of necessity breed inharmony. Varietists should have their own home as well as those who believe in mating, or discord will be sure to enter.

But I did not intend to make "Hilda's Home" strictly monogamic. I proposed to make those who entered this home to see things as I see them,—to see that there is no true happiness in marriage. My own experience has taught this. Marriage forbids its victims to grow, to broaden, to expand. Marriage prohibits admiration of lovable qualities in others besides the legal partner. Marriage possesses; marriage monopolizes, and thereby cramps and finally destroys all that may have once constituted the happiness of the married pair.

Not that there are no happy marriages. There are; but they are so rare, so few and far between they do not count, in a general statement. In the few cases wherein there are "two souls with but a single thought—two hearts that beat as one," no marriage ceremony is needed. These exceptional cases exist not because of but in spite of marriage—as an institution—and regardless also of free lovers' theories.

But the intelligent thinker knows that the happiness of the masses of humanity must come through freedom, untrammeled freedom; and so long as universal freedom is denied to us we must seek it on the quiet, and on a small scale; but not too small, or, as friend Truman truly says, the mixing and crossing will make trouble. But "Hilda's Home" was built on a scale large enough to allow every inmate thereof to have a home of his or her very own, separate from all others. Within this home none other must unbidden intrude, and within this home, or to this home, each has the right to invite whomsoever they wish. The inmates of "Hilda's Home," do not possess and own each other—only so far as the power of a great and spontaneous love controls and owns. That which their love cannot win they have positively no right to claim or take.

No, I cling to no old marriage ideal. It has brought me little happiness and very much of misery. The early life of Mrs. Leland, up to the time of her divorce from her husband, and the subsequent robbing her of her son by the divorced husband is my own life story, with exactly the same experience as recorded in "Hilda's Home." Later on, a repetition of the marriage experience has not tended to prove that married life fulfills its promise. I have a good husband now, as far as this can be said of any husband, but, as Imelda said, "Husbands are not lovers."

One thing more I would say to those who may think I have not been plain enough in expressing myself. My story was written not so much for those who are already possessed of the "New Ideal" as for those whom we wish to convert; to win, from the old to the new. I think a great deal of our free love literature has the tendency to frighten those to whom our doctrines are as yet new and not understood. Step by step we must lead them on; not plunge at once into the extreme. By pursuing the first named course our hearers will develop gradually and if the process be slow they will in time land "on the heights." As Mr. Harman has expressed it, "Hilda's Home" was written to inculcate freedom, spontaneity, as the basis of sexual morality.

Now if there are any more adverse criticisms, bring them out and we shall make the effort to answer them. Every reformer has his or her own ideal, his or her own standard. Let all adhere to their own standard. It is their right.

But do not seek to lower the ideal, or depreciate the standard of another. That which the mind conceives as the best is the best so far as each individual is concerned. No one can go beyond his or her conception, and when we are liberal enough to concede to all others the same right to their conception, to their ideal, I think we shall have no trouble. Be sure the inmates of your proposed co-operative home are all TRUE LIBERALS. This is the corner stone upon which it must be built. Without this corner stone, its foundations rest upon the sands of the desert instead of on solid rock.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1301 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet at 1394 Congress Street Tuesday evening Dec. 14. C Orchardson will deliver the opening address.

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$397.00
A Friend, Colorado,	1.00
Mrs. H. W. Woodard,	.50
A. A. Caswell,	.50
E. J. Paul,	2.00

"Firebrand Fund"

The following sums have been received at this office for the benefit of "The Firebrand Group," one of whom, A. J. Pope, is now confined in the county jail at Portland, Oregon, charged with violating the postal laws by depositing for mailing, copies of the "Firebrand" dated Sept. 19, '97.

Previously acknowledged,	$9.00
Orford Northcote,	2.00
Dr. M. Rowe,	2.00

Close of the Year.

By the time this issue of Lucifer reaches its readers—scattered as they are over both hemispheres of earth's surface, the annual midwinter holidays—for the northern hemisphere, will be upon us; the season of merry-making, for those who have anything over which to make merry; the season of making gifts, of squaring accounts and of getting ready for the new year.

Lucifer sees but little in the outlook to make merry over. A carnival of wrong-doing and of consequent misery seems to prevail throughout that portion of the world called civilized, with little prospect that it will soon be better, if ever. And yet we prefer to look for hopeful signs. We much prefer the optimistic to the pessimistic philosophy, and propose to keep up a cheerful spirit as far as possible.

Lucifer does not feel rich enough to make many or costly presents, and does not ask for gifts or donations from friends and patrons, but it thinks this a suitable time to look after outstanding accounts, and to square up the same as far as possible. The past year has been a fairly prosperous one, so far as extension of business is concerned, or rather it would have been such were it not for the fact that a large portion of our patrons have been compelled by an infliction of "administration prosperity," or other calamity, to fall behind in their dues to this office. This very unpleasant fact compels us to draw upon our reserves in order to pay up demands against us.

The object of this statement is not to make the impression that Lucifer is in serious straits, financially, or that the failure to get what is now due will compel suspension, or less frequent issues of the paper. Nothing of the kind, but rather to remind our friends that a little equitable and fraternal co-operation would just now be very acceptable, and especially so if it comes in the way of renewals, payment of arrearages, orders for books in our line, or new subscriptions sent either by new subscribers or by friends who see the need of extending Lucifer's educational work.

In still another way our patrons can help on the work that is theirs as well as ours. A very general wish has been expressed to see "Hilda's Home" put in book form. As shown by specimen letters inserted in this and previous issues many of our readers have ordered from one to ten copies to give away as missionary documents. If these orders continue we shall soon feel justified in beginning the work of publication in book form.

And now, though a little early, we send holiday greetings to all of the Lucifer household, whether living in the frozen north or in the sunny south, and most heartily wish for them all the prosperity and happiness which their minds and bodies are capable of receiving and assimilating.

Freethought and Logic.

Again the attention of Lucifer's readers is called to the very able and very interesting essay on "Freethought and Free Love," the second part of which essay appears in this week's issue. Mr. Northcote's reply to the upholders of institutional marriage, among those who have outgrown Christian theology, is strong, clear and unanswerable. "Marriage is the seat of the power of the priest. Through marriage the priest rules the children and the husband. Through marriage the priest rules the world," etc., are axiomatic utterances of a close observer and logical thinker. And when our author tells the Freethinkers that "they give half their case away in praising Christian ethics," and when he asks, "If Christian morality is so praiseworthy, why make so much pother about the beliefs on which it is based?" he states a truism and puts a question that will be hard to refute, or to successfully answer.

As its theologic creeds crumble under the persistent blows of reason and of common sense, the church redoubles its efforts to retain power by trying to convince mankind that its own ethical code, its peculiar standard of morals in sex relations, is all that holds human society together—all that keeps civilization from relapsing into primitive barbarism.

Orford Northcote has done for ethical science what the greatest of modern thinkers, Herbert Spencer, has failed to do. He has carried the logic of freethought, and free action, to its logical landings and shown its relation to the most important of all social problems—the ethics of sex. He has made the most important of all applications of Spencer's famous "Basis of Ethics."

Free Motherhood and the Economic Reconstruction.

Instead of the promised synopsis of the realistic story, "Hilda's Home" lately concluded in our columns we offer a reply to Dr. J. G. Truman, by the author of the story; also the reply of Lillian Harman to Mr. Van Deventer, in which replies will be found much of what would have been said in the proposed synopsis—of what is believed by many to be one of the very best educational stories yet written. The latest of the very few adverse criticisms upon this story is that of W. G. Scott, of Cincinnati. In a private letter he says:

"I think the author spoiled 'Hilda's Home' when she brought in the co operative home under present conditions."

This objection is not unexpected. Like many other intelligent and earnest reformers, Mr. Scott doubtless takes the ground that economic freedom must precede woman's emancipation from Sex-slavery; that free motherhood is impossible under present material conditions. "Hildas Home" seems to have been written in part at least to show that free motherhood is now possible for women who are in possession of a competence of their own or who have friends who can and will assist them to competence without demanding or expecting anything in return, except the satisfaction of helping to create a better race.

If asked which should come first, Rosa Graul would probably say that sexual emancipation and economic freedom should come together, but that, of the two, freedom for mothers is more immediately practicable than is the freedom of the wage slave. And she would probably add that the surest and only way to successfully free the wage slaves is to free the mothers, so that no more subjects for the wage boss could or would be born. She probably argues that the boss—the economic and political boss will never lack for slaves, victims, so long as mothers submit to invasion of their selfhood; that so long as the mothers of the workers are ignorant, superstitious and submissive to authority their sons will be ignorant, superstitious and submissive to authority; that the stream cannot rise higher than its fountain; that, knowing all this the supporters of the "present conditions" care but little how much our labor leaders agitate for a change of system, for shorter hours, for a larger share of the products of labor, etc., etc.; that so long as the source of the supply of slaves—the mothers, are kept in slavery, the old system will continue.

And these, as I take it, are some of the reasons why Rosa Graul has said comparatively little about reforming the present economic system. But inasmuch as she has promised to answer objections she will probably herself answer Mr. Scott and all others who may think as he does. It is hereby suggested, also, that if not too late, a supplementary chapter to the story itself,—which story was written several years ago, and before the agitation for economic reconstruction was as general as it now is,—a supplementary chapter on economics might profitably be written for the proposed book, the bound volume of "Hilda's Home." Whether incorporated in the story or not would be a matter of detail, and not of prime importance.

"THE ADULT" for December is received at this office. It contains: "Editorial"; "Dress in its Relationship to Sex," by Orford Northcote; "'The Liars': or Marriage at the Criterion Theater," by Sagittarius; "Self Reverence, Self Knowledge, Self Control," by Robert Braithwaite; "The Poetry of the Passions," by Henry Seymour; "Answers to Correspondents."

The "Adult," like wine, improves with age; not that the first issues were lacking in excellence. The London "Agnostic Journal," edited by "Saladin," says of it: "The 'Adult,' organ of the Legitimation League, is certainly the most outspoken and revolutionary serial devoted to the sex question published on this, or, peradventure, any other planet." This, from the very conservative "Saladin," is the highest praise that could be given. The December number contains twenty-four pages. Price six cents, mailed from this office.

Freethought and Free Love.

BY ORFORD NORTHCOTE.

Continued.

We have now reached the point where we see the power which Christian marriage has placed in the hands of the priests. Christian marriage has elevated the woman to an undue position of influence in the household. Instead of her and her offspring being ruled in every matter by the husband, as formerly, the positions have largely been reversed. Recapitulating, we have pointed out that women are more amenable to religious discipline than men; we have also seen that Christianity has elevated woman to a position of power in the household she never possessed before.*

THE PRIEST HAS RULED THE HOUSEHOLD THROUGH THE WOMAN.

"Marriage," says Colonel Ingersoll, the undisputed chief of American Freethought, "is the holiest institution among men. Without the fireside there is no human advancement; without the family relations there is no life worth living. Every good government is made up of good families. The unit of good government is the family, and anything that tends to destroy the family is perfectly devilish and infamous. I believe in marriage, and I hold in utter contempt the opinions of men and women who denounce the institution." (Italics mine.)

Marriage, on the contrary, is the seat of the power of the priest. Through marriage the priest rules the children and the husband. Through marriage the priest rules the world.

We now see the fatuity of freethinkers opposing the dogmas of Christianity and supporting its code of morals, without examining the morality on its own merits. If Christianity had done nothing more than impose a false cosmological belief upon mankind, the work of Freethinkers in exposing it would still have been important, but not nearly so important as from the fact that the Christian code of morality is subversive of human progress. Freethinkers give half their case away in praising Christian ethics. If Christian morality is so praiseworthy, why make so much pother about the beliefs on which it is based?

I have said that the Freethought party, as a party, is, like other institutions, open to the accusation of conservatism, in all matters outside its particular province. How far is this true with regard to the free love movement; and how is it motived?

In England there are a considerable number of secularists who are also (theoretical) free lovers. But the movement for sexual emancipation finds little encouragement from their present leaders.

This is all the more remarkable, since the free love movement in England largely owes the security of its present position to Charles Bradlaugh, the founder, and during his lifetime, president of the National Secular Society. Charles Bradlaugh, the most heroic, not to say Titanic, figure in the battle for liberty of this century, was no advocate of free love. But he was something even greater than that. He was the indomitable champion of free utterance of opinion. His greatness lay in demanding freedom for those from whom he differed, as well as for those who thought with him. His was no narrow sectarian mind. Though he did not see eye to eye with the apostles of free love, he held that they had a right to express their opinions; and because that freedom was threatened, he planted their banner and defied the world.

Mr. Charles Watts, a well known figure in the English Freethought Party, owned a publishing business. In the late seventies, he purchased the plates of Dr. Knowlton's book on preventive checks. Copies were struck off and the book was put on the market. A public prosecution was commenced, and Mr. Watts was committed for trial. Thinking discretion the better part of valor, he pleaded guilty, and offered to withdraw the book from circulation and destroy the plates. At this point, Bradlaugh interfered, and resetting the type, issued the the book in conjunction with Annie Besant, the volume bearing the imprint of the Freethought Publishing Company.† Bradlaugh having taken his stand, the book was largely advertised, and copies were sent to the Public Prosecutor by Bradlaugh himself. The Corporation of the city of London commenced a prosecution. Bradlaugh defended in person, and by a masterly stroke of forensic skill, got the verdict quashed on a point of law, and thus escaped imprisonment. The notoriety of the trial caused the book to sell by thousands, and neo-malthusianism became a vital question.

* To guard against misapprehension, let me distinctly state that I am in favor of giving greater liberty to woman than she now possesses; what I object to, is not giving her liberty, but giving her power to oppress.

† The Freethought Publishing Company was the sole property of Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant.

Charles Watts at that time owned and edited the "Secular Review."* Its pages were made the medium of a violent attack on Charles Bradlaugh and his colleague Annie Besant, and Saladin's vituperative pen was allowed, issue after issue, to smirch their fair names.

The split in the Secular ranks, however, did not begin in connection with the Knowlton pamphlet, but with the publication some years earlier by Mr. E. Truelove, of "The Elements of Social Science." That now world famous book, besides being a plea for neo-malthusianism, plainly advocated free love doctrines. The "National Reformer" was then jointly edited by Mr. Barker and Mr. Bradlaugh; each gentleman editing one half of the paper. Mr. Bradlaugh's half of the "Reformer" favorably noticed "The Elements," and regularly advertised its sale. Mr. Barker, in his half of the paper, not only refused the advertisements, but attacked Bradlaugh for so doing. This was the beginning of the storm which culminated in the publication by Bradlaugh of the "Fruits of Philosophy."†

Although not agreeing with the free love sentiments of "The Elements," Bradlaugh was thus instrumental in making it known throughout the country. This epoch making work was, because of the dispute, freely sold from the bookstalls of the National Secular Society. Its sale had a further impetus. The Christian opponents of Bradlaugh reiterated all over the country the charge that Bradlaugh was a free lover. They based their accusation on the grounds of his advertising and selling "The Elements," and in consequence secured for the book a popularity, which, but for their malicious efforts, it had never achieved. For once, the Christians over-reached themselves. They tried to destroy Bradlaugh's influence by accusing him of accepting the hated doctrine of free love, and not only failed in that direction, but gained an enormous audience for a book which has perhaps done more to advance the cause of sexual freedom than any book ever written.

Let us now pass from the fight Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant made round the banner of free speech, to their own and their colleagues' views of free love. Mrs. Besant was always an outspoken champion of monogamy. In her reply to the Bishop of Manchester‡ she entirely repudiated his assertion that Secularists taught free love.

On the contrary she declared that

"Monogamy appears to me to be the result of civilization, of personal dignity, of cultured feeling; loyalty of one man to one woman is the highest sexual ideal. The fleeting connections supposed by free love theorists are steps backward, and not forward."

Mrs. Besant could say this in spite of her marital experience being an unhappy one. She has doubtless deceived herself. But to show that prejudice against free love ran much stronger in the Freethought party than the very moderate expressions used by this grand woman, may be instanced the fact that charges had been leveled against her, inside the Freethought party, which enabled her to say in her farewell address to the Secularists, "I HAVE BEEN CALLED PROSTITUTE." Considering that this term had been applied to her on the sole grounds of her supposed intimate relations with Charles Bradlaugh, a supposition which had no other basis than the malignity which invented it, we can see that the temper of the English Freethought party was in no way favorable to departures from strict monogamic morality.

Charles Bradlaugh was even more vigorous in his denunciation of Free Love than his brilliant colleague. He constantly repudiated the charge of being a free lover, founded on his alleged acceptance of the whole doctrine of the "Elements of Social Science." Both in his address to the National Secular Society's Conference in 1881, and in the pamphlet, "Jesus, Shelley and Malthus," published in 1861 and reprinted in 1883, did he make it absolutely clear that he totally dissented from free love doctrines.

Mr. John H. Robertson succeeded Charles Bradlaugh as editor of the "National Reformer," and although there are reasons for believing that his views on marriage are far from being orthodox, he was careful in his conduct of the "Reformer," to steer clear of any imputation of free love. Replying once to a correspondent who had advocated Freedom in the Sexual Relationships he pointed out that the article was admitted in the columns of the "National Reformer," solely on the grounds of giving a hearing to a properly expressed argument, whether the contention were right or wrong. He then argued that under existing economic conditions, woman might be expected to suffer from the lack of protection afforded by a socially ratified union and concluded by saying, "This of course, does not preclude the later recognition of the expediency of freedom, when the social condition of the woman is improved."

I quote these opinions, not so much to show what were Mr. Robertson's own view on the subject, but as indicating his belief that it would be bad policy to allow a free love declaration to stand in his columns, unmodified by editorial protest. For intellectual ability, Mr. Robertson stands easily head and shoulders above any prominent Freethought leader, either in England or America, and it is only due to him to say that with this ability he combines the greatest of all progressive virtues—tolerance.

The organ of the National Secular Society in England, is "The Freethinker"; of which Mr. G. W. Foote, the President of the society, is editor. He, too, is a firm believer in monogamy. Replying to George Bedborough in the "Freethinker, he says, "It seems to us that the world wants more discipline rather than more freedom in sexual relationships." At the same time he vindicated his claim to be called a Freethinker by saying, "We believe in Freedom, and we would try and defend your freedom if it were attacked; but freedom is one thing and moral and intellectual agreement is quite another."

Far different is the attitude of the "Reformer," a Freethought journal owned by Mr. and Mrs. Bradlaugh-Bonner.* Not only would that journal give no support to the Legitimation League, (the English Free Love organization) but it point blank refused to accept its advertisements.

The attitude of the "Agnostic Journal" to the Legitimation League was more or less one of sitting on the fence. Replying to Mr. Bedborough, the editor, the brilliant and pungent "Saladin" said, "Our support to your cause must, as heretofore, be incidental. This journal's special mission lies in another field." Later, in referring to the "Adult," the editor says,

"'The Adult,' the organ of the Legitimation League, and edited by George Bedborough, is certainly the most outspoken and revolutionary serial devoted to the sex question published on this or, preadventure, any other planet."

What Saladin precisely means by saying "Our support to your cause must as heretofore be incidental," it would probably puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to explain. I was not aware that Saladin had given any previous support, incidental or otherwise to the free love movement. On the contrary, Saladin, as we have already stated, violently attacked Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant for publishing "The Fruits of Philosophy," and for promoting the sale of the "Elements of Social Science." At a meeting of Secularists held at Cleveland Hall, presided over by Charles Watts, and ornamented by the presence of Mrs. Harriet Law, George Jacob Holyoake and G. W. Foote, Knowltonism, and its relation to Free Thought, was under discussion. "At that meeting," writes Saladin, "in reply to the hiss of opposition, which I cared not to conciliate, even if I had known how, I raised my voice to a shout

* Saladin afterwards purchased the "Secular Review" from Watts, and subsequently altered the title to the "Agnostic Journal" which title it still bears.

† Knowlton's pamphlet.

‡ "God's Views on Marriage." A pamphlet by Annie Besant.

* Mrs. Bradlaugh-Bonner is the daughter of Charles Bradlaugh.

of defiance. I managed to make myself heard over the hiss and groan of Onanic disapprobation, till I thundered forth the words 'Charles Bradlaugh has dragged the standard of Freethought through the mire of Hollywell Street.'"*

To be concluded.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Harry Hoover, 2 Sixth St., Pittsburg, Pa.:—Our Lucifer came to us this week with "The Ideal Home" marked in red. We too are interested in "Hilda's Home," not only in the story, but its practical realization. Mahomet said—"One hour of action is worth a lifetime of prayer," and notwithstanding the failures of the past, we believe that true co-operation is not only possible, but feasible. In the enclosed clippings from the "Pittsburg Times" of today and the "Carnegie Union" you will find a condensed statement of our enterprise. As the readers of Lucifer well know, we are living under the competitive system and are perforce compelled to utilize it in order to get out of it, and propose that the unearned increment shall remain in the hands of the co-operators. Being personally acquainted with the author of "Hilda's Home" we are anxious to see it published in book form and make the following proposition. The first five dollars of the price of every lot purchased by any of Lucifer's subscribers will be donated to the publication fund. In fact we would be pleased to have Mr. Harman act as agent for the sale of lots retaining five dollars in each case. All questions promptly answered.

Oscar Johnson, San Francisco, Calif.:—Enclosed find two dollars for three copies of "Hilda's Home"—one copy at one dollar and two copies at fifty cents each. In case the story can not be printed the money to go for subscription and literature. The reading of "Hilda's Home" has been a great pleasure to me, and regret its coming to an end. It is charmingly written in choicest language, conveying an idea that the writer possesses unusual wit, wisdom and knowledge of human affairs, also a desire to lead and teach in the right direction. Please give the author my kindest regards and beg her to accept my thanks. In the "Arena" magazine for 1895, June and July numbers, are two articles by the pen of B. O. Flower, one headed "The Rights of Children," and the other discussing the marriage question, both articles excellent, and in line with the teachings of Lucifer. Is there any obstacle or objection to reprinting them in Lucifer? Mr. Bellamy in his new book, "Equality," takes similar views regarding sexology as you do, and as the book is advocating the co-operative commonwealth it ought to be read by all progressive minds.

[There is no objection to reprinting the articles alluded to—the difficulty being a lack of space. Mr. Flower's "Prostitution in the Marriage Bond" was copied from and commented on by us, soon after its appearance in the "Arena." Both Mr. Flower and Mr. Bellamy are doing good work in breaking the bonds of institutional marriage. M. H.]

Susan Swaysgood, Healdsburg, Calif.:—FRIENDS OF LUCIFER: Why, O why do you continue to jangle and quarrel? Why does not our Moses, like Moses of old, write down the law, saying now, my beloved children, in whom I am well pleased, listen to the voice of reason, and cease your contentions, or ere another moon goes down some religious sect will come and claim each of you as members of their flock.

Who ever heard of such quibbling outside the church? If you advocate Liberalism, stand by your colors and practice what you preach. Mr. Ruedebusch sets a good example. After a slight protest to set himself right he retires, not caring who picks flaws in his writings. Can his admirers do less? No where in the "New Ideal" is secrecy mentioned, but the same sensible advice is given that Albina L. Washburn gives in last week's issue, namely, to go on individually, co-operatively and lovingly; each on his or her own way to happiness.

Friends, cease this useless controversy and pull together, then you may hope to accomplish something. Unity is strength. What if we do not agree on minor subjects, the great thing to achieve is freedom.

Dora Boss asks what will New Idealists say to "C"? What can we say more than encourage her to keep her own self-respect? It is hard to advise without knowing all particulars. She may have been a willing participant, or again she may have yielded to the persuasion of a sleek tongue, but in either case her duty is clear. She must not allow herself to be pitied, as though she were a criminal, or a weak-minded fool. She must assert her right to assume the responsibility of motherhood without a license. True, she has great odds to contend against, living as we do under the system of Grundyism, but if she respects herself and does the best she can for her offspring, the world will soon smile on her again, for secretly it admires anyone who dares do anything outside of the rules laid down by law. So, let her be brave and hopeful. Loving hearts will beat in sympathy with her, and who shall say but it may ennoble and enrich her life in after years to have this experience now.

John W. Van Deventer, Sterling, Colo.:—Enclosed find $1.00; credit me with fifty cents on my subscription to Lucifer and send me Emil F. Ruedebusch's book "The New and the Old Ideal." I have read "Hilda's Home" very carefully and I do not like it. I feel that our marriage laws are far from perfect but do not see in Free Loveism a remedy. In my early manhood I fell in love with a maiden after the old fashioned way. Nine years after we were married and I am loath to believe that the angels in heaven were happier than we during the four years she remained on earth afterward. She has been dead almost five years but I love her tonight just as much as when I first whispered the name of wife into her ear.

In "Hilda's Home" all the women old enough bore children about as fast as nature would allow them to, "three little prattlers and one sweet cooing innocent lying close to Imelda's breast," says the story. And the girls were preparing to become mothers ere the first blush of womanhood faded from their cheeks. Man's condition under a free love regime would be delightful I grant. To be ever able to satisfy his lust with a fresh victim, to become a father and yet entirely escape a parent's responsibilities, to throw the whole burden of life on the weak woman, to bask in the sunshine but flee from the clouds—such would be the condition of my sex.

In "Hilda's Home" early motherhood and the cares that unavoidably attend it, would prevent woman from making herself man's equal, would compel her to remain only a plaything, a gratifier of his baser passions.

My wife and I read the same books and magazines, worked together, attended church, lecture and theater together, our minds grew to run in the same channels (run, not stand still, mind you) and our home was always full to overflowing with life's brightest sunshine. We desired children, two being the number we felt we could rear properly and we brought them into the world, but, alas, they and she have left me, I am alone. Your daughter Lillian answered my last letter. Will you kindly hand her this, if you deem it worthy of an answer, as I would like a woman's opinion on my view of the case.

* Hollywell Street: A street where contraceptives are sold, and at that time having very unenviable reputation which it had held for 150 years.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repent ant criminals, but released innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

Free Society An Advocate of Communal Life and Individual Sovereignty. Ingersoll once said "Everyone can love, and love don't cost a cent." A postal card does cost a cent, but if you have one just write for a sample copy of our paper and "it won't cost you a cent." Free Society, Lock Box 2508, San Francisco, Calif.

689.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetarism; Albert Chavannes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
Practical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.03
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.03
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,	10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue,"	By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman,"	By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom,"	By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell,	By Mary Fio ence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?"	By X.
"Love and the Law,"	By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches,"	By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.
This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.50

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.	.10
Bar Sinister and Lucit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages.	.25
Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe.	.20
The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution.	.10
The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper,	.50
Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference.	.15
Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker.	.10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price,	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " "	.50
A Sex Revolution, " "	.25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " "	.25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth.	2.00
When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations.	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen.	.10
Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies	.05

THE OLD AND THE NEW IDEAL.

A Solution of the Sex, Love, and Marriage Questions. By Emil F. Ruedebusch.

Containing 347 pages, and 26 chapters, the titles of some of the latter being: Our Freethinkers and Christian morality; Our children; Our young men; The preventive check; The girls; Love; The value of marriage and the free love movement; The happy marriage of today; How long will sex relations last in a free society? Jealousy and possession; The old and the new ideal; Love and friendship in a free society; Undesired children; Licentiousness; The sense of shame; Obscenity; Prostitution; Crime and disease; Ethicuty,—an appeal to the women; Woman's Emancipation; The social question; The propaganda.

In "Appendix: Notes and comments on criticisms," the author elucidates his ideas through ten short, crisp articles.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Marriotte. This is a story of a sympathetic high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

"The Adult." Organ of the Legitimation League of England, contains in its fourth number: Editorial; "Sex Love and Mutability," by Orford Northcote; "The Last Citadel of Authority," by Robert Braithwaite; "Spiritual Love," by William Platt; "Wanted, A New Dictionary," by Rea Tee; "The Judgment of Paris—Up to Date," by Leighton Pagan. "The Adult" is a neat magazine of twenty-four pages, with attractive cover. Price, 5 cents. Order of Lucifer, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill. Price per year, 50 cts.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Emma Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1607, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
Box 122, San Jose, Cal.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 51. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 22, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 690

By Right Divine.

When rogues would fill the human mind
With some transparent lie,
They always claim it countersigned
And sanctioned from on high.
An instance makes this statement plain—
The right divine of kings to reign.

This lie was shot to death in part
A hundred years ago,
But now the tricksters seek to start
An equal falsehood, so
We hear proclaimed by every fool
The right divine of gold to rule.

Ere long when they grow bold enough
To make their purpose clear
And throw the mask of pretext off,
We may expect to hear
The moneyed knaves make this appeal—
The right divine of thieves to steal.

I seem to hear another cry
That comes from all around.
Beginning low, it rises high,
A deep and growing sound,
That claims in no uncertain tone
The human right to have our own.

This cry is filled with dire distress
And angry discontent,
With tones of want and wretchedness,
While into these are blent
Stern undervoices that demand
The human right to life and land.

From torrid zone to frigid snows
'Tis heard in every place.
It ever louder, deeper grows
Until it thrills the race
And thunders forth from sea to sea—
The human right to liberty.

—J. H. Edgerton.

The Postal Inquisition in Oregon.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contrary to the expectation of some new workers in the field of reform, the Oregon grand jury to which was submitted the evidence in the "Firebrand" case has returned two indictments jointly against A. J. Pope, Henry Addis and A. Isaak. The first indictment covers a poem of Walt Whitman, a letter written by Kate Austin, and one written by Annie E. Parkhurst. The second indictment is aimed at a letter written by Anton Neidermeier. The poem appeared in No. 6 of Vol. III.; the letters of the insurgent women in No. 12 of Vol. III., and the letter of Niedermeier in No. 33 of the same volume. If I am not mistaken, the issue last named was the one seized by the spies of the department and confiscated without the slightest warrant of law.

As stated, the accused men will be tried together, as were the victims of the Chicago panic. It is to be hoped that the lawyer in charge of the defense will vigorously demand separate trials. Some years ago this man defended a similar cause and won. He was appointed by the court, as the conductors of the "Firebrand" are financially unable to fee an attorney. Henry Addis will act with him in the preparation of the defense.

I do not recall the contents of any of the incriminated letters, but there could not have been anything very "bad" in them or I should have had the matter fixed in my mind by the suggestion of danger to the publishers. It occurs to me now that we are passing from the epoch of "obscene" words to the epoch of "obscene" ideas and principles. In the cases of Heywood, Bennett, Harman, and other earlier victims of the Censorship, certain words and clauses were pounced upon as essentially evil and likely to corrupt the morals of the reader. In the present instance, it would seem that the change advocated in the social system is the rock of offense. This is exceedingly suggestive, and goes far to show that Heywood and James saw clearly the animus and purpose of the Inquisition, years ago. Mr. Heywood was censured in bitterness by his enemies, in sorrow by his friends, because he insisted upon using unmistakable terms in discussing sex problems (this was after his first imprisonment). He replied, in substance, that the foes of free press and mails were determined to suppress discussion of the great question in which he was interested, that all they wanted was pretext, and that when they could not find one they would invent another. No matter how scientific and "pure" were the words employed in examining the foundations of the family, he argued, it would be only a very short time before they would be so degraded by common use that they would in their turn fall under the condemnation of Grundy and of the law, to be avoided by refined persons and their use punished by fine and imprisonment. So he set himself the herculean task of bringing again into fashion the clear and rugged sex vocabulary of our ancestors. Whatever we may think of the wisdom or lack of wisdom of his course, it is certain that here in "free America" we are hastening in the direction he foresaw. Saying nothing of the tabooed words, we have passed through two stages of persecution and may be entering a third. We have seen men sent to prison, their business ruined, and even their lives sacrificed, because they discussed the love and marriage questions from the viewpoint of liberty in language that, while plain and cogent, was in no sense "obscene," within the theretofore accepted definitions of orthodox morality. Succeeding this stage of persecution came another, bearing similar poison fruits, in which recognized scientific and Latin phraseology was in its turn placed under the ban. Now, as I have intimated, we are confronted, apparently, with the alternative of giving up the advocacy of sex liberty or of continuing in our work at the risk of spoliation and imprisonment, no matter how circumspect we may be, no matter how many and how tiresome the circumlocutions to which we may resort in the effort to be understood without being "criminal."

In the light of these facts, it is certain that all friends of sex rationalism are vitally interested in the outcome of the Oregon persecution. Whatever each may be able to do to help the defense, that, little or much, will be the work of self-preservation, and cannot safely be delayed or left undone. A victory for freedom of investigation and transmission will encourage all progressive men and women. A defeat—well, out of defeat will come victory, sometime. But it should not be deferred through our neglect.

Freethought and Free Love.

BY ORFORD NORTHCOTE.

Concluded.

In an addendum to a pamphlet called "Sexual Economy" purporting to be written by one Peter Agate, M. D.; Saladin writes as follows:

"We have heard a good deal about the heroism involved in the publishing of such works as 'The Elements' and the Knowlton pamphlet. There is no heroism in the thing at all; but there is a good deal of cowardice, not without a dash of greed and avarice. A section of the public is prurient, and the publication of 'nasty' books like 'The Elements' and the 'Fruits of Philosophy' is profitable. . . . . I must protest too, that the only organized society of 'Freethinkers' in England elected for many years President (Charles Bradlaugh) one who has done worse than blasphemed fifty gods—has outraged the highest and purest instincts of human nature. The gentleman (Mr. Bradlaugh) who could sit down with another gentleman's wife (Mrs. Besant) to edit in conjunction with her a work on sexual commerce, should be painted in pigments the due manipulation of which is beyond my skill as a limner. . . . . As long as Christianity insists on sexual purity and restraint, and debars the transgressor from her sacraments, she does the world a service which goes some way to compensate for many crimes and errors of which she has been guilty. . . . . He who adopts the teachings of 'The Elements' has no high ideal up to which he tries to exalt the measure of his conduct; with him there need be no remorse and no regrets; there is no standard of purity after which to struggle and to strive; there is only the inexpressible Malebolge of unbounded sensuality and shameless lust: no woman you love that it is not proper for another to love tomorrow; no maid such as has heretofore blessed the bridegroom's arms, but only a shameless and deflowered harlot who has responded to the desires of others as she responds to yours; a social convenience, like a drinking fountain or a chalet; a creature liable to be called into use anywhere, at any time by anybody, and who constantly carries a syringe in her muff, in the name of Mr. Bradlaugh and 'Freethought.'"

So wrote Saladin during Bradlaugh's lifetime, and if this is incidental support to the cause which the Legitimation League has at heart, then language has no meaning. When it is remembered that Bradlaugh's sole aim was to educate the working classes in contraceptive science, to the end of reducing poverty and alleviating suffering, we can only characterize Saladin's pamphlet as the rankest piece of obscurantism that any man pretending to be a Freethinker ever uttered.

It is of course, possible, that Saladin has changed his views. We shall be heartily glad to chronicle the fact if this be so. But not till Saladin retracts the infamous things he said of Charles Bradlaugh should we regard any such professed change of opinions as sincere.

There is however one splendid exception, amongst Rationalist publications. I refer to the "University Magazine" which has done magnificent work for the free love movement. Reaching a highly intellectual class of readers, it has, by publishing articles on free love, given the movement in England a tremendous impetus. But this magazine has no official connection with any freethought society whatever, being the private property of a wealthy gentleman of advanced views and high courage.

Summing up the general attitude of the freethought leader in England toward the free love movement we may say that on the whole there is a strong disposition to treat it with tolerance. While no actual encouragement is given the movement is neither totally ignored nor violently opposed.*

In America the denunciations of free love are not only more orcible, but the attitude of the freethought leaders is less tolerant.

In Vol. XV, of the "Free Thought Magazine," the editor Mr. H. L. Green thus variously expresses himself.

This damnable doctrine of free love. p. 61.

Free love and whiskey, two of the greatest evils, in our opinion in the country. There is but one other of equal magnitude, and that is superstition. The freethinkers ought to eternally war against these gigantic enemies of the human race. p. 79.

In our opinion any one who does not fully subscribe to Col. Ingersoll's views of marriage is out of place in the freethought party. p. 56.

Free thought is the direct road to heaven, and free love the sure road to hell here on earth. p. 117.

We would have the government protect and guard and improve marriage in every possible way by legislation or otherwise.

These are the views of the editor. What are the views of his readers? Here are are some of them.

I think free love is simple damnable and downright lust. p. 106.

Free thought means emancipation. Free love, dissipation. p. 107.

We must put marriage and home life above everything else. It (sic!) is the foundation of law and government. p. 108.

A great stone is rolled from the pathway of intelligent men who want to take a more advanced stand for liberty of thought, and who shrink from the very appearance of association with those unclean things—free love and whiskey.

I fear you have done the "Freethought Magazine" an irreparable damage by admitting that free love article by Moses Harman. p. 238.

I must say that my feelings were very much hurt to think that you would allow your pure, lofty and able publication to be marred by the publication of the article written by Moses Harman. I most certainly trust that your columns will not again be polluted with the ranting of any one pretending to be the exponent of "freedom, love and wisdom." p. 240.

And right here permit me to remark that in my opinion, intemperance and free love ought to be denounced by every honest Freethinker. p. 240.

It is probable that the opinions of the "Freethought Magazine" correspondents are the honest expressions of puritanical fanaticism, but there is abundant evidence to prove that the editor's antagonism arises in large measure from cupidity. Mr. Green is afraid that the commercial prosperity of the magazine he edits, and the respectability and social status attaching to free thought will be endangered. Let the following utterances of Mr. Green speak for themselves.

In this city of Chicago, intelligent Freethinkers can be counted by the hundred among the best business men of the city, but so long as the Freethought societies are run by free lovers, these people will have nothing to do with them. Our free thought journals also suffer greatly by the misrepresentation of what free thought really is. The public are getting the idea that free thought means free love and therefore they refuse to subscribe for free thought journals. These free lovers who are calling themselves freethinkers do not subscribe for free thought journals. p. 118.

The (freethought) organization should be as perfect as any Christian organization—should be run on business principles, and should, by its constitution, be strictly guarded against the bad influences that have wrecked and disgraced the old association. Such an organization would draw to its membership, within one year, after its organization, ten thousand names at least. p. 118.

The principal object of our writing this article is to open the eyes of the liberal (freethought) public and show them the necessity of ridding our cause of this curse of free love and planting our moral standard so high that it will command the respect of all good people even if they do not agree with us on theology. (Italics mine.) "Free Thought Magazine," Jan. 1897. p. 61.

I have accused Mr. Green of cupidity, but to be quite fair, I will do him the justice of assuming, that it is not his personal aggrandisement, but that of his party that he has at heart. But whether the cupidity have a personal or a party motive there can be no escape from the main charge.

"The public refuse to subscribe for free thought journals. . . . . Among them (the free lovers) in this city (Chicago) there are not five who pay for any one of the free thought journals. . . . . Hundreds of freethinkers among the best business men of the city will have nothing to do with us. . . . . The free thought organization should be run on business principles . . . (and would then) draw to its membership within one year, ten thousand names at least."

What other construction can be put on the above sentences than the one I have suggested? The whole truth of the matter is just this, that Secularism, like Christianity, has been found to have money in it, and business principles must stand before intellectual honesty and the search for truth. The worst thing that can happen to a forward intellectual movement is for it to become commercially prosperous. When a free thought lecturer can pack the largest halls in the states, the prices of admission ranging from a dollar upwards; when it will prove a paying speculation for a dealer to manufacture and largely advertise for sale silver spoons at two dollars a piece bearing the image of a free thought leader, it can hardly be urged that free thought is a commercial failure. And when commercial prosperity begins to follow in the wake of a heterodoxy, it is high time for the real freethinkers to balance accounts, and consider whether there are not other fields of thought waiting to be made free, besides the particular field which has become so free, that not the martyr's stake but the comfort attaching to the almighty dollar, and the hero worship as exemplified by the silver spoon, is the reward for successful leadership in that heterodox field of thought. Let it not for a moment be imagined that I begrudge Col. Ingersoll or any other man, the pecuniary profit he may make of his abilities in opposing superstition of any kind. My only reason for referring to this side of the question at all, is to point out that where profit and honor may be gained by the advocacy of heterodox views, the real urgency of that advocacy is past. It is true that much may remain to be done in educating superstitious people out of their superstition; but the real fight occurs when there is no freedom to hold to or act upon the views antagonistic to an orthodoxy. Human progress consists not so much of the increase in numbers of persons holding sane views, as of the increase of freedom to hold those views at all.

The real battle of freethought in the field of religion is over. Absence from church does not involve being put into the stocks; the profession of atheism does not involve the stake.*

Let it not be supposed, however, that the battle for freedom is over. The venue is merely changed from one field to another. So far as America is concerned, there can be no doubt whatever, that the battle for human freedom will rage, in the coming years, round sex. Already the puritans are gathering their forces. Anthony Comstock, with his vile trade of agent provocateur is but the bird of carrion that hovers near the field of the coming battle.

The suppression of polygamy in Salt Lake City, the overthrow of complex marriage in Oneida Creek, the raising of the age of consent in some of the states, the attempt to smother malthusian and other advanced sexual literature, are but the preliminary skirmishes. The real battle is to come.

Who will be found on the side of freedom? Hardly shall we see there the Colonel Ingersolls. Certainly not the H. L. Greens, with their pious wishes "to earn the respect of all good people even if they do not agree with us on theology."

Men who put the respect of their neighbors in front of truth and freedom are the very cowards who would never strike a blow for liberty. Freedom for them is an empty shibboleth; they are as far from realizing the true inwardness of freedom as the veriest modern protestant prating of the tyranny of Rome.

It is time to differentiate. There are freethinkers and freethinkers. It is useless to appeal to those who agree with Mr. Green in saying "Any one who does not fully subscribe to Col. Ingersoll's views of marriage is out of place in the freethought party." p. 56, "Free Thought Magazine." Can the arrogance of his utterance be matched any where outside of Rome? The Pope's views on a subject other than religion could hardly be invested with infallibilty with more display of unction than are Col. Ingersoll's views on a matter outside the sphere of atheistic thought. Here is a recrudescence of the very worst features of Popery. If such is to be the attitude of leaders of the freethought party, the sooner that party chooses new leaders the better. For it can hardly be that the whole rank and file of the American Secularists are of such intolerent mould.

Freethinkers of America! I appeal to you from across the Atlantic to take a stand on this matter before it is too late. Many of you, doubtless, honestly believe that monogamy is good for the race. But there were honest believers in the blessings of Christianity when the Spanish Inquisitors were denuding Spain of its best citizens and of its noblest blood. Thomas Paine, Bradlaugh, Holyoake, Richard Carlile; men like these have secured to you religious freedom. Will you stand by while others, who are endeavoring to capture one more citadel of tyranny, are thrown into prison by the Comstocks of orthodoxy? Will you join in the hue and cry against those pioneers who are trying to lift the yoke of sexual bondage from suffering humanity? Will you join forces with the puritans who would make of life a joyless withered desert? Or will you give to others in things held important by them the freedom you claim for yourselves in things held important by you? Upon how you act in the coming struggle, largely depends the issue. If you side with the Comstocks and the Greens, America will have little to thank you for when she emerges from her time of trial. The cause of sexual freedom will require all the forces at its command, in the hour of danger. May you not be found wanting when that hour arrives.

* An exception must be made of the leaders of the Glasgow branch of the Secular Society. The executives of this branch illustrates the attitude of many Freethinkers on the sex question, by their puritanical treatment of a colleague, Mr. D. G. Lindsay, who committed the unpardonable crime of exposing for sale, Emil Ruedebusch's "Old and New Ideal"; which admirable work it was my privilege to first introduce to English readers, through the columns of the "Free Review."

* I here, of course, refer to England and America; and further I in no wise deprecate the work of Freethinkers. For while Freethinkers are in no present danger of persecution, the sleeping dog of Christianity may any day rise and bite, in this respect the more extensive are our freedoms the less chance here is of Christian persecution again becoming rampant.

Sociologic Lesson. No. LV.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

ADVANTAGES OF LARGE CORPORATIONS. The trusts which have been so much opposed, have been based in theory upon the advantage of bringing into one scheme as fully as possible all the operations of a single branch of industry, avoiding unnecessary expenses, and making use of all conceivable economies. The railroad system which has been so much abused, has nevertheless given an impetus to the industry along the lines its has traversed, which could have been given in no other way. The more extensive the operations of a corporation, so long as they are properly conducted, the greater the advantages to the community as well as to the corporation itself. While the operation of a manufactory are only sufficient to supply a few neighbors, the machinery cannot be extended to small details. When a nation is to be supplied, many of the details can be constructed a thousand fold more cheaply, and very much better. The largest corporations or trusts, if rightly managed, will benefit the people the most. We only need, but it is now a most important need, to prevent their taking advantage of the monopoly to secure to themselves an unjust share of the profits of co-operation. Perhaps the only remedy in society as it is, consists in competition, largely diminishing the profits but more certainly securing some of them to the consumer; but in society as it may be we need no such wasteful check upon inequitable dealings.

[The only comment I will take room to make upon this "Lesson" is to say that if Friend Parkhurst expects to live to see the day when "corporations and trusts" will be so managed that they will benefit "the people" more than they will benefit themselves he must expect to outlive human greed—the greed that is incarnated in the family, as we have it today, and that inheres in all the political, religious and other societary arrangements that legitimately flow from our abnormal family life. To talk of preventing privileged corporations from "taking advantage of their monopoly [privilege] to secure to themselves an unjust share of the profits of the co-operation," seems to me to border on the futuous. Give us equal freedom of opportunity, abolish privilege, then voluntary co-operation will in time give us all the benefits of "trusts," without their dangers,—their evils. M. H.]

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1301 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

Reminiscences.

Having frequently been requested to write for Lucifer something in the shape of personal reminiscences the following brief and very imperfect sketch of the life and character of one of Lucifer's earliest and most helpful friends is offered as the first installment of what may prove a series of similar articles.

Among the faithful, true and honored friends of Lucifer, who, during the year that is now closing, have finished their mortal career and passed from sight and sound, is the man who in life bore the name of Noah H. Harman.

A relative, near and very dear, to the writer of these lines; one who, in heredity, in early training and in early evolution from theologic views of life to those commonly called rationalistic, Noah H. Harman was in an eminent degree my brother, though not born of the same mother and father.

Born January 1829, common calender, in what is now West Virginia; reared in the pure and bracing air of the Alleghanies, he grew up with a strong and vigorous individuality, mental and physical. Of freedom-loving Teutonic stock, he naturally rebelled against the enslavement of the weaker to the stronger, so common among the Latin races or nations. Hence, as naught have been expected, during the anti-slavery agitation that followed the repeal of the famous "Missouri Compromise" by the American Congress in the early "fifties," in company with his young wife, Emily J. Burgoyne, daughter of a cousin of the general who commanded the British forces at Saratoga, Noah Harman went to Kansas and took part with the "Free State men to keep chattel slavery out of the territory then for the first time opened to settlement.

Settling on the unbroken prairie he and his brave young companion had a long and hard struggle with annual drouths, with grasshoppers raids, with prairie fires, with malaria and with all the privations common to pioneer life in the great west, added to the losses incident to four years of war, or rather to the six or seven years of war, over the African slavery question.

When that question was at length settled—if it can really be said to be settled at all so long as monopoly of nature's wealth by governmental authority remains,—the next question that engaged the attention of this Kansas pioneer was the liberation of the human mind from the shackles placed upon it by ignorance and theologic superstition. Among the pioneer newspaper men of the new state was S. R. Shepherd, now of Leavenworth Kansas. In the private office of Mr. Shepherd, at Grasshopper Falls, now Valley Falls, were held the meetings of perhaps the very first Freethought society or club held in the Sunflower State. This club, called the "Philomathic Society held regular weekly services for many years, and it is perhaps not too much to say that from this small beginning sprang the many Freethought organizations that have since made Kansas noted, far and wide as a battle ground for "Universal Mental Liberty"—including the moral and religious features. Of this organization Noah Harman was a leading spirit, and from that time till his death, he was regarded as one of the best known and most highly respected of the Freethinkers of eastern Kansas.

Out of this organization, this pioneer freethought association, rose Lucifer, our "Son of the Morning." Few of its early friends and helpers deserve more credit for the work this paper has been enabled to do, than does the man and brother, Noah Harman. When our plant was removed from Valley Falls to Topeka, seven years ago, in connection with my son, George Harman,—now editing and publishing "The Times," Oskaloosa, Kansas,—"Uncle Noah," as he was universally called by friends and the public generally, began the publication of the "Farmer's Vindicator" at Valley Falls, to the editing and general management of which journal he devoted the last years of an honored and very useful life. As a friend and helper of all in need of help I have never known one more unselfish, more ready to respond with sympathy and material aid.

As a fitting close to this short and very imperfect memorial I here introduce a brief tribute from the pen of Edwin C. Walker, whose acquaintance with the subject thereof was sufficiently intimate to enable him to know whereof he speaks.

M. HARMAN.

"A tall, gaunt, slightly stooping, figure; a serious almost sad, face; an eye kindly, yet severe on occasion; a tongue slow and careful of utterance; a brain not always quick to grasp the new thought but fair and analytical in investigation, and retentive of the idea once accepted, popular or unpopular; a purpose iron in tenacity and directness; and a loyalty in friendship and to the cause espoused that never wavered, come what might.

"That was Noah H. Harman, a soldier of humanity who on November 16 unstrapped and laid down forever the heavy knapsack he had borne through sunshine and storm for so many years. A relative of Lucifer's editor, he was his conservative supporter and his bondsman during the bitter fight that raged at Valley Falls and Topeka for four-fifths of a decade, when provincial ignorance and hypocrisy combined with federal tyranny to crush the man and the paper that dared to question the sacredness of hereditary institutions. Of what might have been the fate of Lucifer had it not been for the supporting hand of Noah H. Harman, one is troubled even now to think. The silent sustainer, his service to the cause his more more radical kinsman championed can not even now be accurately measured, but it was great. For one, I owe him the meed of appreciation. I am glad he lived; I am sorry he is dead. To those who loved him and who in sorrow survive him, I give the hand of sympathy and the word of hope. The hope is for a freer, happier humanity which the aspirations and the labors of this man have helped make possible on this earth which is our home and our heritage."

When Argument Fails.

From time immemorial it has been the custom of men who failed to convince their opponents by fair and honest argument to resort to physical force of some sort. In other words when reason has failed to convince then such arguments as the rack, the dungeon, the headsman's ax, the gallows, the fagot and stake have been appealed to.

In modern times, owing to an evoluted public conscience, added to the fact that experience has shown the futility of such arguments, men do not commonly use the fagot, the rack and the gallows to convince each other of error in matters of religion, and not often as a means to prevent the spread of heresy on political or governmental questions, nor to make people do right in matters of food and drink, of clothing, or in satisfying any other appetite or want, and yet cases are not lacking i which fines and imprisonment are used to enforce the views of those who claim the right to govern their fellow beings in matters of opinion or in purely personal matters.

As proof of this we need only to cite the imprisonment and hanging of four men in Chicago for the utterance of unpopular opinions on governmental questions, the imprisonment of the Seventh Day Adventists in Tennessee because of a difference of opinion as to a religious observance, and the fines and imprisonment of Mormons and others for a difference of opinion in matters of sex relations.

Among the later instances of public prosecution of men for difference of opinion as to what kind of literature is moral and healthful is the case of Abner J. Pope, Henry Addis and A. Isaak, of Portland, Oregon, mention of which has been made in recent issues of Lucifer. For information as to the present status of that case read the article entitled "The Postal Inquisition in Oregon," by E. C. Walker. Read also the following letter from Mr. Pope, dated "County Jail, Dec. 4, 1897:"

"DEAR LUCIFER BAND AND READERS: This is my fourth epistle from the Portland jail. Eleven weeks today I have been deprived of my inalienable right to liberty and the pursuit of happiness. 'He who useth the sword shall perish with the sword.' I was taken from my solitary confinement on the 16th of November and put back into my old cell, to give room to a woman with two babies, as that cell was considered the best place for them. During the twelve days I was in solitary confinement, H. Addis was admitted three times into my cell for one half hour each time, and C. L. Penhallow and wife and C. E. Miles once, one hour.

"On the 24th of November a company of Sunday visiters to the jail, who sang and played on the melodeon, and prayed and preached to us, brought all the inmates of the jail a treat of fine apples and three kinds of cake as a Thanksgiving offering.

"On the 26th of November I went before the United States grand jury and told them part of my side of this case; on the 1st of December I went to the United States court, Judge Bellinger being the judge, and plead not guilty to the indictment made by the grand jury, of sending obscene, lascivious, etc. matter through the mails. H. Addis did not plead, asked for time. The judge asked him if he had a lawyer. He said, 'I have no money to fee one.' The judge appointed Henry McGinn. He asked me if I had a lawyer or wanted one; I said no. We were then taken out of court, and I went back to jail. I was told they would try our case as soon as it is convenient to the court.

"My reasons for not employing a lawyer are, (1.) The lawyers, generally, make the laws by which innocent ones are the victims and sufferers. (2.) Put a lawyer against a lawyer and we do not get the facts nor justice. (3.) That kind of a struggle for the truth has but little influence on mankind to make them better, or to abolish government of one or many over many or one. (4.) I have found that one case of strictly and faithfully living out our principles has a permanent influence for good and for all time. I claim and contend that each one should be his own governor and developer in all good things and a repressor of all evil, in one's self.

"I am accused of wanting martyrdom; that is false. I want liberty for all, and that I live for and take the consequences for so doing, be they what they may.

"I am now in jail because I will not admit the right of others to govern me; so will not sign a bond for my appearance when they call for me. I am not a citizen of the United States, neither are women, the better part of mankind. Women are not citizens because men will not permit them; I am not because I will not be a murderer of my fellow beings, as I consider all governments to be. I am a man of the world. I want the authoritarian and war spirit abolished out of our minds and the love spirit take their places. The Barcelona article was not one of the indicted articles.

"I am in excellent health and spirits, and what the United States government officials have done and are doing to me as a punishment is proving a blessing; as I am cheered, comforted and blessed by the many good and loving words from the lovers of liberty, but they must bear in mind that the United States does not furnish stamps to pay postage for my replies to them. Yours for truth's and liberty's cause.

"ABNER J. POPE, Pantarchian,

"Box 94, Portland, Ore."

As another of the unnumbered object lessons showing what government of man by his fellow man really means, we present this instance of invasion of personal rights by what is claimed to be the "best government on earth." If this be the best, then what of the worst? And if this is the best, would not "no government at all," but simply voluntary co-operation on the basis of equal freedom for all and special privileges for none, be infinitely preferable?

The American Secular Union on the Oregon Outrage.

In no uncertain tones the National convention of the Secular Union condemned the outrage perpetrated on Pope and Addis by government officials in the interest of the Vice Society. This is the resolution which was passed without a dissenting vote:

"Resolved, That the arrest of Abner J. Pope, Henry Addis and A. Isaac, editors of the 'Firebrand' of Portland, Ore., for an alleged offense against the postal statutes, an arrest procured by the usual methods of dissimulation and trickery, was a gross and despicable invasion of the right of discussion and transmission. Asserted to be in the interest of morals, it was in the interest only of hypocrisy and vested wrong. Were the censorship sincere it would strike at the publications which deal with certain tabooed subjects in a frivolous and degrading manner for the mercenary advantage of their publishers instead of persecuting men and women who are seriously trying to discover truth, to unmask crime, to defend innocence, and to bring about reforms on what they conceive to be lines of liberty and equity. It is the shame of our legislation that it has made sincere investigation a peril; it is the shame of our jurisprudence that it abets and aggravates the outrages made possible by legislation; it is the shame of our newspaper press that with the rarest exceptions, it utters no protest against this crime, that it silently acquiesces in, if it does not ostentatiously indorse, the suppression of freedom of speech, press and mails. In the case of the 'Firebrand' the arbitrary denial, to wit, by minor officials, of the privileges of the mails in absence of any possible judicial condemnation of the contents, or parts of the contents, of a few issues, which few issues are the only ones incriminated, is an invasion so monstrous and so far reaching in its ominous menace that it seems incredible that the American people have not risen in instant and forever decisive protest and repudiation of the usurpation."

Resolutions were passed, also unanimously, in praise of the life work and in sorrow because of the death, of Samuel P. Putnam and May L. Collins. Not a note of fear of conventionality was there in the wording of the resolutions. Space forbids more than a brief mention of the Congress. The "Truth Seeker" (28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.) of Nov. 27 gives a full report.

The Convention was one of the most successful ever held. Harmony prevailed throughout. The speakers were: T. B. Wakeman, Moncure D. Conway, Dr. W. A. Croffut, M. Florence Johnson, James F. Morton, Jr., Susan H. Wixon, E. C. Walker, Rev. Henry Frank, L. K. Washburn, Henry Rowley and C. C. Moore.

John E. Remsburg is the new President. Otto Wettstein and E. C. Reichwald were re elected Treasurer and Secretary.

WHEN May L. Collins was in Chicago a short time before her death she gave a number of copies of her lecture "A Plea for the New Woman" to us to be sold for Lucifer's benefit. A few of these remain in stock, and will be sold for ten cents each. The picture of the author, contained therein is alone worth the price.

Popular Follies and Crimes.

BY JAMES S. DENSON.

A fool Negrophobic mob at Troy N. Y., tore apart a young white man and a mulatto girl who were looking for a clergyman to marry them. Had it not been for the interposition of the police the young man would have been severely handled. As it was, the couple had to leave town. The man who said that "the m-asses" was the proper spelling was about right, although his remark was an unnecessarily cruel reflection on the genuine quadrupeds.

* * *

In the case of Mlle. Chauvin, the Court of Appeals of France has decided that women can not be admitted to the bar in that country. This should gladden the heart of Mr. Wakeman, for it is another check to woman's entrance into the field of economic independence, thus helping preserve her a little longer an untarnished "angel" dependent upon chivalrous man for her support. I suppose the court of Appeals would not have denied Mlle. Chauvin's right to be the kept mistress of one of its members. Such a position is not in conflict with the "ideal ministry" of woman.

* * *

For a long time Mrs. Charlotte Smith has been waging war against the bachelors. Her motive was not discernible. What there was in it for her we could not clearly see; but as she was zealously advocating political methods of "reform" it was certain there was a prospective "job" somewhere. Now we know what it is; she has indicated the "place" she wants created for her benefit. Every man and woman is to be compelled to marry. To assist in attaining the end sought, a national matrimonial bureau is to be established. The office of United States Commissioner of Matrimony is to be created. Mrs. Charlotte Smith is to be said Commissioner. Salary? Of course! It is hinted that Mrs. Smith may have a competitor for the position. Mr. T. B. Wakeman exploits the same ideas in the Liberal Club, and his admirers intimate that he will stand a very fair show before the committee of congress which will have the disposition of the plum.

* * *

"The Torch of Reason" still flickers feebly in the Oregon woods. Occasionally it flares up in righteous indignation. It will be remembered that it is the ardent defender (and I believe the procurer) of that rule of the Oregon Secular Union which excludes users of tobacco and alcoholic liquors, and social radicals, from the lecture platform and the teacher's chair of that association. In a word, it sets up its opinions as a standard of moral fitness and boycotts all who can not accept those opinions as divine. One would naturally suppose, if he were unacquainted with the genus Pecksniff, that it would be the last paper to prate of "illiberality." But no; it has the audacity to say that a man who stops his subscription to it because of its narrow policy "is not very much of a Liberal." The cheek of it! Will Mr. Hosmer please tell us what there is opposed to Liberalism in the act of a man who declines to support a journal which refuses to permit him and those who agree with him to speak from the platform of the society of which it is the organ? What obligation was Mr. Ruedebusch under to give aid and comfort to the enemy of Freethought? And what does Mr. Hosmer mean by obscuring the issue in this way? "Just because we believe that it is best for our lecturers and teachers to be people who refrain from the habits he [Mr. Ruedebusch] mentions, he will drop us." That is not true, and Editor Hosmer knows it. Mr. Ruedebusch did not drop the fitful Torch because its editors entertained certain opinions concerning the qualifications of lecturers and teachers, but because those editors, precisely like the church in all ages, seek to force their opinions on others by the brute power of majorities. But even were Mr. Hosmer's imputation as true as it is false, he would have no just cause for complaint, for "they who take the sword shall perish by the sword." The "Torch of Reason," having invoked the arbitrament of force, has no business to plead the baby act if met by force. It deliberately chose its court; let it silently abide by the decision of that court. And I want to tell this young man, who thinks he has a commission to shape every Freethought worker to the proportions of his Procrustean bed, that, bad as the tobacco and liquor habits are, and disastrous as he may believe the principles of Social Freedom will prove, it is still true that misrepresentation of an opponent's position is an immoral act, and it is an immoral act for which the only excuse is the fear to let the real views of the opponent be known to the people. It is perfectly natural that Mr. Hosmer, who has taken a leaf out of the book of persecution of the church, should likewise resort to the church's method of blackening the reputation of the victims of bigotry. If Mr. Hosmer can make his readers believe that Mr. Ruedebusch is "illiberal," it will help to blind them to the wickedness of his own persecuting policy.

The Light Bearer Library.

Those who intend to become subscribers to this publication should send in their names, even though not ready to pay the money at present. No. 1, "Variety vs. Monogamy" is the smallest of the series, but is nevertheless an excellent little tract for distribution. Price by mail three cents each; reduced price when ordered in larger quantities.

No 2 will be a larger pamphlet with handsome cover, and will retail at ten cents. The subscription price of the library is twenty five cents a year, regardless of retail price. We need an assured subscription list to enable us to enter the Library as second class matter in the Chicago post office.

Holiday Presents.

When selecting holiday presents, will our patrons and friends remember to read Lucifer's book list, and see whether there is not something therein named that they would like to present to their loved ones as tokens of good will, and as helps to right thinking and right living? In addition to selection of books, we would suggest also a subscription to Lucifer for the coming year as a very suitable New Year's present.

While helping others to useful literature this method of remembering friends would help Lucifer to begin the new year in good shape.

"Three Dreams in a Desert."

Probably no work of the present century has done more to arouse women to thought concerning their dependence upon men than Olive Schreiner's "Three Dreams in a Desert." Sarah E. Holmes, one of the brightest of radical women in America, has just issued an edition de luxe of this charming brochure, bound in handsome flexible cover of green and gold. It is a really artistic piece of typographical work, and nothing could be better chosen as a present to a girl or woman. Supplied from this office at 25 cents a copy or five copies for $1.

At Lucifer Circle, Tuesday evening December 14, Prof. C. Orchardson of Chicago, gave an interesting address on "Socialism," quoting largely from his pamphlet entitled "Looking Forward." The address gave rise to a very lively discussion that was kept up till a late hour. So great was the interest in the views expressed by the speaker, upon the ages-old problem of Individualism as related to Socialism, that a dozen or more copies of the above named pamphlet were sold to members and visitors. The price of this pamphlet is five cents post paid. It may be ordered from this office.

"In Brighter Climes; or Life in Socioland."

BY AUNT ELMINA.

I've read and re-read this interesting book by Albert Chavannes. As I always want others to share all the good things, I call the attention of Lucifer's readers to this little volume.

It is a novel written to show the advantages of sociology and communism—of fraternity and comradeship, in comparison with self-aggrandizement and monopoly. A land where all are happy, joyous and well cared for. Where people do not pray to any of the gods to help the poor, but where all help each other, and there are no poor.

"In Brighter Climes" is full of good, grand ideas, wholesome truths and of pleasant, cheerful pictures of life as it might be.

It is also a love story for those who enjoy the lights and shadows of Cupid's realm. Buy it and try it, and I'll warrant you full value for your investment. Price, 25 cents. Sent from Lucifer's office.

Things as I See Them.

BY LOIS WAISBROOKER.

There are many things in the last Lucifer (No. 688) that quicken thought. One thing with which I am pleased is Mrs. Washburn's idea of the ballot for woman. Sometime since I saw clearly that the ballot in the hands of woman would do more harm than good. I may be heretical in this, but I see in woman's suffrage only an extension of the rule of force and an enforced morality is not morality in any true sense of the term.

True, Colorado and Wyoming may be evidence that woman's votes have driven out certain classes, but driving out is not reforming. Those people are somewhere and plying their vocations; vocations that are the natural result of our present economic and social systems.

I may be considered metaphysical but I beg leave to give my idea of where woman's real power lies—a power that she cannot use till her sympathy is withdrawn from the present system of things because she sees the necessity of a new and better system. To give this idea I must postulate, first, the accepted—the demonstrated truth that all life comes from the union of two factors. Second: The feminine factor is the embodying power. Man quickens, impregnates, woman embodies. Third: Being the embodying, she is of necessity the attracting power. Even when man has taken forcible possession of her it has been because she attracted him. Again: Neither "father God" nor father man can create alone. Yet again: Thought precedes action, and a blending of the two factors is as essential to live ideas as anywhere else, and the sex which is positive in this thought life directs its action in practical life.

In the past, man has controlled the product of the two factors both physically and mentally. The children have been—are still his, and woman's sympathetic life has been his also. He has controlled both to his own ends. True, there is the beginning of a change, but woman does not yet see the law of her own power. She simply thinks to help man to make the present system better. She does not see that, as a whole, it cannot be made better—that it must be superceded.

When she sees this she will no longer give herself to the work of patching that which must be set aside, but will give all her thought-force to the new; but being the attracting power she will still draw man to her side, and as he can do nothing alone, his thought-force will blend with hers on the line of the new.

It will be said that woman's thought-force has gone against intemperance but she has not been able to so control man by it as to remove the saloon, therefore my position is not correct. No, she has not succeeded here because her efforts have been against the results of a false system and not against the system itself. But I will say no more now on this point, but will leave it to such criticism as the friends choose to give, premising, however that when we have sex freedom for woman we shall have it for the race, and it seems to me that all this discussion about variety, etc., is not quite in line, for when woman is free she will decide that for herself.

I agree with Chavannes as to the disintegrating tendency of "The New Ideal" and with Berrier on the importance of the family, but it should be, and in the new order will be woman's family, but to this end there must be economic independence. Bellamy has given us the germinal idea of such independence. Will woman receive, embody, round out that ideal?

I note signs of progress in economic lines with pleasure, also in the line of sex emancipation. During November I have been attending the Universal Spiritualist Society, a meeting of conference from twelve o'clock until four, each Sunday, with only a teh minutes' intermission, and the interest is kept up all the way through. Conditions have been such that I have given my strongest ideas of sex freedom, and have been largely cheered, and last Sunday a sweet little woman who is quite prominent ably sustained my position. On Monday evening I listened to a lady who speaks entranced, her subject being given her. She handled three subjects and well—one of which was: "What kind of government do they have in the spirit world?"

She replied in about a ten minutes' speech, the substance of which was philosophical anarchy—self-government—showed that what prevented such self-government here was largely due to our economic system—said we could not live our best life under it. And in a communication published in the spiritualist "Journal" here, of date Dec. 2, I find the following:

"A great change has to be brought about among the children of earth—a change whereby equality will be the motto, where each will have equal opportunity to advance," and more in the same line. When I remember that I have been publicly insulted in a spiritualist conference for giving out the same ideas, such signs of progress are cheering. Last autumn in the State Convention of the Spiritualist, resolutions were passed, for the lack of which I criticised the doings of the First National Convention, and was told it would not have done to have touched upon the economic question; it would have split the convention all to pieces, but in the State Convention here there were threats of an independent movement if some such resolution was not passed.

Yes, I am very happy to note that "the world does move." Still, there is cause for regret in that the different classes of workers are often so suspicious and denunciatory. The Socialistic Labor party here denounce Debs and the Anarchists—and the latter denounce Debs and the State Socialists. Why not feel that all are honest and doing the best they see?

P. S.—I am receiving no orders for books. Have the friends forgotten that I need bread, shelter and street car fare—yes, and postage and paper? I could speak every Sunday to good audiences were I able, but there is no pay in it, only collection, or door fee to pay hall rent, etc. The landlord gets what is collected.

521 Ellis St., San Francisco, Calif.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Mary C. Parker, Pine Island, Minn.:—I pledge myself to take three dollars worth of books, "Hildas Home," as soon as they are ready. Think I will take five dollars' worth but will not promise positively more than three—half cloth and half paper binding. Hope they will be published.

Ernst Ebel, Findley, Ohio—I will take one copy of "Hilda's Home" in cloth binding and will pay the price three months ahead of the delivery of the book. As a former member of the Topolobampa colony I know the necessity of such literature. The women as a rule are very much opposed to progress and liberty. They believe in the selfish family ideal.

E. C. Leonard, New York:—Please put my name on the list for "Hilda's Home," one or more copies. I've just received sample copies of Lucifer which I will send to friends in the country, and hope you may reap benefit thereby. The paper is very instructive and interesting, and should have a wide circulation. I am an old Spiritualist, eighty-five years old; have always advocated free thought and speech, and am in favor of progress in every department of life. Superstition is a clog to progress. Old orthodoxy is dying hard. Send more copies.

690.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Allie Lindsay Lynch, 5329 Indiana Ave., Chicago:—"Hilda's Home" holds many beautiful thoughts. Its author has taught the truth that tender love is truest purity, and freedom places persons where this enlightenment may give each heart joy. I wish a cloth bound copy in my home, to lend its aid to my own efforts toward reform.

If you can grant me space—because I know many Spiritualists read Lucifer, I'd like to ask these to kindly mail me their full address, if willing to be enrolled as Anti-Christian Spiritualists. I am simply desirous to aid these to band as co-workers. Truth moves onward slowly unless radical minds lend it strength. Long life to Lucifer and its brave staff.

[The above are samples of the letters we are getting in regard to the proposed book. In our next issue we hope to announce that the publication in book form is at length assured and that the work has been commenced. Meantime we ask all interested to let us know how many copies and of what binding they will be responsible for, and when we may expect remittance for the same.]

Books Worth Reading.

FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetism; Albert Chavannes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
"Practical Co-operation;" " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.03
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.03
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.05
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,	.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Victor Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr,	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

"The Adult;" Organ of the Legitimation League of England, contains in its fourth number: Editorial; "Sex Love and Mutability," by Oxford Northcote; "The Last Citadel of Authority," by Robert Braithwaite; "Spiritual Love," by William Platt; "Wanted, A New Dictionary," by Ess Tee; "The Judgment of Paris—Up to Date," by Leighton Pagan. "The Adult" is a neat magazine of twenty-four pages, with attractive cover. Price, 5 cents. Order of Lucifer, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill. Price per year, 50 cts.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.	.10
Bar Sinister and Licit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages.	.25
Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe.	.10
The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution.	.25
The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Roedelbusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and Iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper,	.50
Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference.	.15
Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker.	.10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price,	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " "	.50
A Sex Revolution, " "	.25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " "	.25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth,	2.00
When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Hedcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations.	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen.	.10
Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies	.05

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue,"	By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman,"	By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom,"	By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell,	By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?"	By X.
"Love and the Law,"	By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches,"	By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the chief executive proves that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O 131 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 84. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillieg Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1037, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A nurse provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 131 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 84. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. I., No. 52. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 29, E. M. 297. [C. E. 1897.] WHOLE No. 691

Popular Follies and Crimes.

BY JAMES S. DESSON.

Newspaper "interviews" are so notoriously unreliable that it is not safe to assume that Colonel Ingersoll said what a Detroit dispatch charges him with saying anent Emma Goldman and Anarchists generally. It will be recalled that Rev. H. S. McCowan, of Detroit, admitted Miss Goldman to his pulpit, where she spoke in her accustomed unconventional way. His liberality called down upon the clergyman's head the wrath of his congregation, and he may lose his position. Colonel Ingersoll is reported to have said, in response to questions, that Mr. McCowan probably did what he thought was right, and that Miss Goldman is in all likelihood powerless for harm. Then he is debited with these statements: "All the Anarchist are crazy, and they ought to be treated as we treat the insane. . . . They should not be killed. They should be confined as lunatics. That would destroy the Anarchistic cult and the breed would die out." If Mr. Ingersoll did make these statements, he is most unscientific in his thought, for, rejecting the theological dogma of Free Will, he accepts the fact that men and women are the products of efficient causes, and being the products of efficient causes, men and women of a certain type will continue to appear while the causes that produce that type persist. Essentially, the Anarchist is a man of peace, and he develops violent tendencies only when the wrongs against which he protests become so deeply-rooted and so grievous that he can see no chance for peaceful reform. However, I did not advert to these doubtful utterances of Colonel Ingersoll for the purpose of writing a homily for his benefit, but with the intention of bringing up with a short turn an antiquated disciple of his, who quotes the interview, true or "faked," it matters not, and then comments in this wise:

> We fully agree with what Colonel Ingersoll says. Anarchists and free lovers should be allowed freedom of speech—their papers should not be suppressed, and they should not be arrested or imprisoned unless they are guilty of the violation of some law or the commission of some crime. The very worst thing that can be done with them is to make martyrs of them. That is just what they desire.

H. L. Green is more than ordinarily obtuse, but it is hard to believe that this glaring blunder of his is wholly unintentional. He says that he fully agrees with Colonel Ingersoll, and in the next sentence declares that Anarchists should be allowed freedom of speech, that their papers should not be molested. But if Mr. Ingersoll is quoted faithfully, this is precisely what he would deny them. He would allow them no freedom of speech, he would commit them to an insane asylum. Does or does not Mr. Green understand English when he reads it and commends it? Or was he led to make this exhibition of himself by his desire on the one hand to have the credit of agreeing with Colonel Ingersoll and his fear on the other of offending some of his Anarchist subscribers? Mr. Ingersoll says he would interfere with the freedom of Anarchists by sending them to asylums. Mr. Green says that because he fully agrees with Mr. Ingersoll he would not interfere with the freedom of Anarchists. Did you ever see H. L. Green? No? Well, there hangs his portrait, painted by himself. Look at it. It is photographic in its accuracy.

* * *

Anarchists "should not be arrested and imprisoned unless they are guilty of the violation of some law," remarks H. L. Green. "Some law" is delightfully indefinite. There has never been a tyrant on earth who would not have subscribed with his whole soul to such a declaration of liberty for his subjects. He would have found it a trivial before-breakfast job to manufacture "some" law to give the exception par value. If Mr. Green will substitute "Freethinker" for "Anarchist" he may see the point. And as to the law, suppose he particularize. How would the Sunday law do for a starter?

* * *

"The National Conference on the Christian Principles of Civil Government" has recently been in session in Philadelphia. It was held under the auspices of the National Reform Association (God-in-the-Constitution party). Reactionists of all sorts were there in force. REPRESSION was the dominant idea. DREAD OF LIBERTY was the spur; HOPE OF POWER was the lure. It was the Fifteenth Century projected into the Nineteenth. It was darkness envious of light. It was hate methodically stabbing at the heart of love. It was assumption decrying science. It was authority seeking the death of liberty. There was the mildew of mysticism. There was the formalism of theology. There was the dogmatism of ignorance. There was the meddlesomeness of moralism. There was the cruelty of paternalism. In a word, there was the supreme curse of anti-naturalism.

* * *

Anthony Comstock was a leading light in the God-in-the Constitution convention. He made an address on "purity" and he had his usual meeting "for men only." "The Adversary," in the person of a good friend of mine was among the saints, and he took some notes. He writes me that the Censor told the old, old story about the seventy tons of bad, bad literature his society has seized in the last twenty-five years, and portions of which the chief saint carries around in his grip for the delectation or horrification of possible contributors to the funds of the organization. He is still crying out for a greater strengthening of the law out of which he gets his living. It is well known to radicals that the Censor has always insisted that any possible good intention of the writer or publisher of a book in which there were alleged objectionable passages could not be taken into consideration; that the passages only could be examined, and that their condemnation was the condemnation of the whole work. Now he wants the law so amended that an asserted bad intention may be cognized by the court and jury. That is, if a man should mark with a blue pencil any passage in any book, and if it should be decided that that passage (or picture) might have a tendency to suggest immoral thoughts OF CAST REFLECTION ON GOD'S HOLY BOOK the marker is guilty of a violation of the law against obscenity! This, I suppose, is the sequel of the Wise case in Kansas. Our Christian friends have at last discovered that the Bible can be used against itself, "without comment," and so they are appealing to the civil power in the supposedly Secular republic to help them crush their Freethought opponents. All of this is submitted, without respect, for the consideration of the editors of the "Torch of Reason" of Oregon. As to real and live Freethinkers, they already know what the Censorship is and what its promoters intend it to become. It must be destroyed or it will stifle liberty, utterly. It has shown its whole hand, and we who play against it for the stakes of freedom and growth are fools if we are for a moment deceived.

The Legitimation League.

BY GEORGE BEDBOROUGH.

The Legitimation League of England has had a most successful series of lectures at Holborn Restaurant, London.

On May 27, Mr. Leighton Pagan lectured to a small appreciative audience, in the Phœnix Salon, on "The Judgment of Paris"—new style. Readers of the "Adult" have had an opportunity of judging the quality of Mr. Pagan's brilliant style and witty criticisms of life. He deserves a further tribute of praise for opening the hall—it is easier to lecture to a large audience than a small one, and at the time Mr. Pagan promised to lecture for us we were not certain of being able to find any audience at all. Our members are scattered over the kingdom, and London is one of the most difficult places in the world to find an audience for a lecture of any kind. On the whole our first lecture was a genuine success, and the fact that every subsequent lecture has been attended by ever growing audiences is largely due to Mr. Pagan's excellent opening.

On July 1, Miss Wardlaw Best delivered a lecture on "Which Sex is the Greater Sufferer Under Present Sex Conditions," which has already been reported in Lucifer. The League has lost a most eloquent friend and helper in Miss Best, and we miss her and her handsome paramour at our meetings and reunions.

Mr. Henry Seymour attracted a crowd to the Chinese Salon, a room of larger build than the Phœnix Salon, for his lecture on "The Physiology of Love" on September 6. Mr. Seymour made a great impression on his audience, everyone being struck with his careful phrases and well reasoned arguments. Mr. Seymour's theory of "temperamental adaption" is likely to make its mark in the world of thought, and I hope he will be prevailed upon to give Lucifer readers an article on this subject in the early future.

Mr. Orford Northcote whose articles in the "Adult" have so largely helped to make the success of that journal, lectured on October 5 in a still larger salon, the Council Chamber at the Holborn Restaurant on the subject "Should Sex be Ignored in the Education of Children." Mr. Northcote incidentally quoted Mr. E. C. Walker's fine brochure on this subject, and echoed the general appreciation of that work which all who read it agree to express.

On November 8, Mr. William Platt, a famous writer in England, perhaps I ought to say an infamous writer, whose books on "Women, Love and Life" are tabooed by the press and the public but who is a real poet, and one of the few living writers of great gift of expression really anxious to tell the whole of the truth as he sees it. Mr. Platt is one of the most daring writers living, and by sheer force of ability he will some day compel the world to hear him. He is a believer in a hundred ideals with which I have no sympathy, and he aims at a monogamy which would stereotype most of the evils of present day marriage. He deserves the title of free lover however, for his view that "marriage" to be real, in his opinion must be absolutely independent of law and marriage systems and free from hypocrisy and commercialism. William Platt is a Walt Whitman in his frank, natural, pure, outspoken appreciation of the human body, of nudity, of passion and of every healthy function. A few years of greater knowledge—Mr. Platt is fortunately a very young man—the evaporation of a ridiculous spiritualism which at present disfigures his work—will I venture to prophecy bring William Platt into his proper sphere as the poet of the new sex movement. Fortunately one can rely upon such a man not hiding beneath seemly words the progress of his ideas, which is as inevitable as day following night.

On December 6, Mr. Oswald Dawson lectured on "The Outcome of Legitimation." A full report of the lecture will appear in the New Year's number of the "Adult."

I have left to the last to express how delighted we all were with a surprise visit paid us at the beginning of our sessions by Captain Robert C. Adams. His eloquent address, his unmistakable friendliness, his kindly advice, and his generous encouragement of our young movement will never be forgotten. Captain Adams will never cease to be remembered amongst us, and his genial presence will be looked for again whenever the fates in their kindness again waft his vessel towards our little island and the Legitimation League.

On January 3, 1898, we make another new departure. We have decided to try our fortune at that home of great causes, the best known center of its kind in the whole world—St. James' Hall. We begin with a modest lecture hall in that big building—some day we hope to overflow into the great hall where every great indoor demonstration in London during the past fifty years has shouted defiance to tyrant statesmen and tyrant systems. In England Oxford is regarded as the home of lost causes and St. James' Hall as the birthplace of winning ones. May the augury favor us.

Increase of Wealth. Is it Due to Labor or Capital?

BY J. K. INGALLS.

Mr. Parkhurst in Lucifer, and A. Chavannes in "Modern Philosopher," reviewing my "Reminiscences," speak of interest as a "natural increase," economically owing to the holder of the plant, of the money or of the land employed by the laborer in any productive work.

Now without discussing this as an abstract proposition, it seems necessary to inquire whether a particular increase is due to really natural causes, or to artificial reasons, as the enjoyment of a privileged franchise, or other legal measures, discriminating between persons or classes. It seems to me there should be no difficulty in making this distinction, though I know of no political economist who has ever attempted it, certainly not previous to my showing nearly ten years since, some half dozen broad distinctions, between economic and monopolistic rent; increase from use of land, or from plant, or money.

A point which seems to be still more generally overlooked, is the fact that the "natural increase," is always balanced by the "natural decrease," so that economic rent interest or profit, the existence of which is inevitable, is a minus quantity as often as a plus quantity. That cost of keeping values conserved equals on the whole the benefits of their use. Production and consumption determine supply and demand, which regulate prices in exchange. It is upon the labor, and the intelligence and foresight (add luck, if you will,) of the laborer, which determines the increase arising from its application. The thrifty farmer succeeds on poor land, the thriftless one fails on the best. It is so with manufacturing plants. The big establishment goes to the wall, when not protected by crafty legislation; the inferior one continues and prospers, when not handicapped by partial laws. The merchant who commences business with inherited or borrowed capital, however large, fails in nine cases, where the one starting with small, but independent means, will pull through the most disastrous crises.

Mr. Parkhurst, in his exact statement of the problem, omits to note that capitalists are more willing to let money when interest is low than when it is high; or that they would be still more willing to let it for the purpose of having its values simply conserved from decay, were not our gold and legal tender laws so contrived as to perform that service for them without cost, keeping good the values most liable to shrink and disappear altogether.

Rev. T. K. Beecher tells a humorous story of an interview with Mr. Arnot, the great Elmira banker. Mr. Beecher held twenty double eagles in trust for two wards of his. He wanted to know how the interest could be got out of them which the law required. Mr. Arnot told him he would take them, and give five per cent for their use. Mr. Beecher did not see how he could do that.

"Oh!" said Mr. Arnot, "I let them to Jim Smith for seven per cent, and so make two per cent for the bank."

"I see!" said Mr. Beecher, "and Smith lends them to Jones for nine, and Jones lends them to Brown for eleven, and Brown to Snooks for thirteen."

"No, no!" said Arnot. "Smith uses the money to buy goods and sells them at a profit. We divide the profits as a sort of partnership."

Mr. Beecher asked if Smith did make losses as well as profits, and whether they shared them.

Mr. Arnot replied: "That would never do. That would rob the bank, and your wards too, as you must see!"

This would be the inevitable result where accumulated wealth of any kind shared the losses as it seeks the profits or increase with labor.

The Durrant Case.

BY ALFRED CRIDGE.

Durrant, accused of a most cruel murder of two young girls in a Baptist church in this city in the spring of 1895, and who is under sentence of death, after several appeals, is one of the many cases regarded by the press only in its individual aspect, and as exhibiting the inefficiency and delays of the law. But it might have general bearings of great importance, if the bottom facts, in the nature of causes operating with the absolute certainty, for good or for evil, of all natural laws could be ascertained. The Durrant case is probably one of thousands due to a persistent disregard, by State and by individuals, of natural, including moral law. And the State is the greater criminal in prohibiting the dissemination of a knowledge of those laws. I will therefore assume or suppose what is somewhat probable, as applicable to thousands of other cases, if not to this one.

Suppose that Durrant's father (industrially, I understand, a man faithful and able in his vocation as a mechanic,) acting upon current views and practices sanctioned by both church and state, had a very strong sexual nature, and forced unwilling maternity in the case of this son what the law, outside of marriage, calls rape; or suppose that there was acquiescence, under a distorted idea of "duty." Lust would have been transmitted to the offspring; and that brutal desire which, in the father, was kept within the law, might in the son, endeavor and find expression outside of it.

But more than this. As this son grows up an occupation must be selected. The father was a skillful mechanic; the son may have inherited his ability; but a false pride—the same said to have given utterance to the expression by his mother that her son had access to the best society and had no need to seek that of "servant girls," probably induced the mother to hanker for a "profession" for her children. The daughter becomes an artist; of her abilities in that line I know nothing. The son trains for a physician. Robust in body, with much idle time, showing no special ability in that line, he drags through the routine indifferently, and has therefore a large residuum of physical energy which turns to unbridled lust, finally reaching a most cruel murder.

Who is responsible for all this? I claim that society, the church and the law are, more than the individual. The church and the law sanction and society ratifies what is virtually rape within marriage, thus generating illegal rape and murder.

Again, they are otherwise responsible in that (as to society and the law) a certain direct or indirect prestige is given to professions over other industries. The mediocre physician makes (or at least charges for his services) more than a mechanic of unusual proficiency, and is looked up to where the mechanic is looked down upon. Therefore Mrs. Durrant naturally preferred, without reference to fitness, the profession to the trade. The laws which discriminate against service in favor of privilege; the laws which hedge around the professions with heavy cost, with mystery, with special license, to keep out the "vulgar herd;" these laws and the "society" sentiment (not "the people") which back them, are responsible in the main, for Mrs. Durrant's mistaken choice, which has probably sent her son to the gallows. The church, while not directly responsible, is, by its inaction, responsible for not preaching the gospel of Christ, which is in deadly opposition to all privilege, and for which—not for its views on the hereafter—the authorities of ancient Rome persecuted its believers.

But, his profession having been chosen, young Durrant naturally begins to look out for practice. To get practice he must go into "society"; he must form acquaintances who can pay for a physician's service when needed, (or supposed to be.) He therefore joins a church as a matter of business forethought. He in fact said as much. And how large a percentage of church members is thus made up? Probably a majority. Churches thus become "fashionable club houses." A minister is hired that will draw membership—not merely attendance. He may fill the church to overflowing, but the pews must be rented and money raised to pay the interest on the usual mortgage and other expenses. Here protrudes the cloven foot of the landlord to complete the vicious circle. Churches to secure attendance must be located where population has made the ground valuable, and the landlord rakes in the coin, to raise which the minister must prostitute his talents—a prostitution far more criminal than the prostitution of the person, but which "society" crowns with flowers, and with something more substantial, while the clergyman true to his convictions is fortunate if he can, on his profession, keep the wolf from the door.

What strong moral influence keeping the propensities in check, could there be expected over young Durrant from this source? "Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?"

But let us follow young Durrant in his training for his profession. I do not know what the practice is of the college which he attended in regard to vivisection; but young men of his organization, according to recent researches in that line, would be likely to take much interest in the atrocious tortures of dumb and defenseless animals, being made to believe that thereby he would acquire proficiency. And the claim that this practice promotes lust seems to be well substantiated. The desire to torture brutes, by its gratification, would naturally lead to a desire to dissect, smother and torture women, in connection with the gratification of lust. I claim, then, that the ethics (or want of ethics) of the medical profession are (or may be) largely responsible for intensifying the brutal lust which was probably born with Durrant, but might have been very much lessened and radically modified in its manifestation, but for the malign influences of the law, the church, society and the medical profession. It is these which are mainly responsible for the crime of which Durrant, according to the verdict of the jury, was the willing instrument. The cure for these evil influences is radical, genuine democracy in all things—the exaltation of service and the extinction of privilege, in politics, in industry, in laws, in religion.

But again—the full and explicit discussion of the most important subject which can engage human attention—the natural laws of sex—is prohibited by law, and Moses Harman has served a term of years for calling attention to outrageous violations of these natural laws, which violations are sanctioned by church and state. As long as these gag laws exist, devised to keep men and women in ignorance of their own bodies, wholesale crime must continue. As long as, to use the words of ex-Senator Ingalls, "government is force, politics a battle for supremacy, parties the armies, and the decalogue and the golden rule have no place in a political campaign," there can be no let-up in these horrors. No number of executions, no amount of detective ingenuity can diminish them in the slightest degree. Until proportional representation is imperatively demanded, thousands of more Blanche Lamonts must become human sacrifices at the altar of church, state and society.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1304 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$401.00
S. O. Bishop,	.50
J. Warner Mills,	1.00
Frank Rosen,	1.00

"Firebrand Fund."

The following sums have been received at this office for the benefit of "The Firebrand Group," one of whom, A. J. Pope, is now confined in the county jail at Portland, Oregon, charged with violating the postal laws by depositing for mailing, copies of the "Firebrand" dated Sept. 19, '97.

Previously acknowledged,	$13.00
S. O. Bishop,	.50
B. F. Odell,	.25

"Hilda's Home," Once More.

As partly announced in last week's issue the statement is now made that the publication of the serial story in book form is at length assured. Work thereon will begin at once. As we are dependent on subscriptions for the necessary funds we are compelled to ask those who want the book to send on the price as soon as convenient. The cost to the purchaser will be fifty cents, paper cover; substantially bound in cloth one dollar; postage or expressage paid by us. No serious accident preventing the book will be ready for delivery some time in March next.

As some of the names first sent in for the bound volume have been mislaid, we again ask all who subscribed before this last call for names was made, to drop us a card at once, and let us know how many copies they want, and of what binding; also all who want the book and have not yet subscribed, will please notify us soon, so that we may know how many of each class of binding to get out for the first edition.

AT LUCIFER CIRCLE Tuesday evening, Dec. 21, a good attendance greeted Prof. W. A. Bryan, of the Field Columbian Museum, Chicago, whose subject was "Property Requirement in Marriage Licenses"—an argument for a property qualification before license to marry should be granted by the state. Lillian Harman replied in a paper of about twenty minutes length, taking the opposite view. The usual discussion followed, most of the speakers taking sides against the state socialistic idea. The same subject is to be continued at next meeting, Tuesday eve, Dec. 28. An interesting feature of last meeting was an unsolicited and unexpected contribution for the benefit of the circle, by those present, amounting to six dollars and thirty-five cents. The leading speakers at next meeting are to be Chas. Turner Brown, lawyer; A. E. Gammage, lawyer, president of the Chicago branch of the American Secular Union, and C. S. Wood, physician. On Tuesday eve, Jan. 4, Dr. M. B. Lawrence, Superintendent of the Dunning Asylum for the Insane, will read a paper on "Some Sexual Facts Related to Insanity."

The Outlook.

At this writing, December 23, 1897, Christian calendar, or 297, Brunonian calendar, we have just passed the winter solstice—sunstand—or midnight of the northern solar year. In sailor phrase, "What of the night, watchman?" is a pertinent, a timely question to ask ourselves, as intelligent voyagers on the sea of mortal life.

The answer to this question will depend greatly upon the standpoint of the watchman, or the observer. From the sumptuous parlor of the millionaire speculator in stocks and bonds, or of the "protected" monopolist of nature's wealth—the monopolist of the fruits other men's labor (of brain or hand) the outlook for the present moment, and also for the future continuance of the reign of monopolistic privilege for the favored few—not only in the country called the United States of America, but in all lands whose people claim to be civilized, —the outlook for these favored ones is all that heart could wish, or fancy paint.

On the other hand, from the standpoint of the bare walls, naked floors, broken windows, the empty larders, empty wardrobes, coal-bins, empty purses and empty stomachs of the victims of the various monopolistic social systems—from the standpoint of the unprivileged, of the great non-"protected" masses of human beings, the outlook this freezing wintry morning is anything but rose-colored or inspiring.

The great newspapers of the day, as is well known are nearly all subsidized—owned and controlled by the law-favored classes, and hence it is their interest, their business, to present the rose-tinted outlook, instead of telling the truth as it is. But occasionally we find in them a rebuke like the following paragraph—clipped from yesterday's "Chronicle" (Chicago):

"Everyone," says Mr. James R. Keene, "ought to be glad that his lot is cast in this country." Mr. Keene is credited with a big winning in the stock market, and hence looks at the world through rose-colored spectacles. Abstract patriotism indorses his sentiment, but there are some thousands of coal miners, cotton spinners and unemployed laborers who may question it. Of course we live in the greatest country on earth and we are a free and independent people, subject only to the law of the land and, incidentally, to the pleasure of the trusts. We ought to be happy, as Mr. Keene points out. Yet all of us cannot rig the stock market, and there are some who may even be disposed to say that one can starve to death just as comfortably under an effete despotism as in an enlightened republic. Opinions will differ concerning these matters.

Yes, opinions will differ. It depends upon the environment, influenced, of course, by training, by early impressions, pre-natal and post-natal. It is simply impossible that the lucky gambler in stocks, the law-protected and trust-protected manufacturer, landlord, mine owner, merchant, the government official, railroad magnate, etc., etc., should see things through the same glasses as the "thousands of coal miners, cotton spinners," seamstresses and other wage earners whose wages have been cut to the point of mere subsistence, to say nothing of the millions who can get no work at all, or so little that most of their time is spent in hunting for a job—that is to say, in seeking a master who will, for a beggarly pittance in cash, consent to buy all that is salable in manhood and in womanhood.

Whether the "Chronicle" speaks of the "law of the land" in an ironical way, or in sober earnest it is not easy to see. But what has the land to do with the making of laws? Or, if he means the people who live upon the land, what have the great masses of these to do with law-making? Our laws are made by lawyers as we all know for the benefit of their guild or trust, and for the benefit of those who have the most money to pay for construing and interpreting, the laws of their own making. In other words, the "law of the land" is neither more nor less than a cunningly devised scheme to enable the lazy and dishonest to rob the industrious and honest without danger to the robbers.

The reference to "patriotism," "greatest country on earth," "a free and independent people," and the like, would be amusing were there not so much of the ghastly and the horrible connected with the subject. These catch words and phrases are found to do excellent service in amusing, in diverting the attention of the voting masses while the exploiters get in their work.

That these voting masses can be thus hoodwinked and kept quiet while the gigantic game of robbing in the name of law goes on, and that they can be made to believe that they are the greatest and happiest people on earth, and all because they themselves make the laws and are therefore self-governing, this is the saddest feature, the most hopeless feature in the outlook of to-day. When will it be better? When will the stupid and gullible masses get their eyes open to the real character of the governmental system under which and by which they are robbed and slowly murdered?

It is quite safe to say that no effective change, no real change, for the better can or will take place until there is a radical change in the methods of reproduction of the race itself. If human science, human investigation, has taught anything it is that like causes invariably produce like effects. As indicated in the clipping from the "Chronicle," people suffer from want and even starve to death in this land of boundless resources called a "republic," just as they suffer from want and sometimes starve to death in lands where the natural resources are much less than here, and under governments that do not profess to secure equal rights to all. Patrick Henry once said, when urging separation from the "effete despotism" known as the English monarchy, that he knew but one lamp for his feet and that was the "lamp of experience." If he were alive today he would see that he himself had profited little by the lamp of experience when he urged separation from the British crown. He and his fellow rebels tried hard to found a government in which monarchy, or one man power, would be unknown. If he were here now and were not blinded by inherited superstitions he would see that so long as men are born and bred under the old marital system, the old monarchical, or one-man-power system in the creatory and nursery—the family, or the home life, just so long we can expect nothing better than the old, old division of men into the two classes—rulers and ruled, masters and slaves, despots and serfs, sheep and wolves, pikes and minnows, the narrowly selfish, the capable, the provident and the cunning few, on the one hand, and the incapable, the comparatively unselfish, the improvident and the easily-imposed-upon many, on the other. He would then see the utter futility of changing the form of political government while the family life, from which all governments spring, remains the same.

From Lucifer's standpoint, then, the outlook for any real improvement in societary conditions, including governmental reforms, is hopeless so long as woman is enslaved in her sex life; so long as woman, the chief maker of the home life and the real builder of the race, submits to laws and customs made by man for his own selfish benefit, just so long will her sons grow up tyrants or slaves—the victims of tyrants.

To rouse woman, then, to a sense of responsibility to herself and to her prospective offspring is the first duty of the reformer. All other reforms are good and useful mainly because they assist in making possible and practical free motherhood, the self-ownership of woman in her relation to maternity—the creation of a new and, it is to be hoped, better race. Self-reliant, self-owning, self-respecting mothers must precede self reliant, self-owning and self-respecting thinkers, speakers, workers and voters.

Threatened With Indictment.

The following letter from the author of the "Old and the New Ideal," tells us that the postal censors are active in Wisconsin, as in Oregon and elsewhere:

"Mayville, Wis., Dec. 14, 1897.

"TO MY FRIENDS AND CORRESPONDENTS: During the last few weeks a number of persons sent in the complaint that they had not received the copies of "The Old and the New Ideal" mailed by me, and it now seems that every copy of this book delivered to the Mayville post office since Nov. 15 was retained by the post office department. I demanded an explanation from our Postmaster, who answered that he did not know, and that all mail was promptly forwarded from this office. On Friday, Dec. 10, a man, introducing himself as a United States Post Office Inspector, visited me and explained as follows: Some time ago he received a complaint (from New York) against the mailing of "The Old and the New Ideal." Thereupon he ordered a copy from me and, having no time to read it himself, forwarded it to the United States District Attorney, who declared it to be unmailable. He further informed me that I might expect an indictment by the Grand Jury meeting next January.

"My book unmailable! That would mean that it is lewd, lascivious or obscene! It has been abused in a great many ways, but this is a new and surprising claim against it, which appears simply absurd to me.

"Well, I certainly do not want to act contrary to the Postal Law or any other Obscenity Law, and the sale of 'The Old and the New Ideal' will be suspended entirely until I have proved to the satisfaction of judge and jury that I have the uninvadable right to use the United States mail for the transportation of this book. Yours truly,

"EMIL F. RUEDEBUSCH."

While it is sincerely to be hoped that Mr. Ruedebusch will succeed in convincing "judge and jury" that he has the "uninvadable right" to use the common mails for the transportation of his book, we know from past experience and observation that courts are organized for business; the more cases the more business; the more indictments and convictions the more honor and profit for the prosecuting attorneys and other parasitical hangers-on, that infest and that make up the court house rings; and we know also that so long as these prosecutions are on the side of popular prejudice it is a comparatively easy matter to get indictments and convictions.

We shall anxiously watch for news from this new battle between the "Movement in favor of Ignorance," on the one side and the forces that stand for enlightenment, for freedom of speech, press and mails on the other.

"The Coming Light"

is the name of a new magazine, or an old one in a new dress and with a new name, published in San Francisco by R. L. Bernier. Quoting from the title page we learn that it is a "monthly magazine devoted to higher thinking, higher living and a higher social order," and that "its aims are to liberate man, woman and child, socially, religiously and politically; to educate by every method from symbolism to science, extending from kindergarten to university."

The names of Dr. Cora A. Morse and Dr. Mary A. Janney, appear as "Promoters," and this word seems to mean editors.

The December number is handsomely illustrated, substantially printed in large type on good paper. Among the many able and interesting articles is one by our old friend and acquaintance Prof. J. S. Loveland, whose theme is "Perils which Menace Present Civilization"; also an extended "Memoriam" article commemorating the life and work of the poet singer, James G. Clark—whose recent demise was chronicled in all the reform papers—written by Dr. Mary A. Janney, prefaced by a full page likeness which all who knew the man personally will recognize as true to life. A very attractive feature of the magazine consists in a number of full page illustrations drawn from a lately issued work by Dr. Cora A. Morse entitled "The Yosemite as I Saw it."

Altogether the December number of "The Coming Light" is a bright and beautiful addition to reform literature. Lucifer bespeaks for it, and predicts for it, a large and growing constituency of intelligent and appreciative readers and patrons.

Price, single numbers, ten cents, fifty cents for six months or one dollar per year. Address 621 O'Farrell St., San Francisco, Calif.

There is Opportunity for All Kinds of Work.

BY E. C. WALKER.

I am somewhat astonished at Comrade Lloyd's article in No. 683 of Lucifer. This is not because he does not wish to join the propaganda but because he advises us who favor that to drop it and work along "New Idealist" lines only. It would seem that he, of all men, would avoid the error which is involved in the supposition that all reformers can pursue the same methods. For instance he himself has found it necessary to cut loose from the Philosophical Anarchists, with whom he is, as regards most general principles in close sympathy, and devote himself to the attempted solution of the industria and related problems as a "Free Socialist." But his enterprise in that direction does not prevent his taking an interest in other advance movements. He believes no doubt, that he can help the cause of enlightenment and liberty in more than one way, which is a fact. As I have said previously, there is no necessary antagonism between the aims and methods of the "New Idealists" and the aims and methods of those who have inaugurated the Propaganda. The seeding field is very large and there is room and tasks for every laborer. They need not dispute as to the relative importance of their respective specialities and many of them can work in more than one department.

Mr. Lloyd's second mistake is in assuming that the missionary work of the "New Idealists" is more private than that in which we of the Propaganda are engaged and that the methods he advocates and pursues differ in kind from ours. The "New Idealist" has set out to convince the world that his relations with any and all women are none of the world's business, that it has no right to inquire what sort of associations follow from proximity, and that, in fact, it cannot know what those associations are. This presupposes a vast amount of propagandistic work and propagandistic work the major part of which is necessarily public. It cannot be denied that the publication of books and papers in the interest of New Idealism is public propaganda and the "New Idealists" are just as eager to publish books and papers as are the supposedly less cautious advocates of the National Propaganda. I may be obtuse, but I can see only a difference of degree between the work which Mr. Lloyd favors and that which he condemns.

My friend thinks there is danger in "systematically increasing the circulation of free love literature," and yet he speaks a good word for "Lucifer" and "The Old and New Ideal." Certainly, strenuous efforts are being made to systematically increase the circulation of these two publications. Mr. Ruedebusch sells his book through the news dealers and it is advertised in the radical papers. Lucifer's friends are constantly helping it in all ways possible, many of them having recently contributed to a special Extension Fund. Pray, is there no "system" in all of this? If Lucifer's subscription list can be lengthened by one hundred names within a given period of time by the employment of existing propagandistic agencies without subjecting us to unusual risks, shall we be in much greater danger if we so increase our efficiency as to be able to add two hundred names within the same period of time? As the purpose of Lucifer, "The Old and New Ideal", and all other papers and books treating of the sex problem from the viewpoint of the libertarian is to educate men and women and so increase the number of sex liberations, and as this is precisely the purpose of the propaganda, it follows that Mr. Lloyd's argument is an argument not merely against the propaganda but against all open educational work, against the printing and public circulation of any book or paper dealing radically with sex problems. Mr. Lloyd contributes to Lucifer's columns and so helps make the journal instructive and interesting, thus augmenting its attractiveness and consequently increasing its circulation, and progressively jeopardling all of us, including himself. To be logical, he must cease giving encouragement to any and all forms of public education in this department of life. As we are doing all we can with the agencies now at our command, so we shall be doing no more than all we can when we have added the agency of the Propaganda. Mr. Lloyd is helping us to reach everybody we can now, thus making his offense the same in kind as ours will be when we become able to reach a few more persons.

Another Broadside.

BY JAMES F. MORTON, JR.

I regard C. L. James as one of the most forcible and logical of Lucifer's correspondents. After his vigorous words in No. 686, the opponents of the Propaganda have not a leg left to stand on. It is simple childishness to quibble over trifles, when every spark of liberty yet remaining to us is threatened with extinction. Union is strength, and division is weakness.

Caroline de Maupassant objects to the "Call for Concerted Action," but without giving the slightest reason for her attitude. She is like many pretended reformers, who spend their time and energies mainly in cultivating the fine art of "how not to do it." They are very progressive in theory; but the moment action is proposed, they have nothing but discouraging words to offer. They do not explain how any cause is to be advanced by hanging back, and doing nothing. The Propaganda is simply a concerted movement, which appeals to all friends of sexual emancipation. If we all pull together, we shall accomplish something. Let the laggards fall into line.

It is a mistake to look on the "Call" as simply a pet scheme of Mr. Walker. Doubtless many liberals have for years thought and talked of the desirability of united action; but no definite steps seem to have been taken. On a visit of Mr. Walker to Boston, I broached the matter to him, as I had proposed it some weeks before, in a letter to Lillian Harman. The plan, as I had worked it out, embraced the now familiar features of the Propaganda, including the two classes of membership. Mr. Walker immediately fell in with the suggestion that the time was fully ripe for such a project. He drew up the "Call," which, after receiving several signatures, was published in Lucifer. Believing that what is worth doing at all is worth doing thoroughly, Mr. Walker has devoted his time freely to pushing the matter with his accustomed vigor and ability. It is not a movement to "boom" any individual, or to exalt one set of views over another, but to strengthen the hands of all who contend for freedom and progress.

Mr. Chavannes need have no fear that Lucifer will be weakened by the direction of activity towards the Propaganda. The officers of the society are all friends of Lucifer, and regard this paper as indispensable to the lovers of freedom.

I have received some interesting letters from various New Idealists. As I could not acknowledge all personally, let me say that it is gratifying to know how many men and women have the full courage of their convictions, and have well learned the lesson of entire liberty.

1 Lynde St. Place, Boston.

Reply to Critics.

BY LEROY BERRIER.

I feel myself something like a duck in a rain storm just now. The criticisms and —— in Lucifer fall upon me thick and fast, and as yet, they have not succeeded in penetrating or ruffling my feathers. Let it rain, afterwards comes the sunshine, flowers, birds and beautiful women.

If the editor is willing I will expose myself again. Elsie Cole Wilcox's reply deserves consideration. I always enjoy hearing from the ladies on this great subject of sex life. This article evidences the fact that my position is not understood, therefore I will endeavor to briefly state it.

I believe in free dissemination of knowledge pertaining to the sexual natures and relations. Sexual intercourse, in itself, to me is no more indecent than social intercourse. I view the sexual organs as I do the hearing and seeing organs. I believe that human welfare and happiness depends upon the recognition of the fact that every human organ and faculty is decent, should be properly educated, and exercised under proper conditions.

Yes, I believe in "freedom not license," and "my ideals" have nothing to do with either, for there is a natural and scientific test. Freedom in no way invades equal rights. License, as I have used it, means the granting of a special privilege which invades equal rights.

The only reasons for society's interference with the sexual relations in any way are: (1) to secure social welfare and progress and (2) to restrict invasions of equal rights, and I do not mean by this the equal rights of one sex, but of both sexes. If all laws existed for the realization of the above ends, they would only be active in case of a deviation from lines of action that lead to those ends. As matters now stand, the marriage laws, although imperfect, are passive where there is no desire on the part of either man or woman to deviate from these lines which always tend toward the coherent, stable and harmonious.

Yes, "my ideal sex relations" would be coherent, stable and harmonious, but I do not wish to be understood to hold that our present relations are perfect in those respects. It is their tendency however.

I think that I desire reformation of the sex relations as strongly as any of the Lucifer readers. The sex relations of the major portion of the human race are haphazard and often result in ill health, unhappiness, loveless homes and unfit offspring. The abolition of the home, however, is not the reform to change this condition.

I should like to know something about that "free love" of which I have no conception. If that "free love" means love(?) for more than one and expressed by sexual intercourse, I confess the lack of a kind of "breadth" that would allow me to appreciate it. I have always thought that I was enjoying free love in the same sense that the needle of the compass has freedom: it is under natural law.

I know of men who say they love all or many women, and they desire to sex with them. That desire seems to be all there is to their love, and they do not wish to assume the least responsibility. I ask my critic, which form of love she would prefer to have sex relations under, the love for her alone or the love bestowed upon many?

Can it be possible that love is killed by the mere thought that there are laws for the purpose of prohibiting action that would surely kill it sooner or later?

I do not believe in prostitution under the marriage bond, and all sexual intercourse that is not the culmination and expression of love (a relative love) is prostitution. I do believe in the prohibition and prevention if possible of action that will kill love. Why? because I believe for many reasons a permanent love is the most conducive to the welfare and happiness of the race.

My critic says, "Do not fear, Mr. Berrier, if two people are drawn together by the power of love they will stay together as long as it is mutually agreable for them to do so." Yes I believe this, and I also believe there is no danger of thoughts of imagined "chains" killing it.

My principle aim is to disseminate knowledge that is conducive to the endurance of love and the welfare of offspring. It is true, I do not wish to interfere with the monogamic family. It is also true that the family as now constituted may "serve its purpose, and in the course of evolution pass away." I only know that in this stage of evolution it seems to be bettr adapted to secure the desired ends than any other sex relations. The family, or the living together and exclusive devotion of one man and one woman to each other, is born of their natural desires.

What does Mr. Ruedebusch offer as a remedy for the home "devoid of love"? Simply its abolition. See his article in No. 677 of Lucifer. Because husbands and wives after establishing through love, a home, which constitutes the family, violate the natural laws that govern the endurance of love, Mr. Ruedebusch and others wish to abolish the home. I do not think for one moment that the home and family as institutions need any defense or special efforts made to uphold them, for ar long as they make possible the realization of our greatest desires they will continue to exist. My aim is to remedy the loveless home by teaching the laws that govern the endurance of love, while Mr. Ruedebusch and other varietists shut their eyes to those laws and say there are loveless homes, therefore we will abolish the home.

No, the present indiscriminate haphazard procreation is not satisfactory, but this procreation is not due to the monogamic family by any means, it is due to ignorance and the lack of a true interest in the welfare of the human race.

This communication is already too long and must be closed. In the near future I hope to show the physiological affects of variety. I think it is possible to prove to every thinking and sincere person of conscience, that varicty is not what we want. Of course there are consciousless men and frivolous women whom no argument can affect. They are only influenced by social powers.

"Reminiscences of an Octogenarian", referred to by J. K. Ingalls in this issue, is a work well worth the perusal of all reformers. It is the summing up of the experiences and observations of a long and very useful life. Sent from this office for forty cents, in boards, or twenty cents paper cover.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Frank Rosen, Washington D. C.:—The herewith enclosed three dollars, will pay for your paper, one dollar for "New Humanity;" one dollar for yourself, in order to drink a bottle of wine. With best wishes for many returns of a happy New Year.

S. O. Bishop, Wichita, Kas.:—Enclosed find order for two dollars and fifty cents—fifty cents for the "Firebrand"; fifty cents for Lucifer's Extension Fund; fifty cents for "Hilda's Home"; one dollar to renew subscription to Lucifer.

[For the "Firebrand Group" as well as for the encouragement given to Lucifer and its work we sincerely thank our old time friend and faithful co-worker, for his short and businesslike letter. M. H.]

Dr. E. B. Foote Jr. New York City.:—Enclosed find receipt for bill paid and my "Xmas" for Lucifer Circle. Suppose you call it a "V" for Moses and a "V" for Lillian and the baby. I havent read "Hilda." Can't easily keep track of such a thing in pieces. You may, however, count on my taking two dollars worth if you get it out. I shall then find chance to read it.

[The profoundest thanks of the beneficiaries of the above, is but poor acknowledgment, or return, for this generous token of fraternal regard. May the shadow of the good doctor of minds and healer of bodies, never grow less.

L. H. and M. -]

James Freeman, Bloomington Ill.:—I want to sa to you, by all means, don't fail to publish "Hilda's Hom ' in book form. I will take a half dozen copies, (paper covers,) for free distribution Will try to induce others to buy I think it will prove a grand educator. Wishing you the greatest success in your labor for humanity, I am always your friend.

691.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

[Such letters as the above encourage us greatly. Col. Freeman, (by which warlike title he is generally known, though a man inclined always to peace and not to war) has been a very generous helper to Lucifer and to "Our New Humanity" for several years. In his capacity of President of the "Mississippi Valley Spiritualist Association" he has had it in his power to introduce our educational work to hundreds of progressive and liberal minded people. M. H.]

THE CLOSE of the old year and the beginning of the new, are now here. Will our friends whose time has expired or about to expire, kindly renew for another year? And if in arrears, will they kindly add the arrearage to the renewal?

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetarism; Albert Chavennes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
Practical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.05
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,	.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.,	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.25
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.10
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.25
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.01
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	.20
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.25
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.10
These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.	.15

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in a radical reaction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

"The Adult;" Organ of the Legitimation League of England, contains in its fourth number: Editorial; "Sex Love and Mutability," by Orford Northcote; "The Last Citadel of Authority," by Robert Braithwaite; "Spiritual Love," by William Platt; "Wanted, A New Dictionary," by Ess Ti e; "The Judgment of Paris—Up to Date," by Leighton Pagan. "The Adult" is a neat magazine of twenty-four pages, with attractive cover. Price, 5 cents. Order of Lucifer, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill. Price per year, 50 cts

Elmina's Bequest. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.	.25
Bar Sinister and Lecit Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages.	.50
Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe.	.25
The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution.	.25
The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper,	.50
Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference.	.25
Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker.	.10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price,	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " "	.50
A Sex Revolution, " "	.25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " "	.25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth,	2.00
When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations.	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen.	.05
Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies	.05

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue,"	By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman,"	By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom,"	By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell,	By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?"	By X.
"Love and the Law,"	By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches,"	By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reforms, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Marsette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Emma Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va. We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O 121 Ladalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 121 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 1. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JANUARY 5, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 692

Anglo-International Anthem

Prosper the English tongue!
Where'er its words are sung,
Let slavery die!
May the pure English speech,
Unto all nations reach,
And every creature teach
Glad freedom's cry!

Prosper the rights of Man!
English, American,
Australian, rise!
Establish equal right!
Enlighten error's night!
Abolish envy's blight!
Prosper the wise!

Prosper the Reign of Peace!
Let wars and conflicts cease!
Prosper the good!
Banish the strife for gain!
Vanish the workers' pain!
'Stablish on land and main,
Man's Brotherhood!

Liberty, Learning, Love
Be Triune power above
All ills of life!
United English Race!
Proclaim in every place,
The Golden Age of Grace,
The end of strife!

—Robert Chamblet Adams.

Midway, B. C.

Paragraphs.

BY REV. SIDNEY HOLMES.

Denunciation is not argument.

Money and marriage are the principal causes of crime.

A marriage license is a permit for conjugal licenticuseess.

To say a thing is bad is one thing; to prove it is another.

Marriage is a legal union. A harlot is a non-union prostitute.

Every person believes in freedom for himself, but most persons think everybody else needs restriction.

Another year has begun but the prosperity promised by Mark Hanna and President McKinley is still tied up by the monopolists.

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing" is the cry of those who have little knowledge and would monopolize it. Strange, isn't it?

According to the Bible, woman first discovered the goodness of the fruits of the tree of knowledge and man has been trying to keep her away from it ever since.

Nine tenths of the crimes which are said to be due to the use of alcoholic liquors are in reality caused either indirectly by the present money system or directly by the present marriage system.

A man was recently sent to jail in Chicago for stealing a pig's foot. Before he was released his wife was sent to an insane asylum and his baby died. But what of it? Pig's feet cost money and women and children can be got for the asking.

Eric Hollandt jumped into the Chicago river last week because the woman he loved was the property of another man. "I never told her I loved her," he said. "I could not, for she was married." The churches tell us we should try to be like Jesus. Who ever heard of a man becoming jealous because his wife said she loved Jesus?

Popular Follies and Crimes.

BY JAMES S. DENSON.

The Georgia House of Representatives, having passed the bill for the protection of 200 pound youths who might get hurt in football games if left to their own devices, refused to restrict the employment of children in factories. There is nothing like consistency!—"Evening Sun."

He must be innocent indeed who expects statists to be consistent. Of all inconsistent journals, the "Sun," of New York, is well to the front. It is a good match for the Georgia legislature.

* * *

The mayor of Reading, Pa., was asked by the local clergy to forbid a certain theatrical performance. He refused to do so until he had a report from a committee of secular officials. He got the report and was justly indignant at the priestly slanderers. Upon this the New York "Sun" remarks that "we all know the excitability of the clerical mind when on the quest for impropriety." And the wanton wildness of the clerical imagination.

* * *

Judge McMahon, of General Sessions, New York, said a short time ago, during the hearing of a case where two policemen swore that they had obtained entrance to a house by falsely representing themselves as sent by a friend of the occupant—"I believe most firmly that a policeman who lies in the ordinary course of his duties will lie with his hand on the Bible." That is, an officer who will lie to induce persons to commit alleged crimes will lie when he goes into court to testify against them. If all courts held this view there would soon be an end of Comstockism and Parkhurstism. Incidentally, Judge McMahon gives some valuable testimony as to the value of an oath taken on the Bible or with lifted hand.

* * *

A man in Bridgeport was married for ten years and had several children before his relatives discovered the facts. They came out through his sending some beer to his home by the hand of his little boy. He was arrested for selling intoxicants to a minor. Then he took the judge aside and let him into his long-kept secret. It appears that he had an invalid sister who was opposed to his marrying. "Don't let a wife come between us," she begged him. "No woman can love you more than I do, Jimmy." So, to please his sister, Donahue kept his marriage a secret for a decade, visiting his wife and children only occasionally and by stealth. This is another result of the ignorance in which it is fashionable to keep girls. Had this sister been decently educated she would have known that, no matter how much she might love her brother, that love could not possibly satisfy him. Her simplicity was at once comical and pitiful, and it was at the same time the shame of the church which makes stupidity a virtue.

* * *

The W. C. T. U. protested against the acceptance of Macmonnie's famous "Bacchante" by the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Their objections were not considered valid, and at last the bronze was put on exhibition. Then the good women swarmed into the Museum on the first day of the opening. They wanted to see the statue they had denounced without seeing it. They were not looking for anything else. Said an attendant:

The curious part of it is, that not one of all these women was ever here before. I'm positive of this, because we learn to know the faces of our visitors pretty well, while the habitues of the place, of coorse, become like old friends to us. No, it is the first time the white-ribboners have so honored us, and from the remarks let fall by some of them I should say it was their first visit to any museum.

No doubt the attendants were right in their opinion that their new visitors knew nothing practically about art. Their specialty is theoretical moralism. As Christians, they have been taught that the unclothed human body is indecent and, of course, any representation of the vile must partake of the nature of the original. Going to the Museum to see the Bacchante was probably their first lesson in Rationalism—that is, their first attempt to get at facts before formulating conclusions.

* * *

Miss Marie Prevoncha, a professional nurse, brought suit against the city of Sandusky, Ohio, for injuries to her leg received by a fall on the sidewalk. She wanted $5,000. When the cause came on for trial, the attorney for the city raised a point as to the nature of the injury, and insisted that the jury should have an opportunity to judge for itself. "Never!" Miss Prevoncha fairly hissed, as she pointed her finger at the city prosecutor. "The demand is monstrous." The prosecutor insisted and quoted authorities. A long argument ensued. The judge finally decided that it would be "indelicate" to enforce the demand. The case went to the jury, which returned a verdict against the plaintiff. Of course the jury did just right. The demand of the city was fair and equitable. The judge showed his weakness in the ruling he gave. Any person demanding damages for negligence or other cause and refusing to permit those who are to pass upon the claim an opportunity to examine the part said to be injured, by that refusal invites and should receive an adverse verdict. Such a refusal at once raises a suspicion of the honesty of the claim. The demand for exemption from such a just test is "indelicate" to a degree that may well be called "monstrous." For a professional nurse, of all women, to put in the plea of the uneducated prude, of the green country girl, is ridiculous. And by so doing she attracts ten times the disagreeable attention she would if she quietly acceded to the simple and natural request of the defendant.

* * *

The dailies bring the news that not long since a Miss Clara Hoffman, "one of the most talented pupils of the Cincinnati Art School," "died from a shock to her modesty." It seems that a fellow pupil, a young man, in a spirit of fun, dared her to take a boat ride with him on the Ohio River, in the dark. In the same spirit she accepted the challenge, and they started upon their adventure.

Upon reaching a dark spot in the current, Horsfall thought to carry the jest further by declaring that he was going in swimming from the boat. Miss Hoffman at first supposed that her escort was only talking, but she nearly fainted away when he began to divest himself of his outer garments. Despite the girl's cries, protests and screams, Horsfall deliberately took off his shoes, coat, vest, trousers, and even his shirt, and plunged into the water. Miss Hoffman dropped into the bottom of the boat in a semi-hysterical fit before she discovered that Horsfall had on a complete bathing suit under his other clothing. As soon as the young artist discovered his companion's condition he hurried ashore with her, and took her home. The next morning she was prostrated with an attack of brain fever, from which she never rallied, dying in a raving delirium.

One is curious to know what sort of an "Art School" it is whose pupils die because they suppose they have seen the uncovered skin of a human being. Such a school certainly should be discouraged in all proper ways. It is exceedingly fortunate for the race that this young woman received the shock to her modesty at an early stage of her career. Her line ended most opportunely. Her death is one more item in the debit column of Humanity's account with supernatural moralism.

Personal Responsibility.

BY JOHN BADCOCK, JR.

I don't often see Lucifer, not having much inclination for reading controversial matters—for argufying disturbs my equanimity, makes my head hot and my feet cold, keeps me awake at night time, and bilious and ill-tempered the next day—but Bedborough dropt me two recent numbers of Lucifer just now, and I find myself involuntarily on the war path over what may appear a quibble, but it is really much more.

I read Wm. Gilmour's letter in your issue, No. 685, referring, as far as I can judge, to a case of desertion by a man of his pregnant sweetheart; and in Wm. Gilmour's penultimate paragraph I find these consoling (?) words: "Each acted egoistically (for self-satisfaction) therefore no condemnation for either of them." What Mr. Gilmour doubtless means is that there is no moral or religious condemnation due against them. But it is not sufficient to say that. I have not to convict a tiger or a flea of blame or moral guilt before killing either—neither have I with human beings before taking offensive or defensive actions against them. Of course, we don't require any legal, or ecclesiastical, or ethical authority to incite us to take action against all those ill-usages which hurt us. But rather than relieve mine enemies, such as the deserters or ill-users of women and children, from legal or moral fetters and castigations, I would see that these served my purpose, rather than that the said enemies should escape altogether from being nipped in the bud. The precise measures of expediency applicable to any given case I do not intend to approach, but a reliance upon the forces that are ideal, such as persuasion, which might suffice in a more perfect state of society, might, in these days, be equivalent to absolute self-sacrifice of the innocent.

What Wm. Gilmour suffers from, as I see also in his letter against the ballot, is Auberon Herbert's anti-force teaching. I used to suffer in the same way. But now, perceiving that Force Rules the World, I perceive also, that if there's "no condemnation for either of them" in the case up, there's equally no condemnation of anything. But at once, arises the need for my measuring my forces with all forces against me. It is on this point that I think Wm. Gilmour's statements require supplementing. When one has got rid of a fetish one is apt to elevate, or speak lightly of many things and actions heretofore condemned; without perceiving that there may be other grounds than the superstitious condemnation of certain actions. Or, better still, leaving blameworthiness altogether out of account, we perceive that it is needful for us to take offensive and defensive actions against certain persons (with or without any abstract sanctions) for the sake of our own safety or permanance or the complete dominance of the best types.

What spoils the Reverend Benjamin R. Tucker's advocacy of a limited liberty (limited to adults) is that he is a slave to a principle—a principle of liberty worded by himself and some others. Not finding therein any prohibition of parental cruelties so long as parents only torture "their own" children, he at once acquits these brutes, and not only so but urges that offensive actions should be used against any outsiders who come to the rescue of such tortured children.

Talk about government by Act of Parliament! Government by a principle would be far worse, because less alterable by altering circumstances. The editor of "Egoism" is, equally with Tucker, a slave of the same principle. If they were both only more egoistic in their philosophy they might see that to fight the enemies of society the sanction of their principles is no more required than is the sanction of the church. As it is, they give themselves away—erect an Anarchist church for the promulgation of an Anarchist morality, with the startling result that the very worst enemies of society, the most degraded as regards susceptibility to all tender and beautiful influences, are to go free even though they commit the most revolting crimes we can conceive of! The bearing of these observations upon the case up I hope you see.

Leyton, England.

"Egoism," etc.

BY C. L. JAMES.

In Lucifer 687, Albert Chavannes says "All evolutionists—and I believe it embraces (?) the majority of the readers of Lucifer—recognize in the attainment of happiness the only correct standard of conduct." In the October "Egoism," "Tak Kak" says "A course of reading in history, philosophy and science, especially standard literature on evolution, together with personal observation . . . . will gradually convince any intelligent person that all voluntary acts, including a certain class of acts popularly but erroneously called non-voluntary, are caused by motives acting upon the feeling and reason of the Ego." I disbelieve these dogmatical assertions, which are offered as the basis of reform, and I apprehend their authors will hardly say that is because I have not read "the standard literature on evolution." The study of evolution teaches me that the actions of the least evolved animals are automatic (non-voluntary). It teaches me that most human actions are automatic.

I am sure "Tak Kak" does not breathe in consequence of motives acting upon his feeling and reason. He breathes because he cannot help it. He could not stop if he tried, except indirectly, by paralyzing his breathing apparatus. "The standard literature on evolution" also teaches me that habitual actions become automatic. A drunkard, who signs the pledge one day and returns to his cups the next, has not changed his mind about the expediency of drinking. He resumes that vice, as he will tell you himself, because he cannot help it—just as "Tak Kak" would fail if he tried to hold his breath for any time.

Finally, "the standard literature on evolution" teaches me that all action is automatic to a great extent. Automatic processes make taste; and taste determines choice, wherever there is any. Its fundamental law is a law of automatism. It is that men seek to gratify their desires with the least exertion. And this is merely the subjective statement of the mechanical principle that motion follows the line of least resistance.

Moreover, personal observation teaches me that seeking happiness is the last way on earth to get it. It teaches me that no man knows what in particular would be for his own happiness; still less for another's; and, of course, least for all men's. Those who sought their own happiness systematically and those who sought that of others on an extensive scale have made a sad mess of it. Vitellius was devoted to his own exclusive happiness. Robespierre, Torquemada, and those charitable monks who made pauperism an institution, sought their own happiness less directly through what they thought for other peoples'. The examples are not encouraging. Happiness, obtained or bestowed, is accidental. The real spring of action, which determines its normal course, is self-expression. It is force liberated within the organism, and acting automatically till it meets some check which the voluntary ganglia may be employed to overcome.

This is clearly an Anarchistic conclusion. It is also Optimistic. The bad results of seeking happiness lead to dismal conclusions about the destiny of a race assumed to be always doing so. Like some genie architect of sepulchral gloom, the Pessimist lays out his scheme of human life, showing how all roads by which happiness is pursued end at dead walls, in pitfalls, or in endless labyrinths. But the whole City of Despair vanishes at this one disenchanting spell: "Men seek primarily their own way. Happiness is but an incident of doing one's own work. Let men be free to do that, and let them be encouraged to do that, and the rest will take care of itself."

Thinking thus, I am sorry to see so many whose sympathies are with us, mounting the murrain-rid jade of Epicurus' obsolete philosophy. I know there are some eminent evolutionists among them. Herbert Spencer is an Utilitarian. But Darwin was not. His analysis of Conscience, its origin, and its functions, in the "Descent of Man," is a masterly piece of work. The reason some evolutionists of merit are Utilitarians is, I think, that they share in some measure that imitative instinct whose perfect work is seen in inferior writers without their originality. These writers, though they mean well, are mere eclectics. They put together Anarchism, Communism, Utilitarianism, Materialism, sex reform, evolution, etc., not synthetically, by deducing them from any common principle, nor yet analytically, by drawing out the positive truth contained in each speculation, but parrot-fashion, because they know each to be current—and heterodox, which means always rather alluring. If they thought, as well as read, more, they would see that these isms have no normal connection—that some are scientific truths, some moral reforms, and some silly metaphysical systems which had their trial and failure long ago. Not till they take that trouble can they be so equipped as to do service in the modern battle against the modern weapons of conservatism.

* * *

Elsie C. Wilcox deprecates the use of so much valuable space in fights among the Idealists, and advises them to be content with liberty for each to try the ideal he prefers. This is excellent advice; but in one point of view the fight among the Idealists is a gratifying sign of progress. It is gratifying for this reason—that the Dualist is no longer in evidence. All the Idealists are for variety of one sort or other. This shows the number of outspoken varietists to have increased so much that they monopolize the progressive papers. The enemies of freedom for variety in general have been converted, died, subsided, or hitched their wagons to the star of agnostic conservatism—pilot H. L. Green. "The world do move!"

* * *

The Portland outrage is by far the most flagrant of its kind, and seems, through its desperate character, to indicate that the perpetrators are floundering in a trap of their own construction. When A. J. Pope wrote, in Lucifer, that all letters might safely be sent to his cell No. 5, I addressed him there; and knowing that he would not have a lawyer, gave him all the best advice I could about defense. I was surprised at getting no reply; but after his last, in Lucifer, I know the conspirators stole my letter to him, as they did his to others. I now advise Addis, or whoever of our Oregonian comrades sees this, to engage a lawyer, and, without waiting to be prosecuted, proceed against Murphy & Co. There is no question these gentry have made themselves both civilly and criminally liable.

For moralists to talk of altering morals without altering environments is no wiser than for a doctor to poultice a wooden leg.—Ben Tillett.

An injury done to one is a threat held out to hundreds.—Publius Syrus.

It is the authors, more than the diplomats, who make nations love one another.—Tennyson.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus: so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1304 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

ROSA GRAUL, author of "Hildas Home," has written a reply to her critics, that will appear in next weeks issue. In this reply she speaks of divorce, of reconstruction, of Dianism, etc.

As stated last week, the publication of Hilda's Home in book form is now assured; work thereon will be pushed as rapidly as our means will permit. Those who have subscribed for one or more copies will confer a favor by forwarding the price—fifty cents per copy in paper cover, and one dollar in cloth. Unwillingness to incur debt for anything induces us to make this request. A little from each will make this burden light.

New Year and New Volume.

With this issue we begin a new year and a new volume. While not all that could be desird we are glad to know that our Light-Bearer has not defaulted, but has made regular connectionsevery week during the year just closed; and are glad also to be able to say that notwithstanding the last "great financial conspiracy" the prospect now is that with the help of earnest and faithful coworkers it will continue its weekly risings for the year 298—Brunonian calendar.

With cordial greetings, once more, we extend the hand of fellowship and hope, to all who work for better conditions for the race of human kind—especially for the conditions that will secure to the unborn the right to be born well, if born at all.

Charity Cheaper than Justice.

As object lessons showing the stage of development, social or collective as well as individual and personal, of races or nations of human beings, the annual festivals, the holidays, the celebrations, religious or semi-religious, of such peoples are significant, interesting and useful.

Among the various aggregations of people inhabiting the American continent—Indian tribes excepted, and among European nations—Turkey excepted, the annual festival called Christmas, "Christmas tide," or "Christmas week," is by far the most generally observed of all the annual holidays or seasons of general relaxation and cessation from labor, and of abandonment to indulgence in social enjoyment and merry-making.

The origin of this custom dates back, doubtless, to prehistoric times when, in the northern hemisphere of the earth, the sun—then worshiped as a god, seemed annually to die, and to remain buried in darkness for the space of several ordinary days and nights, and then to come forth resurrected, and to begin again his annual journey through the heavens.

The absence of the sun—causing labor to be difficult and unprofitable, invited to repose, to relaxation, and the return of the sun-god, bringing promise of renewed life in the vegetable world, with assurance of a bounteous supply of the means of support for animal life, all these would naturally suggest a holiday or season of rejoicing, merry-making, exchange of gifts for remembrance, etc.

So much for the origin of the festival now known as Christmas. It matters little to us as to how and when this festive anniversary originated, or how it came to be thus named in modern times. We are now concerned mainly with the manner of its celebration, and with the general significance and tendencies of the customs or methods of celebrating this national or international holiday.

Taking up a copy of the New York "World" of December 26, the big heading on first page tells us that the "Vanderbilt Wealth Entertains Whole Towns in England and Vermont;" that "British Traditions of Hospitality have been Outdone by the American Duchess;" that the "Green Mountains Never Knew Such Generous Hosts," etc., etc. Whole pages of the "World" are given up to descriptions of how the poor were made happy by gifts from the rich and the charitably inclined.

In Chicago the Sunday papers told the same story. Churches and charitable associations vied with each other in feeding the hungry thousands of this the greatest inland city of the western continent. At what is called the "Pacific Mission" on Van Buren Street, it is reported that on Christmas day, "by two o'clock, some 3,000 meals had been eaten by 900 men." This would mean more than three meals to each man. This is apparently explained by the statement that "each visitor was allowed as many 'helpings' as he cared to ask for," each "helping" being reckoned a meal. Only a few women were there and apparently no children. The account of the day's work for this "mission" says, "The proceedings were interspersed with short gospel services under the direction of Harry Monroe."

At the "Armour Mission," the Sunday school children of that institution were treated to spectacular performances, "a scene of dazzling beauty," besides being bountifully fed. "P.D. Armour forgot the cares of business and the excitement of the wheat pit, as he mingled with the children," says the report.

City and county authorities provided feasts for the inmates of the various institutions under their control, including the asylums and prisons.

Of the many agencies, however, through which the rich and the well-to-do of Chicago dispensed their charities the "Salvation Army" appears to be the favorite. For weeks beforehand the "army" has been calling for money; the city has been canvassed by the "corporals" and "captains" of this now ubiquitous organization, asking for money and goods of many kinds, for Christmas donations to the poor. On Chrismas day, as the "Chronicle" reports:

> There was welcome in the smiles of the waiters; there was welcome in the informal "Merry Christmas" of the door tenders, and there was welcome under every cap and poke bonnet that flosted about under the rafters of Princess rink. For two days three wagons and a score of army laddies and lassies have been engaged in the transportation of supplies for the big Christmas feast. Tickets have been issued to the poor, but dinners were given to many who came without their tickets, but whose wan faces and pinched lips attested the truth of their statements when they said they were hungry.

Before night the report says there were five thousand two hundred who had eaten Christmas dinner at the "army mess table." At the head of the first column of hungry applicants was a negro boy who said he had had three "narrow escapes from starvation every day for a month," and who evinced his hunger by carrying food to his mouth with both hands.

> But there were others who ate with both hands, who wished they had more hands and more stomachs and that Christmas came every day instead of once a year. From 11:30 until 4:30, without a moment's interruption, the army corps continued to dole out turkey, chicken, beef, cranberry sauce, potatoes, vegetables and coffee. When the hour for closing arrived there was still a large scattering of hungry people on the outside, but none of these went away unsatisfied, notwithstanding the mild rules which the army had imposed upon the festivities for its own protection.

The next paragraph is significant, as showing the main source of these supplies:

> Nearly all the supplies were donated to the army by commercial houses and private individuals. No account was kept of the turkeys and chickens contributed to the feast. "Oh, my, I couldn't say," replied Adjutant Thomas Gassey in answer to a question. "We have had oceans of turkeys and chickens. Besides, we had 1,600 pounds of beef, thirty or forty bushels of potatoes, eight boxes of oranges, six barrels of apples, three barrels of cranberries, three barrels of prunes, eighteen boxes of cookies, 900 pounds of pork and large quantities of turnips, cabbage and potatoes and 1,500 loaves of bread." It is estimated that not less than 3,000 pounds of turkey and as many more of chicken were dispensed during the day.

Another very suggestive paragraph reads thus:

> The northwestern division corps band, consisting of twenty pieces, played during the day and a short religious service preceded each meal. "Feed a man first, and then you can convert him," said Colonel French, and the hungry company that munched away at savory viands breathed a grateful "Amen." Familiar hymns were sung during the interims and not a few of the guests joined in the chorus.

In his summing up the "Chronicle" man says, "Practical Christianity was exemplified in the splendid efforts made by the Salvation Army and kindred organizations to relieve the hungry and to provide Christmas cheer for countless thousands."

In thus saying the newspaper man is eminently in the right. Yes, practical Christianity, being itself largely responsible for the system of economics, and of general morals, political and social, that breeds paupers, imbeciles and criminals, it is only reasonable to expect that in its practical working Christianity should seek to perpetuate its system, to make the people contented with the working of the system that makes Christian charity a necessity.

Christianity does not want justice; does not mean that what a man sows that shall he also reap. Its basic principle is moral bankruptcy—a scheme whereby sinful man can escape justice. Christianity means "grace," "favor," "charity." Charity and justice will not mix; they are mutually destructive principles.

Christianity magnifies poverty, shiftlessness, and discourages taking thought for the morrow. Its prayer is "give," give, give! "Give us this day our daily bread"—"Ask and ye shall receive," and "If ye receive not it is because ye ask amiss." It does not demand equal right to the opportunity to earn our daily bread.

Christianity agrees well with plutocracy whose motto is: "Government should protect the rich; then the rich can take care of the poor." So long as the church and its agents can have the office of dispenser of the gifts of the rich to the poor it is well content with the conditions that insure the truth of the saying, "the poor ye have always with you."

In thus saying I make no charge against the honesty or goodness of intention of the Salvation Army, the churches, or of the people called plutocrats. They are simply carrying to their logical conclusions the basic principles of the Christian cult, or ethical system. The fault is with the system itself, rather than with the victims thereof. Hence the necessity of showing the real cause of the evils that church and state officials seem trying so laboriously, so continuously and yet so fruitlessly to remove.

JUSTICE, equal right to nature's opportunities, including, of course, the right to be born well, to be born of LOVE, joined to wisdom gained by experience, would in time remove the necessity for such lessons,—such wholesale exhibitions of charity as we have just seen in Chicago and elsewhere, and these agencies, love and wisdom, would remove Christianity itself, by removing the excuse, the raison d'etre, of its existence.

M. HARMAN.

An Ill-bred Critic.

"Ah, yes," said the star, "I have been married for eight years."

"Continuously?" said the critical one, but the query was deemed unworthy of reply.

Yes, the "star" did quite right in ignoring such questions, and such questioners. The better plan, however, would have been to say nothing at all in relation to her marriage—if she had once committed the folly of allowing herself to get entangled in a matrimonial noose. And whether she had escaped a first entanglement and had been caught a second or a third time, in the space of eight years, was certainly her own business, and not that of her ill-bred questioner. When will the devotees of Grundy morality learn that the first and most important lesson in manners, or in good breeding, is to mind one's own business, and refrain from asking impertinent questions.

Physiology in Schools.

Mrs. McDona'd said that a friend of her's, a Board School teacher, had received a note from an irate mother: "Please don't tell Edith about her in-ides; she doesn't like it; and, besides, its rude."

This item, judging from the heading, was inserted in the London "Mail" as a bit of fun. But when we consider the results of ignorance of physiology, the physiology of the respiratory, the digestive, and especially of the reproductive system, it would seem there is more cause for serious reflection than for mirth, to be found in paragraphs such as this. While it is very true that many will not heed instruction in such matters, drawn from the experience of others, yet it is likewise true that a much smaller amount of disastrous personal experience is necessary to teach wisdom when the individual has been properly warned in time, than when no warning has been given, or when the warning has been mixed up with irrational and unscientific teachings, to say nothing of the effect of vicious example.

Who Is in the Right?

In whole number of Lucifer, 688 there appeared an article from James Beeson, of Hytop, Ala., an old subscriber and contributor to Lucifer's columns, in which some very serious charges were made, aimed personally at and addressed to the "Editor of Lucifer." In commenting thereon I took less space than he took in making them.

This little controversy between Friend Beeson and myself has attracted considerable attention, judging from the letters received concerning it. Being private and personal rather than otherwise, I have refrained from publishing these letters. One lady friend, whose good opinion I much prize, writes me that she has been "very disagreeably surprised at the tone and manner of your editorials of late" and mentions particulary my reply to James Beeson. Among other objections she thinks that when I say to Mr. Beeson, "It is not true, etc," I charge him with "lying."

Surely no other reader takes this view of the matter. Mr. Beeson had not minced matters in making his charges against me and my work, and in my answer I used plain language, but neither charged the other with intentional falsehood.

Another correspondent, an editor and writer of books, says:

"I was much pleased to read your comments on James Beeson's communication especially with what you say about the state, because that is precisely my own position. . . . . I prefer to risk the organized opposition of the people, than the prejudice, hate and ignorance of the mob. It is not the state that put you and Pope in prison, but the men who are in power. Take away the state, and these men, backed by the popular ignorance and superstition, would kill instead of putting in prison those they wish to injure."

Now Mr. Beeson himself comes again with a short letter addressed, "for Lucifer's editor" in which he says:

"My short article together with your comments are before me. I should consider it all unworthy of notice had I not received a letter from 'Aunt Elmina' asking for an explanation, etc. If I did her an injury it was done publicly and deserves to be amended in the same way. She says 'old granny is not objectionable in itself,' and if so I didn't do her any harm because I didn't mean it as such to her. I am willing to admit that I could have used better language, and made my meaning clearer—but can't give up the grounds I took as to her being a leader, although she denies it. The first work I ever read on the subject of sex freedom was Diana, and I got it from her and thought she was the author of it.

"I have written a reply to your comments but will not mail it, because there is no use arguing with a monomaniac. One had as well expect fair play from a politician—indeed I consider your comments on the misspelling of one word beneath their tactics.

"But your defense of the Chicago martyrs in the face of their unpopularity with plutocracy and the ignorant rabble that supported it—endeared you and Lucifer to me in a way that will never be forgotten no difference how much we may disagree now or hereafter. With respect to you and all humanitarians I close. JAMES BEESON."

As Friend Beeson acknowledges that he might have worded his first letter better I will not be less magnanimous. It is doubtless true that what was said anent bad spelling had better been left out. There is so little merit in spelling words according to accepted standards, that if an article has no faults except incorrect spelling this might well be forgiven. In making this criticism I had not in mind Mr. Beeson's letter—which in the matter of spelling was much above the average, only two or three errors being noted and these were weeded out in the proof—but rather the careless spelling of correspondents in general. The only inaccuracy of spelling we allowed to go into print was "partician" which was not changed because, in doubt as to what the writer really meant by it. As it was used twice I reasonably inferred it was not a slip of the pen but was spelled as he wanted to have it.

If instead of the slurring remarks in regard to my lack of fairness,—if instead of opprobrious epithets in lieu of argument Mr. Beeson would send us a temperate and respectful rejoinder to my reply to his former article, leaving to "politicians" the use of such endearing names as "monomaniac," "old granny," etc., his reply, if not too long, would be freely inserted, and if no new charges were made, would be allowed to close the controversy—as in the case of Leroy Berrier—without claiming the final word,—as is usual with editors.

In conclusion, while freely reciprocating the good wishes of our Alabama correspondent I would mildly hint, to him and to all others who write for publication, that it would save much time, labor and ruffling of temper if they would take a little more pains in the preparation of their articles, remembering always that editors and publishers, as a class, are very much pressed for time, and that to expect them to spend hours fixing up hastily prepared manuscript is asking too much of human nature. M. HARMAN.

Sauce for the Gander.

Two Chicago ministers affirm that Colonel Ingersoll is insane—morally insane at that! 'Tis the unkindest cut of all. Following hard upon the heels of the genial and misguided Colonel's expressed agreement with the clergy that all Anarchists are crazy and should be incarcerated in madhouses, the cruel utterance of these Chicago dominies smacks of the basest treachery. Oh, ingratitude, thy cognomon is Preacher! And how they pile it on!

A man may be a mental giant and yet be a moral idiot—utterly incapable of moral distinctions, especially in the higher realm of worship, and duty to God. His mouthings are the mouthings of a madman, whose malignant hatred of everything sacred is proof positive of his moral dementia and spiritual insanity.

These are awful things to say of an ally in the war for the Salvation of Society. Why, they are quite as severe and fully as untrue Mr. Ingersoll's assertions concerning the mental condition of his fellow Infidels, the Anarchists. W.

"I was Born So, Mother."

In a fine sketch, "In Byron's Country," written for the "Literary Guide," of London, the author, Amos Waters, gives some paragraphs that must be of some interest to the readers of Lucifer. I quote:

"Half a century ago Kit North wrote in the gorgeous 'Noctes,' before "Blackwood" descended from brilliance to propriety:—

His was an exceptional case. It is not too much to say that, had his marriage been a happy one, the course of events of the present century might have been materially changed; that the genius which poured itself forth in "Don Juan" and "Cain" might have flowed in far different channels; that the ardent love of freedom which sent him to perish at six-and-thirty at Missolonghi might have inspired a long career at home; and that we might at this moment have been appealing to the counsels of his experience and wisdom at an age not exceeding that which was attained by Wellington, Lyndhurst and Brougham.

"'Had his marriage been a happy one'—the supreme choice of mutual souls, instead of the pathos and the squalor of a vast lottery! To Byron it was given to be, as Mazzini said, 'the glorious tyrant of a whole period of poetry'—never to watch in woman-soul the star of his own redemption.

"What of the unwisdom, the cruelty of his mother? 'The image of him as a child,' observes Roden Noel, 'defending himself with the chairs from her, trying to fling the poker at him, remains in the memory of all who have read Lord Beaconsfield's Venetia. On one occasion, after violent abuse, she finished by calling him a 'lame brat.' His lips quivered, his face whitened, a fearful light came into his eyes, as he replied: 'I was born so Mother.' 'Do you think,' said Mary Haworth, in his hearing, 'I could care for that lame boy?' Harrow engendered hatred in him; the bullies there 'would put his lame foot into a bucket of water by way of a joke.' After his death Trelawny uncovered this lame foot to look at it and report upon it, and the world of scandal has looked at Byron's lameness ever since. There were tenderness, nobillity, and audacious grandeur in that wayward spirit; but it was born lame! The cripple grew strong enough to rescue weak boys and thrash bullies at Harrow. He thrashed other bullies in Italy and in Greece. Ah yes, but he was lame! Average normal censors anticipate deformity they reflect and enlarge, scourge the dazzling plumage they envy, and scorn the throbs and flutterings of the dying bird.

"Byron detested field sports and fishing because of his tenderness to animals. His nature was surely gentle. With all her faults, his mother taught him 'to abhor tyrants, to pity the poor, the weak, the oppressed.' His pathetic wish was to be buried with 'Boatswain,' the beautiful Newfoundland, who died in a fit of madness, 'his master wiping the saliva from the poor beast's lips.' He wished to be buried like his dog, without religious ceremony, in the vault of the garden at Newstead; less of rebuke to mankind, methinks, than of wistful love for the loving."

Free Love.

BY ELMINA D. SLENKER.

I wish we had some unfailing criterion by which to measure the meaning of words. There are not two more desirable blessings in all the world, than freedom and love.

To be free and loving is to be at the zenith of the highest happiness. But join the words free and love, and say you believe in free love, and you are taboo with the great majority, just as you once were with the believers in slavery, either in the North or the South when you claimed to be "anti" to it.

An Infidel was once the synonym for all that was vile, contemptible and wicked. Less than thirty years ago, right here, no Infidel had ever been seen, and when we came we were supposed by all but our personal friends, to be vile and desperately wicked—to delight in oaths, in intemperance and sexual depravity; and strangers would ask of the neighbors here, how we talked and how we ate, probably supposing we took our food from one common dish with our hands and devoured it like barbarians.

Only a few years ago a woman who pleaded for political equality, was deemed to be of uncertain age, scraggy, loud-mouthed and short-haired. And even now most people think an Anarchist a long-haired, savage-looking being, who delights in law-breaking, bombs and dynamite—just so of a hundred other leaders in reforms who happen to see a little farther into a millstone than the general public can do.

Thought is free of necessity. No one can fetter or bind it, though its utterance may be suppressed.

Love is equally free. You cannot love at will. But each loves as compelled or impelled by circumstances. It is quite time that the hyphenated word, free love, was cleansed of the impurities cast upon it by the ignorant and unthinking; and some more truthful and distinctive term used in place of it by varietists, and those who advocate and practice what is called illegitimate love unions.

While I claim to be a Dianite free lover, I abominate whiskey, dissipation and wrong-doing (see Northcote in No. 690 of Lucifer) as much as any bound lover could do.

I commend Mrs. Swaysgood's plea for more kindly feeling among our writers. Calling hard names and "sitting down upon" our brothers and sisters illy becomes true liberals. Sound and clear argument is the only road to success. Give your ideas in a plain, honest and fair setting and time will place truth upon its throne.

> The wonder is always and always
> How there can be a mean man.
>
> —Whitman.

[In theory Mrs. Slenker does not believe in "calling hard names and 'sitting down upon' our brothers and sisters." In practice, however, she would deny the designation of "free lover" to any person who assumes the right to love more than one person simultaneously. And even love relations which are exclusive are, in her estimation not to be called "free love" unions when they are "what is called illegitimate love unions." "Called" by whom? Who is to have authority to stigmatize any union as "illegitimate"? Or does Mrs. Slenker give the technical meaning to the term, and condemn all illegal unions? If not, what does she mean?

Certainly the "unfailing criterion" which Mrs. Slenker calls for in the opening of the article, is needed when her words are read. If we are to take words in their commonly accepted meaning, she thinks that "free love"—that is, what she calls "Dianite free love"—is pure and good; but that any love which desires manifestation other than Dianism should be denied freedom. We all know what whiskey is, and can understand what she means when she says she "abominates" it. But what does she mean by "dissipation"? and what does she consider "wrong-doing"?

I have observed Mrs. Slenker's request to "see Northcote in Lucifer 690" and fail to see that he either advocates or condemns "whiskey, dissipation and wrong-doing." He quotes H. L. Green's statements that free love leads to this trinity of evils; but he does not thereby adopt those assertions as his own. L. H.]

VARIOUS VOICES.

Mrs. C. Williams, Newport, Ky.:—Please find enclosed twenty-five cents for Lucifer. Sorry it is not more. Will send more as soon as I have it. It is worth its weight in gold—Lucifer I mean.

Wm. Humble, Weir City, Kan.:—I enclose two dollars,—one dollar and fifty cents for Lucifer, twenty five cents for "Helen Harlow's Vow," and twenty five cents for combination offer. I thank you for continuing paper to me, after time had expired. I am no writer but I think the work you are at is the greatest reform of this century.

Jennie Wade, Bradford, O.:—Enclosed find fifty cents for subscription to your valuable paper, Lucifer. You sent me a sample copy and I consider it a gem, more precious than diamonds to mothers. Could we only induce the masses to read and become enlightened this earth would become the paradise that they expect in the future.

J. G. Hunter, Sheridan, Wyo.:—Some one has kindly sent me three numbers of Lucifer. I am interested in the question of sexual freedom and do not want to study the question at any other person's expense; but am certainly greatly obliged to the party who sent me those copies, as I had made an effort to find out the address of Lucifer and failed. Enclosed please find one dollar and thirty cents for which please send Lucifer for one year; also your Combination Offer, and "Sexual Enslavement of Women."

Ira P. Holcomb, Jr., Dinuba, Calif.:—Enclosed find check for one dollar and seventy-five cents for which send me "The Adult" for one year, fifty cents; "Hilda's Home" (paper cover) fifty cents; "Fountain of Life," fifty cents; "Discussion of the Social Question," by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones, fifteen cents; "What the Young Need to Know," ten cents.

Either I am changing my views or else Lucifer is growing better and better all the time. These are surely questions of vital importance to all of us.

Samuel Ragendorf, Cincinnati, O.:—Many thanks for last article by Northcote, "Free Thought and Free Love." In my humble opinion it is one of the very best I have ever read. I notice Warren (city) has Lucifer on sale at his news stands. "Adult" (January issue) will cost more, just what I don't know. I enclose twenty cents for same. Will renew my subscription to Lucifer in a very few weeks.

[The price of the January "Adult" will be twenty cents,—except to regular subscribers who have sent us fifty cents for a year's subscription. For these no additional charge will be made. After January 1 the price will be one dollar per year—twelve numbers. M. H.]

B. F. Odell, Flagler, Colo.:—Enclosed I send one dollar for books and subscription, and twenty-five cents for the Portland martyrs. I will take three copies of "Hilda's Home." The story has caused many to read Lucifer who otherwise would not have read it. If possible you should commence another serial story soon. Serial stories will reach many in this novel reading age, that would pass sober discussions by, and they sow the seed of freedom.

In regard to the Propaganda I am already an active member—not of an organization, but of the great movement for freedom. I was waiting to see whether to enroll my name in the organization that has just been formed. I see but one thing that makes me hesitate. Lucifer has the confidence of all sex reformers and is already the recognized head of the propaganda movement. If Moses Harman had been chosen manager of the Propaganda, I know several who would have added their names. At least I am certain they would have done so.

[The failure to affix my name to the "call" for national organization was not because I disapproved the object or the methods proposed therein. For many years I have been working along the same lines, in my own way, and did not see the need of putting my name to the new organization. If, however, the lack of my signature to that list of names is keeping back others from the work, then this objection shall be removed. The organization is welcome to my name so long as it is managed as I now think it to be. M. H.]

Emma Goldman, 50 First St., New York City:—I was glad to see the report of Comrade Lees from Cleveland in last Lucifer. It is to be regretted that I could find no one to report the meetings in Buffalo and Rochester, especially those at Detroit, as I consider them the most important and successful of all the meetings I addressed during my three months' tour. I spoke at two German meetings in Turner Hall, one being the commemoration meeting of the death of our Chicago heroes. Though both meetings were unusually well attended, yet none of my meetings have caused so much comment in the press as the one of Friday, Nov. 18, at the "People's Tabernacle"—a church.

Fancy an Anarchist addressing a congregation from the pulpit! Well, I am generally not conceited but I frankly admit, I am very proud of the success of my lecture in the church on Anarchy. The newspapers have ever since been circulating all sorts of stories about that broad minded minister, Mr. McGowan, who had more courage than any other in his profession, but the truth is that his church is now far better attended than ever before. Undoubtedly people go there to find out whether the church is still on the same spot, and whether the devil has not taken up his quarters in it since Emma Goldman spoke there.

692.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

The minister certainly deserves all credit for his broad-mindedness and courage.

In Buffalo I also had good meetings; one in the Trade and Labor Council Hall; one in the Spiritualist Temple, and a German meeting. In Rochester, N. Y., I addressed three meetings, two arranged by friends and one in the Labor Lyceum of that city.

Take it all in all I am satisfied with the work done during the three months, and with the hospitality and kindness extended me by comrades, friends and sympathizers all over the country. I hope to start on a tour again, next March or April, and of course, shall then see all the friends at Lucifer Circle again.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetism; Albert Chavannes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
Practical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. R. Allen,	.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Virtue Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood,	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr,	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Coming Woman; Lillie P. White,	.15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address, Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

LOVE AND THE LAW, By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published.	.10
Her Sinister and Lofty Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages.	.25
Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe.	.10
The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution.	.15
The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Ruedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper.	.50
Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference.	.10
Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker.	.10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover,	.50
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price,	1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " "	.50
A Sex Revolution, " "	.25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " "	.25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth,	2.00
When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations.	.10
Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen.	.15
Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 25 cents. Single copies	.05

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue,"	By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman,"	By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom,"	By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell,	By Mary Flo ence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?"	By X.
"Love and the Law."	By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches,"	By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repent ant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.
We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department 0 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co. Room 807, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child with or mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Marsette. This is a story of a sympathetic high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 2. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JANUARY 12, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 693

The Reformers.

O Earth! thy past is crowned and consecrated
With its reformers, speaking yet, though dead;
Who unto strife and toil and tears were fated,
Who unto fiery martyrdoms were led.

O Earth! thy present too is crowned with splendor
By its reformers, battling in the strife,
Friends of humanity, stern, strong and tender,
Making the world more hopeful with their life.

O Earth! thy future shall be great and glorious
With its reformers, toiling in the van;
Till truth and love shall reign o'er all victorious,
And earth be given to freedom and to man.

—Hymns of the Spirit.

Popular Follies and Crimes.

BY JAMES S. DENSON.

The hardest of all tasks is to be tolerant of intolerant people.—ANON.

No one realizes this more keenly than the broad Freethinker who has to deal with men who think they are Freethinkers but are hot to force their moral, social, economic and hygienic notions on everybody else at the points of the state's bayonets.

* * *

He is a mighty poor American who puts his personal profit above the issue of good citizenship.—N. Y. "Evening Sun."

Ahem! With Trade interests the dominant issue, avowed or concealed, in every campaign, where is the American voter who does not "put his personal profit above the issue of good citizenship"?

* * *

The board of Aldermen at Mt. Vernon, N. Y., has passed an ordinance making it the duty of bill posters to submit to the mayor all picture advertising before they put it on what our English friends call the "hoardings." Ten dollars fine or ten days' imprisonment is the penalty of disobedience. Of course His Honor will never make a mistake, for it is a well-known fact that every elected person is infallible both as an art critic and as a judge of morals.

* * *

We all know that the marriage institution is woman's one great protector from annoyance as well as from more serious troubles, and so we are utterly at a loss to account for the fact that Charles Robbins, a grocer at Atlantic City, N. J., became engaged to marry eight girls but disappeared during the night preceding the day that had been set for all the weddings. For all that the "peculiar institution" could have done to prevent, it might have been much worse.

* * *

Look at the humbug cries and false alarms that have been used to cocher well-meaning people out of their money, which is squandered by licentious scoundrels that care for nothing but the liberty to do wrong!—"Torch of Reason."

Perhaps the "Liberal University" might secure a competent instructor in English composition if it would take down the bars and let in the Spiritualists and Social Radicals, and its representatives might then have courage enough to come out into the open and give the names of those "licentious scoundrels."

* * *

Look at the miserable ideas of depravity and degeneration that are advocated by many who are supposed to be fair representatives of our cause!—"Torch of Reason."

Such, for instance, as the demand for searching examination of all systems of thought and of society inherited from the past, and the conviction that the sexes should enjoy equal moral and economic freedom! We realize, dear Mr. Hosmer, that such revolutionary ideas must be terribly shocking to the sensitive souls of fossils, but then, really, you know, we can't help it—humanity must move onward, no matter what becomes of the misguided obstructors.

* * *

Regarding Socialism, three New York clergymen have recently expressed their opinions. Let us see what they claim and wherein they agree and differ: Rev. Benj. F. De Costa, Episcopal, says: "Socialism is Christianity." Per contra, Socialism is a theory of human relations on earth. Christianity is a theory of human, angelic, diabolic and divine relations in asserted trans-earthly worlds. In so far as Christianity attempts to solve earthly human problems, it steps outside its sphere and forgets the express declaration of its assumed founder—"My Kingdom is not of this world." Rev. J. B. Remensnyder, Lutheran, risks his reputation for sanity or veracity on the affirmation that "the church has always led in the struggle for the emancipation and uplifting of humanity." The answer to that assertion could be stated so briefly that parliamentary rules forbid me to write it here. Rev. Merle St. C. Wright, Unitarian, approaches the subject quite in a different way: "It is simply the spirit of humanity, freed from contamination of prejudice and interest, that is in the heart of every true lover of his kind; fostered by every influence that has strengthened individuality, liberty and justice through the ages, and owing not more to Christianity than to the nineteenth century and the spirit of science today." It is easy to see which of these ministers has really studied human history.

State Villainy.

BY WM. GILMOUR.

In a recent number of the Glasgow "Herald" I read a most interesting and, in a sense, a most pitiable article on "Legal Infanticide in Italy," based upon a pamphlet—"L'opere Pie E L' Infanticide Legale," by Va Mario, Royigo, 1897.

Space will not permit me to deal with it at great length, but I would like to give a synopsis of the more salient points. Readers will please keep one fact (at all events I have received it as a fact) in view, that the State, in Italy, does not recognize as legal, marriage contracts performed by the church; and the church, in turn, will not acknowledge marriages performed by the State or civil authorities. As a result a man may have two wires—one acknowledged by the State and another by the church.

It is uncommonly hard to please two masters at the one time, so I take it that people will permit the church or state—as the case may be, to perform the binding ceremony according to their likes or dislikes for these blessed, and always-with-us institutions. But, as a matter of fact marriages are made in heaven, and hell is aped by the married (in many cases) on earth!

But to our subject. I gather that the infanticide spoken o takes place in the State Foundling Hospitals; that 856 newly-born children were received into the hospital at Naples last year (1896), and only three of them survived; i. e., 853 died. One of these plague dens—The Annunciata, has a terrible record since its foundation in the fourteenth century; but the authoress points out that its output of carcasses has varied according to the "inhumanity and corruption of its functionaries." She declares, however, that, from the liberation (!) of Naples the mortality steadily increased, until the year 1871, when, out of 1371 children entrants for that year, there was not one survivor. And all this is so apparent to the residents thereabouts that they have nick-named such places "piccoli cimiteri"—little cemetries. And the killing process is expensive. Of course, the state anywhere will not kill for nothing, and Italy is no exception to the rule in having to pay "fifteen francs a year."

While the writer does not say so (rather the reviewer—by the way) yet there is not a little sarcasm thrown at the idea of "illegitimates." He seems to say that such state institutions encourage illegitimacy, but gives us a redeeming argument in its favor by saying that "the mere fact that the death-rate among illegitimate children maintained at the public expense is more than double per 1,000 of the death rate among such children when reared by their own mothers, is serious enough for a beginning."

Now note: For the years 1890–91-92 there were 91,549 exposed children, and out of these 34,186 died during the first year. In other words the mortality was 373 per 1,000, "whereas in the case of illegitimate children left with their mothers the death rate was only 183 per 1,000." (Italics mine.) And the Lord said: "Multiply and replenish the earth."

Let us take a peep inside the celebrated inferno—The Annunciato. Here, it was common for one to see three newly-born children in a single bed sucking in turn the breasts of a nurse who had scarcely milk for one of them! What a fine camping ground for a Syrup of Squills company! In some cases, too, the person (frequently a nun) knew nothing about medicines and the medical staffs are described as "so unfit for their duties that in some cases they do not even use sterilized milk;" some entrants are discovered to be suffering from transmitted incurable diseases—but only after they have spread it fatally among the others—through the nurse.

But thrice happy children, they have a high title: Figli della Madonna—children of the Madonna!

Does not the state look after them here? Does not the priesthood (coupled with the Madonna statue) secure their future happiness in heaven? Surely; and this satisfies the blind, ignorant and degraded admiration for church and state. Naples, then, for the saintly characteristics,—dirt and ignorance! and her people may well say:

> Lord bless and pity us,
> Shine on us with thy face. . . . .

But Stephen Pearl Andrews, who did not ape divinity as do these pious and truly religious people said:

"The great lesson for the world to learn is that human beings do not need to be taken care of. What they do need is such conditions of justice and freedom and friendly co-operation that they can take care of themselves [and this applies largely to children. W. G.] Provided for by another, and submitted to his [or her] will as the return tribute, they pine, and sicken, and die, [as do the children at Naples]."

What are We Coming To?

BY CYRUS W. COOLRIDGE.

Believing as I do that every man acts as he must, I have charity for the whole animal creation including the Comstockian tribe. Mr. Comstock and his minions may be malicious and stupid, but perhaps they can not help being what they are. Besides I am of the opinion that every man has a right to be stupid. I must, however, say that the Comstockians are misusing their right and that their stupidity knows no measure. From Mr. Walker's article on the "Postal Inquisition in Oregon" I learn that a poem by Walt Whitman and letters by Kate Austin, Annie E. Parkhurst and Anton Niedermeier are included in the indictment against the editors of the "Firebrand." I remember very well the contents of Walt Whitman's poem and of one of the letters written by the "insurgent" women. The poem was reprinted from the "Leaves of Grass," and if it was a crime to print it in the "Firebrand," Walt Whitman's book of poems should also be suppressed. As to the letter, it was aimed against variety. Its object was to prove that there is a great deal of slavery in the freedom of variety. There was nothing in the words or in the ideas and principles of the letter which could by any stretch of imagination be called "obscene." If the poem and the letter in question were not "fit" to be published in a paper, I do not know of any writings on the sex question that are fit to be printed.

Where is our freedom? What are we coming to? If things do not change, Comstockism may yet become one of the blessed American institutions for which we shall be invited by our presidents and governors to thank "Providence." Let us, however, hope that Comrades Pope, Addis and Isaak will have a fair trial and that Comstockism will receive a blow from which it will never recover.

Some Questions Answered.

BY A. WARREN.

Apologizing to those who deprecate all discussion of questions about which some of us happen to differ, I beg to be indulged once more, in answer to interrogatories which have been propounded to me, and which I think will still be of interest to many readers.

Chief among these are the questions of J. M. Clarke, in Lucifer, No. 688. Mr. Clarke quotes this from my former article. "At last comes a love that satisfies the heart," and asks the following questions: 1. "For sure? 2. No further affectional yearning? 3. No unfed social desires? 4. Will you give us one such case, Mr. Warren? Till you do, I must conceive a multitude of at least probable facts, detailed and definite, that will weigh more than whole reams of ideals. 5. Is love's sweetest sacrament limited by (to?) gratification of sexual desire? 6. If so, are such sacraments unknown where they 'neither marry nor are given in marriage'? 7. Is it proven that old experimenters have slunk back to a strictly monogamic state? 8. Have there been many cases of monogamy without pain? 9. Has there been one (case) of duality, with constant, perfect concord?"

1. Yes, for sure—when it comes. Of course, it does not come to everybody. Probably it never comes to those who do not aspire to it. 2. No further sexual yearnings. It is sexual variety I have been discussing. How could there be further sexual yearnings, when the entire being is already filled with blessing? Do we alternate between real strawberries and waxen imitations, merely for the sake of variety?

3. All social wants are not sexual. Does Mr. Clarke seek sexual gratification with every attractive woman he meets? What funny logic! We have a variety of social wants; therefore we need sexual variety. This is the stock argument, the mudsill, so to speak, of the variety fabric.

4. I knew one case, which is beyond controversy, where the desire for variety was entirely cured by full fruition of aspiration, sexward, in one love. I have seen many cases, which, I had no reason to doubt, were such; but of course, we cannot know all that may be in the heart of another. I have given the one case, as required; but I hardly expect Mr. Clarke, or any other varietist, to cease conceiving a multitude of facts in support of the other side. It is easy to conceive facts, in favor of a pet theory, when unbiased observation fails to furnish them. And here I may remark, that no one who has not seen a large number of free lovers residing in the same vicinity, is qualified to express an opinion as to the workings of sexual variety.

5. Love's sweetest sacrament is not limited by, or to physical gratification. It is in the soul—using the term soul for want of a scientific one, and craving indulgence of the materialistic reader. 6. Such sacraments are not unknown among free lovers though I know of no place, at present, where there is absolutely no marriage, except among the shakers, and others who claim to be continent.

7. Some of them have; but probably, not all. John Patterson, the editor of the "Social Revolutionist," and the ablest advocate of variety that it has been my privilege to know, went back to marriage, and published his renunciation of his former views. His brother Sam went the same way. Quite a large number left Berlin Heights to join the Oneida Community; and Oneida, in a body, went back to marriage. Here are at least three hundred cases, all old pioneers. And it will not do to accuse these of hypocrisy, or unfaithfulness to the dual relation. How many cases can be cited, of those who have remained steadfast varietists? But there were many others, who have not done so. Mrs. —— was a very popular and attractive woman, who had a wide experience in variety, for several years. She finally married; and a few years afterward she stated to a friend, that if she had her variety experience to go through again, she would require a money consideration, in order to make sure of some sort of compensation for her squandered womanhood. Another quite attractive woman ran the entire gamut of variety, and in a few months found herself with no lover at all, and went back to her husband. Of all the old experimenters, some hundreds of whom were known to me, only two or three are still known as varietists. The record does not support the theory.

8. The question is irrelevant. No one has been advocating monogamy. At least I have not. 9. Yes, one at least, that I know of; and it was not a miracle, either. Concord, on a basis of freedom, is not difficult. It is not necessary to agree in every detail of thought and feeling. He who cannot tolerate his lover's individuality, is a tyrant, and unworthy of genuine love.

And here I would close, were it not probable that some, as heretofore, will persist in jumping to the conclusion, that I am seeking to limit freedom. This has cropped out in several criticisms, among which is that of Mrs. Fox, who asks if I believe in marriage as it is. I am somewhat surprised at this question. Mrs. Fox cannot have forgotten what I wrote a year or two ago, on the subject of individual homes; nor that other series of articles, some year or two earlier, in which I disgusted Mrs. Lake and others, by suggesting that lovers were under no obligation to publish their relation, by formal ceremony or otherwise; nor last but not least, the position concerning "autonomistic marriage," which I took when our beloved leaders felt constrained to take shelter under that plausible subterfuge. I have not renounced a single position taken in those articles, but am confirmed in them, more and more, as the years roll by.

Once for all, then, let me describe, as clearly as I can, my ideal society; for it is not my wish to continue this discussion, to the exclusion of other matter. I aspire to a social state wherein all will love one another; not indiscriminately, for that would be childish and impossible, but sufficiently to insure harmony and banish injustice. There will be no binding partnerships; no marriage; no formal mating; no living together in families, or in partnership homes; no right of ownership in persons, either as lovers or parents; no contracts, social or economic, in contravention of social freedom.

But it is inconceivable that there will be no preferences, sexwise and otherwise. There must be degrees in love, and naturally, in its manifestation. It is poverty of expression that prompts the sexual act for all degrees of affection. Sexual pleasure is not the ultimate good. It is the love that blesses. If sexual pleasure be indulged for its own sake, or to express an inferior love, there is no language left to make known the deeper emotion.

I am not, however, opposed to sexual variety, so long as anyone wants it. On the contrary, I believe in it. It is the paradise, (purgatory), through which all must pass, on the road to heaven. But it is not heaven. So long as you think it is, you will never reach heaven.

Sociologic Lesson. No. LVI.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

FREEZING OUT STOCKHOLDERS. One fraudulent method has been very extensively followed, especially in the initiation of railroads. Certain men, seeing the advantages that a railroad would bring to their neighborhood, form a railroad company, of which they obtain control. The road is laid out so as to add as largely as possible to the value of the real estate of the projectors; and the expenses of construction, rolling stock, and putting the road in operation, are increased far above the original estimates. Bonds are issued to meet the expenditures, and after a while the company fails, and its property is sold out. Those whose property has been largely increased in value by the road, and who have made exorbitant profits out of its expenditures, buy it in at a low price, and the road continues to run, with a new company. The projectors and their friends have made up their losses upon its stock, and others have been frozen out. It is an exception when, in the initiation of a new railroad, the projectors have not deliberately misrepresented for the express purpose of finally obtaining possession at a reduced expense.

The same plan is carried into other incorporations. Numerous companies have been formed for manufacturing and other purposes, issuing stock to obtain means to increase their operations, and have been so manipulated that outside investors have lost a large proportion of their investments. It is necessary not only to eradicate the desire for injustice which produces these wrongs but to co-operate in ways which cannot be thus abused.

What Repression Does.

Dr. E. A. Gordon, in "University Magazine."

Unfortunately, the conventional repression of healthy thought upon sex questions has set up a deplorable reaction of foolish, morbid and unwholesome thinking and speaking, till society has sought to protect, by rigid restriction of discussion, those very members of the community, who by reason of their perverted and unclean imaginations, are alike the prey of disease and a constant menace to the spread of knowledge among their rational-minded and uncorrupted compatriots. Is it not because of the miserably degraded and perverse ideas which prevail among these morbid types that many not wholly unthoughtful persons fear to unwittingly pander to this disordered state of mind by the expression of frank and pure opinions upon the subject of sex? But the only certain remedy for the prurience and ribaldry born of fatal obfuscation, suppression and evasion of facts, is the passionless statement of the truths in plain terms. There have been periods in history when the light of sexual knowledge was not obscured, but allowed to shine freely; and wherever and whenever men and women have discussed the questions of love with openness and gravity, obscenity has been put to shame, and levity has changed to a sober desire for wisdom.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—;
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon each individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1304 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$402.50
Albina L. Washburn,	1.00
W. S. Bell, (books)	1.50

M. FLORENCE JOHNSON, the most logical and entertaining woman lecturer on Freethought or radical subjects, will make a short trip west in January and Febuary. She will address the Cincinnati Liberal Society Jan. 30 and Feb. 6. Mrs. Johnson also gives first class literary entertainments. She needs no introduction to the readers of "Our New Humanity," to which she contributed valuble papers. Societies engaging her will enjoy a treat. For terms and dates, address M. Florence Johnson, 244 W. 143 Street, New York City.

Lucifer's Missionary Work.

In reviewing the work accomplished by our Light-Bringer during the year that has lately passed into the silence we think it right and proper that special mention be made of the generous and very substantial co-operation that has been accorded us by the contributors to Lucifer's "Extension Fund." The object of this fund, as the name would indicate, is to introduce the paper and the literature for which it stands sponsor, to those who are not yet acquainted therewith. The honor of proposing this plan is due to a good friend who does not claim citizenship in the United States of America, but who does not allow national prejudices, or boundary lines, to limit his humanitarian work. This gentleman, for reasons satisfactory to himself, prefers that his name should not be published. His proposition was that five hundred dollars be raised to send trial subscriptions to names of persons who are not afraid to read all sides of all questions, and especially to such persons as have shown interest in the question of human improvement through free womanhood and free motherhood. He offered to pay one hundred dollars towards this fund if others would raise the four hundred, advancing the first half of his contribution to set the ball in motion. Later he has sent the other half. Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., of New York, seconded the motion by subscribing fifty dollars, advancing the first half thereof.

The latest credits on this missionary fund show that over four hundred dollars have been contributed in the seven months since the plan has been in operation. Although it is hard to keep the account with absolute exactness we think we can convince the dŏnors to this fund that their contributions have been conscientiously devoted to the purpose indicated by the plan, and while results hitherto have not been all that could be wished we have good reason to know that our united efforts in this direction have not been in vain. Of course we all understand that time and cultivation must follow the sowing of seed,—hence we do not feel discouraged when favorable results do not immediately appear.

Altogether we feel gratified with the success of the Extension Plan; and while thanking all who have contributed thereto we would say to others who believe in our missionary work and wish to identify themselves therewith that we shall gladly accept and faithfully appropriate their contributions to the purpose herein indicated.

Our English Co-operators.

It is a source of no little gratification and encouragement that so many of the leading members of the English Legitimation League are taking special interest in Lucifer and its work. For some weeks past every number of our paper has had as one of its chief attractions an article from one of these transatlantic co-workers. Last week John Badcock Jr., author of "When Love is Liberty and Nature Law," gave us a very readable article on "Personal Responsibility" in relations that may result in reproduction of the race. This week we have an article on "State Villainy" by Wm. Gilmour, Secretary of the Glasgow Branch of the League, in which he deals sturdy blows to church and state superstitions.

In another recent issue George Bedborough told us of the late work of the international organization of which he is secretary, and of whose official organ the "Adult" he is the editor.

All regular readers of our paper remember the series of articles by Orford Northcote, another prominent member of the same organization, entitled, "Free Thought and Free Love." This series of articles has been the subject of much favorable comment, and, as already announced, is soon to be published in pamphlet form, as No. 2 of our Light-Bearer Library.

We feel sure that we do not exaggerate in saying that our readers on both sides of the Atlantic highly appreciate the contributions of these able and earnest workers in humanitarian reform, and hope they will continue to write for our columns.

"Our New Humanity."

In answer to frequent inquiries in regard to the quarterly magazine, "Our New Humanity," we would say that the times seem still unpropitious for its revival, or resuscitation. That there is need for the quarterly, to supplement and make more permanent the work of the weekly Lucifer, we are as much as ever convinced, but owing to the great financial conspiracy the people who are most interested in radical publications such as Lucifer and "Our New Humanity" are mostly poor, and cannot carry the burden of the publication of both. So, until conditions get better, decidedly better, in this regard we shall probably feel obliged to let the quarterly sleep.

Meantime we wish to say to all interested in the work to which it was and is devoted that we have still for sale a good stock of all the seven issues of "Our New Humanity" except of the first. Of this the supply is quite limited. Price, twenty-five cents per number, or bound in one large volume—seven numbers, two dollars, expressage or postage paid by us. If bought to sell again, or to give away, a reduction from these prices will be allowed.

To the subscribers of the quarterly who have not yet accepted our offer to give them credit on Lucifer for what they may have paid in advance on the magazine—or to refund the money or send books instead—we now say that the offer is still open, and that as the prospect of an early revival of the quarterly is by no means flattering it would be better to have the account closed.

Avarice says: "I will oppress the weak and devour the fruits of his labors, and I will say that it is fate that has so ordained."—Volney.

The Outlook for Lucifer.

The New Year finds Lucifer with a larger subscription list than ever before. In fact the number of subscribers has more than doubled since the office of publication was moved from Topeka to Chicago twenty months ago. This certainly is flattering to the publisher in these times of industrial stagnation and financial depression.

This remarkable increase which has come without any extraordinary advertising or offers of unusual inducements to subscribers, is significant of the growing interest manifested in homo-culture and sexology. Silence on this most important of sciences is no longer demanded by men and women of intelligence. Even many persons who have long been blinded by superstitious reverence for past customs now have come to see that in matters pertaining to the production of the human species ignorance is worse than a crime.

Lucifer, as its name indicates, is a Light Bearer. It has done much to dissipate the gloom of ignorance and superstition in the minds of thousands, but countless millions are still in the darkness of ignorance concerning the proper functions of sex. Millions of women are still the sexual slaves of millions of men whom they look upon as their rightful owners. Appalling as is the idea of industrial slavery it is a trifle in comparison with the sexual slavery of the mothers of all mankind. Think of it! How can any country be called civilized where only the children of women who are sexual slaves are recognized as legitimate and worthy of respect?

But few of these mothers really recognize the fact of their slavery. The sexual bondage of women is of such ancient origin that the church calls it divine and to question its justice is almost a criminal offense. But the bonds must be broken, nevertheless, and woman must be made free to control her own person and property.

In order to spread the light of Truth renewed efforts should be made this year to increase the circulation of Lucifer. At present its subscription list is made up almost exclusively of single subscribers who receive the paper each week by mail. It should be sold on the news stands. The striking title of the paper, its neat typographical appearance and above all the important nature of its contents should command for it a ready sale.

But how can newsdealers be induced to handle it? Perhaps the subscribers can assist in solving this problem. Let each person who is interested in the war which Lucifer is waging for the sexual enfranchisement of women, ask his local newsdealer to order from three to one dozen copies of the paper on trial. Induce the newsdealer to give the paper a good display in his show window or on the counters and tell him to mention it to such of his customers as usually purchase radical literature. Copies of Lucifer will be sent to newsdealers for half the regular price.

As a special offer we will send post paid free of all cost Dr. Greer's new book "A Physician in the House" (regular price $2.75) to any person who will induce a newsdealer to take ten copies of Lucifer regularly for one year. The special price to the newsdealer for these ten copies, fifty-two issues, will be five dollars.

NUMBER TWO of the "Light-Bearer Library," containing Northcote's "Free Thought and Free Love," is in press. Price ten cents to all except regular subscribers to that series. Price to subscribers twenty-five cents per year, of twelve numbers. In order to enter it as second class matter we request subscribers to this series.

WE HAVE received from the author, W. S. Bell, "Gospe Fabricators; or a Glance at the Character of the Men Who Helped to Form the Four Gospels." The subject is handled in a very concise and interesting manner, and the pamphlet will be quite valuable to those interested in the study of the Bible. It gives the names of one hundred and seventy-five gods who are retiring as man advances. Mr. Bell has contributed ten copies of this work to Lucifer's "Extension Fund." Price, fifteen cents each.

The Illustrated Double Number

Of the "Adult" is received at this office. It contains two editorials; one by George Bedborough, the editor, and one by Oswald Dawson, who edits this special number. We have space for only a portion of the chapter titles: Chapter I. is a report of the annual meeting and dinner of the Legitimation League, reported by D. Oliver. Chapter IV., "The Play's the Thing," is the diary of a London play-goer, [Victor Martell] 1896-1897, and consists of interesting comments on various "problem plays" presented during the year. Chapter V., "Some Letters, the Constitution of the Legitimation League, and a Speech by Capt. Robert C. Adams." Chapter VI., "The Judgment of Paris." Chapter VII., "Which Sex Suffers Most?" Chapter VIII., "The Physiology of Love." Chapter IX., "Sexual Education." Chapter X., "Spiritual Love." Chapter XI., "Miss de Cleyre on the Woman Question." Chapter XII., "The New Idealism." Chapter XIV., "Marriages Made in Russia"—an account of a peculiar custom of marriage on probation practiced in the land of the Czars. Chapter XV., "Cast of the Shell." Chapter XVI., "The 'Firebrand' in the Flames." Chapter XVII., "The New Martyrdom." These three chapters are by Lilian Harman. Chapter XVIII., "Letter and Reviews." Chapter XIX., "Free Love and Lesbian Love." Chapter XX., "Powder Magazines and Lighted Lucifers." Chapter XXI., "Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs." We hope to print an extended review, soon.

There are portraits of President, Secretary and Treasurer of the Legitimation League.

Eighty pages, and illustrated cover. Price, 20 cents, postage paid. The "Adult" is to be permanently enlarged. Subscription price, $1.25 a year. Order from this office.

H. L. Green sends us an advance proof of a notice he will give the Free Propaganda in the January "Free Thought Magazine," in which he says, "We suggested some months ago that the Free Lovers, in place of crowding themselves into the Freethought ranks, organize by themselves. We are pleased to learn from Lucifer that they have accepted our advice." The eagerness and facility with which Mr. Green fits facts to his desires, is amusing. If Mr. Green had read the proceedings of the late Secular Union Convention, he would have seen that Radicals were well represented all through the Convention, both among the speakers and the audience. We shall most certainly not refrain from Freethought work merely to please Mr. Green. By the way, by what right does Mr. Green assume to dictate who shall and and who shalt not be members of the National Society? One would look long to find any favorable notice of it in the "Free Thought Magazine." In fact, its readers would never have known that there was a National Convention in New York last year, had they depended upon its pages, alone, for information. L. H.

Replies to Critics.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

In addition to Lillian's splendid reply to Mr. Van Deventer I want to say a few words to him.

As I have already stated in my answer to Dr. Truman, those rare cases of perfect mateship will always exist in spite of the institution of marriage and regardless of free love theories, and if Mr. Van Deventer's experience in love and marriage has been one of those soul-blending affairs I can only say he has been truly blessed. The true reformer's mission is not to destroy the happiness of any who may be now happy. These do not need our aid; but to those who are sinking in the sloughs of despondency and misery would we lend a helping hand.

Because the fates have been exceptionally kind to him, would Mr. Van Deventer refuse to those whose married life has been the saddest of sad failures the opportunity to try again? He will probably tell me the divorce courts open to the unhappily married a way out of the difficulty. But if my critic had had any experience in said courts he could scarcely condemn his worst enemy to undergo the ordeal, especially if he knew that enemy to have a refined and sensitive nature. Our laws concerning divorce, and the courts that execute these laws, are cruel, cruel! and of the two evils sensitive women generally prefer the continuance of their loveless lives with uncongenial husbands—that is, when they lack the courage to seek a shorter and surer way out, by taking their own lives.

Why not free love? Is love ever anything else but free? Can you bind love? Can you fetter it? Can you command it? No! You can only win it. Voluntarily, spontaneously, it comes and goes, and if you have not the qualities or attributes to attract or to hold it, rest assured no outward bond, no law of church or state, will ever be able to accomplish what unfettered nature fails to do.

And, as Lillian says, "Why should not young girls prepare for motherhood?" If I could have my way no girl would ever be a mother until well prepared for motherhood; and I would add that a day, a week or a few months even, are not enough for such preparation. I think no woman—and no man either, can be too well prepared for the sacred responsibilities of parenthood.

As the years pass by I realize more and more how great, how fearfully great are these responsibilities. And does Mr. Van Deventer really believe that the woman who has prepared herself, by careful study and training, and who thoroughly understands the import of her mission as mother, will be apt to select as father for her child a man who possesses a superficial nature, or who has only the instincts of the butterfly?—a man who seeks only the fleeting pleasure of the moment, regardless of what the results of that pleasure may be? Could such a man win the love of such a woman?

The girl who has been taught, reared and trained in the principles of free love will not easily become the victim of the roue, or the libertine. She knows what she wants, and, rest assured she is not going to be a mere plaything to be used and cast aside, as a man may see fit. She will be able to discriminate; she will know the difference between a dissembler,—a mere sensualist,—and one of nature's noblemen. The man chosen by her will be too noble, too good and true to want to cast all the responsibility upon woman—woman the weaker half of humanity—weaker mainly because of her ignorance and because of the advantage given to man by law and custom. Such a man will feel honored, will feel proud to be the chosen one, the one deemed worthy to become the father of her unborn child. Such a man could never permit the woman he loves, and who loves him, to bear unaided all the burdens that parenthood involves and imposes.

"To born babies as fast as nature will allow them." No! No!! No!!! What woman, if her own master, to say nothing of women so well instructed as were these girls of whom we are speaking, would willingly, year after year, give birth to another and still another babe? They would be hard to find, I ween. Five years had passed since they had become inmates of the home, but none had become a mother more than once, in that time. Imelda had been by no means in a hurry—her babe was a nursling at the breast, and Alice was only then looking forward to that very important event. Read carefully and you will see that the three little prattlers belong to Cora, Edith and Hilda.

If Mr. Van Deventer had read "Hilda's Home," as he says he did, I cannot understand how he can make the claim that motherhood, or "early motherhood," would prevent these women from developing, and that all their time would be devoted to their children. In the small individual homes of today, I grant you, such is the case, but it would not be in homes constructed, arranged or regulated as was that of Hilda and her co-operators. In such a home not every mother need be a rearer as well as bearer of children. There would be those who would make a profession, a specialty, of training and teaching the babes. To take proper care of a child one must herself have proper training and must have natural adaptation for the business. By carefully reading what is said of the "Home," Mr. Van Deventer will see that the "trained nurse" had her place therein, thereby giving our girl friends the opportunity of being true to their natures,—allowing them to partake of the joys of motherhood without becoming slaves thereto.

To W. G. Scott I would say: Under present economic conditions, about the only thing we could do, as I think, with a number of emancipated persons of both sexes, who are independent enough to practice as well as theorize, would be to put them into a co-operative home. With only the initiated admitted within the sacred walls of this home the outside world does not need to know it all. Why should they not make an experiment and be happy, as only such emancipated people would know how to be? If we show people the tangle of superstition, prejudice and ignorance in which they are caught we must also show them the way out, but the economic reconstruction is as yet far in the distance—too far away to justify the hope that we may reach it before we die of hunger and thirst for the right and true way of living. Economic reconstruction is coming, it must and will come, when the masses will be able to practicalize freedom on all lines, but while working for economic independence for all, let the emancipated ones,—the leaders of the race, practicalize their freedom in all possible ways. Freedom to think involves and includes freedom to do, so long as we invade not the equal right of others. To uphold the theory and deny the practice is not freedom. It is still slavery, and all the worse because of the self-contradiction, the self-condemnation.

To conclude: The chapter on economics will be forthcoming. In that chapter the effort will be made to show the possibility of establishing "Hilda's Homes" even under present conditions. A plan is now afoot, here in Pittsburg—my home—to start a colony on a plan that makes it possible for the working man to get a home without paying interest, and on easier terms, or for less money, than he now pays out as rent. Within this colony it is proposed to build a "Hilda's Home." Whether success will crown the effort, or not, the future will show.

As to a chapter on "Dianism"—not having been in a position to test the virtues of this doctrine, or method of association, I am not prepared to advocate or reject it. For general practice, and in cases where wisdom is required—that is, where the use of contracepts is not understood, it certainly would be a wise method to pursue; but I doubt if a couple in possession of youth and health, inspired by a love passionate and strong, would find Dianism practicable. I fear me their feelings would run away with their reason.

But however that may be the introduction of the Diana theory into a home like Hilda's, or any other home, could do no harm and probably would do much good, as its tendency would be to self-control, a virtue much needed by all. No absolute rule of sex life can be laid down. Each a law unto her or himself, is my maxim. Let each and all be happy in their own way.

Every so-called fallen woman should if possible, be prevented from getting into an irreclaimable state. We have no more right to say to a woman who has lost her virginity, out of marriage, "You shall no more be a woman, nor be respected," than we have to say to a man who has stolen something, "you shall never more be honest" No doubt these ideas may seem strange to the people of a land wherein the value of marriage as a moral agent is evidenced by the fact that all the better-class prostitutes in London are almost entirely supported by married men and where magistrates send starving men, women and even children to prison for stealing food.—Allen Ludlow, in University Magazine.

A fool in his revolt is infinitely wiser than a philosopher forging a learned apology for his chains.—Kossuth.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Florence Loucks, Altruria, S. D.:—We have received Lucifer in exchange for the "Ruralist," and we enjoy and endorse its teachings. Besides we always give it to friends to read. Enclosed find twenty-five cents for the "Light Bearer Library," of which please send us one copy as the leaflets come out.

Chas. S. Simmons, Bernardi, Okla.:—Enclosed find fifty cents. I want the accompanying list of books, also Lucifer for six months. I will send you the balance and some new subscribers in a short time, as soon as I collect some money; but I can't wait—must have some more light on this (to me) new reform.

Myra Peppers, Ottumwa, Iowa:—Put my name down for at least two copies of "Hilda's Home"—more if I can afford it—cloth binding. The time seems near at hand when we must begin constructive work, must practicalize the truths so long taught and accepted. One group of earnest, honest people living in harmony would do more to convince the doubting than all the talking and writing for a decade. Enclosed find ten cents for May Collins' "Plea for the New Woman."

John A. Wilson, Phila., Pa.:—Anthony Comstock this morning, Dec. 9, entertained an audience at one of our up-town Baptist churches by telling what a good man he is; how for twenty-four years he has guarded and stood alone as protector of the morals of 35,000,000 children. In his characteristic way he denounced the newspapers as being in a large part responsible for the increase of crime by giving such realistic reports of criminal news. Then he branched off into a laudation of the divine form of woman and pronounced it "abominable that it should be chosen as a device for advertising. Since Adam and Eve were in the garden a sense of modesty had existed." What a farce to hear this man talk of modesty. Surely the forms of those poor unfortunate girls who were made to dance naked before him in the Green st. bagnio, while he and his lecherous companions feasted their eyes on the sight—and their appetites on rich wines—must have risen up before him in self condemnation. This is the time of the year that the sleek and well fed Saint Anthony usually starts some fresh scheme of deviltry, to encourage his dupes who furnish the cash. Alas, will people never have their eyes opened?

Albina L. Washburn, Fort Collins, Colo.:—Thanks to Lois Waisbrooker and Susan Swaysgood for appreciative words. Dear friends I am holding you all in my heart of hearts. Whoever lays a flower of love on the altar of humanity must be of our world-wide family. I once had a dear little nephew in my home circle who grew up with me, so impulsive and so mischievous and active was he, just to be doing something, I found I could not love him if I looked at his faults, so determined to ignore them and build up on the other side by looking only for his virtues. This has made him a man among men, and my own sweetheart yet.

It is the true and only way to carry us through. Love overlooks faults and forgives along the way. Let us forgive our enemies and make friends of them. The line of least resistance is the smooth highway to happiness. Optimism believeth, hopeth all things for all mankind. Let us direct our energy toward building up beside the ruins of decaying fallacies the temple of truth and love.

L. W. Reedy, 789½ Mission St, San Francisco, Cal.:—Enclosed find $1.10 to apply on my subscription to Lucifer, and books. Do you know of any freethought society in this city; or can you inform me of any friends of the cause? By "free thought" I mean it in its fullest sense, i. e., free investigation of all philosophical subjects whatever, religious, sexual or political. I think any free thinker who takes in the full scope of religion cannot but drift into the sex question and the marriage question if they go deep enough. Would be very glad to have "Hilda's Home" in book form. I would be pleased to correspond with friends of sex reform of either sex who have the time. Please send "In Brighter Climes or Life in Socioland, "Bar Sinister and Licit Love" and "Cupid's Yokes." I cannot see how humanity can make very rapid strides towards freedom when over three-fourths of the people do not practice what they know to be right through fear of ostracism.

[I regret to say I know of no such society as our friend enquires for, in San Francisco, and know of few such anywhere. "Freethinkers," as a rule, vie with the churches in their efforts to please Madame Grundy. They dare not be true to the logic of the "Nine Demands of Liberalism," for "fear of social ostracism." M. H.

Hattie Wilbur, Oregon:—It takes a truly elevated mind to understand the real meaning of free love. Some of the most intelligent and also the most moral people I ever knew believed in free love—man and woman giving each other perfect liberty, and no sneaking. They treat each other better and take less liberty than they otherwise would—supposing always the man to be a gentleman and not inclined to make a fool of himself. Am only acquainted with what are known as Christian countries, and they are surely wallowing in free lust, especially among married people.

When one thinks of the misery caused by religion, whiskey, love of money and the ownership of woman one does not know which to put first in the list.

All over the land there are poor little women living in poverty and ignorance; working hard every day; with their children around them (most of which are not worth raising); weak from overwork and nursing a babe; all the time tired, with a beast of a husband to make demands on them that are death to them, and yet thousands of them are so cowed down, and so in dread of the brute's temper that they constantly submit and soon die; die at an age when they should be blooming like the rose, enjoying all the sweetness there is in life. And so they bury the jewels of earth. I don't mean all men are so, but many.

R. E. La Fetra, Soldier's Home, Calif.:—Enclosed you will find a postal order for one dollar to renew my subscription to Lucifer. Am very glad that during these times of "McKinley prosperity" you can keep the Lucifer plant, and the Lucifer crew, above "high water mark," so that they will outride and outlive the "McKinley waves of prosperity" and also outlive Comstock and his courts, jails, prisons and penitentiaries, until every woman in all our fair land shall break every chain that binds her. Then after all the women have broken their chains, the men will be ashamed to clank theirs in the listening ears of humanity, and so will make a picnic for the breaking of their own chains, if for no other reason but as the Dutchman would say, for "von dam spite," and for fear that woman the "afterthought" of the Jewish God, might possibly now become not only the "chief corner stone" but also the head of the temple, and that thought, poor man, the former "Lord of creation" could not endure. Then would not these chain-breaking picnics for both women and men insure the birth of only free children? because love children, and would not that mean the redemption of the entire human race? Would not that be superior to the McKinley wave of prosperity so much written and talked about in all our country at the present time? If not why not? Suppose we all work for it. A happy Christmas to all the Lucifer group and readers of the dear old paper.

"The Adult;" Organ of the Legitimation League of England, contains in its fourth number: Editorial; "Sex Love and Mutability," by Orford Northcote; "The Last Council of Authority," by Robert Braithwaite; "Spiritual Love," by William Platt; "Wanted, A New Dictionary," by Ess Tee; "The Judgment of Paris—Up to Date," by Leighton Pagan. "The Adult" is a neat magazine of twenty-four pages, with attractive cover. Price 5 cents. Order of Lucifer, 1304 Congress St., Chicago, Ill. Price per year, 50 cts.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

693.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 10 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 36 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 18 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 20 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,			.25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes,			.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,			.10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker,			.10
Practical Co-operation;	"	"	.10
The Revival of Puritanism;	"	"	.10
Love and the Law;	"	"	.05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman;	"	"	.05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,			.05
Digging for Bedrock;	"	"	.10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,			.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood.	.03
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.	.25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	.25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.

This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LIBRARY OF SEXOLOGY.

Comprising the latest and best works on marriage, reproduction, sexual relations and the betterment of the human race.

What the Young Need to Know; A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Startling, thoughtful, scientific. A social antiseptic. No better book for young men and women, as well as for parents was ever published. .10

Bar Sinister and Lucifer Love, by Oswald Dawson. First biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League of England. Contains fine half-tone pictures of Lillian Harman, the new president of the League, and Edith Lanchester. Bound in boards, 307 pages. .50

Rights of Natural Children, by Oswald Dawson. Contains verbatim report of the inaugural proceedings of the Legitimation League, and special articles by Gladys Dawson, Benj. C. Pulleyne, Dr. Lees and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. Also, portrait of Gladys Dawson, Oswald Dawson and Wordsworth Donisthorpe. .20

The Prodigal Daughter, and other papers, by Rachel Campbell. A powerful plea in behalf of outcast women, proving conclusively that legal marriage is the cause of prostitution. .25

The Old and the New Ideal, by E. F. Riedebusch. Discussion of the Sex, Love and Marriage Question. Radical and iconoclastic, striking powerful blows at social and religious superstition; 347 pages. Cloth, $1. Paper. .50

Discussion of the Social Question, by Dr. Juliet H. Severance and David Jones. An able defense of the right of woman to control her own person and to ignore state or church interference. .10

Anything More, My Lord? By Lois Waisbrooker. .10
Fountain of Life, " " paper cover, .10
Perfect Motherhood, " " cloth, price, 1.00
Occult Forces of Sex, " " .10
A Sex Revolution, " " .25
Helen Harlow's Vow, " " .25
Woman, Church and State. By Matilda Joslyn Gage, cloth, 1.50

When Love is Liberty and Nature Law, an address by John Badcock, Jr. An excellent plea for freedom in the love relations. .10

Sexual Enslavement of Women, a radical pamphlet showing the fate of countless thousands of legal wives is worse than that of the girls who are forcibly held in the dives of the Wisconsin lumber regions as prostitutes for the lumbermen. .10

Motherhood in Freedom, by M. Harman. A Short Essay or Sermon upon the Rights, Duties and Responsibilities of Motherhood, from the Standpoint of Equal Freedom For All and Special Privileges For None. Per dozen for distribution, 35 cents. Single copies .05

GREAT COMBINATION OFFER!

* * *

For a limited time and for the purpose of spreading the light and helping in the battle for Free Womanhood, we will send the following stirring essays on the Sex Problem for only Twenty-five cents:

"The Prodigal Daughter, or The Price of Virtue," By Rachel Campbell.
"Sexual Enslavement of Woman," By E. C. Walker.
"Motherhood in Freedom," By Moses Harman.
"Pioneer Chips," From the private correspondence of Rachel Campbell, By Mary Florence Johnson.
"Will the Coming Woman Marry?" By X.
"Love and the Law," By E. C. Walker.
"What Diana Teaches," By Tolstoi.

Help spread the light by buying and reading these thought-stirring works and lend them to your friends.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 75 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Emma Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va. We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 131 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill., Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON Makes Child-Birth Easy. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1001, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if its mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 131 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 3. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JANUARY 19, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 694

The House by the Side of the Road.

There are hermit souls that live withdrawn
In the place of their self content;
There are souls, like stars, that dwell apart
In a fellowless firmament;
There are pioneer souls that blaze their paths
Where highways never ran—
But let me live by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by—
The men who are good and the men who are bad,
As good and as bad as I.
I would not sit in the scorner's seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban—
Let me live in a house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

I know there are brook-gladdened meadows ahead
And mountains of wearisome height;
That the road passes on through the long afternoon
And stretches away to the night.
But still I rejoice when the travelers rejoice
And weep with the strangers that moan,
Nor live in my house by the side of the road
Like a man who dwells alone.

Let me live in my house by the side of the road
Where the race of men go by—
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, fool-h—so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat
Or hurl the cynic's ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

—Sam. Walter Foss, in "The Independent."

Paragraphs.

BY REV. SIDNEY HOLMES.

Self-respect is born of self-knowledge.

—

The best things in life are the secret things.

—

The most upright man is forced to be more than half hypocrite.

—

"God is Love" the preachers say, and then they make him the apotheosis of hatred.

—

"And God said Let there be light," says the Bible. Where then is the church of God?

—

Everybody thinks he knows what love is and yet no person has ever been able to define it.

—

Insanity is a product of civilization. Explorers say it does not exist among savage tribes.

—

Shame is an acquired feeling and its existence is no proof that the thing one is ashamed of is wrong.

—

When Christian missionaries invade the domains of savages civilization and syphilization soon follow.

—

Errors are generally caused by ignorance. The "erring" woman is always one who is ignorant of the nobility of womanhood.

—

There is no record that Jesus ever performed a marriage ceremony or advised anybody to get married.

—

For every harlot induced by the church to forsake a life of shame one hundred women are forced into lives of prostitution by superstitious reverence for marriage.

—

A fugitive slave and her eight-year-old son were arrested in Chicago last week and taken back to the woman's master at Bloomington. The woman became the slave of Louis Mueller eight months ago and left him to earn her own living because he beat her when she refused to do his bidding. She became a slave by marrying Mueller.

The Practical Joke of a United States Jury.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The Great New City is hilarious, for has not Anthony Comstock, the immaculate mentor of morals and sleepless guardian of the purity of the mail bags and the postal cars, been "vindicated"? Did not a federal jury day before yesterday award him just six five-millionths of the damages he demanded from our irreverent friend, Dr. Montague R. Leverson? Did not this sapient jury declare that the character and reputation of the Censor are worth six cents, no more, no less? Did it not give him all he asked, $50,000, save a paltry $49,999.94? To be sure, it assessed the costs against him, but then one can not reasonably expect to have everything one's own way, even in a United States court. His fortune is made, at the worst, for he has the six cents, and as the Anti-Cartoon bill failed last winter, the caricaturists have done themselves proud in his behalf.

The history of the cause is briefly this: About one year ago Dr. M. R. Leverson appeared before a legislative committee at Albany and spoke in opposition to a measure in which Comstock was interested, making serious charges against some of the Censo agents. His communications there were privileged. Smarting under the defeat of his bill, the Great Purist accosted Dr. Leverson in the Central Station at Albany, apparently with the sole purpose of provoking the enthusiastic doctor into making statements that would enable Comstock to procure his arrest for defamation of character. The scheme worked, for during the altercation that took place between the two, Dr. Leverson turned to the bystanders and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, this man is Anthony Comstock, a notorious blackmailer, who never earned an honest dollar in his life." Hence this suit, and hence the verdict for SIX CENTS.

During the trial in Judge Lacombe's court, Comstock was badly baited and tortured by Dr. Leverson's attorney, Franklin Pierce, while the defendant himself frankly admitted that he used the language charged against him and deliberately affirmed his continued belief in the truth of his allegations. And after all this the Censor got SIX CENTS.

One question that Mr. Pierce asked was this: "Isn't it a fact that you have written letters in the names of young girls, stating that you were burdened with disgrace and pleading with the doctors to whom they were addressed, for God's sake to send them something to save them from disgrace for life?" In answer to other questions, the Agent was forced to confess that for twenty-five years he has been writing decoy letters, trying to induce men and women to violate law, that he might prosecute them. In summing up for his client, Lawyer Pierce said that Comstock "did not dare sue the newspapers which have repeatedly branded him as a blackmailer, because with their resources they would be likely to prove their charges. Instead, he selected Dr. Leverson, who could not afford to make an extended investigation, as his victim. The physician had read the newspaper reports and editorial comments on Comstock, and believed them to be true." Lawyer W. C. Beecher summed up for Comstock. He said that Dr. Leverson admitted having used the language charged, that not a witness had been introduced to prove the allegations against the Censor, that the defendant had practically charged in the Senate committee room that the Society for the Suppression of Vice was a society of blackmailers, and that he had deliberately sworn in an affidavit that Comstock was a malignant blackmailer. And yet, in the face of these undeniable facts, the jury came in after an hour's deliberation with a verdict of only SIX CENTS for the plaintiff, and assessed the costs upon him! No wonder the Censor "left the court room hurriedly, refusing to be interviewed on the subject of the satisfaction he had obtained," and that "Dr. Leverson and his friends were jubilant." The "Journal," at the conclusion of its report, in a spirit of satire, quotes "Cymbeline"—

> "'Tis slander
> Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose tongue
> Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose breath
> Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie
> All corners of the world."

The same paper remarks that "actions in the federal courts are expensive, and the Comstock purse will have to receive many contributions for the 'suppression of vice' before it will entirely recover from the shocking down it received yesterday." The "Evening Sun" comments:

> A jury of this town found yesterday that the reputation of a certain censor of the public morals has been damaged to the extent of six cents by a very sweeping statement made by the defendant. This just goes to show how absurd it is that such an individual should have it in his power to decide that the works of Fielding and other masters are unfit for general reading.

I think the readers of Lucifer will be interested in the "Journal's" comparative estimate of the work and characters of Comstock and Dr. Leverson, which I subjoin:

"There were many mirthful features about this desperate effort of Comstock to straighten out the dreadful kink in his reputation put there by the little doctor. Personally the two men are unlike to the highest imaginable degree.

"Comstock confesses to having been in the public eye for the last twenty-five years as a professional suppressor of vice. During most of that time he has been the president of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, an organization of which the general public seldom hears anything, except in direct connection with Comstock's name. In the public prints the two are inseparable—the society and the man. Dr. Leverson has said that the society was organized for the purpose of blackmail, but that's another story. Comstock declares that his society is doing good work in preventing the great metropolis from being burdened by all that is bad and vicious.

"Once a year he gets out a little pamphlet describing the virtues of his work. He tells at great length how many greengoods circulars he has seized, how many Wayback County tourists he has returned to their homes with their bank rolls intact; how many policy shops he has closed; how many gamblers his raiders have gathered in red-handed; how many places of bad repute he himself has visited; how many bad books he has read and tried to suppress.

"Comstock has a supersensitive moral character. He cannot endure the merest mention of such classics as the 'Heptameron,' the 'Decameron,' or 'The Golden Ass of Apuleius.' He abhors Rabelais and Balzac. D'Annunzio's 'Triumph of Death' threw him into paroxysms and he rushed to the courts to have it suppressed and burned. But the learned justices did not sustain him, and his plaint thereon may be read in the last annual report of his society.

"Comstock courts publicity, publicity, publicity. Dr. Leverson does not. For many years the latter has been doing good works in a quiet and unobtrusive way. He is a philosopher and was the intimate friend of the late Henry George. He is a lawyer, as well as a physician, and has written several important treatises on legal and medical subjects.

"Comstock is the disciple of suppression, Dr. Leverson is the friend of all oppressed. He gained prominence by aiding political refugees to this country after the coup d'etat of Louis Napoleon. Before that he had been well known as an Abolitionist. Recently he has acheived prominence as a vigorous opponent to compulsory vaccination.

"An example of Dr. Leverson's kindly acts was shown at the time of the Lexow investigation. Two East Side ward men had arrested a poor Russian widow who kept a little cigar store. They charged her with maintaining a disorderly house and procured her conviction. Her two children were taken away from her by the Gerry Society and placed in an institution. Ignorant of our customs, and half crazed by her loss, she wandered about without a friend. The case was brought to the attention of Dr. Leverson and he devoted his time and money to procuring the restoration of the widow's children. He was successful, but the woman died soon after, as the direct result of the hardships she had undergone.

"Such is the man whom Comstock summoned to court to pay him $50,000 damages for injuring his reputation, and whom he succeeded in mulcting to the extent of SIX CENTS."

The Sexual Instinct in Woman.

BY "ARBUTUS."

Certain physiologists would have us believe that, as a rule, the sexual instinct in woman is not developed to the same extent that it is in man. Indeed, one authority goes so far as to assert that at least two-thirds of all women find no pleasure in the sexual embrace, and submit to it only for the purpose of pleasing their husbands and keeping them from seeking sexual satisfaction elsewhere. I cannot believe that this statement is correct, and I feel sure that anyone who has given the subject thoughtful consideration will agree with me in saying that nothing can be further from the truth.

There is no doubt that many women do not find any pleasure in the sexual embrace, but this is not due to any inherent defect in woman's nature. It is a matter of education. In seeking for the cause of it there is no difficulty in discovering what is at fault.

Men and women grow to adult life under totally different conditions. At a very early age boys learn something of the sexual functions—generally from their older companions; and there are but few boys who grow to adult life without having had some personal experience in this direction. On the other hand, a large majority of girls reaches adult life totally ignorant of the proper use of their sexual organs; or, if they do know anything at all about them, the knowledge they have is incorrect and misleading. Many a girl has entered married life with but the faintest conception of what will be expected of her, and how she should conduct herself, and it is not strange that, under such conditions, instead of having the sexual instinct cultivated it is blunted, if not entirely destroyed.

The libertine thoroughly understands his business. He does not frighten his victim by a bold attempt to obtain favors. He knows that no matter how modest she may be; that no matter how she would shrink from the thought of allowing the slightest liberties with her person, deep within her is implanted a germ which, under proper cultivation, will spring forth and blossom with all the intensity of full-blown passion. He knows that the sexual instinct is lying dormant, and only needs to be properly fanned to burn with the fiercest ardor. Craftily he goes to work, and with kisses and caresses he lightens up that instinct into a feeble flame. His victim realizes that something strange has taken place, but, in her innocence, she does not know what it is. Her seducer, too, recognizes it, but he knows too well what it means, and with redoubled kisses and caresses he fans the smouldering fire until, after a greater or lesser time, it bursts into an ardent flame and his victim experiences in all its force the sexual desire, and is as ripe fruit ready to fall into the seducer's hand.

Not so the newly-made husband. This woman—his wife—is his property. What matter if she be innocent and utterly ignorant of all that the sexual act implies? He will soon teach her; and forthwith, in spite of any hesitancy on her part, and without any attempt to create desire within her, he proceeds to show his manhood (God save the mark!) No matter if it be difficult and painful to her; that is one of the things every woman must go through. His victim feels mortified and humiliated, and wonders that anyone can find anything pleasant in such a proceeding. Is it any wonder that thereafter she finds no pleasure in the sexual embrace? that she shudders at the thought of having to endure it? Given, a sensitive woman treated in this way, and it would be a miracle if an atom of sexual desire survived.

Yet had she been treated differently; had she been petted and kissed and caressed, without any attempt being made to enjoy the sexual embrace with her on that first night, how different her after life might have been!

Men and brethren: Let me urge you not to make this mistake. Don't pin your faith to the physiologist's dictum. The sexual instinct is not absent in the majority of women. They are capable of developing as strong passions as are to be found in men, but they must be taught how to develop them. You cannot violently ravish a sensitive woman and then expect her to find pleasure in her shame and degradation. Treat her as she should be treated; give her time to allow the feeble flame to be properly lighted up, and you will have nothing to complain of.

When men come to act upon this principle, there will be less heard about unhappy marriages and there will be fewer men seeking sexual satisfaction away from home.

Monogamy and Evolution.

Orford Northcote, in "University Magazine."

We find him [Mr. Wordsworth Donisthorpe] saying that "just as all life is an evolution from the simple to the complex, so the monogamic relation is the last, crowning, and most elevated sexual condition." It does not seem to have occurred to him that his analogy has landed him dangerously near the region of the absurd. If all life be an evolution from the simple to the complex, how can monogamy, which is a simple sexual relation, be the crowning sexual condition? On the lines of his analogy, the crowning sexual relation should be a complex one, comprising varied desires and varied psychological attractions toward various persons. And, not to mince matters, we find this to be precisely the case. While sexual desire in the primitive man was in the main confined to one woman, the human race has persistently moved in the direction of diversity of desire. Just as the palate of a child barely discriminates beyond the recognition of sweets and sours, while the civilized adult has an extended gamut of taste perception, so civilization has immensely widened the scope of man's sexual attraction. For the bed-rock savage, the mere satisfaction of crude sexual hunger suffices. But as the imperfectly developed nervous organization of the savage is succeeded by the highly-wrought nervous system of later man, in like manner, simple physical sexual desire is succeeded by a complex psychological condition which demands for its equilibration opportunities of physical and social intercourse with varied members of the opposite sex. . . . . And so we come to the conclusion that exclusiveness in the sexual relation must eventually give place to variety. But what of the children? We have seen that in the early days of the race, marriage was rendered necessary by the requirements of the offspring. But the decrease of the passion of jealousy on the one hand, and the growth of the social spirit on the other, will enable civilized people to so order their relationship to offspring that their existence will not depend upon an exclusive sexual contract between parents. Here, as elsewhere, man will overcome the obstacles which nature has placed in the way of his enjoyment.

The supposed advance of the human race from promiscuity to monogamy being a myth, the whole superstructure which Mr. Donisthorpe has built upon it melts into thin air. The tendency of the race is not towards monogamy, but away from it—towards variety. That even the facts of personal experience point this way Mr. Donisthorpe comes very near admitting. When he says that "young people are not monogamic at first," when he adds that "It is the tritest of commonplaces that the younger a couple start married life the less happy the union is likely to prove," he is merely insisting on the fact that in the heyday of sexual vigor, human desire is for variety. As for his argument that youthful longing for sexual change tones down, as life advances, into respectable conformity to the monogamic custom, it only means that the difficulties in the way of youth satisfying these varied desires, deadens them. On desuetude follows atrophy. Because a slave after long years of bondage conceives an affection for his slavery; because a long immured prisoner is unhappy if removed from his cell, it does not follow that the evolution of the human race is from liberty to slavery. Put a horse in a mine and he will become blind. Immure a man in a monastery, and if he be really an ascetic, his tastes will atrophy. Place human beings in such circumstances as call for the constant repression of every sexual desire outside the married relation, and the love-passion will be crushed to death under the weight of the sordid ambitions which are so ready to usurp the high place held in youth by the tender passion.

Mr. Donisthorpe says: "I believe in monogamy, not because it is good for the race, not because it is good for the husband, not because it is good for the child—but because it is good for each and all."

How does this generalization accord with the facts? For the race, monogamy is bad, because it hinders free sexual selection; for the husband it is bad, because it means either sexual slavery to one woman, or a life of hypocrisy and deceit; for the wife it is bad, because, whatever her physical condition may be, pregnant with child or suckling her babe, it makes her the slave of the sexual desires of her husband; for the child it is bad, because it rears him in an atmosphere of sexual ignorance, and worse than ignorance; for the youth it is bad, because it offers him no opportunity of satisfying his vehement love yearnings other than in the debasement and debauchery of the brothel, or in the mind-and-body-destroying habit of masturbation. Under monogamy, the child, the youth, the maiden, the wife and the husband all suffer. And upon the harlot and upon the venereally diseased; upon the seduced maiden and the illegitimate child born of that seduction, the Christian world heaps its scorn and bitterness. This is the vaunted modern ideal; the so-called crowning and most elevated sexual condition. But in antagonism to this there is a fairer ideal, whose realization, looming now on the horizon, will enable the world to appreciate the beauty and fulness of love under freedom.

I can imagine a knave taking to politics for his own ends or out of sheer vanity; I can understand a well-meaning man taking to it because he is filled with pity for the miserable wretches he sees around him; but I can't understand a philosopher entering the nasty sty.—Ernest Newman, in "University Magazine."

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—;
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1304 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$404.00
Elisha Crawford,	.75
Mrs. B. Falbe,	.50

"Firebrand Fund."

The following sums have been received at this office for the benefit of "The Firebrand Group," A. J. Pope, Henry Addis and A. Isaak, convicted of violating the postal laws by depositing for mailing, copies of the "Firebrand."

Previously acknowledged,	$13.75
W. Schemenour,	.50
Mrs. B. Falbe,	.50
Susan Reicherter,	.50

M. FLORENCE JOHNSON, the most logical and entertaining woman lecturer on Freethought or radical subjects, will make a short trip west in January and Febuary. She will address the Cincinnati Liberal Society Jan. 30 and Feb. 6. Mrs. Johnson also gives first class literary entertainments. She needs no introduction to the readers of "Our New Humanity," to which she contributed valuble papers. Societies engaging her will enjoy a treat. For terms and dates, address M. Florence Johnson, 244 W. 143 Street, New York City.

EMMA GOLDMAN requests us to say that her western tour will begin earlier than first announced. She now expects to lecture at Philadelphia, Feb. 16, 17, 18 and 20. From there she will go to Baltimore and Washington, thence to Pittsburg where she will remain two or three weeks; then further west. Her subjects will be: "The New Woman;" "The Woman Question;" "The Absurdity of Non-resistance to Evil;" "Patriotism;" "Charity;" "Authority versus Liberty." She asks for correspondence from friends interested in this course of lectures. Her home address is 50 First St., N. Y. City.

News From the Front.

Among the many battles now waging in the world of ideas and of action none is of more interest to the thoughtful on-looker than is the battle for freedom of press and of speech on the one hand and for suppression of press and of speech on the other. Many of us think that this is the most important of all the conflicts now raging on this continent, or on any other continent, since without freedom of press and of speech human progress would scarcely be possible. That any man or class of men, in this alleged land of liberty, should be engaged in the business of suppression, the business of prosecuting and imprisoning others for differences of opinion on any subject whatever, seems very strange—almost incredible of belief, but when we remember that the people of this country encourage and sustain a vast hierarchy, or army of priests and clergymen, numbering more than one hundred thousand men, besides more than twice that number of lay workers, women and men, whose business it is to teach the people that thought and speech and press are dangerous, unless kept within lines that they themselves mark out as safe—when we remember all this it is not in the least strange that some men, men ambitious of power and social influence, should insidiously, or by stealth, secure the passage of laws by which they can obtain good salaries for themselves as public censors, and at the same time earn the gratitude of the general public—the believers in the religious doctrine that some beliefs are dangerous and should be suppressed.

One of the most striking of the many illustrations showing how easy it is to get convictions against those who teach unpopular doctrines has just been given in the case of the prosecuted editors and publishers of the lately suppressed "Firebrand" of Portland, Oregon. From the "Commoner" of that city we quote at some length:

"The trial of Henry Addis, A. J. Pope and A. Isaak in the United States district court last Monday morning was a farce. It was a fight against free press on the part of the district attorney, made on general principles, and the most foreign evidence was introduced to prejudice the jury.

"Anyone coming into the courtroom while McGinn's speech was in process of delivery would have thought him an attorney for the prosecution. He did everything in his power to convict the defendants while pretending to defend them.

"Judge Bellinger saw the weakness of McGinn's defense and when charging the jury instructed them to return a verdict of not guilty on the second count, and practically said that a verdict of not guilty should be brought in in favor of Addis and Isaak. The charge of the court to the jury was a firm denial of the contention of the district attorney, and with such instructions any jury of intelligence would have acquitted all three of the defendants on both counts, but the jury had been so handled by McGinn, and the vicious denunciations and misrepresentations of Attorney Hall, that they were incapable of judging fairly.

"When the jury brought in a verdict of guilty on the first count, and not guilty on the second count, McGinn, trying to 'do up' his clients, moved the court that the defendants be sentenced immediately, but Judge Bellinger, desirous of doing justice, refused to act so hastily and allowed two days in which to file a motion for a new trial, stating that he would grant a new trial.

"We may conclude that the case is, in reality, only fairly opened, and it behooves every one who favors free press to protest against further prosecution. The defendants have had their business ruined, their means of subsistence taken away, and been hectored and badgered enough to punish them sufficiently even if they were guilty, as charged in the indictment, but if the instructions of the court to the jury had been followed a verdict of not guilty would have been returned. Such unwarranted and outrageous proceedings cannot be too strongly condemned, and they show all too plainly that freedom of the press is fast waning and that strong popular protest alone can stay that tendency."

It has often been said that United States courts are "organized to convict." That is what they are for, and when United States grand juries do not indict, and when United States trial juries do not convict, and when United States judges do not sentence people to death or imprisonment it is an argument in favor of the abolition of those courts, with all of their terribly expensive machinery. The jurors know this, the attorneys know this, the judges know this, and hence every man who is interested, be it ever so remotely, in keeping up the expensive show—that is, all who want the United States judiciary, with its monarchical and aristocratic history, principles and tendencies, to be perpetuated—all, all join in the chase to secure the conviction of United States prisoners, regardless of the justice or injustice of the prosecution.

This statement is well illustrated by the conduct of McGinn, the court-appointed attorney for the defense. There was no honor and no pay in securing the acquittal of his clients, and hence he very naturally joined forces with the side on which lay both present honor and prospective emolument.

Having himself had much experience in the working of these same courts the writer of these lines has good reason to say that he knows whereof he speaks. The fate of the prisoner at the bar is usually the smallest of the considerations that influence the lawyers, the jurors and the judges. The prestige, the honor, the importance, social and political, of the personality of the courts, and of the laws that create them and make them necessary, these are the things that must first be considered; then the money that can be extorted from the prisoners and their friends, comes in for a good second. Those who witnessed the proceedings in the case against the editor of Lucifer, in the United States court at Topeka, Kansas, in April 1890, will understand what is here intended to be conveyed. They will remember that it was often very hard to tell whether Col. Bradley, attorney for the defense, was working for the conviction or the aquittal of his client. They will remember, too, that when this court-appointed "limb of the law" could get no more money out of his client or his friends he flatly refused to help to fix up the case for appeal to a higher court, having taken none of the necessary steps for such proceeding during the trial.

As indicated, however, in the first paragraphs of this article, there is nothing to be wondered at, in all this. Lawyers, judges, jurors, sheriffs, hangmen, etc., are simply what their heredity and training have made them. A principal part of this training is received from religious instructors in church, in Sunday school and also in the family, and the necessary effect of that religious training is to harden, to deaden the feelings, the natural instincts that would make us kind and sympathetic towards the victims of legality, and that would make us just to those who are technically known as "law-breakers." Our instructors tell us we must "submit to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake"—or words to that effect. That it is wrong, that it is dangerous to think for ourselves, unless we choose to think as we have been taught. To think, write and speak against what the church teaches as true and right in morals, and especially in regard to sex—the propagation of the race, limitation of offspring, etc., is "obscene," "corrupting to the young," and he who thus thinks, writes, and publishes must be punished as an "enemy of God and man."

From long experience the church has learned that prosecutions under blasphemy and heresy laws do no good, but rather defeat their own object, but it has yet to learn that prosecutions under obscenity statutes, or Comstock postal laws, are also useless, and that in the end they defeat their own purpose. These prosecutions, these efforts to put knowledge under the ban of civil law seem to be the latest effort of the Christian priesthood to perpetuate their power. So long as the church can control sex relations and prevent rational limitation of offspring it feels that its lease of power is secure. And since investigation shows the relations of church and state to be inextricably blended the officers of the latter organization instinctively make common cause with the priesthood in suppressing freedom of speech and of press in matters pertaining to the reproductive function, the propagative instinct.

To sum up: Prosecutions like that against our friends in Oregon are the necessary result or outgrowth of the prevailing public sentiment, the current public conscience, in regard to sex-morality. This public conscience is an abnormal growth whose main feeders are ignorance and superstition—both imposed upon their victims by church-state authority. Comstock postal laws and the men who execute them are right and true to the causes that produce and sustain them and if repealed to-day—and the courts abolished—Liberty of speech and of press would be no more secure than now. The venue would be changed—from the court of the Federal judge to that of Judge Lynch. The same priest-made superstitious conscience would get in its work. Bad as the Federal courts are, some of us prefer their slow and expensive but quiet and orderly methods to the more expeditious and more demonstrative methods of the religion-and-morality-intoxicated mob.

It is easily seen then,—if these views and arguments be correct and logical, that as allies or helpers in the work of securing freedom of speech and of press, we have a most Herculean task before us. To make our fight against the public censors and the laws that put business in their hands is to fight effects while their causes remain untouched. How to reach and to change the public conscience that lies back of postal laws, back of censors, back of courts, this is the real question to be first decided.

In the opinion of some observers who have given thought to this matter it seems clear that so long as woman submits to the indignity, the injustice of being compelled to go to a priest or other officer for permission to use her creative powers—so long as she submits to a priest-made, anti-natural standard of morality in her relations with the other sex, just so long will her sons submit to the arbitrary rule of postal censors and priest-made laws in regard to morality in sex-relations. Self-respecting men are born only from self-respecting women.

To rouse the mothers, the prospective mothers, to a sense of there own rights, and to a sense of their responsibility to the unborn, is our first duty.

Finally—as space fails, let us help, in all practicable ways, the Oregon victims of Comstockian invasion, but let us never forget that the root causes must be removed before the effects—the laws, and their administration, can be successfully abolished.

Our Nation's Shame.

Since William the Witless ascended the German throne in 1889, the offense of lese majeste has greatly increased. To 1895 the percentage of increase was thirty-three and the number of persons punished increased by twenty-five per cent, the total number of convictions being 4,965, the years of imprisonment aggregating 1,239. During this period seven children under fifteen years of age were punished, forty-eight between fifteen and eighteen years, and one hundred and eighty-three between eighteen and twenty-one years. In 1894 there were forty-nine convictions of persons under twenty-one years. One can but wonder what is to be the fruit from this sowing of the seed of tyranny in the German empire, as one can but wonder what will be the fruit from the sowing of the same seed in the United States. There it is blasphemy to criticise the demigod William; here it is blasphemy to speak frankly concerning the relations of the sexes. We sneer at the Germans for their tame submission to injustice, but we are as deeply in the mire as they are in the mud. The shame that is theirs is equally ours. Yea, our shame is the greater, for we boast that this is a republic, that long ago we won independence, that we are a free people. Germany has William the Witless; we have Comstock the Censor. The Germans inherited William; we elected Comstock. Their bed of serfdom was made for them; we made our bed of dishonor for ourselves.

W

Olla Podrida.

BY LILLIAN.

Even in Germany wives will not stand everything! A woman there, entering in court a complaint against her husband, said: "Spanking is all right, your Honor, but I will not be kicked!" That protest is the thin edge of the wedge of rebellion—let that husband beware; his kingdom is in danger.

* * *

"For Love and Money" is the title of a pamphlet just received from the author, Leighton Pagan. As the title implies, problems of love and money are dealt with in the writer's usual direct and instructive manner. Price, 12 cents. For sale here.

* * *

Dr. Schenck, President of the Embryological Institute of Vienna, claims that he has discovered a method whereby the sex of children can surely be fore-ordained. This alleged discovery has aroused a great deal of interest. It has also created no little alarm among lawyers and doctors and preachers who think that such matters should be left to the guidance of Providence. In next week's Lucifer will appear an interesting article on this subject.

* * *

Orford Northcote's article on "Anthropology and Monogamy" in the January number of the "University Magazine" from which we quote in this issue, is one of great importance. Mr. Northcote is an unusually clear, strong writer—though it is really unnecessary to inform Lucifer's readers of this fact. "The University Magazine and Free Review" is an English monthly publication, high class in every particular, and fearlessly discusses all phases of advanced thought. It contains 100 pages. Price, 35 cents a copy, postage paid, and may be ordered through this office.

* * *

I am not acquainted with any "varietist" who claims that varied love relations must be indulged in, by any one, regardless of desire. They simply say that each shall manage his or her own love relations, and not meddle with those of other people. It is not the business of the public to inquire whether an advocate of freedom loves many, or one, or none; therefore Mrs. Slenker's illustration has nothing to do with the case.

I saw that Mrs. Slenker "did not designate anyone or any act as illegitimate, but merely said so-called." But I wanted to know what she really meant when she said she wanted free love "cleansed of the impurities cast upon it by . . . . varietists and those who advocate and practice what is called illegitimate love unions." Any love unions outside of legal monogamic marriage are "called" "illegitimate" and really are illegitimate, but I could not think that Mrs. Slenker meant what she said. It is hard for me to believe that she means that only legal unions are to be called pure free love.

* * *

The religion of the meek and lowly Nazarene, who directed his disciples to go forth without "scrip or shoon" and preach the gospel to the world, has recently received fresh impetus in Indiana. The Methodist preacher at Bristol Station and Jericho Corners needed his salary. The farmers thereabouts did not have the money to spare. No money, no preaching. The outlook was dark; but salvation they must have. So a systematic sparrow slaughtering contest was organized, which lasted for more than a month. At the close three thousand two hundred lives had been sacrificed, and the price of two cents each, which aggregated sixty-four dollars, was paid to the preacher to insure the salvation of the murderers' souls. If it is true that not a sparrow can fall to the ground without God's cognizance (see Matt. x., 29,) the Indianians probably felt that they were carrying on the massacre under his special supervision. It is said that the farmers claim that the birds have been a boon, instead of a pest to them. Possibly there will be a special dispensation of Providence which will preserve their crops from devastation by insects next summer.

The "Double Standard" Again.

That which is shown so wonderfully in the book ["Sappho"], but which nobody seems to see enough, is the gradual and steady disintegration of a man's character through association with a woman of noble and generous instincts, but no conventional standard of action; and the equally steady and certain disintegration of the woman's nature through association with a man rich in conventional standard, but without a noble or generous instinct. They both went to the dogs solely through this combination.—"Musical Courier."

Here we have again the curse of the "double standard"—all that is brightest and best in womanhood of no avail to save the possessor if she lack loyalty to the dry conventions of imbeciles or rascals, while, to emphasize woman's dependence upon her sexhood for her character, we are made to see that in man sexual "purity" can not save him if he be greatly deficient in the attributes of essential manhood. In other words, woman has but one virtue, sexual inexperience outside of marriage, while the true man is so rich in virtues that he is not materially impoverished if he lose every shred of his sexual purity. The contrast is sharp, strong, villainous. How much longer will woman consent to sit in a game where she must hazard everything on one card while her opponent has the pick of the whole pack, as many as he wants, and where, if he chooses, he may say that the biggest trump upon which she hazards her reputation and even her life is not, as against the cards he holds, worth so much as a suit deuce? W.

Interest and Proportional Representation.

BY C. L. JAMES.

Mr. Ingalls has substantially the same theory of interest that I have long entertained. I remember advocating it in the "Twentieth Century," when that was a radical publication. Speculators, who buy in expectation of a rise, have a motive for paying interest. Since they furnish a demand sufficient to take up all the loose cash, those who have any, will not lend without interest. Thus all who need to borrow are compelled to pay interest, though only speculators expect anything but clear loss from doing so. Were there no speculative trade, it would be impossible to exact interest from the common borrower. Ninety per cent and more of the speculators are devoured by the remaining less than ten per cent. The one perfectly safe business is supplying arms to this cannibal battle by lending money at the commercial rate (somewhat less than the economic, or average gain of the victors). It is made safe by the peculiar privileges granted to certain kinds of money. If every one issued his own certified ingots or his notes, to circulate for what they were found worth, it would probably be impossible to maintain the system of interest.

* * *

How proportional representation, or any other modification of existing institutions, is going to cure matrimonial rape, snobbish ambition, hypocrisy, or the morbid effect of physiological study on minds having no vocation, Alfred Cridge saith not. But he is right in the main. Human progress from the barbarous state is due to two chief causes, selection (natural and sexual), and knowledge. Institutions, our inheritance from the barbarous state, are what has principally suppressed knowledge and delayed evolution by selection.

Eau Claire, Wis.

Elmina Explains her Explanation.

Lillian says I "deny the designation of free love to any person who assumes the right to love more than one person simultaneously." I think I made it plain that all who loved, are free lovers because love must be free! But I asked for some more distinctive term for free love varietists. Campbellites hate to be so-called, and insist on being termed "Christians." While not denying their claim to Christianity, I think there is need for a more distinctive word, because from Catholics on to the end of the Bible-believers, all claim to be Christians. See? Nor did I designate anyone, or any special act, as illegitimate. I merely said "so-called." I fail to see where I claim Dianism as more PURE than other forms of pure love. I should have said "see Northcote's article" to make it plain that I did not mean his own ideas, but his quotation. I aim at clearness and brevity, and it seems to me I was clear and brief in the article under discussion, and hope I am in this explanation also.

To Beeson I would say I do not claim to be "a leader," further than the giving of facts and ideas as I see them, may lead others into "the better way." AUNT ELMINA.

Best Remedy Against Prostitution.

Allan Laidlaw, in "University Magazine."

There is no question that the best remedy against the prostitution of women, either for hire or lust, is higher education. Make them less creatures of vanity and sense. Elevate the tone of their minds, give them occupation, responsibility, position. Teach them the divinity of love, the glory of beauty, the perfection of cleanliness and self-respect. Women are so sensually brought up that men in conversation with them can rise little above the senses. Women are the slaves of the basest men now; they hunger so for admiration that they pain themselves and distort themselves to attract it. Once get vanity, greed, and idle, empty-headedness out of women's souls and natures, and half the battle is won. Then, when women fall, as it is called, they will fall only for love, and that is no degradation. As it is now, so deep is the misery of our lower strata of population in our large towns, that the fall of many women is virtually a rise. For it is better to be a "gay girl" than a thief or a murderess; better to be clean than dirty; better to exceed in natural functions than to indulge in solitary vice.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Lucy C. Roll, Idaho Springs, Colo.:—Enclosed you will find one dollar and fifty cents, one dollar for my subscription to Lucifer and fifty cents for a copy of "Hilda's Home" as soon as it is completed. Although we are seeing close times here for money, even more than after the crash in '93, Lucifer must and shall be sustained. Twenty-five years ago I sang, "The light of the world is Jesus;" now I sing, "The light of the world is Lucifer."

Essa B. Taylor, South Pasadena, Cal.:—Enclosed find fifty cents in stamps, for one copy of "Our New Humanity" and for a year's subscription to "The Light-Bearer Library." You may also put me down for a fifty cents copy of "Hilda's Home." It is a story that could not but appeal to any one believing in, or desiring, freedom in sex association, and I want a copy to lend. I am cashier in a Los Angeles store and work from 7:30 A. M. to 7 P. M., but always manage to find time to read Lucifer, and should feel it was an irreparable loss should I miss but one number. Yours for freedom in all things.

Nellie M. Mastick, Junction City, Wash.:—I am going to begin the New Year well by sending you a dollar for Lucifer. I know I have been behind with my subscription for some time, but I never could get hold of a dollar which could be spared. I wanted to send two but cannot just now and will not keep you waiting longer. I hope that you will get subscriptions enough to enable you to publish the book. I want a copy for my children to read as soon as they are able to understand it. With many good wishes for a happy and prosperous year for yourself, Lillian and dear old Lucifer, I remain sincerely yours.

Lucy Redheffer, Chicago, Ill.:—Mrs. Slenker well observes in a late Lucifer that we need a more precise meaning to the words we use. The vague and various renderings we give to language makes it impossible to more than blindly surmise at what the other fellow wishes to impress. But as long as we use a barbarous orthography, which only gives a hint at the real pronunciation of words, it is not likely we shall ever arrive at scientific accuracy in their signification. Mrs. Slenker is an old offender, however. She delights, revels and dissipates in the word Dianism, an obscure term, which conveys to no human being any idea whatsoever.

I once had a grievous chase, trying to come at the meaning of it, from the pundit who claimed to have inflicted it on an unoffending world. It was a long pursuit, but at last I chased him to his hole, and then he turned on me and said the word (Dianism) had eight different and distinct meanings. So much for unfailing precision.

N. C. Mathers, Peabody, Kan.:—Lucifer gets better and better all the time. No. 689 is full of good things. I wish every freethinker in the land could read Mr. Walker's "Snap Shots at Frauds and Fossils," and "Plumb Line Penographs;" also Mr. Northcote's "Free Thought and Free Love." I haven't heard of any real freethinkers being wounded by any of those shots, but Green, Ingersoll & Co. have their hospitals crowded with the mangled remains of infidels and theological skeptics, that have heretofore assumed to be freethinkers. Talmage or Brother Moody, or Sam Jones could assume to be freethinkers if they were allowed to define the term to suit themselves. I imagine that I can glance back along the line of the freethought procession and see the above named worthies bringing up the rear, only a few decades behind the front column. Why don't those limited freethinkers go back and help Talmage & Company bring up the rear? Go back, be baptized and born again! Take a fresh start and come up with the crowd! It is plain to be seen that these assumed Freethinkers don't like to leave the old crowd too far in the rear. The rear rank is much more popular than the front. And reformers that are bidding for popularity would do well to affiliate themselves with the "Y. M. C. A." or the "W. C. T. U."

I would be glad to send you dollars and dollars for the "Firebrand Fund," "Hilda's Home," and also for many other of your excellent publications. But "McKinley's prosperity" has failed to materialize to any one of my five senses, and I am inclined to believe that it requires a sixth sense to discover it. I am kept too busy in the struggle for existence to be of much assistance in other people's struggles. But my heart is with them and with you. My will is strong, but my purse is weak. "Self-preservation is the first law of life." And we all possess our share of that instinct, especially in cold weather.

I have no money to help the cause along, neither have I the time nor ability to be of much service. But I am a deeply interested spectator, and would like to be able to help demolish the freethinkers' masked fortress of "respectability." But I think Mr. Walker and Mr. Northcote will demolish this fortress unaided. They are logical sharp shooters, every shot hits the mark. And may they live to continue the battle till the last mask is shattered to smithereens, is the wish of one silent spectator.

THE UNREVEALED RELIGION.

An address of great depth, strength, and beauty. By the veteran, J. K. Ingalls.

"The rainbow is not less beautiful and wonderful to me than to Noah, or to the aborigines, because I understand something of optics and the refraction of light. The rose is not less attractive because botany has taught us to analyze and classify it. The Good of Truth, whether we worship it as an entity or as a personality, or conceive of it as impersonal, is an ever-living and persistent principle man can never cease to revere and admire. And his growth in knowledge and progress in all things refining and elevating to his nature will be promoted, not retarded, by the true but unrevealed, and as yet "unloved religion, 'The Religion of Progress'."

Price, 5 cents each; Address LUCIFER, 1394 W. Congress Street, Chicago

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasion; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter IV., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, ten cts.

"Loma"—A CITIZEN OF VENUS," by Prof. Wm Windsor. A story of surpassing interest, largely devoted to Sexologic and Sociologic problems. Like Bellamy in his "Looking Backward," the writer of "Loma" believes in the "state," as a factor in social evolution, but individualists will probably forgive this feature for the sake of the radically revolutionary ideas in regard to popular theories—sexologic, theologic, cosmologic, etc. Substantially printed and artistically bound. Price, post-paid, $1.50 Address this office.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.50

LIBERTY; Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

694.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 16 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 20 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker,	.35
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetism; Albert Chavannes,	.25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook,	.10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker,	.10
" Practical Co-operation; " "	.10
The Revival of Puritanism; " "	.10
Love and the Law; " "	.03
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " "	.03
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman,	.05
Digging for Bedrock; " "	.10
To Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen,	.10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman,	.05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake,	.10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin,	.10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood.	.10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr.	.25
The Right Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld,	.10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht,	.25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks,	.25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi,	.03
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army,	.10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh,	.20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum	25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens,	.10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White,	.15

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.
This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE, MARRIAGE, AND DIVORCE

And the Sovereignty of the Individual.

A Discussion between Henry James, Horace Greely, and Stephen Pearl Andrews. There are here included the final replies of Mr. Andrews, refused by the New York Tribune, and a subsequent discussion, occurring twenty years later, between Mr. James and Mr. Andrews.

"The great lesson for the world to learn is that HUMAN BEINGS DO NOT NEED TO BE TAKEN CARE OF. What they do need a such conditions of justice and freedom and friendly co-operation that they can take care of themselves. Provided for by another, and subject to his will as the return tribute, they pine, and sicken, and die. This is true equally of women as of men; as true of wives as it is of vassals or serfs. Our whole existing marital system is the house of bondage and the slaughter-house of the female sex. Whether its evils are inherent or incidental, whether they belong to the essence or the administration of the institution, whether they are remediable without or only by means of revolution, are the questions that now have to be discussed."

Price 35 cents. Address LUCIFER, 1304 W. Congress Street, Chicago

The Sexual Enslavement of Woman.

BY E. C. WALKER.

American Slavery of Girls; the English Army in India; the Bible and Woman Jehovah and "Godless Governments;" Melancthon, the Bible, and Maternity; Mrs. Packard's Case; Slave Hunting in America in 1857 and in England in 1890; A Statement of Facts. Also, Poems by Kerman, Longfellow, and Henderson.

Enforcing Rape by the Legal "Restitution of Marital Rights."

SECOND, AND REVISED, EDITION.

PRICES:—One copy, 3 cents; two copies, 5 cents; five copies, 10 cents; copies, 20 cents; fifty copies, 85 cents, one hundred copies, $1.50.

PROHIBITION AND SELF-GOVERNMENT

Their Irreconcilable Antagonisms.

A COLLECTION OF FUGITIVE PIECES BY E. C. WALKER.

Physical and Moral Ills Cannot be Cured by Legislative Enactments.

"Partly to save men from the same hereafter hell, partly to keep them out of the hells of the here and now, the patent moralists, prohibitionists, obscenists, and all others of that genus, seek to force their views of morality and temperance upon all, regardless of all differences of organization and environment; not only their views but their methods of reform, their cure-all specifics."

"When you resort to force you confess yourself beaten in the arena of science, reason and love, and thus establish your incompetence to deal with so tremendous a problem."

Price, five cents. Or send twenty-five cents with the name of one new three months subscriber and we will send you one copy of this interesting and instructive pamphlet free.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1037, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr W. Coe 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 30 cents per dozen.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook sexual liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 10 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "Talk About Anarchist Communism," Nos. 1 and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 11 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

PRICE, 2 CENTS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., NO. 4. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JANUARY 26, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE NO. 695

To the Spirit of Bowdler.

Hail! mighty Bowdler! sapient divine
Who puttest water in our artists' wine
Lest it intoxicate! Who, a new Ruth,
Doth ruthlessly glean out the grains of truth
That show most thickly—lest bare truth we find
Have some indecency that lurks behind!
E'en Shakspere's self in thy hard toils doth writhe
While, parson-like, thou dost demand thy tithe!
No Art so great that it is fit to scan
Till seen by thee, great blush-removing man!
Then on my work may thy wise rule prevail
To make it sexless, soulless, stunted, stale!

—William Platt.

What a Small Spark Setteth the Fool Afire!

BY E. C. WALKER.

The New York evening papers of January 5, printed a cablegram from London announcing that "Dr. Schenk, a professor at the University of Vienna and president of the Embryological Institute," had put forth the claim that, as the result of many year's study and experiment, he had discovered a method whereby the sex of children can surely be fore-ordained by the parents. Thereupon three wards of Bedlam simultaneously broke loose. The sensation-mongers of the yellow journals, the publicity-adorers of the Medical Priesthood, and the legislative vote-and-boodle-hunters assembled at Albany, vied madly with each other in the effort to attract attention by the utterance of unmitigated nonsense. Subjoined are a few samples of the stuff, introduced here just to show the kind of welcome given by our "leaders" to what, if a fact, is a very important scientific triumph:

The power to control the sex of the next generation would mean almost inevitably the ultimate extinction of the human race. Women long for sons to resemble the husbands to whom they are devoted, and men long for sons to carry on their work.—Journal.

Well, if the race wishes to perpetuate itself, and having the power so to do, does not know enough to use that power, is it worth saving? The subordinate position in which woman has been held ever since the establishment of Christianity and the other masculine religions, is clearly shown in the few lines quoted. While women long for sons to resemble their husbands, and fathers want sons to carry on their work, as we are told, it does not seem to have occurred to the writer that it would be possible for men to long for daughters to resemble the wives "to whom they are devoted," and for women to desire daughters to "carry on their work." Is this because men are not devoted to their wives and women have no work to transmit to succeeding generations?

It is difficult to believe that the Wisdom which regulates us down here ever intended that we should have our own way in a matter so vital.—Journal.

Then what are you worrying about? If the "over-Wisdom" did not intend we should have that power, and if said "over-Wisdom" is omnipotent, it is not going to let a paltry professor of embryology steal the secret of that power, is it? At every step forward of science some ninny of theology or Grundy has emitted a wail of this sort, the whole succession of them in a blue funk lest puny man should outwit and dethrone their mighty Mumbo Jumbo. We owe our contemptible statutes intended to suppress all knowledge concerning the prevention of conception to these hysterical theologians.

The secret of birth, if revealed, would depopulate the earth. It is mercifully hidden. The secret of death, the knowledge of the time appointed for man's taking away, would fill human life with terror.—Journal.

"Mercifully hidden," "time appointed," "man's taking away," are all of the language of mysticism, of religion, of unreasoning superstition, and are nauseating to a degree.

It is probably a good thing that the human race does not know the secret, as the race would be overstocked with men and ultimately depleted for want of a sufficient number of women to bear children.—Dr. Otto H. Schultz.

It might have occurred to the learned doctor that with fewer women we should prize them more highly, too highly to permit the sacrifice of millions of them on the altar of prostitution and in the sweat-shops of monopolistic industry. And perhaps we should no longer allow about one-half the children born to die before reaching maturity. I have a strong suspicion that the world can stand a good deal of the several kinds of knowledge so terrifying to the various priesthoods.

Dr. Roger S. Tracy, Register of Vital Statistics, said that Dr. Schenk's theory was a new idea to him. Where has this Doctor of Position kept himself all these years. I fancy few intelligent laymen or laywomen would make such a confession as this.

If Dr. Schenk's discovery is what he claims it to be, and the secret becomes generally known, nature may be compelled to serve the dictates of man, a possibility which seems to me to be fraught with great evil.—Dr. La Fetra.

Of course the spectacle of nature compelled to serve the dictates of man would be unprecedented!

Assemblyman John I. Green announced today that he would presently introduce a bill which he thought would prevent the spread of the knowledge in case Dr. Schenk should make public the details of his secret.—Dispatch from Albany.

Does this "lawmaker" with the appropriate name look upon scientific information as an epidemic disease against which we must quarantine? He should not be alarmed, as all his symptoms indicate that he is immune to the attacks of the microbe of intelligence.

"The situation is extraordinary," said Assemblyman Finn. "Whether the dissemination of the knowledge should be prohibited is a question which requires deliberation. I can not say what my mature opinion would be."—Dispatch from Albany.

The situation may be extraordinary, but the idiocy of legislators is not; it is ordinary, very ordinary. However, it is encouraging to learn that Mr. Finn favors deliberation, and that he is conscious that his present opinion is not mature.

Said Assemblyman Trainer: "I am opposed to the publication of the discovery. I would favor further laws if the existing ones are insufficient to prevent it."—Dispatch from Albany.

What are the "existing laws" to which our deputy god refers? Does he mean to insinuate that the statutes for the suppression of "obscene" literature may be made to apply to publications dealing with Dr. Schenk's discovery? If he does, he ought to bury his imagination in quick-lime, in mercy to his neighbors' olfactories. For, be it understood, Dr. Schenk claims that the sex of the infant can be pre-determined by proper dieting on the part of the parent or parents, and how a treatise on dieting is to be made amenable to the edicts against obscenity would appear to be a hard problem for even the inverted inventiveness of a ring of political marplots.

Is there any matter pertaining to sex that will not throw our religious, moral, medical and legal guardians into convulsions?

Questions For the Editor.

BY JAMES BEESON.

Lucifer bearing date of Jan. 5, 1898, containing my last article and your rejoinder is before me, and I avail myself of your proffer to allow me another hearing; but I don't claim the right of the last word, by any means. Although a woman's rights man in every particular there is not enough of the household-pet-slave about me for that. Neither can I leave the words, "old granny" and "monomaniac" to the exclusive use of politicians. They are words of the English language, meaning much, and you unintentionally gave them the proper title when you call them "endearing." I love the old grannies—they are the superannuated mothers of the race; and the intuitions of monomaniacs are nearly always good, but they allow their zeal for one particular thing to overbalance their better understanding and judgment in other things equally important.

You acknowledge that what you said anent bad spelling had better been left out, and that brings to my mind that you alluded to my bad use of words. I will not attempt a reply to that, but will ask you a question which I want you to fairly answer: For what offense were you sent to the penitentiary—the right or wrong use of words—in the estimation of your enemies? Every truism that falls from the lips or pen of a reformer is branded as a falsehood by the respectable—the rulers of their times, and it's a notorious fact that it is dangerous to speak the truth now, and always has been, so far as history teaches me any thing.

But it's the vanity of your third paragragh that staggers me. Let me quote a small portion of it: "No. It is not true that the state is all that stands in the way of sex freedom, etc. The state is but the outward expression of the inward status mental, moral and intellectual, of the people that make and support the state." As a drunken horse-jockey I once knew would say: "That's the by-godest argument I ever saw from the pen of a professed anarchist, ef it taint I'll be damned."

If there be any truth in that kind of reasoning then it was not the state that hung Spies, Parsons, Fisher and Engle and caused Ling to blow his head off; nor was it the state that imprisoned Bennett, Heywood and Harman. Then it is not the state that is responsible for our present financial and land-tenure system, with all its train of abuses and human miseries. Such stuff as that has always been the argument of the apologists for the existence of the state. Nation, state, government, etc, are the soubriquet of king, emperor, president, governor, etc. Louis XIV. of France was once interrogated on that subject and he unhesitatingly answered: "I am the state." My idea of scientific anarchy is to do away with prejudice, hatred, etc., and if that is not its intention I am not an anarchist, nor never have been. But I contend that the state, or government of men and women by their fellow men, is the cause and main stay of prejudice, dishonesty, murder, arson rape and all hardships that we complain of. It's not to be wondered at that your correspondent—the editor and writer of books—should agree with you in your indirect defense of the state. If he was not a miserable apologist for the existence of the state his books and paper would be suppressed. Spies and Parsons were editors and writers of books, but what became of them? And hundreds of other cases could be mentioned thowing what befell authors, who incurred the displeasure of she rulers—who are the state, per se.

I don't disagree with you in regard to the condition our marriage laws place women. It's all true and not half told either. But at the same time if there was anything but monomania in your head you could see that it is just as impossible for men to beget a free race of people while they are slaves to the present system of interest, rents and profits, as it is for women in like conditions to born it. Suppose for the sake of argument that you succeed in abolishing our marriage laws and leave the hydra-headed monster, the state, with only one of its heads lopped off, what would be gained? Nothing more than killing prostitution in wedlock, and making it general outside. As horrible as some of your correspondents have pictured the marriage bed it is still a paradise compared with prostitution from necessity. Women must be left in a condition to compete with men in the arts of earning a livelihood before they can be independent of men, and that can never be until man-made laws are abolished altogether. Women who are happily married are like men who prosper by the existence of the state. They don't want the marriage rite abolished. You couldn't insult them quicker than to name such a thing in their presence. If you were to ask them concerning their experience in the marriage bed they would call their husbands to shoot you. Like the communists, and all other one-ideaed people, you are trying to climb the ladder of progress by reaching for the top round from the ground.

But as I was only promised a short article I will close by repeating my views—that it is best for all reformers to unite on the one important thing and that is the abolition of the state in toto. The history of the world shows that it is always being abolished by piecemeal. But while you abolish at one end it grows at the other. Repeal one law and enact another.

REPLY.

As Friend Beeson addresses his communication to me personally and asks a direct answer I will, briefly as possible, comply.

First. I do not know whether it was the use of words or the presentation of ideas that caused our church-state rulers to arrest and send me to prison. I was never told that my offense was the use of the wrong word.

Second. He who accuses another of "vanity" is very apt himself to have a touch of the same infirmity. I have no objection to being judged, by the impartial and intelligent reader of Lucifer, when my words are correctly reported.

I have just re-read the reply to the criticism of our correspondent as printed in No. 688, and see no reason to take back anything therein said, but would rather emphasize and reiterate the assertion that "behind the state is the mass of ignorance, credulity and superstition that makes the state possible." To abolish the state while its causes remain would be fruitless labor. Robespierre is reported to have said, "If God did not exist it would be necessary to invent him." So, too, he might have said, If the state did not exist it would be necessary to invent it. So long as the demand for it exists, rest assured, Friend Beeson, the supply will be forthcoming. As said elsewhere in this issue the god-idea, as taught by the church, creates the conditions for, the necessity for, the institution called the state. The control of reproduction through the control of the person of woman is now the chief strong-hold of both church and state. Rescue woman, rescue the mothers of the race, from this church-state control, and we do more to redeem the race from slavery to monopolies of all sorts than it is possible to do by any other single movement.

The champions of privilege understand this full well and hence the concentration of effort to keep the mothers in ignorance of how to control and regulate reproduction. Hence the boycots and the ostracisms that on every hand meet the social radicals. Hence the prosecutions against the editors and publishers of the "Firebrand" in Oregon, and hence the warnings received from the postal censors by Ruedebusch, Waisbrooker Berrier and many other writers and publishers of books on sexologic science.

Yes, it is true that if my reasoning is correct, "it was not the state that hung Parsons, Spies, Fisher and Engle, and that imprisoned Bennett, Heywood and Harman." The state did none of these things. The state never did anything, good or bad. It was the men who pretended to act in the name of the state but who really obeyed the behests of popular ignorance, fear, credulity and prejudice. Their own love of power and greed of office had also much to do, doubtless, with their acts. Our friend substantially admits that this is true when he speaks of "the rulers who are the state per se." But he inverts the natural order when he says that the state or government is the cause or mainstay of prejudice, dishonesty, etc. While it is true that the institution called the state gives opportunity and occasion for the exercise of dishonesty, greed and every abuse of normal powers and functions, it is certainly not true that the abolition of the state would destroy dishonesty, greed, prejudice, ignorance and superstition. First destroy these, through educational and evolutionary processes and the state could no longer exist. The causes being removed the effect would necessarily cease.

In order that evolution may get in its work the first and most important thing to do is to free woman from sex bondage, so that "natural selection" may take the place of enforced and unwelcome conjugal relations with the natural result of such relations—debasement and degeneracy of offspring.

After saying so much under this head it seems quite unnecessary to add that there is left no basis for the accusation that sex-reformers are "one-ideaed"—that they try to reach the "top-round of the ladder from the ground." It is just the other way. It is those who would first destroy the state who are expecting impossibilities. It is simply impossible to "abolish the state in toto," or to reconstruct the industrial and economic systems, while women, the mothers of the race, continue to furnish to the ruling classes a perennial supply of voting slaves, working slaves and fighting slaves. Woman can now achieve a peaceful revolution—economic, industrial, political, if she would only awake to a sense of her power, to a sense of her responsibility to herself and to her children. Man cannot save woman; man cannot save himself, nor the race of which he is a part. Woman must do this! When woman awakes to a full realization of this truth then true reform will begin; then true reconstruction will begin, and begin in earnest, and not till then.

M. HARMAN.

Christianity and Socialism.

BY D. W. HULL.

Rev. Benj. F. DeCosta, Episcopal, says: "Socialism is Christianity." Per contra. Socialism is a theory of human relations on earth. Christianity is a theory of human, angelic, diabolic and divine relations in asserted transearthly worlds. In so far as Christianity attempts to solve earthly human problems, it steps outside its sphere and forgets the express declaration of its assumed founder—"My Kingdom is not of this world."

The above I clipped from James S. Denson's notes in Lucifer No. 693. I always love to read Brother Denson's concise notes, as I do everything else that graces the columns of Lucifer, and I can only conceive of one improvement: I would have the articles less bellicose—that is, I would prefer the space filled with less of wrangle, and I was going to say with more of thought, but I do not believe I can ask for, or expect any improvement in this respect. There is now more thought than many people are able to assimilate. But I digress. I violate my own wishes and dull my own criticism by coming in as a wrangler myself, for I quoted the above screed just because I wanted to differ somewhat from the author.

I sometimes think prejudice is as great and as mean a foe to mental growth as ecclesiasticism. It is the weapon of ecclesiastics, but alas, it has its victims in all ranks. It prohibits Brother Green from being just to free lovers just as it prohibited Luther, Calvin and every churchman since, from being just to his fellows, who had got acquainted with a truth or at least had met with a thought, outside of the fields of their investigation. The mistake of Brother Denson in the above extract is that he assumes that Churchianity is Christianity, and he belabors Christianity for all the short comings and evil deeds of those who wear that name as a cloak. Let us be just. Christianity is, on the contrary, what the man Jesus, called the Anointed, taught, and not what is claimed for it by the Pharisees of our or any other times. I believe in Jesus as far as I understand him. I believe that he was anointed from the spirit world to do the work he did, and therefore he was a Christ or an Anointed (the Greek word was never translated, which accounts for the prejudices of some people). When I say I believe in him that does not indicate that I am in full accord with all the sentiments he uttered, any more than my belief in Moses Harman would require that I should bolt down without mastication whatever he has said or may say. Probably I am now understood, and I will pass on.

In the next place I want to say that Jesus never spoke of any other than "human relations on earth." All this talk about "Going to heaven when you die," and other nonsense, has been foisted onto Christianity, since the time of Jesus' death. It certainly never was taught by him. Yet Liberals (?) take it from sacerdotal hands with other flim-flam passed off to his credit, and freely peddle it out in its most objectionable light. Jesus was a radical, as much so as Brother Denson, or any of us, and he often horribly shocked the religious people of his time by his "blasphemy" and it was because of his radical views he was put to death, though the charge was not made in the Roman Court at his trial, for the simple reason that the Romans had nothing to do with the religious quarrels of the Jews.

Jesus was a reformer of the times and all that he said and did was with reference to the improvement of earthly conditions of the people, and never with reference to the condition of any body after death. Oh, try to get that out of your head. Please read the poorly written and much altered narratives of his public work as you would read the narrative of Socrates. Why can't we use our intellects as well with one as with the other? Jesus was a socialist; and one of the most pronounced type. He not only talked it but he lived it. He formed a commune at Capernaum, and looked about the country for a better place to locate it in, in the hope, probably, he would find some wealthy person who would share with them and give them a home. Judas was his treasurer or, what was afterward called a deacon. He preached it everywhere and to him it was the Kingdom of Heaven. The Golden Rule would be impossible without this system of Socialism, and it is impossible yet for the very same reason. His parable of the mustard seed, of the yeast plant, of the laborers, and so forth, all have reference to this new condition of things. His kingdom was not of this world, for he intended to take no part in the politics of the times; neither is his kingdom from hence, that is, neither is it out of this world. Can't you see the alternative? He contemplated the establishment of a system of government that would peacefully and in an evolutionary manner upturn all other governments. Like the mustard seed it would overtop everything else, and the other governments would go out of existence for the want of subjects, or like the yeast plant it would leaven the whole measure of meal. I have written a book, "Christianity as it Was Before the Apostacy," on this subject, which I wish could be widely read, for the light it would throw upon this subject. The fact is, I like Jesus. He was a fellow reformer. He was to the people of his day what we are to the people of our day, and though it is too late to do him any good, we really ought to stand by him. We may be maligned at some future time ourselves—as we are now—and if so, we would be glad to have our characters maintained. [Vindicated?]

I am not seeking controversy on this subject, as I am quite busy editing a paper and lecturing occasionally, in fact much of the time, at the same time I am ready to leave some other work undone when a reformer's character is assailed.

Norton, Kans.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1304 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$405.25
Herman Myer,	.32
E. C. Hart,	.60
H. Celler,	.50

HENRY ADDIS, one of the prosecuted editors of the "Firebrand," writes from Portland, Oregon, giving a somewhat detailed account of the late trial. He does not materially differ from what has already been published. His letter will appear in our next.

January Twenty-Ninth.

The anniversary of the birth of Thomas Paine, the "author-hero of the American Revolution," is at hand. The Freethinkers of Chicago are preparing to celebrate this anniversary by holding a meeting at Handel Hall, 40 Randolph St., on Saturday eve, Jan. 29. The chief speaker is to be John E. Remsburg of Kansas, President of the National Secular Union, and one of the best orators occupying the Freethought platform. Mr. Remsburg has been before the public as lecturer and author more than twenty years. He has probably delivered more free-thought lectures than any other man, living or dead.

A large attendance is expected. Seats free. Tickets for reserved seats can be had of the Secretary of the Chicago Secular Union, E. C. Reichwald, at 141 S. Water St., and of the President, A. E. Gammage, 167 Dearborn St. All wishing good seats should apply early.

The State, the Government—What and Where?

Closely allied to the mythologic superstition variously known as Zeus, Deus, Jupiter, Jove, Jehovah, God, Brahm, etc., etc., is that known as the "State," the "Government," the "Nation." Search for the personality, the individual, called Zeus, Jove or Jehovah, and we find it not. "No man hath seen God at any time," is a saying that is generally accepted as absolutely true. While some claim to have "heard his voice," or to have "felt him in their hearts," to the man of science these phrases mean simply certain psychologic states of mind, that is, that "God" is subjective and not objective with the person who professes to know so much about deity. Or, to the Spiritualist, what is called god is believed to be often, if not always, the influence exerted by discarnate human spirits upon incarnated human spirits.

To the savage, or uncultured mind, the phenomena of nature are attributed to the direct or indirect agency of an unseen personality called by one of the many names that mean an invisible over-ruling power, and whether that power is believed to be benevolent or malevolent the savage mind seeks by worship, by service, by gifts and by self-torture to placate and secure the favor and protection of such mysterious over-ruling power. Hence the origin of the many religious creeds, rites and ceremonies; hence the existence of the vast armies of priests, clergymen, monks, nuns and other religious orders, and hence the vast sums of money spent in building and supporting churches, convents, nunneries, church schools, etc., and hence the respect and reverence paid to those who are supposed to devote their lives to religious duties, and to the study and worship of the unseen over-ruling power or powers.

Much in the same way do we account for the prevalence of the superstition called the "State," the "Nation." To the uncultured mind, the state is an entity, a personality—an individualized personality, with rights as much greater than the rights of the average human being as the rights of "Deity" are supposed to be greater than those of the individual man or woman. But as in the case of deity, so with the state: It is "without body, parts or passions." Hunt for it and we find it not. We can personify it and call it "he" or "she." We can call the American nation "Uncle Sam," and the English nation "Johnny Bull," but if we search for these individuals in the "capitols," the buildings erected for their use, we find therein only men—men of like limitations, passions, desires and frailties as ourselves.

The parallels between "God and State" are too numerous to be pointed out in detail. Suffice it to say, for the present that the god-idea, the god-superstition, is worked as an industry to secure honor and privilege for themselves by a class of men who are not willing to do their honest share of the hard work that is required to wrench from nature the blessings and conforts of existence on this planet, and just so, likewise, the state-idea, the state-superstition, is worked as an industry by a class of men who take this method to secure for themselves the results of the labor of other men. Under pretence of protecting the people from enemies, foreign and domestic, these human parasites rob the people of their earnings, rob them of their equal right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness.

The state as an institution can never be overthrown so long as its foster-mother the church remains to create a demand for human government. The church teaches humility, teaches self-denial, self-sacrifice; teaches submission to the will of God; teaches that human governments are "ordained of God;" teaches submission to the "powers that be," and that he that "resisteth the power shall receive to himself damnation." The constant demand of both church and state is for "law," more law, more government, while the rebels against church and state demand less law, less government—no government at all, except personal or self-government. Jefferson, a noted rebel against both church and state, said, "that government is best that governs least"—the logical sequence of which aphorism is that the best government of all is that which governs not at all.

Rightly viewed, there is no more a "woman question" than there is a "man question." But there is a human question—in fact, there are a great many human questions. What hurts man, also hurts woman. What helps woman, also helps man. Neither can be free, really, if the other is enslaved. Sorely have they wounded each other; tenderly and healingly may each bind up the wounds of the other.

W.

The Result in Oregon.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Pope, Addis and Isaak were found guilty on the first indictment, which included the three specifications of the Whitman poem and the letters of Annie Parkhurst and Kate Austin. The result was brought about by the combination of more kinds of foolishness than usually attends a case of this kind, prolific in madcap performances though such actions are generally. It will be remembered that the court appointed an attorney named McGee to conduct the defense. It was through him that disaster came to our friends, but it was a uni-idead fanatic in Rhode Island who supplied the initial force that set the lawyer wildly gyrating in a circle. This fanatic belongs to that numerous class of marplots who believe that the Catholic church is responsible for whatever is wrong, from chinch bugs in Kansas to a scarcity of water in the Nile. Of course the Comstock iniquity is primarily and chiefly a Protestant club for the suppression of honest investigation, and no well-balanced man would have dreamed of dragging in the A. P. A. bugaboo, but the Rhode Island blunderer sent a red-hot letter to Portland and it finally fell into the hands of McGee, whose early Catholic instincts became at once alarmed and from that hour he was useless to the defense. According to all reports, he did nothing that an attorney in such a position should do and about everything that one should not do, capping the shock of his wondrous performances by moving for immediate sentence when the jury brought in its verdict. The judge, who had been very fair in his rulings and in his charge to the jury, refused to sentence then, allowing the accused time to make the various customary motions, and promising a new trial, which, according to the latest news at hand, is to be had, when Addis will have charge of the defense.

The difficulties of the situation were greatly complicated by the fact that all the men were tried together, thus endangering all by the sincere but utterly irrational Jesus-Tolstoi non-resistant theories of Mr. Pope, who seems as anxious for the crown of martyrdom as was any Christian in Rome. Fortunately, Addis understands that yokes are not gotten rid of in this way.

Politics is, for the most part, a game of billiards played by knaves upon the backs of fools.—Ernest Newman, in "University Magazine."

Immoral Imaginings of Self-Styled Moralists.

What has become of British reserve? According to the "Daily Chronicle" of London, it has become the fashion for English women of good society to have their photographs taken in their nightgowns. Of course these pictures are only intended for distribution among close friends. Apropos of this new rage, the staid newspaper referred to remarks: "Doubtless a nightgown is a more decent costume than a ball dress [English]. However, it suggests certain associations of ideas to which the mother of a family ought not expose herself." And so on, and so on. It is safe to say that this fashion will not be popular here.—N. Y. "Evening Sun."

It is to be noticed that the "certain associations of ideas to which the mother of a family ought not to expose herself" are those connected with the perpetuation of the race, which perpetuation we are continually told is the paramount "duty" of woman. It is woman's "duty" to bear children, but it is indecent to appear photographed in a costume which may suggest the processes of maternity. If there were ever on the earth a fouler minded set of moralists than our modern supernatural purists, history is a blank concerning their name and habitat. It is indubitable that a woman in flowing night-robes, sans corset and sans all other deforming parts of the day toilet of the human female, is a being of grace and beauty, as compared with the same woman imprisoned in fashion's armor. But then Christianity's first mission, after the suppression of free thought, is the destruction of grace and beauty.

"Woman, Love, and Life."*

"To the Spirit of Bowdler," which we reprint on first page, is a clever bit of satire from the dedication of "Woman, Love and Life" by William Platt. "Bowdlerism" is to English literature what "Comstockism" is to American; but with the important difference that while the former controls the spirit of public opinion in England, the latter controls the legislative enactments of America. Bowdler could mutilate only the works he himself published; but in "free America" Comstock is authorized to enter the shop of any publisher or dealer and destroy any quantity of books if those books incur his disapprobation. Bowdler published "The Family Shakspeare in which nothing is added to the original text; but those words and expressions are omitted which cannot with propriety be read aloud in a family." He emasculated Gibbons' "History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" "for the use of families and young persons, reprinted from the original text, with the careful omission of all passages of an irreligious or immoral tendency." In a note, Bowdler's nephew, who edited the work, says that "it was the peculiar happiness of the writer to have so purged Shakespeare and Gibbons that they could no longer 'raise a blush on the cheek of modest innocence, nor plant a pang in the heart of the devout Christian.'"

* * *

Despite the fact that William Platt invokes the spirit of Bowdler in his dedication, there is very little Bowdlerism in the book. The work is composed of poems, music, prose poems, parables and short stories. Of it Grant Allen says: "Nothing madder, wilder, more lawless, more eccentric than this uncouth little book has been published in our time; few things so besprent with sudden jets of truth, so illuminated by fierce flash-lights into the very core of reality." It is the voice of a spirit struggling for freedom, for light, for love. It is a passionate protest against the unclean ideals of past ages and of the present day. It is an exhortation to men and women to respect themselves—all of themselves. But though the spirit aspires toward freedom, the fetters of conventional morality are not yet flung from the mind. With despairing, passionate insistence our author clings to the one-love-in-a-lifetime ideal. There is but one chance of happiness to be allotted to each individual. "When once a man or a woman has cast his or her fate with another woman, with another man, when once the twain have gone as one flesh, heart to heart—then in taste, decency, and honor is all other flesh forbidden to them . . . . all spirituality cries out to us that if we have failed we have failed —there must be no continuation of experiments." And again: "Not in anger but in a terrible sense of what is due to it, and in a still more terrible sense of what is due to the loved one, must the outraged husband murder the criminal against love's own self, must the saddened lover wash out with her blood the stains of her who his love's necessities demand must ever appear stainless in his eyes, even at the price of that awful washing out." Here we see the savage spirit of the Sultans, who wash out the "stains" of their slave-wives in the waves of the Bosphorus, running through the pages of this book with, and marring the beauty of, the author's aspirations liberty-ward. The sight is as strange as that of the muddy Missouri and clear waters of the Mississippi rivers flowing side by side within the same banks. Mr. Platt's error lies in making too much of the purely physical manifestation of love, often apparently ignoring the importance of other manifestations. "The flesh" is polluted by a love that is less than our author's perfect ideal. But Mr. Platt is earnest and brave and his aspirations are toward liberty and love; so for him there is hope.

L. H.

* This book may be ordered through Lucifer office. Price, $1.

Crudities Criticised—No. I.

BY FRANCIS BARRY.

I have long contemplated writing, for Lucifer, semi-occasional articles, under the above heading. It will be the understanding that the editor is to give them place at his own convenience, as to time of publication. What I write will keep, as a general thing, and so will the crudities, and be in sad need of criticism, for a long time to come.

I have especial occasion to begin my criticisms, in the publication of numerous articles of late, in Lucifer's columns, on the question as to whether people ought to be exclusive or non-exclusive in their love relations.

Of all the radical, or semi-radical, editors, who have undertaken to handle the marriage question, Moses Harman has been most successful. But the ablest editors, as well as generals, make mistakes. A second rate chess player can look over the shoulder of his superior, and point out a bad move.

I agree with some of Moses Harman's best friends, in thinking he is making a mistake, in allowing his contributors to give this unprofitable subject offensive prominence. It is a question not profitable to discuss at all.

The abolition of marriage, in other words, the theoretical and practical recognition of woman's absolute right to herself, is a certainty of the future. I believe it will be accomplished within the next fifty years. But there is not likely to be a complete change in human nature during the next two hundred and fifty years. So, if it is important to know whether the coming woman, and the coming man, will be exclusive or non-exclusive, it is only necessary to ascertain what are their present characteristics in this regard.

There are those who will claim that while men are non-exclusive in their make-up, women, on the contary, are, naturally, exclusive. All such persons not only show a want of ability to draw logical conclusions, but a lack of knowledge of human nature, and of facts having a bearing on the case. Nature is a great bungler if there is any essential difference between women and men in this regard. There is no difference. Many women seem to themselves and to superficial observers, to be exclusive in their natures, when they are only the victims of arbitrary conditions and surroundings.

There are exceptions to all rules, and so there are a few women and men who are exclusive and constant, but the great mass of man- and womankind, in their present state of development, whatever they may be a thousand years from now, are, in greater or less degree, inconstant and non-exclusive. Of course I speak of spontaneous feeling and action, and make no account of prejudice or arbitrary influences.

If I am correct, and I am, then Lucifer's contributors, who are so earnestly and persistently urging the propriety of non-exclusive relations, are standing in their own light. With woman emancipated, that is, marriage abolished, there will be a general practical acceptance of the non-exclusive idea. But keeping this question to the front will put off the day of emancipation, as sure as any of us are born. It is for this reason, and this only, that I am making my present plea. Let us beware of giving any encouragement to the popular idea that we are at work to secure cheap opportunities. We oppose marriage and seek its abolition because it is a system of gross impurity and outrageous injustice.

The earnest and worthy women and men who can abide nothing but strict exclusiveness, are equally at fault. If their ideal is ever attained by humans in general, it will be as the result of GROWTH IN FREEDOM. So it is best for all of us to drop this discussion and bend our united efforts to the practical work of exposing the rottenness of the marriage system, and securing recognition of woman's right to absolute and unconditional freedom.

Sociologic Lesson. No. LVII.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

THE SLOW DEVELOPMENT OF JUSTICE. The slow development of justice in human action may be accounted for by the law of the survival of the fittest. In early ages of the world the man who disregarded justice and robbed his neighbors of the fruits of their toil, was fed and clothed, while his victims were left to starvation and suffering. His influence resisted the formation of governments for protection, and his efforts were directed to their destruction. In the struggle for existence the unjust survived. Later, when the majority had evolved a desire for equity and a government to secure it, just so far as they were successful the results of co-operation gave to the just an advantage over those whose lives were unsuited for co-operation. In civilized countries today the struggle still goes on; the just seeking more and more equity, and the unjust striving by violence, fraud and bribery, to appropriate to themselves all that they can. As justice advances co-operation becomes more extensive and more remunerative, and those who are not in harmony with it become less and less fitted to survive.

[If, in the early ages of the world the robber class resisted the formation of regular governments they have learned later that the most effective method of robbing the people is through and by the power of government, and now the very name government has become synonymous with robbery. Less government, then, and more justice is what is needed in these later times. M. H.]

The Rainstorm Duck.

BY LOIS WAISBROOKER.

It is said that the "ugly duck" proved to be a swan. Whether the rainstorm duck will, remains to be seen, but one thing is certain; rain storms do not hurt ducks very much, and I for one am very glad that all our brothers who write for Lucifer, are not, as Luna Hutchinson expresses it, like the boy who wanted to keep store that he might eat candy all the time.

I too believe that for many reasons permanent love is the most conducive to the welfare and happiness of the race, but I would abolish the legal bond, and while believing in the home, I would have it under woman's control and she should have the right to bring one or a dozen men to her home if she wanted them. From what I know of woman's nature, but few women would want more than one during the same period of time, and that all possible knowledge should be given to make that period as long as possible—forever, if it may be, is also true. In "My Century Plant" I have explained the reason why this knowledge is withheld, even under pain and penalty of prison to those who dare teach in this line.

Last evening, Jan. 5, at the close of my lecture to a full house,—in which lecture there was as much "obscenity" as I ever saw in "The Firebrand"—Mrs. Isaak came up and told me that Pope, Addis and her husband had been convicted; that Addis and Isaak had moved for a new trial, but Pope had refused to do so. Oh, how my heart ached for the little woman. The Christian religion is responsible for the law under which these three good men are condemned. When I think of that harmless, peaceable old man, A. J. Pope, seventy-four years old, in the clutch of that "accursed law," I say of the religion that demands it: "As relentless as death and as cruel as the grave." I am not speaking of the general mass of the people who are in its meshes as willing subjects of its psychologic power, but of the system itself.

As to Brother Pope, I know that many look upon his course as fanatical, but I understand and sustain him. The day will come when he will be looked upon as the bravest and truest of us all. I have just read a letter written to another in which the writer states that Alice B. Stockham's "Karezza," and a pamphlet of her own writing have been pronounced unmailable by the post office authorities of Philadelphia. The lady had Mrs. Stockham's book for sale. The writer says:

"Day after day I am obliged to return remittances, merely stating that I am forbidden to forward the book through the mail. The law also prohibits mentioning, in a letter sent through the mail where or how unmailable books can be obtained, or the price, and even when writing to friends I have to be very circumspect indeed in order to avoid making any statement which may be an infringement of the postal law; for of course, I expect to be a law-abiding citizen, even in letters to friends, unjust though this particular law may be."

Are our letters then subject to supervision? Will they next try to supervise our thoughts? The lady says she expects to be a law-abiding citizen. I do not count myself a citizen. I am not in any measure responsible to the government that claims to be founded upon the consent of the governed, for I have never consented—have never even been asked to consent. I cannot help wondering as I read the above, where chattel slavery would have been today if our old anti-slavery advocates had been as careful as this lady proposes to be.

The command of that tyranny was, you must assist the master in recovering his fugitive slave. The command of this tyranny is, you must not tell even to your friends where books can be found that you believe will benefit humanity, if those books chance to treat of sex law. We must be judges in all such matters. Who shall decide when judges disagree? I handed a pamphlet of mine which had been pronounced unmailable in one city, to the postmaster of another city, not to ask if I might mail it, but to see what he would think of it. He read it while I sat by and waited.

When finished he said: "Mrs. Waisbrooker, that is very fine; some people have strange ideas about obscenity." "Do you want it?" I asked. I intended to give it to him; he tossed me a dollar and put it in his pocket. I had hoped to realize something on that pamphlet, but when denied the mail I swore people should have it if I had to give them away. I have given them away by the hundreds. This question is up for investigation, and let them stop it if they can. They had better stop the stars in their courses first. No, I am not afraid; I am ready for whatever comes.

By the way, I learn that a man by the name of Price is now in prison in Sacramento under the Comstock law. I thought our Portland friends were the first on this coast. This man, by some means got hold of the book which instructs priests for the confessional, told the questions to be asked concerning sex matters. He published and was selling them and was trapped into sending one copy by mail. Well, I will say no more now.

M. FLORENCE JOHNSON, the most logical and entertaining woman lecturer on Freethought or radical subjects, will make a short trip west in January and Febuary. She will address the Cincinnati Liberal Society Jan. 30 and Feb. 6. Mrs. Johnson also gives first class literary entertainments. She needs no introduction to the readers of "Our New Humanity," to which she contributed valuble papers. Societies engaging her will enjoy a treat. For terms and dates, address M. Florence Johnson, 244 W. 143 Street, New York City.

EMMA GOLDMAN requests us to say that her western tour will begin earlier than first announced. She now expects to lecture at Philadelphia, Feb. 16, 17, 18 and 20. From there she will go to Baltimore and Washington, thence to Pittsburg where she will remain two or three weeks; then further west. Her subjects will be: "The New Woman;" "The Woman Question;" "The Absurdity of Non-resistance to Evil;" "Patriotism;" "Charity;" "Authority versus Liberty." She asks for correspondence from friends interested in this course of lectures. Her home address is 50 First St., N. Y. City.

Lucifer—brave, bold, dauntless Lucifer, still operates its search light from the tower of reason, and turns the X Rays on the diseased social conditions of humanity. It has come through years of persecution at last triumphant and shines the bright and morning star of hope for humanity. Moses Harman, Editor and Publisher, 1394 West Congress St., Chicago, weekly, $1.00 a year.—Humanity, Kansas City, Mo.

VARIOUS VOICES.

E. C. Hart, Oberlin, Ohio:—Please find enclosed money order for five dollars. Three dollars to pay for three copies of "Hilda's Home"; one dollar to renew my subscription to Lucifer. I would like also "Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs," "Isabel's Intention" and "Gospel Fabricatons"; the remainder use for postage or anything else.

Elisha Crawford, Orchard, Iowa:—You see I am a little late about sending in my renewal, but I have been quite under the weather for some time. I am seventy-six, and almost blind, and it is a bad job for me to write. Please send the Great Combination, "Hilda's Home"—two books, paper cover; Lucifer one dollar; To Extend Lucifer's Work, seventy-five cents, three dollars in all.

[Father Crawford is one of the oldest and most faithful of Lucifer's helpers. He has been with us almost from the first issue, now near a score of years ago. We sincerely hope his health and strength will not fail, but that many years of enjoyable life are yet in store for him. M. H.]

Mary C. Parker, Pine Island, Minn.:—Enclosed find five dollars. Please credit me one dollar on Lucifer; the remaining four is for copies of "Hilda's Home"; three in cloth and two in paper binding. Am glad that I can spare the money now, for I know you will need it before the work is completed.

[Many thanks to all who are kindly responding to the request for money in advance of delivery of the book. Yes, we have to pay in advance of delivery for the stock of material, as well as for the work, and so are compelled to ask our friends to do the same for us. After various delays we are glad to say the work is really under way, as the proof sheets show; and that the contractor assures us it shall be pushed as fast as circumstances will permit]

T. N. Pence, Ogden Center, Mich.:—In looking over your sample copy I saw the "Great Combination Offer" of six books for twenty-five cents. I am trying to form a club for Lucifer and will do all I can for it.

[The "Combination Offer" embraces not "six books" but six essays, most of which are bound up in one large pamphlet of near one hundred pages. We hope no one will expect more in this combination than we really offer. The essays are well worth the money, and much more also, when their real worth is considered. We ask all who receive sample copies of the paper, as well as all of our old subscribers, to help us to introduce Lucifer and its pamphlet literature, to new readers. See offer on eighth page of each issue, entitled "Books Worth Reading Free."]

Fannie M. Daniels, Hardtner, Kans.:—I take pleasure in writing you the first letter in '98. Lucifer came again this eve, with its pages of good thought. Hope we can renew for another year, as we have had it in our home ever since I was a babe; am now sixteen. I think it is hard to beat on its line of thought. I read "Hilda's Home" and think I shall send for one or two copies as soon as it is published in book form. I wish you all a very happy New Year, and a long life to work for freedom's cause.

[It gives us much satisfaction to know that many young people are taking interest in Lucifer and its work. Young people, especially young women, are the hope of the world. The New Year's greeting is most cordially returned by Lillian and by, M. H.]

Caroline de Maupassant, Otter Lake, Mich.:—Would you have the kindness to allow me a little space in Lucifer for an answer to James F. Morton, Jr.? Mr. Morton must be very young indeed, else he would not judge people older than himself with so much haste and superficiality. If I have not endorsed the "Call for Concerted Action" nor given any reason for my attitude it was simply because, as I said, I endorsed every one of the objections Mr. Lloyd raised against it and consequently did not think it necessary to repeat his own words.

The reason I object to the "Call" is not because "like many pretended reformers I spend my time and energy mainly in cultivating the fine art of how not to do it," but simply because I consider Lucifer's work as a Call for Concerted Action and amply sufficient for the purpose. If the Propaganda is "simply a concerted movement which appeals to all friends of sexual emancipation, so does Lucifer appeal also to them for the same purpose; why divide its forces? Mr. Morton was rather hasty in classifying me with "the pretended reformers who have nothing but discouraging words to offer 695.

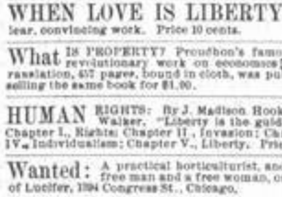
Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.



and hang back doing nothing for the good of a just cause." I have sacrificed more for it than he probably has ever done, but the question is not one of personalities. We are fighting for principles; let every one of us do his duty according to his strength and the light within him without fighting those he does not consider as far advanced in the ranks as he is himself.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 10 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 20 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

The only journal which presents full accounts of the progress of the colonization movement along the lines of co-operation.
The only journal that gives full explanation of all the various theories for social improvement.
The only journal that offers free discussions of social and religious subjects.
Each issue contains full report of best current thought in all the leading English and American periodicals.
The editor is a Monist in philosophy, a Truthseeker in religion and Socialist in politics. Editorial comment will always be given from these standpoints.
Current Thought is an open court. It offers the best thought of the brightest thinkers of all schools.
The Book Reviews will embrace all new books of social study, science and fiction.
Regular subscription price, $1 00 per year, post-paid to any part of the world.
Special Offer:—Until further notice, new subscribers will be received for one year at 10 cents each, provided they send ten names and addresses of liberal and progressive minded people. Address, Current Thought, Cleveland, O.
Premium book "Homilies on Finance," sent free to each new subscriber.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 30 cents. Address Moses Harman, 1304 Congress st., Chicago.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.
This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.25. Address M. Harman, 1304 Congress St.' Chicago, Ill.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and ravolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasion; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter IV., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, ten cts.

Wanted: A practical horticulturist, and a scientific vegetarian cook. A free man and a free woman, only, need apply. Address Z., care of Lucifer, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Books Worth Reading, FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetarism; Albert Chavannes, .15
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake, .10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .5
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address
M. HARMAN, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Bequest. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is given over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

Ladies who are willing to write to gentlemen on Sex Reform will please address, with stamp, Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.
We all need comradeship of thought.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1031, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. W. Coo 121 LaSalle St. Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook social liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 10 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "Talk About Anarchist Communism," Nos. 1 and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 13 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 5. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, FEBRUARY 2, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 696.

Keep Out of the Past.

Keep out of the Past, for its highways
Are dark with malarial gloom;
Its gardens are sere and its forests are drear,
And everywhere molders a tomb.
Who seeks to regain its lost pleasures,
Finds only a rose turned to dust;
And its storehouse of wonderful treasures
Are covered and coated with rust.

Keep out of the Past. It is haunted;
He who in its avenues gropes,
Shall find there the ghost of a joy prized the most
And a skeleton throng of dead hopes
In place of its beautiful rivers,
Are pools that are stagnant with slime;
And graves gleaming bright in a phosphoric light,
Hide dreams that were slain in their prime.

Keep out of the Past. It is lonely,
And barren and bleak to the view;
Its fires have grown cold, and its stories are old—
Turn, turn to the Present—the New:
Today leads you up to the hilltops
That are kissed by the radiant sun,
Today shows no tomb, life's hopes are in bloom,
And today holds a prize to be won.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Paragraphs.

BY REV. SIDNEY HOLMES.

Virtue can not be forced.

Restriction is the mother of rebellion.

No man can think his own belief is wrong.

Opposition never yet changed a man's belief.

Whom Love hath joined together let no man put asunder.

Advocates of protection are generally invaders themselves.

The voting habit is the most prolific cause of lost manhood.

Honesty of intention does not prevent an act from being injurious.

No man who votes for law-makers should complain of unjust laws.

Compulsory obedience makes liars of children and sycophants of men.

Additional knowledge is the only thing that can change a person's belief.

Fear of punishment may modify a man's conduct but it can not alter his belief.

Purity and impurity of words, acts or ideas are merely matters of opinion.

It is wrong for a person to do what he believes is wrong even though his belief is wrong.

The man who votes to elect a ruler thereby surrenders his claim to the right to rule himself.

Knowledge must be perceived. If our perceptions deceive us we acquire erroneous knowledge.

Knowledge may be erroneous. That is why so many people know things that are not true.

An apostate is more admirable than a saint, for he is more willing to test the accuracy of his convictions.

The God of the churches is continually at war with the God of nature and he eventually loses every battle.

To denounce a man for his belief is as absurd as to blame him for the place of nativity. He is not responsible for either.

The greatest of all tyrants is the one whose subjects are submissive and kiss the chains that bind them. His name is Love.

Why quarrel with a man who does not agree with you when it is impossible for any two persons to agree in all their beliefs?

We must trust our perceptions although we know they sometimes deceive us. We have no other way of acquiring knowledge.

A hypnotized man knows what the hypnotist tells him is true because his perceptions are hypnotized. Others may know what the hypnotist tells his subject is untrue.

A Vision.

BY CHARLES GANO BAYLOR.

Circumstances required me to visit a bank. The day was bitter cold and the great open wood fireplaces in the main salon ablaze with crackling timber were indeed a most cheerful, grateful and attractive sight. I stood before one of these to warm my hands. I looked into the blaze and as I felt the genial effects of the glowing heat I thought involuntarily of the half-fed, half-clad uncomfortably housed poor. I could in my imagination see innumerable child faces haggard and hopeless looking out eagerly at me through the blaze of the great open fire places of the bank parlor. Then I raised my eyes and gazed with a fascinated admiration on the highly polished marble mantel which surrounded and decorated the fire place. The very finest marble and polished to a mirrorlike smoothness and reflecting lustre. As I gazed into their depths there seemed to look out upon me the black, tear-stained, despairing face of a southern negro slave.

For a moment I was lost in reverie. It was only for a moment, but during that brief period there passed before me a panorama never to be forgotten. Here is what I saw:

I saw a southern plantation before the war, even the one on which I myself was born and reared. I saw the slaves toiling from break of day to twilight. I saw the log cabins with their mud floors and fence-rail bed-steads, and hard corn-shuck mattresses where enslaved and degraded woman, the mother of the race, gave birth to immortal human spirits. I saw the overseer's house and the overseer with his brutal leer, his revolver and his slave whip. I saw the dog-kennel where the blood hounds were housed which at regular intervals were "set" upon some helpless and defenseless slave, in order to keep up the ferocious beasts' keen scent for negro blood. In the midst of all, the slave-lord's mansion, with its music, its gaiety and luxurious living.

Back of the slave-lord in the southern city I saw the commission-merchant, generally a northern man but always the representative of northern capital. Back of the southern commission merchant the banker, the custodian of northern capital. And I could see, as a running stream of human blood, the wealth lashed out of the backs of the southern slave, flowing, flowing, flowing ever northward for accumulation and permanent investment. From the mud floors of the dreary log cabins of the slaves I saw the slave tax-payer who under chattel slavery paid the college bills of the John C. Calhouns, the Robert E. Lees and the Jefferson Davises of the south, as well as the traveling bills of the southern aristocracy in their annual tours to summer resorts in America and to places of pleasure in Europe, even as the tenement hells and alley ways of the north pay the educational bills of Harvard, Yale and Brown and pay the expenses of the northern aristocracy in their European tours of pleasure and "jubilee" excursions.

From the depths of the mirror-like marble mantel I seemed to hear a voice: The robbery of my labor helped to build this bank edifice, and the profit of my unrequited toil is here today in this bank's vault!

And then came over me an irresistible impulse to go further. I could not resist the impulse. I went out of the bank and stood (it was now the noonday hour) by the doors of those protected factory harems and bastiles combined, owned and ruled by the law-created millionaire Sultans of the land. I saw pouring forth from these bastiles men, women and childen, eager, half famished, shrunken by want, half clad, a swarm of industrial slaves, reckless and hopeless. Quick as an electric flash I saw that these northern white wage-slaves were toiling out their lives to pay the interest on the wealth lashed from the backs of the southern negro chattel slaves. Above it all I saw the word "Capitalism." Above this "Religious Authority." Above this "Superstition." Above all the gleaming sword of Authority.

Passing on and by the department store seraglios and through the fashionable streets lined with the carriages of the rich, and under the shadows of churches and cathedrals I tried to stay the hot beating of my heart and keep back the womanly tears which forced their way to my eyes—but in vain.

Oh! Guardian Genius of Universal Humanity, how long!

Carrion Crows and Eagles.

Isabel Darling, in "World's Advance Thought."

I saw dark, wide-winged birds circling high in air, where unhindered breath could indicate, as unhindered rays of light revealed, the feast which destructiveness, misfortune or the slower force of time have always spread upon the earth. They harmed no living thing, and what they took no other life desired, and yet all men avoided them.

Then I saw other wide-winged birds, with curving claws and beak, circling and hovering high in air, but needing only sight for guidance. These watched for small and living creatures that were always darting timidly from shelter into shadow. These despised decaying bodies, and all men honored them, lifting their images on banners as symbols of the bravest, noblest, greatest.

We have a few copies of Trumbull's Trial of the Judgment, and Altgeld's Reasons for Pardoning the Anarchists, bound together. Price, 25 cents.

When Men and Women are and When They are not Varietists.

BY E. C. WALKER.

I have heretofore maintained, and do still, that at this time the question is one of liberty rather than one of method and result. That is, we have first to win the recognition of our right to live our own non-invasive lives, regardless of how we live them. The issues of variety vs. monogamy and of multiform vs. exclusively procreative associations, are problems to be solved under liberty, and only in so far as we are free all around can we intelligently and profitably discuss them at this stage of the campaign for freer conditions for humanity in the aggregate. But the examination of the first question has now reached such a point that I think it will not be inopportune for me to call attention to some considerations which appear to have been overlooked by many of the controversialists.

We must always bear in mind, First, that men (and of course I use the term men in the generic sense) are the creatures of their heredity, environment and organisms; Second, that they have very short memories; and, Third, that they are under a constant temptation to reason from the viewpoint of their subjective imaginings instead of from the viewpoint of objective facts. What they are now they fancy they should always have been and everybody should be now and for all time. This explains the phenomenon of retrogressive varietists, as it does that of old men who wonder that children can be such ninnies as to delight in laughter and play. We are told that nearly all the varietists known to one of our friends have receded from the advanced position they once held. That they have ceased to be varietists practically is not at all strange, any more than it is that other persons well advanced in years have become Dianites. Both facts are explainable chiefly if not wholly on the ground of physical changes, changes which it would seem that no careful thinker should ignore, but which are ignored by many opponents of variety and normal sex association. Such changes in desire and consequently in practice are to be expected, just as rational persons expect to give up in later life the athletic sports in which they found so much enjoyment in the heyday of youth and vigor. The saddening part, though, of this is that men, instead of recognizing that their altered feelings and changed habits are due to modified physical conditions, attribute them to the acceptance of a supposedly advanced ethical concept. Here is where the abbreviated memory plays its part, and also where the fact is revealed to us that many even among radical reformers have been such more through the impulsion of feeling than through reasoned conviction. They imagine now that they have discovered that variety is less satisfactory than other forms of sexual relations and that they were on the wrong road when they were practical varietists. They have made no such discoveries. They have simply forgotten.

They have forgotten that years ago they could no more have helped being varietists, in feeling if not in practice, than they could have helped desiring food when hungry or admiring a beautiful picture. They lived out their natures then, so far as opportunity and social customs permitted, just as they are living them out now. What they need to do now is to hold their present feelings sufficiently under the rule of reason to sense the fact that the desires and thoughts that led them to be varietists when they marched with the morning and meridian years of life lead other men under like circumstances to be varietists in this year of grace and will lead still other men along the same broad highway in the generations to come. Man is said to be a reasoning animal, but I am afraid he does not always come up to the requirements of the definition. We should say that the man was foolish, who, having lost an arm, should declare that it was impossible for a person to hold a pen in one hand and a sheet of paper in the other. It is impossible for him, of course, in his present unfortunate state, but were his memory not so short he would know that once he could perform this, for him, now impossible feat, and were not his capacity for reasoning outside his subjectivity not in abeyance he would have to admit that what he had once done, when a complete man, other complete men could do now and complete men would be able to do through all time to come.

As Freethinkers, we rightly make light of "death-bed conversions" to Christianity. We show that the convictions held by a man during the period of his physical and mental vigor are the real convictions of the man and the convictions of the [illegible] man; that his development is to be measured by these, not re[illegible] beliefs of adolescence nor by the dreamings of advanced by th[illegible]en the teachings received in plastic youth come again years, w[illegible]. Death-bed conversions to sexual orthodoxy tell to the surfac[illegible]avor of that orthodoxy as death-bed conver- just as little in [illegible]or Buddhism tell in favor of either of those sions to Christiani[illegible]ayth. He has his moment of inception, religions. Man is a gr[illegible]of mature power, of weakening, of his periods of developmen[illegible]hen comes dissolution, death, decrepitude and of decay, an[illegible]suppose that the physical It is the highth of absurdity t[illegible]of the years will make no changes which register the passage [illegible]a man's sexual desires difference in the intensity and number [illegible]associations which and attractions. It is impossible that th[illegible]e in ill-health or satisfy the old man or woman and the pers[illegible]woman and with weak vitality will satisfy the young man [illegible]ity. This the person in good health and with strong vita[illegible]to be statement is axiomatic, of course, but yet there see[illegible]ught pressing need of presenting it continually. Radical in th[illegible] and life as I am now, I know for a certainty that after the pa[illegible] ing of a few more decades, I shall be a Dianist, and in all likelihood a monogamist, and these from sheer inability to be anything else, not because varietist relations and normal associations are now unpleasant and injurious, for they are neither. If, in that time sure to come, (should I live long enough) my brain so far succumbs to the weakening of the body as to lead me to the brink of the abyss of repudiation of the knowledge and principles of my maturity, I pray that Azrael may defer his visit not a day.

I do not say that all men are naturally varietists, although there are very few exceptions, no matter what protestations to the contrary are made. That is, most men and women, divested of the Nessus shirt of inherited superstitions, would at some period in their lives be varietistic in practice, themselves, however much they might object to their lovers being equally free. And I do not say that "once a varietist, always a varietist," even in the period of greatest vigor. We must expect there will be many changes in the practice of a man or woman, under liberty. For a time, one attraction may be so strong and absorbing that there is little or no room for other loves, and then there may come a period during which one finds it difficult if not impossible to tell which of several lovers is the most appreciated. And if finally, as the result of years of variety, one settles down in contentment in strictly monogamic relations, it must not for a moment be forgotten that the present happiness is due to the principle of variety. Had all the persons concerned been monogamic in theory and practice, there would have been none of those experiments which have led to the state of satisfying happiness at last attained.

What the Oneida Community did under the pressure of threats of legal persecution is absolutely irrelevant to the questions at issue. Because I give up my pocket-book to a highwayman it is not established that highway robbery is a legitimate and universally-satisfactory industry.

"Some women, like some horses, can never be broken to trot in double harness."

Having more complex natures than horses, it is very rarely that men and women are broken to "trot in double harness." When they do so trot, it is sadly true that one is broken to compliance with the other. When there is apparent harmony, it is usually because they are like the "willing team" of which it was said that one was willing to do all the work and the other was willing to let it.

L. H.

Book Notes.

No honest Freethinker can doubt the sincerity of many of his friends who retain a belief in religious creeds. Belief is not a matter of the will and these friends can no more be Freethinkers without sufficient evidence to modify their present beliefs than a Freethinker can become an orthodox Christian by a mere act of the will. This truth is too overlooked by Freethinkers who blame Christians for their beliefs. For this reason most books exposing the fallacy of creeds fail to find readers among the very persons they are intended to benefit.

Different in style and no less forcible in argument is the book of seventy-four pages written by Dwight H. Olmstead and published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, entitled "The Protestant Faith, or Justification by Belief." Mr. Olmstead shows that belief is involuntary and therefore not blameworthy, and that the sentiment of duty is wholly removed from the idea of recompense. The absurdity of any attempt to compel belief is clearly set forth. From this book Freethinkers can learn tact in arguing with Christians, and Christians may read it with profit because of the fact that the challenging and defiant tone of antagonism which characterizes so many criticisms of religious creeds is lacking.

* * *

"Faith or Fact" is the title of a book of 347 pages written by Henry M. Taber, a well known agnostic who died recently and left strict orders that no religious ceremony of any kind should accompany the disposal of his body. The author shows from the testimony of Christian ministers and the admissions of Christian writers what are the real aims, desires and tendencies of the church. The preface of the book is written by Robert G. Ingersoll who says "I have read this book with great pleasure, because it is full of good sense, of accurate statement, of sound logic, of exalted thoughts happily expressed, and for the further reason that it is against tyranny, superstition, bigotry and every form of injustice, and in favor of every virtue."

* * *

Oswald Dawson's lecture on "The Outcome of Legitimation" was left out of the report of the proceedings of the second biennial meeting of the Legitimation League because the printer refused to fill his contract. Here is a copy of the telegram sent to Mr. Dawson by the conscientious (or cowardly) printer:

I have just seen the new matter. I certainly cannot print it. The first portion is bad enough, but we are printing that, and decline to print more.
SIDDONS.

At his own expense Mr. Dawson has printed his lecture in a separate pamphlet. It will be sent from Lucifer office to any address for 5 cents.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

"Parasitic Wealth, a Manifesto to the People of the United States," by [illegible] Brown; 160 pages. Chas. H. Kerr & Co., publishers, Chicago. Price, $1.

"[illegible]n Protestant Faith, or Justification by Belief," by Dwight H. Olmstead. [illegible] pages. G. P. Putnam's Sons, publishers, New York.

"[illegible]steady [illegible]. Love and Life," by William Platt; 200 pages. Charles Hirsch, publisher, London. Price, $1. Order from Lucifer office.

"Women[illegible]on. Price, $1. Order from Lucifer office.

"Do We Love[illegible] Do We Love?" by William Platt, 190 pages; published by the author, care of A. Bonner, 1 & 2 Took's court, Cursitor street, London, E. C. Price, $1. Order from Lucifer office.

"Do We Love[illegible]a poem by William Platt. 31 pages. "Clarion" office, 72 Fleet street, London, E. C. Price, 15 cents. Order from Lucifer office.

"Hope's Brotherhood[illegible]ion," a lecture delivered Dec. 6, 1897, under the auspices of the Legitimation League by Oswald Dawson. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents. Order from this office.

"The Outcome of Legitima[illegible]er, with preface by Robert G. Ingersoll. 351 pages. Peter Eckler, publisher, New York. Price, $1.

"Faith or Fact," by Henry M. Taber[illegible]. 204 pages. University Press, London. Price, $2.50.

"Sexual Inversion," by Havelock Ellis.

How tenderly modern society cares for the homeless, the aged and the worn-out workers! Have you noticed that the homeless can go to prison, the aged to the poorhouse, and the sick can go to the devil? And that is all that is cared about them.—Rights of Man.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1304 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. A. B. STOCKHAM, of this city, requests us to say that the book "Karezza" has not been excluded from the mail, as lately reported by a correspondent in Lucifer.

WANTED: This office needs, or will soon need an all-around assistant, one who can write letters, mail the paper, attend to book sales, keep office in order, etc., etc. A knowledge of type-setting would be desirable though not essential. Address this office.

CONSIDERABLE SPACE in this issue is devoted to reports of the late trial of the editors of the "Firebrand," in Oregon. It is sincerely to be regretted that there seems much dissension and some hard feeling in regard to the cause of defeat to freedom of press in this case. Wishing to give all a fair hearing the men whose conduct is criticised by Mr. Addis can now have the floor, if they wish to make a brief reply. It is earnestly to be hoped, however, that these personal matters will not be made the subject of endless controversy. If mistakes have been made it is much better to say as little about them as possible, but direct all the forces at our command towards building up a public conscience that will forever put a stop to such prosecutions as those against Abner J. Pope, Henry Addis and A. Isaak.

Self-Condemned.

And now the men calling themselves the "grand jury" for the federal district known as the District of Wisconsin, have put themselves on record as being possessed of foul minds. They have gazetted themselves, they have gibbeted themselves for all time as having obscene, lewd or lascivious thoughts. The term obscenity, as used in law, is a technical offense, a law-created offense. It is based upon matters of opinion, wholly, and not of fact. In the nature of the case there can be no obscenity outside the mind of him or her who perceives it as such. In the case of the kindred offense known as "blasphemy," none but a believer in and worshiper of a supernatural being called "God" can be shocked or hurt by words known as blasphemous, so also none but a believer in and worshiper of a mythical personage known as "Grundy"—artificial morality—can possibly be injured or shocked by words known as obscene. Hence it depends wholly upon what is in the mind of him or of her who reads a given book or other writing as to whether or not it is obscene. To the pure-minded all things are pure—that is, all things are fit subjects of investigation and of use, and none more so than is the subject of the right or wrong use of the various organs of the human body,—the organs of sight, of hearing, of taste, of respiration, of digestion, and especially those of reproduction,—since upon the right use of these organs must depend the happiness, nay the very existence of future generations of the human race, to say nothing of the happiness or misery of the present possessors of these reproductive organs.

To make plainer the reference to the Wisconsin jury we herewith insert part of a private letter recently received from Emil F. Ruedebusch, author and publisher of the book, "The Old and the New Ideal." Under date, Milwaukee, Jan. 25, Mr. Rudebusch says:

"The grand jury found an indictment against me last week (secret session, do not know the day). Yesterday I pleaded not guilty before Judge Seaman, and the trial was set for Thursday, February 3. The indictment contains eighty-four counts. On eighty-four pages they found lewdness, lasciviousness and obscenity! That certainly should be sufficient for five years' imprisonment! And yet we hope for victory."

Many of Lucifer's readers have bought and read the "Old and the New Ideal," and, so far as we have heard, none of them have discovered obscenity in its pages. The natural inference is that Lucifer's readers are not worshipers at Grundy's shrine and hence are neither shocked nor disgusted at plain talk concerning the most important of all functions or relations,—those that bring into life new human beings.

Looking for causes there is nothing to cause surprise in the news that Mr. Ruedebusch and his book have been put under the ban of the law. The law itself appears to have been enacted—like most other laws—to give employment and salary to men who prefer meddling with other people's business instead of earning an honest living by hard productive labor. Among these people thus provided for by law is the postal inspector. In order to make a show of earning the salary and perquisites of office the inspector must occasionally give "information" that the postal laws have been violated. Then the prosecuting attorney must lay the information before the secret tribunal called the grand jury and try to secure indictments against alleged offenders, else the tax-payers will get tired of paying his salary and then the prosecutor would soon become that most pitiable of all forlorn mortals, a "politician out of a job." Then the jurors aforesaid must do their part—the twelve or twenty-four "good men and true," who while at home may be very commonplace men, very ignorant and very narrow-minded individuals, have now suddenly blossomed out into Solons of almost superhuman wisdom,—men so far above the sway of human bias and human passion that they are now able to decide impartially the most difficult, the most abstruse moral questions, to decide upon the goodness or badness of books and papers that have cost the labor, the best thought, of the best years in the lives of women and men who are by nature and by education incomparably better prepared to decide upon what is right and good for general circulation than are the "chance-drawn" members of the secret tribunal known as the grand jury.

Back of the postal censor, back of the prosecuting attorney, back of the grand jurors, back of the trial jurors and the trial judge, back of all these stands the priest, stands the clergyman stands the Sunday School teacher, stand the "Salvation" armies, the Christian Endeavorers, Christian Amendment agitators, the women of the W. C. T. U., the White Ribboners and all the thousand and one organizations of similar character and purpose—all, all demanding suppression and punishment for the heretics who dare to question the truth and righteousness of their mythologic standards of morals, or the laws and customs regulating the sex-life, the reproductive instinct, of women and men.

Looking for causes, then, we have not far to go to find adequate explanation for what seems a mysterious phenomenon, a most flagrant violation of the basic principles upon which our government is supposed to be founded. What the remedy is or must be, let each thinker decide for him or herself

Another Letter from Portland Jail.

Under date of December 30, Abner J. Pope writes us as follows:

"DEAR LUCIFER AND READERS:—This my fifth letter is written in the jail and in the same corridor that I was placed in when first put in jail. My last letter gave account up to Dec. 14. 'Loma' received and read with delight. I can recommend it as a good thing.

"On the 21st, Henry McGinn, the lawyer appointed by Judge Charles B. Bellinger, to have our case in charge, Addis and Isaak came into my cell and had a short interview with me. Just before leaving, McGinn said he had all the evidence he wanted and was now sure of an acquittal for us. Our trial was set for the 22nd, was then put off to the 27th, and again to the 30th, and once more to the third of January, 1898. The Prosecuting Attorney, John H. Hall (not Hill as I wrote) has engaged another lawyer to aid him, and the jailer told me that he heard Hall say he would rather lose one thousand dollars than lose this case. They are going to make a big thing of it.

"On the evening of the 21st I was taken out of the cell with Barret, who is indicted for murder, and placed in here, but not one now in here was here when I was in before. Twice have I been carried out of my cell to hear the rules read to new prisoners. I refusing to admit they have any right to control me they carried me out carefully and set me down easily and did not hurt me. I think I am sowing seed in the minds of some in this corridor.

"Christmas, the Salvationists gave all the prisoners a piece of chicken and cake, and the sheriff gave a goose dinner. The day was dark and rainy. Have had no freezing weather. All Lucifers up to and including 689 received, and I am so well pleased with "Hilda's Home" that I want a copy in paper when published. I am well and happy, and with love to all I am your Pantarchian friend, A. J. POPE.

"Friday 31st; fifteen weeks in jail. Yesterday the 'Kangaroo Court' was called and I did not go out, as I never do, and although I had been carried out twice, they did not carry me out this time, and after the rules were read to the new inmates my cell comrade moved I be excused from attending court and be deprived of all benefits of said court, and with the exception of one vote I was excused—one more gain for truth and liberty.

"Third of January, 1898. Just come back from court and after a severe fight we were convicted on one count,—charged with four. I was called to the stand to testify, but because I could not affirm to tell 'the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth'—I said I was willing to tell the truth and nothing but the truth—they refused to take my evidence, and it made our lawyer so mad, that when he was speaking to the jury he called me an old fool that wanted to be jailed and considered a martyr for conscience' sake. The judge gave a very fair charge to the jury, which of course will be printed, and I hope to get a copy to send to you. He apologized for not taking my testimony and not recognizing my long imprisonment and old age. We go and get our sentence on the fifth inst. I felt confident that no lawyer could conduct my case, because it is contrary to all their views, and his talking about me confirms that view. He did not treat me quite as mean as the lawyer appointed for you. We were convicted on one count, Kate Austin's and 'A. E. K.'s' letters and W. Whitman's 'A Woman Waits For Me,' did not specify which one. I was so weak and sick I could scarcely sit up and I did not 'switch off' as printed.

"If I should ask for a new trial I should admit the government's right to govern me. So I cannot ask for a trial. I am not a citizen of these United States—have never voted and would not consent to be a citizen. A. J. P."

Henry Addis adds that he does "not think Comrade Pope will be sentenced until our motion for a new trial is disposed of."

An Object Lesson in Economics.

The following private letter from one who has for many years contributed very freely to help Lucifer, and other similar publications, is here introduced as a realistic lesson, showing how, in order to pile up millions for the law-favored few, the many are driven to bankruptcy and financial ruin. On last Christmas day our friend seems to have taken something of a retrospect of the year and of his past life, and, among other things he thus writes us:

"I have felt much interest in your papers and have desired to do all that I could to help them along, but now conditions have changed and I am reduced to the condition of a day laborer. My property has been swept away from me so that it became necessary for me to seek work to earn my daily bread. I was fortunate in getting work when there are so many who are suffering for the necessaries of life, which they could earn if they had a chance. My property is gone and I am left about fifty thousand dollars in debt which it is doubtful whether I can ever pay. I had enough if it had been well applied to have paid every dollar and left me from seventy to one hundred thousand dollars. My property was sold by the sheriff and did not bring twenty cents on the dollar of its value. Those responsible for the sale will not get fifty cents on the dollar, when if they had done as they agreed they would have received full pay, and every one that I owed, and I would have saved the sum before mentioned.

"It would require too much writing to explain all the particulars. I would say that my workmen were the cause. For over twenty-five years I did not miss paying them once a week. Some of them had worked for me for thirty-one years, some thirty, others from fifteen to twenty-five. If I had discharged them so that I had just enough to do what work there was, I would not have been busted. Making up a large stock that had to be sacrificed for little or nothing swamped me. I have had the name of paying my men better wages than any other shop in town. I had made a bargain to sell my shop and business with stock for $135,000, and the papers were all made out and would have been all right if the men had not taken the course they did. During the last fifteen months three or four of the men had quit and sued me and a friend for whom I am at work paid them to save their getting a judgment and the men probably thought that he would step in and pay them up. In either of the other cases the amount didn't amount to over two hundred dollars. When it came to seven thousand dollars at once it was another matter.

"It was pretty hard at first to go back where I was over fifty years ago, that is, to work by the day. If I had been as close fisted as some others I might have saved funds to be independent today. I think I can speak within bounds and say that for the last fifty years nine-tenths of my earnings have been used for the benefit of others. Few men of my age have done as much hard work as I have done. I am in my seventy-fifth year and in fair health and can live on less cost than any man that I know of. I have eaten scores of meals during the past year that did not exceed one cent cost for the meal. I eat much fruit, which is dearer this season, which more than doubles the cost of my living. If I were to dispense with fruit I could live well on an average of one cent a meal. I have made it a study and practice of how to live well and cheaply. I have to dispense with all condiments, tea, coffee, flesh meat, etc. I have not drank a cup of tea for over sixty-three years and never two cents' worth of coffee in my life. I never used tobacco. I will stop, as I think I have written as much in this strain as you will care to spend time to read. Fraternally yours,

"A. H. FRANK.

"Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 25, 1897."

Comment on this letter would seem quite superfluous. It will probably be said that "overproduction" was the cause of the disaster. Mr. Frank was an inventor and manufacturer of handmills and other labor-saving machinery. Has there ever been overproduction of useful machinery? For the interest or benefit of the protected monopolist of gold-standard money, and of land and labor, perhaps, but not under a system of equal rights for all and special privileges for none.

RARE BACK NUMBERS.

The Number that Can be Supplied is Limited. First Come First Served.

Many persons have written to this office for back numbers of Lucifer covering the first time its editor was in prison. We have a limited number of copies in stock and while they last they can be had for 5 cents a copy. These copies comprise Volume X. of Lucifer. Some of the features of the different issues are:

1. A Story of Two Lives, by May Huntley; Extracts from Moses Harman's address to the court; Dianism Discussed, by Elmina Drake Slenker.

2. The Pittsburg Problem, by "Diana"; Prison Echoes, by Moses Harman; Rules for Sexual Health, by Allie Lindsay Lynch; Court of Love.

3. Enforcement of Morality, by "Diana."

4. A Branch Road, by Hamlin Garland.

6. Prison Echoes, by M. Harman. Dianism vs. Budlongism, by Elmina Drake Slenker.

8. "The Woman Who Dares," by H. J. Hunt. Women's Work, by Lillie D. White.

10. The Girl of the Future, by Ruth B. Havens.

11. The Girl of the Future, by Ruth B. Havens; Prison Echoes, by M. Harman. What Do the Sex Cranks Want? by M. Harman.

12. Release of the Editor from Prison; A Story of One Hour, by May Huntley.

13. Account of the Editor's Release from Prison; The Nude in Artists, by C. L. Swartz.

14. Criticism and Comments on the Editor's Imprisonment. Reception for the Editor. A New Realism, by Lizzie M. Holmes.

15. Beginning of May Huntley's serial story, "Hagar Lyndon, or a Woman's Rebellion." This interesting story is completed in twenty-two numbers of Lucifer. Our Name and Purpose—Editorial.

16. "The Crowning Sin of the Age,"—editorial. The Object of Laws, by Marie Louise, who has since writing this article become a Buddhist priestess and is now known as Swami Abayananda.

17. Selfish and Immoral Women, by Lillie D. White. Dualism and Varietism Compared, by C. L. James. Feelings and Ideas of Sex in Children, by Prof. Earl Barnes of Stanford University.

18. "His Confession," a poem by Voltairine de Cleyre.

19. Maltreatment of Wives—editorial. Bondage and Bondage, by Allie Lindsay Lynch.

21. Marriage Going Out of Fashion—editorial. God's Mistakes—editorial.

Give the number of the paper you want when you send for it. Besides the features mentioned above every copy contains much valuable contributed and editorial matter. The entire volume of fifty-two numbers will be sent to any address for $1.75. This offer is necessarily limited by the number of papers we have on hand.

A preacher in San Francisco, Rev. John Wilson, wants to establish a home for girls where they can live economically, and yet not be subject to the red tape rules and meddlesome espionage of the managers, which renders the average so-called "home" in reality a prison. "Good women are not interested in needy women unless the latter are naughty," says Mr. Wilson; and he might have added that only then are "good" women interested when the "naughty" women are sunk so low in self-depreciation, self-abnegation, that they are willing to let their self-vaunted "good" sisters regulate their lives in every particular.

L. H.

Comstockism Again.

Comstock has been rebuffed again. It will be remembered that he some months ago caused the arrest of Meyer Chinsky, a book-seller on the East Side in New York for handling a work in Jewish entitled "Massa Solo" or "Masso Tolo." It is the same book that D. M. Bennett brought out a number of years ago under the title of "Sepher Toldoth Jeshu," and which no one ever suspected of containing anything obscene until the Censor found it necessary to again attract attention to himself for contributory purposes. For many years, Comstock has been anxious to make the obscenity law cover religious heresy, and in this instance he alleged that the incriminated book was "sacrilegious." He insisted that a certain clause should be translated "The Crucified One," and that therefore it was a blasphemous reference to Jesus. The defense maintained that the correct translation was "The Hanged One," and that as the passage was written some hundreds of years before the time in which the Nazarene is said to have lived, it could not refer to him, and therefore, as a consequence, is not "sacrilegious." When the cause came up the other day for trial it was dismissed, but on what grounds is not clear from all the newspaper accounts I have seen. If the court held that the contention of the defense was correct and dismissed the cause for the reason that the passage did not have reference to Jesus, it establishes a very dangerous precedent, and carries Comstock one step nearer to his goal, for it says by implication that if the clause had been "The Crucified One," it would have been "sacrilegious" and hence amenable to the law against obscenity, a most monstrous stretching of the statute. The court should have ruled that as neither translation was obscene the passage could not come within the purview of the law against obscenity, and that "sacrilege" had no standing in a suit brought under that law.

W.

Claudio the Respectable.

Claudio, you say, has got no vices—True!
But then he's destitute of virtues too.
—Bertram Dobell's Catalogue.

The "Firebrand" Case to Date.

BY HENRY ADDIS.

In order that the readers of Lucifer may know the facts in the case of the United States vs. H. Addis, A. J. Pope and A. Isaak, I take this means of informing them.

We had a farce trial on the 3d of January. At the time of Comrade Pope's and my arraignment, none of the defense fund was on hand, or at least only a few dollars, and Comrade Isaak was not present. Comrade Pope stated that he did not want a lawyer, and I stated that I had no means to employ one. The court offered to appoint one for me and H. E. McGinn, a noted criminal lawyer of this city got me to request the court to appoint him. The court appointed him, and when Comrade Isaak came up from San Francisco he declared himself satisfied with McGinn. McGinn seemed to take an interest in the case until we had a talk with Comrade Pope in his cell in jail, at which time he showed McGinn a letter from one Baylor, a copy of which had been sent to Judge Bellenger. This letter was very "A. P. A."-ish in its character, and McGinn, a Catholic by the way, seems to have taken offense at it.

On the day of trial McGinn did not question the jurors, simply excusing two without reason, thus giving the district attorney the idea that, as he expressed it, he "had a man on the jury," and the district attorney conducted the case with greater care and vigor, if possible, than he otherwise would have done.

McGinn constantly refused to cross examine the witnesses, conceding point after point, and making no defense until W. A. Robinson, the Postal Inspector who got the evidence leading to our arrest by a decoy letter, was put on the stand. McGinn made the inspector admit using a decoy letter to get evidence against us, and then McGinn made a fight to have the case dismissed on the ground that evidence gained in that manner could not be used in prosecuting persons. The district attorney referred the court to the case of the United States vs. Grimm, in which Judge Dickinson, a lower of the Supreme Court ruled that a decoy letter used to discover a person engaged in an unlawful business was lawful, and McGinn did not point out that the publication of a paper could not be, in itself, an unlawful business, and that as everyone is presumed innocent until proven guilty, and as we have not been proven guilty of publishing obscene matter, the publication of the "Firebrand" could not be ruled as an unlawful business, thus making the case of the United States vs. Grimm not applicable to our case. Consequently the court over ruled McGinn's motion to instruct the jury to acquit.

From that on McGinn seemed out at sea, and when Comrade Pope was called to take the witness stand and refused to either swear or affirm he got boiling mad and from that on everything he did tended to prejudice the jury against us. His speech had better been left unspoken.

The instructions of the court were fair. He told the jury that if they did not acquit on the second count he would be under the necessity of setting their verdict aside. He further instructed the jury to acquit on the Whitman poem, "A Woman Waits for Me," and stated that the evidence showed that I should be acquitted and that there did not appear to be evidence enough to convict Comrade Isaak; that unless it could be shown who had mailed the roll of papers indicted, then either one or all of us should have the benefit of the doubt.

The jury, however, was so rattled by the harangues of McGinn and the district attorney that in less than one half hour they brought in a verdict of guilty on the first count and not guilty on the second count.

When the verdict was read the judge said we might go, but McGinn moved that we be sentenced immediately, but the district attorney was gentleman enough to propose that we be given two days to file a motion for new trial, and the judge granted three days. On the day set I moved for more time and the court granted four days more. Owing to two important cases the hearing of the motion was postponed until this morning, and then on a technical defect the judge refused to grant it, but gave us thirty days in which to file a new motion. The judge stated that he had no desire to sentence us, but wished the records of the court to be clear and correct.

On looking over the issue of "Free Society" of Jan. 16, I note a statement of the "'Firebrand' Relief and Publication Fund." I found that $369.78 had been received by G. E. Miller for our defense, in response to a call sent out by him in which he stated that "we intend to make a fight, and now [not?] have the comrades throw themselves on the mercy of the court, and then come on bended knee pleading for mercy."

In looking over the expenditures of the fund gathered in response to that plea, I find that Comrade Isaak has had $48.45, myself $15.40, and Comrade Pope not one cent!

Can any one see how it comes that we stand condemned today? By appropriating these funds otherwise we were forced to throw ourselves "on the mercy of the court," by calling on him for legal help, and free press has received a hard blow.

Furthermore, not one cent of the $15.40 charged to me came into my hands by Miller's consent, although I was constantly busy, looking after Comrade Pope, corresponding with interested comrades, running after editors and reporters and doing such other things as seemed expedient, ever since my release from jail, until time of trial.

We have until the 15th of February to file motion for new trial, but unless we can get a juror to admit that he was prejudiced so that he did not take the evidence and instructions of the court sufficiently into account, or some similar reason for new trial, I guess we will have to serve a term in prison.

Comrade Pope does not move for new trial, preferring to "take his medicine." I do not object to serving a term in prison so much as I do to the verdict of guilty. I am not guilty. The "Firebrand" was not indecent or obscene.

Comrade Pope did get Comrade James' letter, and our attorney read it, pronouncing it sensible.

NOTE: As Lucifer has been receiving money for the benefit of the "Firebrand" and its prosecuted editors I deem this a suitable place to make report of stewardship. As per published statement Lucifer has received fifteen dollars and twenty-five cents on "Firebrand" account. This includes the five dollar contribution from this office, and does not include the four dollars and fifty cents collected at "Lucifer Circle" by Miss Goldman, for this purpose. This sum, ($15.25) has been sent to Portland; ten dollars to A. J. Pope and five dollars and twenty-five cents to Henry Addis. Five dollars of this was forwarded in October and the rest in January. Had I known that money would be needed in employing counsel it would have been sent on as fast as received here, but having been informed that no counsel would be employed I waited the orders of the editors of the paper for whose revival I understood the money was contributed. If in this I labored under a misapprehension I regret the fact. My own experience teaches me that it is a mistake to pay money to lawyers. Freedom of speech and of press must be gained, if at all, through an appeal to the people at large, not to a class of men whose training and whose interests all uphold the present invasive legal system.

M. HARMAN.

Monogamic Connubialism.

Oswald Dawson, in January "Adult."

I denounce monogamic connubialism as a prolific generator of deceit and lies. The moral standard of a nation must be low indeed when a large moiety of its plays are concerned with questionable situations involving adulteries. If we are adulterers, and must be, or are better so, let us say so.

Monogamic connubialism I despise. It is carnal; and if the sexual embrace is a vehicle for high emotional development, let it not be performed like a penance of Ave Marias, till the meaning and charm has died away. If it is not, then let us rather take the ascetic stand and not salve conscience by the mental juggle of labelling as love that which is merely the result of continuous proximity in Connubialism. But the marriage service of the Book of Common Prayer, with its basis on the Pauline epistles, will have more to do to hold it own than the most advanced American Free Love teaching.

Monogamic connubialism I despair of. It is the mother of the meanest emotion, jealousy. Jealousy asphixiates love and devours the virtue it professes to preserve. In its place, like unto a quiet child at table, it is a fit factor in life, but it seemingly cannot, in a large number of cases, desist from becoming a chronic nuisance, exhibiting uncontrollable paroxysms, often to the ruin of homes, sometimes of business, and to the blighting of much social life.

I discard monogamic connubialism as the parent of Prostitution. I know that nine-tenths of the evils are due to legislative interference, and will not here contest the statement that the remaining tenth is indirectly due to the same cause. I know that there is much to be said in favor of the theory that married women are, as it were, a trades-union, and that prostitutes are the blacklegs. I realize that the dreams of some of us: that the monetary recompense or its equivalent, for the amatory functions of women, may cease, is very Utopian; and I say that as an alternative to the herculean task of removing the legislative impediments, the course might be to, at one and the same time, dispense with the blacklegs and pulverize the union. At any rate, one road or another, the evils of Prostitution must go.

Letter to a Prospective Bride.

BY IDA C. CRADDOCK.

"Direct and delicate, and contains information of great value to both parties."—"The Medical World." Philadelphia.

Pamphlet; twenty-five cents. Address, Ida C. Craddock, P. O. Box 2099, Philadelphia.

696.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 16 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 30 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

The Adult for January—Double Number.

Contains the Second Biennial Proceedings of the Legitimation League. Edited by Oswald Dawson. Picture of the president of the League on the cover. Full page portraits of Lillian Harman, president, George Bedborough, secretary, and Louie Bedborough, treasurer of the League.

Contents: 1. The Annual Meeting and Dinner. 2. Friction. 3. Eighteenpence or Half-a-crown? 4. The Play's the Thing. 5. Some Letters, the Constitution and a Speech. 6. The Judgment of Paris. 7. Which Sex Suffers Most? 8. The Physiology of Love. 9. Sexual Education. 10. Spiritual Love. 11. Miss De Cleyre on the League and the Woman Question. 12. The New Idealism. 13. An Autonomistic Marriage. 14. Marriages Made in Russia. 15. Cast off the Shell! 16. The "Firebrand" in the Flames. 17. The New Martyrdom. 18. Letters and Reviews. 19. Free Love and Lesbian Love. 20. Powder Magazines and Lighted Lucifers. 21. Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs. Price, 20 cents. Address this office.

The only journal which presents full accounts of the progress of the colonization movement along the lines of co-operation.

The only journal that gives full explanation of all the various theories for social improvement.

The only journal that offers free discussions of social and religious subjects.

Each issue contains full report of best current thought in all the leading English and American periodicals.

The editor is a Monist in philosophy, a Truthseeker in religion and Socialist in politics. Editorial comment will always be given from these standpoints. Current Thought is an open court. It offers the best thought of the brightest thinkers of all schools.

The Book Reviews will embrace all new books of social study, science and fiction.

Regular subscription price, $1.00 per year, post-paid to any part of the world. Special Offer:—Until further notice, new subscribers will be received for one year at 50 cents each, provided they send ten names and addresses of liberal and progressive minded people. Address, Current Thought, Cleveland, O.

Premium book "Homilies on Finance," sent free to each new subscriber.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.
This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, a neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address for $2.25. Address M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasion; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter IV., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, ten cts.

Wanted: A practical horticulturist, and a scientific vegetarian cook. A free man and a free woman, only, need apply. Address Z., care of Lucifer, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Books Worth Reading. FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .15
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker, .10
"Practical Co-operation;" " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .10
Digging for Bedrock; " " .05
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake, .10
Victor Yetter; M. T. Martin, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .05
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .05
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .05
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .05
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two cent stamps for postage, and address
M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Bequest. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1021, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe that the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally in vogue. An excellent missionary document. Two copies 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook sexual liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 10 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "Talk About Anarchist Communism," Nos. 1 and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 52 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 6. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, FEBRUARY 9, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 697.

Tradition.

In the world dwelt a giant,
His name was Tradition,
All men bowed before him.

Lo, one day came a man,
And defied the giant,
Who crushed him with quick, huge hands,
Till red blood spattered the green grass;
While all the slaves shrieked "Fool!"

Years passed, and men
Looking on his white life, said,
"There lived a hero!"

But the man was dead.

—Ernest Neal Lyon in "Munsey's."

Plumb-Line Penographs.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"God reigns and the Republican party still lives."—Mark Hanna to President McKinley.

Granting the truth of both assertions and the implied connection of cause and effect, my opinion of the first power named is not at all improved. By the way, that telegram is a bold plagiarism, in spirit, and partly in words.

* * *

If the fool-killer is half earning his wages, he must be terribly overworked these days. But I have a strong suspicion that, like most other public officials, he is a confirmed shirk. For instance, I have not heard of the death of that member of the Virginia House of Burgesses who introduced the bill for the suppression of flirting.

* * *

A newspaper says that in Delaware within a certain length of time the legislature granted four hundred divorces to "unhappy or alleged unhappy couples." Why the word "alleged"? Why does the writer assume that some or all of these people were happy in wedlock at the time they sued for divorce? Or why does he seem to assume that? Is it reasonable to suppose that these persons would have gone to the trouble and expense of applying for divorces if they had been happy as they were? Was that word "alleged" interjected for any other reason than the desire of the paper to throw a sop to the enemies of divorce? I think not.

* * *

Anent the alleged Schenk discovery, Dr. John Gardner, of the Academy of Medicine, New York, says:

I don't believe a word of it. In my opinion, God in his wisdom has made the determination of the sex of unborn children by artificial means a matter of impossibility.

If Dr. Gardner declares that the reporter has totally misrepresented him, we must accept his denial as conclusive, for the physician who, in this age of science, utters such balderdash as it attributed to Dr. Gardner should at once take sacerdotal vows and thereafter devote himself to the work of the church. The study of nature is not for those who affirm that her processes are "unknowable."

Henry Carl Frederick Froelich married three, and possibly four, women in Utica and the greater New York within a very short time. Now he is gone, they know not whither, and all they have is a partnership right in a long name, and of which they are trying to dispose in the divorce courts. Under free love all this deception and disappointment could have been avoided, and the women would have had precisely as much "protection" as they have now. In all likelihood, they would have been much more careful in their associations, for all careful observers know that the "marrying man" can make three "conquests" of that kind to the sincere radical's one. "Marriage" is a magic word to conjure a maiden with, and the records of our courts show that the risk the conjurer runs is comparatively slight.

* * *

The Rev. J. Howard Hand, Methodist, of Riverhead, affirms that dancing is wrong. "If this is not so," he asks, "why are the round dances more popular than the square dances, and why do not women dance together?" Pshaw! those are not posers, Reverend Sir. To show the sophistry of your argument, I will ask—If religion is not wrong, why are there mere Methodists than Universalists? As to the second conundrum, let us parallel it with this—If marriage is not wrong, why do not women marry women? The obvious answer is, as to your question about women dancing together, that there is more happiness in the other arrangement. You may think that establishes your proposition that dancing is wrong, but it doesn't; it merely shows that you are a modern victim of the ancient delusion that pleasure is sinful and pain virtuous.

* * *

If the mutual desire to associate sexually did not (through legal marriage) give the man any part of, or right to inherit, the property of the woman, and if it did not give the woman any part of, or right to inherit, the property of the man, the number of marital fights and divorce scandals would be reduced probably at least fifty per cent. A North Dakota court has just granted the Brazilian millionaire, Don Teixeira, a divorce from the Spanish woman, Carmen Domingo, who had conspired with her mother, father and brother to inveigle Teixeira into matrimony. As soon as the marriage was consummated, the girl and her family threw off all disguise and set to work to get hold of the property. The stake for which the girl played, the sum for which she sold herself, was an unusually large one, but so far as her intentions are concerned, she is on a level with tens of thousands of other women and with tens of thousands of men who prostitute themselves in marriage. And they are all on a level with the women of the street, who do the same thing outside of marriage, and with the men who are their partners. Of course it can be said in excuse, that, like the illegal offenders, they are the victims of their necessities, and in addition that they have been brought up to think that "marrying for a home" is honorable, which is all true in a way, but it does not dispose of the fact that the associations into which they enter have been bought, just as have the associations of the others, whom they so hate and despise.

* * *

In these days of paternalism, and its concomitants, invasion and spoliation, the path of promotion of the policeman is over the wrecked business, peace and happiness of men and women. To illustrate, Policeman Buckridge of the Eldridge Street station in New York was one morning recently called into the presence of his superior, Captain Stephenson, who said to him: "I think you have the making of a good detective in you. I will give you a chance." "I am ready, sir," answered Buckridge. "Put on plain clothes and go out and see what you can do," ordered the Captain. This was on Sunday, and the account is found in the "Evening Sun" of Monday, January 24. Detective Buckridge kept the patrol wagon on the run that day. The next morning he appeared before Magistrate Crane with thirty-one prisoners. And what were their crimes? Well, there were two boys arrested for playing shinny in Allen Street, four for playing craps on the roof of a house on Forsyth Street, four pushcart peddlers taken in Hester Street, two decrepit old women who had been trying to sell cigars on the Bowery, while the others were boys caught playing craps in various streets. It will be seen that there had not been a single invasion of equal rights except those of which the detective was guilty, and he, strangely enough, was the only one of the thirty-two persons who stood before the magistrate who was not in the grip of the law. Boys engaged in sport, and the poorest of the poor people of a great city, trying to gain a few cents for subsistence, even on the priests' day, were those whose scalps adorned the belt of the ambitious patrolman. "These people have been locked up all night, have they not?" asked the magistrate. Buckridge answered, "Most of them have." "Well, I will discharge them with a warning," said Mr. Crane. In the next homily on the "Terrible Increase of Crime Due to Immigration," these thirty-one arrests by Detective Buckridge will help make up the inflated total, and may also give Max Nordau the statistical pretext for another dissertation on "degeneration." They are sure to count as so many credit marks for Buckridge on the station-house blotter, and will play no mean part in giving him the chevrons of a sergeant in the not distant future. Am I not justified in affirming my belief, based on multitudes of outrages of this sort, that there must be something wrong in the make-up of a man, who, unless driven by some grievous necessity, applies for a place on the police force? How can a man respect himself when he deliberately chooses a vocation that makes him the persecutor of starving working-people, of unfortunate women, of children?

The Walks of Life.

Bolton Ha.l, in "Even as You and I."

Sunday's text was, "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." At the time I said it was a very good sermon; but today, in my walk in the everyday world, I said to myself that, like a great deal else in the New Testament, it was meant only for the Jews; the times have changed all that. For I passed by, and saw a footman standing in the bitter cold, coughing; so I asked the lady who came out of the great house if it was needful to have him out on such a day? She said gently, "Do I not pay him for it? Others would be glad to do it for less; and I give him and the coachman employment—waiting. I hope my horses have not got cold while I was inside doing sewing for the unemployed—which would sell for eighteen cents." Then I told her if the horses got pneumonia, that would give more work still to the veterinary, and the footman could go to the hospital free. But she said that was cruelty to animals, and had nothing to do with her men; so I passed on.

Then I saw two little children playing marbles, only they had no marbles, nothing but little round stones which they had searched out; and their father sat gloomily on the doorstep. He is a stone-cutter, a steady man, and would work for twelve dollars a week—the rent is four—but he has no work. It is hard to get work in the winter, so he must stay and mind the two younger children while his wife goes out washing at a dollar and a quarter a day. But she cannot get enough to do. On the next block I could see the office of the "Aid to Employment Society," so I said to myself, "This is not very sad after all, because if he is worthy—that is, in danger of starving—he can get food at the "Down Town Relief Bureau" or the "Leake Dole of Bread;" so I passed on.

Then the wind blew my hat off, and a gentle-looking man caught it and handed it to me, and looked so pleased, as though I had done him a favor, that I, who am a garrulous old fellow, talked to him too. He was a copyist—an elderly man—and he was looking for work. I do not think he can have been very capable; he said that the Young Men's Christian Association taught a great many stenographers at their free evening classes, and that girls were doing the work too, and that makes it hard. He never had been able to save anything, and sickness had brought him in debt; he would work for eight dollars a week. "But," said I, "life for you and your wife is not worth having on so little as that; I would rather starve at once." "Well," said he patiently, "I go to the reading-rooms of the Cooper Union, and that is pleasant, only they will not let me smoke my pipe, and my daughter (she is only a factory girl now), belongs to the 'Girls' Friendly,' while my wife gets a little help (not charity, you know) at the Mothers' Meeting." So I said to myself that this was all very good; and I passed on.

I went into Nineteenth Street. Near Sixth Avenue there is a dark alley, ill-smelling, foul. I thought to myself, this is very strange that there should be such a place so close to the rich lady's great house; so I went in. In the front is a tumble-down tenement, and in the rear is another. I climbed up a crooked little stair covered with ashes, thrown there for lack of a worse place, and knocked at the door of the top story. It was a room a little higher than my head, and about as big as your butler's pantry. There were three other "rooms" opening into it, for all of which the mother pays nine dollars a month. The three "rooms" are dark closets, one of which, however, has a little window. They were not very clean, because in each of them the bed fills the whole space; there our sister lives with nine children. Nevertheless she had a guest, a stranger whom she took in from the streets the night before. The place was not very healthful, for in the yard between it and the front house were the closets used for both buildings. I talked with her, and found, sure enough, she did drink sometimes, which I thought to myself was very unnecessary when she could amuse herself and her children so well in her home. Downstairs they told me all about her. I fear she was not a nice woman, but perhaps refinement does not grow in such a place.

Downstairs they took me for a health officer, and owned up that there were two families on every floor (which probably meant four). And I saw two vacant lots in the next block; so I supposed they could go and live there, or at least they could be industrious and save money and buy the lots. So I said to myself that this misery was the will of God; and I passed on. As I went out a girl hissed at me from behind the shutter, and I stopped to speak even to her. She said that she took to that way of life because she loved nice clothes (that seemed to me natural; all good women love these), and drudgery was hard, and she had no friends or amusement. I supposed that she could have got a place as a trained servant, and that she richly deserved all that she suffered; so I passed on. Then I said to myself, I could get her a place, or at least, one for her little sister. But no one would take the child. One said she did not look strong, another that she was not energetic, another that she was ignorant. So I asked the great ladies how many of their friends were not delicate, or lazy, or ignorant, and if they knew any of them who would make good waitresses? But they said no, that they were the upper classes, and did not need to be so good as common people. So I said to myself, these are not really our sisters; only the upper classes were made in His image, and each will find her proper place; so I passed on. The scrubbing woman went out as I did. She said, "Good-evening, your honor," which was very respectful, so I talked with her. She is seventy-five years old, does not drink; her husband is sober too; he is seventy, quite a young man, she said; he was a watchman, and got the rheumatism; now he could only watch in houses; he could give good references, so when they had a house to take care of in the summer, they did nicely, but they had never been able to save anything. She did not look as though she spent money on dress, but I suppose she could not have been economical, otherwise they would have been rich. Then I said to myself that this also must be as it should be, because—because—but you will have to think that out for yourself. So I passed on.

I saw that there was no real scarcity of money, because in the basement there was an embroiderer filling in an elaborate blanket for a baby's cradle. It was to be raffled for at the church fair; and I suppose that the old bachelor who gets it (we manage such things at bazars) will give it back again; and the young ladies will laugh and kiss the roses and sell them to him at a dollar apiece, and there will be a great deal of fun and jollity, and the good Lord will get money thereby to carry on the work of His church.

Then I said to myself, we have also the Charity Ball, where there is dancing, and harmless mirth, and ladies expose their innocent breasts, and get lots of champagne, and behold, the hospital coffers are filled with money, yet no one misses it. And I supposed that I saw the decrees of Providence even in that; so I passed on. . . . . .

A Warning Voice.

BY J. G. TRUMAN.

As my short criticism of "Hilda's Home" was found to be worthy of replies both from the editor and the writer of the story I wish to explain farther. But first I will say that I am well pleased with the reply of Rosa Graul and her explanation. I have no fault to find with her logic nor her method. It is excellent in its way. I did not write from the standpoint of an idealist or sentimentalist, but as one who had tried to practice and failed, and wish to warn others, who may be allured by bright ideals, not to rush in unprepared and meet like results.

To write of charming ideals is good, for it sets people to thinking that way, but to try to materialize those dreams and fail is quite another thing, for it sets people to thinking the other way. For persons without preparation to attempt to reconstruct society is like an unskilled laborer attempting to construct a steamboat to sail the ocean. It looks easy but is very discouraging when tried. What makes socialism so unpopular in this country is the many failures in that direction. When Robert Owen first introduced his ideas they were well received and Mr. Owen was given the use of the Representative hall in the capital at Washington, in which to explain his ideal. But its failure to materialize threw a damper on the cause. But to the present generation these things are again new and they are liable to make the same mistakes as before.

I have studied the social problems for half a century and have had nearly ten years' experience in different associations, but am now living all alone, yet I am confident that success will come when the right method is found. But to find those principles on which this method is founded requires a deep study of Nature, not mere dreams. All questions have two sides, all bodies two opposite halves and all living organisms two opposite principles united in one. So all societies, in order to have sufficient vitality to exist, must unite and harmonize two opposite principles, viz.: the individuality of each person as a distinct being, and the unity of the whole as one body without separation. Any scheme founded upon one of these and ignoring the other must fail. Thus socialists and anarchists are both right in principle and should recognize each others' claims.

As for the relations of the sexes two ways are possible and but two. One has been tried in convents and by the Shakers, and is the separation of the sexes. This has been successful in a small way but is not likely to be tried on a large scale. The other is exactly the opposite and has not been fairly tried. It consists in freedom and variety under the direction of the Golden Rule: "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you." Give without asking any return, for he that gives his life shall receive, but he that saves it shall lose all. Whether we call this Christianity are something else, or whether it was given by Jesus or not, it must be recoguized in social life or society is a failure. That spontaneity which regards only our own personal inclinations, without regard for the feelings of others, becomes intolerable in society. But Christian ethics and Christian practice are quite contradictory and inconsistent, hence the failure.

In an article headed "Some Questions Answered," by A. Warren, I see that Mr. Warren does not recognize the difference between love and the sexual desire common to the lower animals. The difference is love has for its object the good of others and thinks of them while the sexual desire of brutes merely regards self-gratification, it may be at their expense. But as Mr. Warren does not know what love is, it is useless to argue with him as words cannot convey the sense. He thinks that the love of one may fill the whole soul. Well, it can if that soul is a very small one. But I believe with Rosa Graul that love, the genuine article, grows from the little to the big, and from the few to the many. We must commence by loving one, but that love will grow to take in others if it is given a chance. To circumscribe it is death. But the addition of others does not make the love for the one any the less.

Sociologic Lesson. No. LVIII.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

THE TRANSITION. We have reached a stage foreshadowing the beginning of the end. Multitudes of men who have been working for others with the hope that that work would be continued indefinitely, have learned their mistake. Instead of laying aside a portion of their earnings while they had work, they have spent it all, and perhaps by years of labor in one occupation have become unfitted for another. Usually they have acquired habits of wastefulness, spending upon drink, or tobacco, or luxuries, or amusements, which they continue while complaining of their misfortunes. The advance in co-operation and labor saving invention every year strikes down more and more of the classes who have depended upon the continuance of isolated labor without machinery. At last it is reaching the agriculturists, who have corn to burn, because they can not afford to sell it for the price for which it can be produced by co-operative labor. Borrowing money on mortgages, with the delusive expectation that evolution will turn backward and the old time will come back again, they are falling behind every year and many of them losing their homes. When they learn that the progress they are fighting against cannot be stayed, and when they learn the necessity of co-operating with it in order to receive its benefits, when they reach a point so low that they become willing to take an advance step instead of vainly attempting to go on in the old ways, the demand for co-operation will become so universal among the working classes that they will accept it and adopt it as soon as they can be made to understand how it can be brought about. They have already reached the stage of clamoring for help from others while they violently oppose the forces which alone can aid them; they will soon reach the stage of coming into harmony with those forces, aiding in developing them, and sharing in the results.

What right have you to make your manner of looking at things the standard by which to judge all other ways of looking at things? When will you learn that if you don't like something, it is not necessarily because it is it, but because you are you?—Ernest Newman, in "University Magazine."

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 180 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representatives, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England. William Gilmour, 73 Cedar Street, Glasgow, Scotland.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1204 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$406.67
W. L. Cheney,	.50
Dr. M. Rowe,	5.00

DR. JULIET H. SEVERANCE is now in Milwaukee. She is nearly recovered from her injuries and gave the English oration at the Paine celebration. Her address is 661 Milwaukee St.

LUCIFER CIRCLE met Tuesday eve, February 1. The subject of discussion was "The Prodigal Daughter; or The Price of Virtue." Jonathan Mayo Crane read and commented upon the famous essay of Rachel Campbell with this title. The reading was remarkably well done and the comments appreciative and appropriate. Owing to severity of weather the attendance was smaller than usual. On Tuesday evening, Feb. 9, the subject will be "The Double Standard of Virtue." Moses Harman will make the opening address.

What it Means.

At this writing, Feb. 3, the snow lies deep on the side walks and vacant lots in Chicago, and the thermometer has been oscillating for some days just above and just below the zero point. To one who has eyes to see and ears to hear and heart to feel, this fact is most painfully suggestive. With hundreds of thousands of working people out of work—in this city alone—it means short rations of food. It means scanty clothing. It means empty coal bins. It means daily calls from the landlord or his agent with threats of eviction. It means sleepless nights and endless, hopeless search by day, seeking, begging, praying for the poor privilege of selling body, brain or soul, or all together, for just enough food, clothing, fuel and shelter to keep soul and body together.

Near the window at which these lines are written the foundations have been laid for a new house. For days and weeks last past, unemployed workmen by the dozen have stood, hour after hour, tools in hand, waiting, waiting for some vacancy to occur, so that a few hours work can be had. Conversing with one of the more intelligent of these he gave it as his opinion that for each day-laborer in Chicago who has constant work this winter, there are at least ten who either have no work at all or who do not get enough work to keep self and family from absolute want.

To say nothing of the effect upon the immediate sufferers from this state of things,—the crime, the despair, the suicides, etc., etc., everywhere prevalent,—the thoughtful observer can not overlook the inevitable effect of such conditions upon the oncoming generations. If only the now-living men and women were affected by these depraving environments, and if there were reasonable grounds of hope that their children would fare better, the outlook would not be destitute of a silver lining. But it is not hard to see that these conditions are self-perpetuating. Degeneracy becomes chronic.

Thus: The low vitality engendered in the parents by want and perpetual anxiety is reproduced in the offspring. Hence the children now being gestated and born will necessarily be inferior in ability to make present conditions better. And—worst of all—according to a well known principle in nature, the lower the vitality of the organism the greater the tendency to reproduce its kind. When the poor herd together, thick as rabbits in a warren to keep from freezing, the natural result is the practicalization of the proverb in regard to the "phenomenal fecundity of low organisms." It seems an effort of nature to keep the species from dying out. What is lost in quality is made up in quantity.

Who will suggest a remedy? Where and when will this race-degeneracy reach its limit?

A Few Minutes with the Critics.

BY JAMES S. DENSON.

My old friend, D. W. Hull, seems to deprecate what he calls the "bellicose" character of my notes, and asks for less of "wrangle." He admits, however, that he is likely to become a "wrangler" himself, and I am glad it is not in the nature of the Hulls to be humble and apologetic in the face of pretense and invasion. My "Frauds and Follies" are intended to be bellicose, to be sharp, to be denunciatory, to shock and to exasperate. They also will contain as much reasoning as can be crowded into their brief compass without interfering with their main function, which is to challenge attention, to focus thought on popular absurdities and outrages. The average invader doesn't care a picayune for labored argument, but he does mortally fear satire, ridicule, burlesque. This was demonstrated by Voltaire, the king of satirists, the man who more than any other one person made thought free and undermined the thrones of tyrants.

The mythical Jesus is credited with saying that the tree is to be known by its fruits. So do I judge Christianity. It is utterly impossible to dissociate Christianity from "churchianity," so-called. Mr. Hull reads his own social conceptions into the teachings attributed to a wandering preacher of the East, who, if he existed, had, according to the record, no thought of the continued abiding of the human race upon this earth. So I repeat: Socialism is a theory of human relations on earth. Christianity is a theory of human, angelic, diabolic and divine relations in asserted trans-earthly worlds.

In my opinion it is not worth while to devote much space to the discussion of what "Christ" is asserted to have taught. It will be time enough for that when some one has brought forward a tangible and trustworthy record of "his" utterances. So far, we have gathered nothing of the kind from the dust heaps of tradition and history. "Jesus" remains, what "he" probably always was, a mere idealization of human hopes and aspirations.

The veteran Francis Barry protests against the discussion of the question of variety vs. exclusiveness, against the advocacy of the first-named form of association and at the same time devotes a good part of his article to a defense of said variety. As to the merits of his plea, taken in connection with his argument, there is this to be said: If, as he affirms, the great mass of man- and womankind are naturally non-exclusive, will Mr. Barry not find it somewhat difficult to prove that we who "urge the propriety of non-exclusive relations" are "standing in their [our] own light"? If the soil is naturally so fertile and receptive, why should not we sow in it the seed o intellectual truth? In fact, the reason he gives why we ought not to urge the merits of variety at this time is the strongest reason why we should do so. If, on the contrary, human nature were generally and bitterly opposed to variety, we probably would not be varietists, and so Mr. Barry would have no occasion to warn us to beware of the folly of fighting the irresistible. Admittedly having unpoisoned nature on our side and only prejudice and arbitrariness against us, it seems indisputable that we are wise to push the attacking columns up to the very citadel of the enemy, to do all we can to rescue ourselves from the captivity of cant and hypocrisy. In my opinion, we cannot be too definite in our exposition of principles. I have often met men who declared that they were in favor of the separation of church and state, and yet they were in favor also of Sunday laws, postal statutes, and other relics of the union of the ecclesiastical and civil. The trouble was that they had never analyzed the principle which they imagined they accepted. So of so many persons who think they are Freethinkers, but who are only Infidels, rejecting certain dogmas of religion but clinging to the central affirmation of authority. They lack in the ability to analyze, to carry the fundamental concept of Freethought to its logical conclusion in all directions. The consequence is that we find this aborted Freethought building on every side new orthodox fences of custom and law. The danger of such reaction is always imminent. As Social Radicals, we must continually insist that sexual freedom will result in the wide practice of variety. Then, we can hold the liberty we gain. But if we get away from the law without getting away from the spirit behind the law, if we escape from the state by keeping quiet about variety, it is certain that we shall have the whole ground to go over again, for it is already clear that the "free monogamist" is as strongly inclined, in many instances, to be as supercilious, contemptuous and intolerant toward the varietist as is his kinsman, the legal monogamist.

To Mrs. De Maupassant it is necessary to say that her objection to the Free Propaganda because it may interfere with Lucifer's work has been fully answered by Mr. Walker in his reply to the very criticisms of Mr. Lloyd which she again indorses. There is no "division of forces"; there is only the inevitable and useful differentiation of function. The Free Propaganda will help Lucifer and Lucifer will help the Free Propaganda, just as the National Defense Association, which has done so much to antagonize the nefarious work of Comstock, helped the "Truth Seeker" and other Freethought papers, and was in turn helped by those papers. It would be just as absurd to say that a political party's committee injure the journals of that party as it is for Mrs. De Maupassant to say what she has about Lucifer and the Free Propaganda. The committee and paper has each its place.

"The Adult" for February.

A box of the February number of the most radical and most revolutionary of all the English magazines, has just reached this office. The table of contents is as follows:

Editorial; "Music, Religion and Sex," by Orford Northcote; "Malthus," by Lady Cook; "Love's Coming of Age," by Saggitarius; "The Sex Philosophy of Exeter Hall," by W. F. Dunton; "The Divine Woman," by William Platt; "Two Gifts," by Edward Carpenter; "Wonderland," a poem, by Amy C. Morant; "The Home and the Family," by Robert Braithwaite; "Controversial Correspondence;" William Platt and "The Adult."

There are twenty-four pages in this number; price, ten cents by single copy, sent direct from this office. Yearly subscription, postage paid, one dollar. The January double number, eighty pages, illustrated cover, and with three full-page portraits of officers of the Legitimation League, is included in this offer—of one dollar per year. Price of single number of the January "Adult," twenty cents. Those wanting the entire year—'98—need to apply soon, as our supply is not large, and the publishers say no more can be had.

Progress of the Movement in Favor of Ignorance.

BY C. L. JAMES.

The two great victories of the Movement in Favor of Ignorance during the last seven years are that it has brought the bourgeois pretty generally to favor discouraging further education of the proletaires: and that, through the bourgeois, it has engaged the government in this holy work. Of these remarkable statements I have collected the following proofs.

In every city of which I have been able to obtain any statistics, the school population is outgrowing the school facilities. But it is very difficult to find out how much. In Eau Claire, by a recent report, fifteen per cent of the children do not attend school full legal time, though education is nominally compulsory. In New York it has been fully shown, and it is no doubt true everywhere, that the authorities instead of seeking a remedy, disguise the facts as much as possible. The census of 1890, being the first not above suspicion of doctoring for this and similar purpose, makes a memorable era in the history of the Movement in Favor of Ignorance.

It is needless to say that the Roman Catholic church does her full share in promoting the Movement in Favor of Ignorance, but it is of some consequence to remark that she is no worse than her Protestant daughters. Since Pius IX issued his pronunciamento against secular education, the Catholic wing of the Movement in Favor of Ignorance in America, has had two definite tactical schemes—to keep as many Catholic children as possible out of the public schools, and to get as many Catholic teachers as possible into them. Since Archbishop Ireland's Faribault compromise, most people, I suppose, have imagined the former aim to be discontinued. But in truth it is only masked. Theological schools for priests and teachers, no schools at all for the profanum vulgus, [the common herd,] is still, as it always was, the Catholic ideal. I could name no distant city, where mysterious fires destroying and limiting school facilities to the utmost, were immediately observed to follow that complete Catholic control of the school boards which made affecting zeal for general education unnecessary. In Eau Claire, however, and where else the Catholics are comparatively weak, they keep up that appearance, with the result of sufficiently disclosing the other denominations' faults. Evangelical rings control the appointments, and are blameable for the defects. The Catholics make common cause against them with the liberals.

A new phase of attack on general education is seen in that Illinois legislation which aims to substitute unexamined graduates of Rockefeller's university for regular teachers. That great and good man, Seth Low, was incubating, at the time of his decapitation, a similar project in New York. Unless this movement is vigorously withstood we may expect that examination will become a thing of the past, and the common schools be taught by graduates whose real qualification is devotion to some such creator as Carnegie or the Standard Oil Company.

Having got the public libraries wholly or partially purged of fiction sufficiently original to be instructive, the promoters of the Movement in Favor of Ignorance are now seeking to suppress them altogether, a desideratum much simplified by having previously made them useless. In Eau Claire, this year, the City Library came very near being left without an appropriation. Five aldermen out of less than fifteen present voted against that proposal. One said outright that education was a bad thing and made criminals. All, I believe, were Catholics. The circumstance was judiciously utilized that the library, like everything governmental, had been made something of a job, and cost too much. At last two recalcitrants were brought over, and the requisite majority secured, after many meetings, by that familiar argument, that failure would be a bad advertisement for the city. But when the libraries have been purified till nobody cares for them, that argument may not count.

I see by the Minnesota papers that similar opening skirmishes have occurred in the great towns of that state. In that part of Carnegie's "Triumphant Democracy" which refers to college graduates, you may find the true inwardness of all this. A poor man, liberally educated, is unfit for a proletaire and unlikely to become a bourgeois. He has no place under our system but as an agitator. Naturally it seeks to suppress him.

In recent prosecutions under our old acquaintance, the Comstock law, ignorance appears to have scored two very important points. The "Firebrand" has not been sent by mail since the arrest of its editors, because, as I understand, the postal officials have declared it unmailable. This appears to be something new. In all previous cases the alleged obscenity of one issue of a paper was not deemed to exclude from the mails any number but the one considered obscene. The other Comstockian victory of the Movement in Favor of Ignorance appears in the prosecution of Meyer Chinsky. If the name of his book "Massa Solo" is in ancient Hebrew, a dead language, as "Sepher Toldeth Jeshu" is—a point which I do not know enough Hebrew to decide—then, this is the first case of any such publication's being presented as obscene. The garb of a "learned language," concealing Truth from the young, has always been considered enough to make that Lydia Thompson among goddesses pass for decent. These are important technical points, which our Defense Association, if we still have one, might advantageously be looking after.

The majority of "secularist" editors have practically encouraged Comstock in his war against study of sexual philosophy; and yet have the gall to play ill-used because those whom they assist to persecute will not fraternize with them. The truth is there is nothing about unbelief in an universal Spirit and an eternal life which tends to enlarge the sympathies or liberate the reason. The arguments for such unbelief are purely speculative, pursuing the methods of the dogmatical schools, though arriving at other conclusions. The practical ethics of Secularism are usually Utilitarian, and run very readily to coalesce with the gospel of Things as they Are. The most renowned heresiarchs and infidels—Socinus, Hobbs, Hume, Gibbon, La Mettrie, D'Holbach, Helvetius, were conservative in social matters. Their only service to intellectual freedom was weakening that one intellectual tyrant Theology.

The association of infidelity and liberty in the French Revolutionary period was accidental. The real emancipator of thought is the inductive philosophy, which proposes as its end, not that undefinable thing called Happiness, but power over material nature. The real emancipator of will is the consciousness of a subjective law which makes any objective standard impertinent. And this is also the tap root of religion—as making an objective standard from the words or acts of some one who himself obeyed such inspiration is the beginning of priestcraft and dogmatism; which, are to religion as the shell to the crustacean—a self-made prison it must periodically shed or it will die.

I should not be surprised if the Movement in Favor of Ignorance made a dismal failure of purifying away our public libraries by putting all the best books into an "Inferno" reserved for the exclusive use of the bald-headed fraternity. If anything will make a boy or girl want to read a book, it is knowing that to do so ranks among the bald-headed fraternity's exclusive privileges. I might illustrate this grand natural craving for forbidden fruit by my own experience. I was never so young but I wanted to read whatever I knew the bald-headed fraternity kept for themselves. Those books sometimes described as "really obscene"—those which the B. H. F. despise as trash—I never read and very seldom saw till I was twenty-seven. Mr. Comstock's assiduous advertising then put me up to read a few of them. It was very hard work, and convinced me that Miss Fanny Hill's autobiography would never have reached a second edition but for some Comstock's assiduous advertising. Now that all the best books are being puffed in the same manner, I expect the boys and girls to read them much more than ever—which will certainly be a great improvement on their present devotion to "Yellow Astera" and the "Heavenly Twins."

When change begins at one point, it rolls, like a rattling peal of thunder, all along the line. This induction, familiar to all special students of history, like myself, has received, for me, a new illustration from reading of "Munsey's Magazine" for November, 1897. In October, 1897, the reactionary movement, represented by McKinley, Hawaiian annexation, Parkhurstism, Jingo, etc., was at its height. The November "Munsey" was made up then. Its leader is an eulogy on our organized murderers, vulgarly called the National Guard. There, whoever cares to look into the musty crypts of yesterday in point of time, last century in point of thought, may read how the National Guard did yeoman's service by shooting a little boy who was going to school with his books under his arm, an old man who was feeding his chickens, and two unarmed youths, at Bay View, Milwaukee, in 1887. How the same body of organized murderers shot some women during the conductors' and motormen's strike at Brooklyn in 1895; and at Chicago in 1894. Of course, "Munsey" puts it rather differently. Munsey's phrase is that the organized murderers were just in time "to defend the city of Milwaukee against a dangerous outbreak of anarchy," that they "were of inestimable service particularly at Brooklyn in 1895," and that they "saved two million dollars' worth of railroad property during the Pullman strike." Mingled with all which, are some regrets that the organization of States has not yet permitted the Federal government to take the National Guard into its system. The second of November came. The reactionary movement represented by McKinley, Hawaiian annexation, Parkhurstism, Jingo, etc. fell, like Humpty Dumpty, never to hope again.

Just before that, an old fogy named Miles (subandi General) proposed that the Federal government should take the National Guard into its system by fortifying the Chicago post office, sub-treasury, etc. He was in time to be too late. The elections of November 2 had been heard from; and the old fogy was mercilessly ridiculed (unkindest cut of all) in the Chicago bourgeois papers! By bye, organized murderers, vulgarly called the National Guard! Another year, and you will no longer have guns enough to earn the name of Lady Killers, as you did in 1894-5. (P. S. I observe today that, in Illinois, several companies have been disbanded already for want of interest in their pious work.)

Mrs. Slenker thinks the greatest boon humanity now needs is divorce as cheap as marriage. So think I. For twenty-seven years I have worked to unite all liberals on that point. But now all who can pass for liberal are united upon it; and I advocate a further advance. There can be no more done to promote facility of divorce till the prejudice against variety is made the mark of a fogy.

RARE BACK NUMBERS.

The Number that Can be Supplied is Limited. First Come First Served.

Many persons have written to this office for back numbers of Lucifer covering the first time its editor was in prison. We have a limited number of copies in stock and while they last they can be had for 5 cents a copy. These copies comprise Volume X. of Lucifer. Some of the features of the different issues are:

1. A Story of Two Lives, by May Huntley; Extracts from Moses Harman's address to the court; Dianism Discussed, by Elmina Drake Slenker.
2. The Pittsburg Problem, by "Diana"; Prison Echoes, by Moses Harman; Rules for Sexual Health, by Allie Lindsay Lynch; Court of Love.
3. Enforcement of Morality, by "Diana."
4. A Branch Road, by Hamlin Garland.
6. Prison Echoes, by M. Harman. Dianism vs. Budlongism, by Elmina Drake Slenker.
8. "The Woman Who Dares," by H. J. Hunt. Women's Work, by Lillie D. White.
10. The Girl of the Future, by Ruth B. Havens.

11. The Girl of the Future, by Ruth B. Havens; Prison Echoes, by M. Harman. What Do the Sex Cranks Want? by M. Harman.
12. Release of the Editor from Prison; A Story of One Hour, by May Huntley.
13. Account of the Editor's Release from Prison; The Nude in Artists, by C. L. Swartz.
14. Criticism and Comments on the Editor's Imprisonment. Reception for the Editor. A New Realism, by Lizzie M. Holmes.
15. Beginning of May Huntley's serial story, "Hagar Lyndon, or a Woman's Rebellion." This interesting story is completed in twenty-two numbers of Lucifer. Our Name and Purpose—Editorial.
16. "The Crowning Sin of the Age,"—editorial. The Object of Laws, by Marie Louise, who has since writing this article become a Buddhist priestess and is now known as Swami Abayananda.
17. Selfish and Immoral Women, by Lillie D. White. Dualism and Varietism Compared, by C. L. James. Feelings and Ideas of Sex in Children, by Prof. Earl Barnes of Stanford University.
18. "His Confession," a poem by Voltairine de Cleyre.
19. Maltreatment of Wives—editorial. Bondage and Bondage, by Allie Lindsay Lynch.
21. Marriage Going Out of Fashion—editorial. God's Mistakes—editorial.

Give the number of the paper you want when you send for it. Besides the features mentioned above every copy contains much valuable contributed and editorial matter. The entire volume of fifty-two numbers will be sent to any address for $1.75. This offer is necessarily limited by the number of papers we have on hand.

THE PAMPHLET, "Motherhood in Freedom," is now out of print. We still have copies of "Our New Humanity" in which the essay appeared, together with other valuable essays, as follows: "Priestly Celibacy," by Prof. A. L. Rawson; "Sex Love Analytically Defined," by Ernest Winne; "The Other Side," by May Clifford Hurd; "The Incoherence of Transition," by E. C. Walker; "The Greatest Sin," (an allegory,) by R. B. Kerr; "Our New Savior—The Surgeon," by Charles Turner Brown; "Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom," by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25 cents.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Matthew Nelson, Minneapolis, Minn.:—Your sample copy of Lucifer to hand. Thanks. Enclosed find fifty cents on subscription and for Combination Offer. I would be pleased if you would furnish me with further information as to literature on the subject.

H. Bernegger, Bridgeport, Conn.:—When my trial subscription expires, please book me as a subscriber for the following six months. Enclosed therefor fifty cents. A number of the articles contained in these trial numbers have excited my interest and partly my approbation; but I will not allow myself to form a definite opinion on the sexual question until I have studied it closer.

J. F. Miles, Ashland, Wis.:—Find enclosed one dollar, for which please send Lucifer one year. I have "The Prodigal Daughter or The Price of Virtue" in Vol. I. No. 2 of "Our New Humanity" which I picked out of the exchanges of the "Grander Age" at Co-opolis, Miss., two years since, but cannot get too many of such lectures. That magazine taught me that I had been a free lover for years without knowing it, and even despising the very name believing it to be the synonym of promiscuity and nastiness.

H. Bauer, 73 Spring Garden Ave., Allegheny, Pa.:—While in prison, Berkmann, Nold and I made different kinds of fine tissue paper work, also hair chains and other pretty and useful things and we now have agreed to raffle these things off for my benefit, that I may be able to buy badly needed clothing, etc. I will send you fifty tickets, fifteen cents a piece, and beg you to try and sell them, or have some of your friends sell them—among the readers of Lucifer. One half of those you sell shall go to the fund, "To Extend Lucifer's Work," and for the other one half you may send me some of your books and brochures which you have on hand.

J. M. Clarke, Henryville, Tenn.:—I am so rejoiced to know that Lucifer is growing!

> Lucifer, Lucifer, champion of Light!
> Unfolding forever the true and the right,
> Courageously bear the banner we love—
> Inspire us to rise all our weakness above.
> Fearless for freedom, the fullest to man;
> Ever heroic to do what we can.
> Rend we all chains that would place under ban.

Elmina D. Slenker, Snowville, Va.:—DEAR FRIENDS: I have a treat for you again. I've just read a book every one should read, "Hypnotism up to Date" by Sydney Flower. It's the plainest exposition of the ism I've yet seen. It proves plainly and irrefutably the fact that hypnotism is a grand and beneficient power, and something so helpful mentally and physically, that just as soon as it is well understood it will become universal. It builds up all that is good and true in humanity, and thus pushes out the evil and the false. It is health, happiness and morality, a trinity every one craves. Price, 25 cents. Published by C. H. Kerr & Co. It will be sent to any address on receipt of price by M. Harman.

Chas. Gano Baylor, Providence, R. I.:—In the issue of Lucifer of the 26th of January occur two statements of such tremendous and transcendent importance that I believe they should occupy a permanent place at the head of the editorial column of Lucifer. One is in your reply to Comrade Beeson of Alabama. Here are your words:

"Behind the state is the mass of ignorance, credulity and superstition that make the state possible. To abolish the State while its causes remain would be fruitless labor." (Overthrow capitalism and leave religious authority untouched and the church would speedily reconstruct the capitalistic edifice with the soldier, sword in hand standing guard over the New Infernalism.) "The 'God' idea, as taught by the church creates the conditions for, and the necessity for the institution called the state."

Enforcing this pregnant truth, allow me to ask, what is it that keeps universal humanity in abject servile slavery under the heel of capitalistic oppression? I answer, Religious Authority. Many so-called reformers are constantly bellowing about capitalism. "Abolish capitalism," they shout. Capitalism is an effect, not a cause. Here is the law of despotic development: Superstition and ignorance bred God—fear and the God-fetich in the human mind. God, fear and superstition bred priestcraft; superstition and priestcraft bred government by force. Government by force produces religious authority. Religious authority, priestcraft and the soldier (for somebody must be enslaved and robbed to support the tyranny and produce capitalism.) It is the priest who is the secret political ally of the capitalist who is really enslaving these wage-slaves of New England.

Your other remark to which I wish to call attention is this: "Man cannot save woman; man cannot save himself, nor the race of which he is a part. Woman must do this." Woman is the cult, the soul of the human movement.

In those two propositions of yours,—first, that religious authority and superstition is the primal source of all forms of tyranny and government by force, and second, that woman must save the race, is to be found the solution and the only solution of the universal human problem.

697.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrappet of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 10 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 20 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

The Adult for January—Double Number.

Contains the Second Biennial Proceedings of the Legitimation League. Edited by Oswald Dawson. Picture of the president of the League on the cover. Full page portraits of Lillian Harman, president, George Bedborough, secretary, and Louie Bedborough, treasurer of the League.

Contents: 1. The Annual Meeting and Dinner. 2. Friction. 3. Eighteenpence or Half-a-crown? 4. The Play's the Thing. 5. Some Letters, the Constitution and a Speech. 6. The Judgment of Paris. 7. Which Sex Suffers Most? 8. The Physiology of Love. 9. Sexual Education. 10. Spiritual Love. 11. Miss De Cleyre on the League and the Woman Question. 12. The New Idealism. 13. An Autonomistic Marriage. 14. Marriages Made in Russia. 15. Cast off the Shell! 16. The "Firebrand" in the Flames. 17. The New Martyrdom. 18. Letters and Reviews. 19 Free Love and Lesbian Love. 20. Powder Magazines and Lighted Lucifers. 21. Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs. Price, 20 cents. Address this office.

The only journal which presents full accounts of the progress of the colonization movement along the lines of co-operation.
The only journal that gives full explanation of all the various theories for social improvement.
The only journal that offers free discussions of social and religious subjects.
Each issue contains full report of best current thought in all the leading English and American periodicals.

The editor is a Monist in philosophy, a Truthseeker in religion and Socialist in politics. Editorial comment will always be given from these standpoints. Current Thought is an open court. It offers the best thought of the brightest thinkers of all schools.
The Book Reviews will embrace all new books of social study, science and fiction.
Regular subscription price, $1.00 per year, post-paid to any part of the world.
Special Offer:—Until further notice, new subscribers will be received for one year at 10 cents each, provided they send ten names and addresses of liberal and progressive minded people. Address, Current Thought, Cleveland, O.
Premium book "Homilies on Finance," sent free to each new subscriber.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.
This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasion; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter IV., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, ten cts.

Wanted: A practical horticulturist, and a scientific vegetarian cook. A free man and a free woman, only, need apply. Address Z., care of Lucifer, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Books Worth Reading, FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .15
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Motherhood in Freedom; M. Harman, .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity? George Jacob Holyoake, .10
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
"Cupid's Yokes" and the Holy Scripture Contrasted. Letter from Parker Pillsbury to E. H. Heywood, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr., .25
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .25
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle; Charles Bradlaugh, .20
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .25
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address
M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Bequest. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is given over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 121 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe that the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook sexual liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 10 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "Talk About Anarchist Communism." Now, 1 and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 1 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 7. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, FEBRUARY 16, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 698.

Heloise to Abelard.

BY EMMA PLATT GUYTON.

I must become your wife? Oh, no! Oh, no!
My Abelard, my own, ah, say not so!
Mock not the union that kind nature made,
With human customs that in chains are laid.

There is no term that mortal ear hath heard,
There is no word my sympathy hath stirred,
Like that my being echoes o'er and o'er,
The sweet word, lover: it to me is more.

Far holier and nobler, too, than wife;
Unbound, thou canst but love me all thy life:
Unwed, be tenderness alone the chain,
By which thee and thy love I may retain.

Some wives believe their husbands good and true.
Thy lover, Heloise, knows this of you:
Beware, that simple trust to o'er efface
By matrimony's searching commonplace.

What is my father's will to love's just claim?
I'll shield thy honor and thy priestly fame:
Ne'er shall the marriage bonds thy life enslave,
Since love unfettered has the power to save!

Grand Rapids, Mich.

Popular Follies and Crimes.

BY JAMES S. DENSON.

Rev. Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper speaks of "the vast vile system of divorce as existing at present, the constant shameful and shameless rending of the marriage tie." It is a shameful system, in so far as purblind orthodoxy makes it so by compelling resort to trickery and lying in order to secure release from painful and shameful bonds. Legal divorce is the antidote for legal marriage. Cease to meddle and enslave on one side and you will not have to meddle on the other. But solong as you do meddle and enslave, just so long will there be a demand for legal relief from the results of your meddling and enslaving. The "underground railroad" of divorce will be used by fugitives so long as you maintain the "peculiar institution."

* * *

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, writing to Emile Zola in commendation of the latter's action in the Dreyfus case, says:

I also have proved by experience that it is much more perilous to want to eradicate hatred than love from the minds of men.

This is why the social radical is so much misrepresented, assailed and persecuted. If, like the legalist, he preached the gospel of hate, he would be acclaimed a paragon of virtue. But it is his fatal fault that he insists there is now too much hate in the world, that we could get along with a great deal less. No, say his enemies, we will forgive anything except love. We detest murder, but we will idolize the murderer if he slaughters in the name of hate and to punish love. We will send him to prison or to death if he kills for money, but if he kills to crush out love we will acquit him and then prate of how he has "avenged his honor."

* * *

A person who received from his parents the name of Ellsworth and from a number of biped voting machines the title of Senator, has introduced and is aggressively pushing in the legislature at Albany, New York, a bill intended to muzzle the press, in both the matters of letter-press and illustration. It provides very severe pains and penalties for any newspaper which "corrupts, degrades, or injures the minds or morals of the public or of its readers or of the people among whom it circulates." As will be seen at once, it is a veritable omnibus bill—it will take in anything. No specific injury has to be alleged—all that is required is somebody mean enough or simple enough to charge an undefinable injury to "mind or morals" and a grand jury without sense enough to sit down very hard on the said somebody. Of course such an alleged offense is unprovable—who, for instance, could truthfully swear that in his opinion the mind of Senator Ellsworth could be injured by anything he might read in any publication it was desired to suppress? The measure is of a piece with the iniquitous Comstock law. Any conviction obtained under an enactment of this kind would be the result of pure speculation, just as every conviction obtained under the Comstock statutes is the result of speculation as to the imagined effects of a certain book or picture on the mind or morals of a person or of persons unnamed and unknown. Legislation and jurisprudence of this nature travesty common sense, burlesque law, and make a mockery of justice.

* * *

We are told that it is intended to restrict by law the practice of hypnotism to the licensed physicians. It is said in apology for this purposed granting of monopolistic privileges that "a number of instances have been collected to prove that the use of this power by irresponsible persons is dangerous and opposed to the public good." "Public good"? What is that? And "irresponsible persons"? Who are they, if not the individuals whose licenses, like charity, cover a multitude of sins? The really responsible person is he whose successes and failures are the tests of his ability, while the really irresponsible person is he whose "license" forestalls investigation, no matter how greatly his failures outnumber his successes. I knew a young physician in the West whose patients, during the first years of his practice, died off like sheep with the foot-rot, while the persons who put their trust in an old "herb woman" rarely had cause to regret their choice of a doctor. Yet she was without the pale of the law, and he was within it; she was "irresponsible," but he was "responsible." Words, words, words. Of what avail was his "responsibility"? To his victims, I mean; of course we understand that it was good for him, for, spelled differently, it read "license," and license means immunity. In the present instance, it is reported that the "medical societies of the state" are supporting the proposed law. That goes without saying, just as it goes without saying that the ministerial associations of the state support every proposed restrictive Sunday law. In each case, it is a matter of trade-union interests, and the physician, like the clergyman, who does not support the demand for special privileges for his guild, is a rare and noble exception. But he is wise beyond his hour and class, for some day we, the people, are going to knock out these privileged gentlemen and with no velvet-clad hands.

* * *

The secretary of the Law and Order League in Philadelphia and seventy-five clergymen of that city have inaugurated a crusade on the lines laid down by Parkhurst in New York. They are conducting what they call a "still hunt" through the ball rooms and the places of ill-repute. As usual, they are exaggerating fearfully, making wild assertions that are discredited by the cool-headed men of the world who are in the best position to know whereof they affirm. They are adding nothing to the present store of information concerning the darker aspects of city life, but they are advertising themselves and the disreputable haunts at the same time and in the same columns. As a writer in the Philadelphia "Press" aptly shows, they are doing the work of the "Police Gazette" and other papers of that class, and I doubt not that their denunciations of the offenders are as scathing as those which one never fails to find in the reports of the journals named. These ministers promise a series of public meetings, "for men only," to arouse indignation and get the existing laws enforced and new ones enacted. As the writer from whom I have just quoted caustically remarks, "It is needless to say that tickets will be at a premium for these meetings." As for a serious, patient and kindly search for the ethical, social and economic causes of the evils which prevail, it is perfectly safe to affirm that these "slumming" preachers will no more engage in it than will the sensational sheets which the men of their order are so eager to have suppressed, while their mercy for the poor victims of anti-social conditions is the mercy of the self-vauntedly righteous, and this mercy, as all the world knows, is the mercy of the Inquisitor. There are ministers who are really sincere and painstaking students of sociology, but they are not found among the slummers and sensation-mongers whose delight it is to get their names into the papers by driving unfortunate fellow-creatures into still deeper degradation and more intense suffering.

* * *

The closing session of the Christian Principles of Civil Government (God-in-the-Constitution) Convention was devoted largely to the discussion of the "Responsibility of Government Concerning Marriage and Social Purity." Addresses were made, so the report says, "by eminent social reformers, the most prominent of whom was Anthony Comstock." May Truth save the mark! Bishop O. W. Whitaker presided, and in opening said:

> In the Catholic communion divorce is impossible, although there is a method by which marriages are sometimes annulled, but in the Catholic church you will find fewer divorces than in any other body.

Rev. Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper, in his paper against divorce, also praised the Catholic church for "the firmness and fruitfulness with which it has stood up and out against the inrushing tides of base and baseless divorce and divorce laws which actually to-day threaten not only the family but the state." Both Bishop Whitaker and Mr. Tupper called upon Protestants to stand with Rome "by the law of Christ." As Protestant Sunday worshipers have accepted the Sabbath of the Roman See, so must they go to the Canossa of the popes and make submission to their ideal of indissoluble marriage. It is most fitting that the church which gives no quarter to protest against dogma should stand as a rock against divorce, which is a protest against lifelong misery and degradation. It is the shame and disgrace of modern formal Protestants that they have forgotten the meaning of their name, and make common cause with their ancient foe in defense of her fundamental dogma of unquestioning submission to authority. Yet Rome herself does not hesitate to decree divorce by wholesale when divorce can strengthen her hold on mankind. By such a measure she welded her priesthood into a solid body devoted solely to the church, when Hildebrand forced all the married priests to join the ranks of the ostensible celibates by putting away their wives, incidentally making "bastards" of their children. Better illicit relations, it was then argued, which imposed on the priest no permanent responsibilities, than marriage, which would divide his allegiance between his family and the church.

Spokes from the Hub.

I detest personal quarrels among reformers. Let us hit hard in debate, but always in good feeling. I do not know Caroline de Maupassant's (excuse lack of title, but I do not know which tag, "Miss" or "Mrs." is applicable) personal history; but I know that for years her name has been recorded among the advocates of sex reform. That is enough to know; she is a comrade, and should have full credit for all she has done, and any sacrifice she has made. Nevertheless, whatever her work in the past, she is not justified in attempting to discourage and tie the hands of those who wish to accomplish something in the present. If anything betrays "haste and superficiality," it is the eagerness to condemn a new line or method of work, merely because it is new. Nothing is easier than to sit back and find fault, unless it be to "endorse" the fault-finding of another.

The Propaganda is an attempt to unite the forces of sexual liberty in systematic and aggressive work, not to "divide" them in any manner. Its originators are all friends of Lucifer, and anxious to promote its circulation; but something more than subscribing to a paper is needed, to promote the growth of any movement. It is not fair to put the whole burden of the sex reform movement in America on Moses and Lillian Harman, expect them to carry on all lines of work at once, and consider our own duty fully done, if we furnish enough money to pay the bare expenses of printing and publication. It is certainly an unheard-of theory that the organization of the friends of any movement will interfere with the work of the publication adopted as the official organ of the movement. The success of the Propaganda will enlarge the demand for Lucifer, and increase its circulation. In England, the growth of the Legitimation League actually called "The Adult" into being where no paper existed before. In this country, we have Lucifer; and the same influence will tend to extend its work.

Come, Comrade Caroline de Maupassant, personalities aside, it is not a question of who is more, and who is less "far advanced in the ranks." I heartily endorse the last sentence of your reply to me. Give a word of cheer to all workers without telling them that their efforts are "useless and dangerous." We are fighting along the broad lines of sexual liberty, not for one hobby or another. The Propaganda means a long step forward, and should receive the active support of every sex reformer. Do not hold back, when every individual is needed.

Boston has been highly favored of late with visits from Captain Robert C. Adams of Canada, Emma Goldman and Anna Sterling of New York. Captain Adams spent a few days here on business, meeting most of the liberals, and attracting all by his whole-hearted sincerity, and delightful, magnetic personality. Emma Goldman addressed a crowded house on "Liberty versus Authority," and carried conviction to all thinking minds by her forceful, logical presentation of the fundamental principles of liberty. She never fails to speak a word for sex freedom in any public address. But those who have not met Emma in private life do not realize half her good qualities. She is a friend and comrade worth having. Miss Sterling, the secretary of the Propaganda, was with her. She is just such a woman, strong, sweet and magnetic, as Captain Adams is as a man. It was a rare treat to meet these comrades.

Will all please take notice of my change of address, as signified below? Any comrades in liberal thought or work, intending to visit Boston at any time, are cordially invited and earnestly entreated to notify me of the fact. Cut this out and remember it, whether you expect to come soon or not. We do not make enough of the social side of our movement. I shall be glad to meet any comrade of either sex at any time, and lack of previous acquaintances or correspondence need make no difference. Our numbers are few in this city; but there are several persons here whom visiting liberals will be very glad to meet. I shall be glad to show what hospitality I can, and to make you acquainted with Boston comrades.

JAMES F. MORTON, JR.

35 Melrose St., Boston, Mass.

> I did not chide him, though I knew
> That he was false to me.
> Chide the exhaling of the dew,
> The ebbing of the sea,
> The fading of a rosy hue—
> But not inconstancy.
>
> Written by Christina Rossetti in her 17th year.

Don't Spoil the Wagon.

BY N. C. MATHERS.

I took up Lucifer this evening to read the controversy between Mr. Harman and Mr. Beeson. And just as I finished reading the discussion I fell asleep and dreamed that I was standing in a narrow lane, by a heavy loaded wagon, the front wheels of which were berating the hind wheels, as being of very little importance to the whole. Each one was engaged in a heated discussion regarding their relative merits. The front wheels declared that the hind wheels were of very little consequence; that they'd never accomplish anything, nor ever reach their destination, if they (the front wheels) did not go ahead and pull them along after. The hind wheels declared that they were vastly more important than the front wheels, as they had to follow behind and push, or the others would never reach their destination; and that they really ought to be the front wheels, as any one could see that they were the largest and most essential to success. The front wheels then requested me to sever them from the hind wheels and let each one go their way and that would decide their relative importance and strength.

I said, "No, if I cut you apart you will then be only two old, cumbersome, worthless carts. Neither of you could carry your present load, and neither of you could travel so well, as you would not be properly balanced, and even then, one of you would have to travel behind the other, as this lane is too narrow for you to travel side by side. But as you now are, you can travel through to your destination much easier than if divided and each one contending for the right of way." The hind wheels then said, "We are certainly of more importance than they; we would have been there by this time if they had not been in our way, holding us back. But as two carts can not travel this narrow lane, side by side, suppose you divide us lengthwise and make two bicycles of us; then we can travel side by side any where and both stand an equal chance to reach our destination on our merits."

I was again compelled to point out the difficulties of such a foolish proposition, by showing them that they could not be divided either lengthwise nor crosswise and proceed on their way with the immense load they must carry, as divided they would both fail and neither of them ever be able to reach their destination alone.

I showed them that each was absolutely necessary to the other. That neither could possibly succeed without the other. "As you are, you are a good wagon; but divided, you'll neither make carts nor bicycles—only a heap of rubbish." At this point I awoke and it didn't require a Daniel to interpret my dream.

I could see plainly that the free love and anarchist wagon is heavily loaded. That it is an indivisible vehicle. One of those parties is just as necessary as the other. Neither can ever reach their goal alone. The free love and anarchist wagon has a long, narrow, rocky, swampy and hilly road to travel before it reaches its destination. It is loaded with facts gathered from nature and common sense. But the road it travels is hedged in on both sides by the thorny hedge of inherited custom. It has to pass through the dismal swamp of ignorance, and over many rough, rocky hills of prejudice. But the greatest obstacles on the road with which it has to contend are the mountains of selfishness. If any part of the wagon ever surmounts and passes through all these difficulties and succeeds in reaching its desired goal, the whole wagon will be found there intact. In my opinion it is impossible to separate free love and anarchism. Neither can exist, or survive any length of time without the other.

Both are just as necessary to permanent human happiness as heat and moisture are to vegetation. Free love will be the result of anarchy, and anarchy the result of free love. Neither can get there one day ahead of the other.

REMARKS.

There is much of good sense in the letter of Brother Mathers. By no manner of means would I depreciate the work of those who are trying to educate people in the science of no government at all except individual self-government. The emancipation of womanhood and motherhood is one of the branches or departments of the science of individual self-government called anarchy. If time and space would permit, Lucifer, or its writers, would gladly give attention to every branch, every department of the science of anarchy, but because of lack of space and time this is simply impossible, and therefore we concentrate our efforts on that department of the work that to us seems most important—and that which seems most to need our aid because most neglected by anarchistic leaders, writers and speakers.

While it is true that all departments of reform work are mutually helpful, it is certainly true, also, that some departments are prior, or primary, in point of time. For illustration: The root of a tree, its trunk, its branches and its leaves are all necessary to the tree as a whole. It could not live and be a tree without all of these. But first in order of time, and first in importance, is the root. Without this there would never be any other part of the tree. And after all other parts are destroyed, if the root still lives a new trunk, new limbs and new leaves may grow from the same old root.

And just so with the tree called reform. Some departments of the work are primary in point of time and also in point of importance. Without free, self-reliant mothers we cannot have free, self-reliant men. Without free, self-reliant men no reform would be permanent, if even possible to be inaugurated or fully established. And hence the prime necessity of educating the public conscience up to the point of demanding freedom and self-ownership for woman, and also the necessity of educating the public conscience up to the point of demanding that woman shall make good use of her freedom and self-ownership when she gets them. Or what is much the same thing, educating the conscience of woman up to the point that she will see and realize the tremendous responsibility that rests upon her as the creator of new human beings.

When the conscience of woman and that of the general public have been thus educated there will be but little trouble, as some of us think, in securing a general recognition of the right, and the general practicalization of the right, of every human being to an equal share of nature's wealth, or nature's opportunities for gaining wealth.

First, then, free woman from sex-slavery and all other freedoms must s m follow, such as free land; free exchange, or free circulating m dium; free speech; free press; free mails, and free males; that is, men free from the control of bosses, rulers—of all kinds and sorts—which means ANARCHY!

M. HARMAN.

"I assure you, Miss Dorothy, I have never known another woman's love."

"That settles it, Mr. Smith; I could never marry a man who is so unpopular."—Truth.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

PUBLISHED AT 1394 CONGRESS ST., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representative, George Bedborough, 127 East Street Buildings, London, England.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

LUCIFER CIRCLE is hereby suspended till further notice.

AT LUCIFER CIRCLE, Feb. 8, the opening address was made by M. Harman—subject, "The Double Standard of Virtue." The meaning of the word virtue, for man and woman, and the origin of the conventional discriminations against woman in this regard were dwelt upon at some length. Then the real or rational standard for each—or, more correctly speaking, the normal and scientific ideal for each, based upon difference of faculty and function, were outlined. The speaker insisting that the law or principle of use, coupled with liberty and responsibility to self and to the race, should alone determine in the matter of sex relations. The tendency to treat the subject of sex with levity and ridicule, with persiflage and badinage, was deprecated in unmistakable terms.

In their comments the auditors criticised the speaker's positions with some severity—all in good temper, however, the differences arising more from lack of definition than from real divergence of opinion. The attendance was good, considering state of the weather.

Aphorismal.

Virtue—for man—means courage, valor, logic, wisdom.

—

Virtue—for woman—means gentleness, candor, aspiration, ideality, spirituality, intuition, sympathy, love.

—

"Know thyself," is an ancient proverb. "Revere thyself," is equally ancient, and supplementary to the first.

—

To know one's self—to know the almost infinite powers and capabilities of the human mind, and yet have no reverent feeling for one's self, is scarcely conceivable.

—

Reverence is nearly allied to aspiration. That which we revere (hold in high esteem, respect and honor) we naturally aspire to, assimilate with, become one with.

—

"The ascent of life is the ascent of ideals." This is how evolution evolves. To reach a high plane of life, then our ideals must be high. To have no lofty ideals, no aspirations for the purer, the nobler, the grander, the more refined, is to spend one's life in, or on, the primary, the provisional, the undeveloped, the sensuous planes of being.

The January number of the "Adult" was sold out in England in a very few days after its publication. We have twenty-seven copies yet on hand. "First come, first served." In ordering, please say what you want in place of the "Adult" if all are sold out before your order is received. See advertisement on eighth page.

Who are the "Thugs"?

Some weeks ago a leading city daily told of an organization in Chicago resembling the famous "Vigilance Committee" in the early history of California. The article was headed "Death to the Thug," and began with these words:

The popularity of the West Side as the field of operations for the thug is endangered by a movement started by citizens there, who have decided to take the law into their hands and deal out death to the boldup man wherever he may happen to be found at his chosen work. Already half a hundred respectable West Side citizens have signed the compact and armed themselves with revolvers of large caliber, and it is expected that before many hours have passed the rolls of the West Side Citizens' Protective association will contain the names of several hundred determined men, each of whom has bound himself to "Shoot to kill."

The same paper says the residents of the "South Side" are in even greater fear than those of the "West Side":

It is with a feeling of insecurity that residents in the vicinity of Indiana and Michigan avenues, from Twelfth to Sixteenth streets, venture from their homes, even in daylight, so daring has been the work of thugs, black and white.

Details of these "hold-ups," robberies, assaults and murders occupy a large part of the daily news of the city papers. Editorial writers sometimes come forward with opinions and advice in regard to the prevalence of crime, its causes, its prevention and cure. The clergy occasionally allude to the matter and prescribe the "all-atoning blood" as the only remedy. One of these, however, Rev. Frank Talmage, does not seem to think the blood of Jesus sufficient, in cases such as these. He calls for more blood, and joins the cry of "Death to the Thug"—demanding that the death penalty be sternly meted out to all who hold up and rob the peaceful citizen. Like the famous Moody, in his sermon on "The Blood," Mr. Talmage evidently recognizes that Christianity is a bloody religion, that its text book, its Bible, is a bloody book. "A line of blood runs through it, from Genesis to Revelations; take out the passages that refer to blood and the book would not be worth carrying home," says Moody, or words to that effect. Hence, Talmage and other Christian ministers, are quite logical, quite consistent, in calling for blood, blood, and yet more blood, as a panacea for all the ills of life.

But if the lessons of history are worth anything blood-letting is a poor remedy for invasion, or for deeds of violence. The doctrine of retaliation—an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life—has never worked well in practice. The philosophic mind looks for underlying causes, root causes, of social ills, and tries to remove them.

In looking for the causes that produce the epidemic of crime in Chicago it is not hard to see that the social organization,—the economic, or the industrial and financial system, has much to do with it. But who is it, or what is it, that is responsible for this system? Careful examination reveals the fact that our money system, our land system, our factory system, our commercial—including tariff-protection—system, have all been imported from Feudal Europe, and that the worst "hold-up" men—the real robber chieftains, are the men who have organized our national bonded debt system, our gold standard system, our monopoly-of-land, of mines, and our transportation systems, etc., etc. By their example, as well as by crowding to the wall their weaker brethren, these robber princes are the real authors of the crimes for the prevention or punishment of which the citizens of West Side Chicago are now arming themselves and pledging themselves "to shoot to kill."

The real thugs then, or at least the worst thugs that infest our land today, are the men who have conspired to "hold up" the farmer, the miner, the tradesman, and all productive industries, compelling them to deliver into the hand of the robbers about thirty per cent each year, of the proceeds of all labor.

This statement, to many, may seem extravagant and unfounded but the data are at hand to prove that this estimate is too low, instead of too high.

"Ruled by the Tomb," Orford Northcote's masterly review of the Free Thought and Free Love discussion arising from the death of S. P. Putnam and May L. Collins will be found of great value in Propaganda work. Price, 10c.; three copies, 25c.

"Parasitic Wealth."

From the publishing house of Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago, we are in receipt of a small volume entitled "Parasitic Wealth, or Money Reform—A Manifesto to the People of the United States and to the Workers of the World"—by John Brown.

From a somewhat hasty glance at the contents this book seems to be a very carefully prepared condensation, from the most authentic sources, of the present division or apportionment of wealth in the United States, together with reflections and comments upon the results of such apportionment, or distribution. Also there are deductions, inferences, conclusions, as to the remedies for the evils growing out of the inequitable distribution of wealth. The author shows that "The pauper and the criminal are to a great extent more sinned against than sinning. With one hand society robs the laborer of the means of subsistence and self support, and with the other punishes him for stealing bread to save his family from starvation. A social system based on injustice naturally breeds crime and moral depravity."

The following paragraphs, showing what paternalism does, are characteristic of the author's trend of thought:

"Our meddlesome paternalism is breeding a race of moral weaklings, lacking the stamina of manhood and self-restraint. As physical and mental excellence and supremacy are the result of persistent effort to overcome obstacles and difficulties, so character and moral fibre are the result of a constant struggle to overcome temptation. And yet forsooth, we must discourage self-restraint and bring up a race coddled into an artificial state of respectability and rectitude by restrictive measures prompted by a narrow puritanical religious paternalism! We must be our brother's keeper lest he go wrong!

"We are presumably a nation of freemen and pride ourselves on our free institutions, and yet our personal liberties are curtailed to a degree that would not be tolerated in any monarchy in Europe. We dare not trust ourselves lest freedom for good become a license for evil! Let us be men, and prove ourselves worthy of the blessings of liberty. Let us forever and without revocation annul all blue-laws and other laws restrictive of personal freedom and give character a chance. Let manhood and personal responsibility assert themselves, and we shall bring up men worthy of self-government, a race of freemen, self-respecting, self-supporting, and self-reliant.

"Neither morality nor prosperity can be legislated into a nation, but they may be seriously hindered by restrictive laws. Family training and home influences determine the one and individual effort the other."

The book is well printed and bound. Price, one dollar. Address the publisher, C. H. Kerr & Co., or this office.

Notes on the Fly.

BY C. L. JAMES.

Francis Barry seems to be badly afraid some one will accuse us varietists of wanting something "cheap." Don't worry. Anyone who says that now knows better, and must even be left to perform the proper falsifications before his propriety Joss.

* * *

Caroline de Maupassant thinks Lucifer enough for the work of sexual emancipation, and fears that E. C. Walker's Call for Concerted Action will divide its forces. But Caroline can hardly have done and suffered as much for the cause as might be inferred from other parts of her communication, if she does not know that, while we all ought to do our utmost for Lucifer, there is much work incumbent on us which, from its very nature, cannot, in the smallest measure, be done by Lucifer, or any other periodical.

* * *

D. W. Hull thinks Jesus never spoke of any other than "human relations on earth." Jesus' only biographies state differently. They represent him as saying "He that believeth, and is baptised shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe: in my name they shall cast out devils, they shall speak with tongues, etc." "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." "The Son of Man shall send forth his angels; and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and them which do iniquity, and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth,"—with a great deal more of the same sort. It's true Jesus very probably never said these things. But if you come to that, we know nothing about him from authentic sources.

* * *

Mrs. Waisbrooker's "grit" is a specimen of what we need at this crisis of a harder battle than has been fought since Moses Harman was arrested. I agree with her in "endorsing" Comrade Pope. But I advise her to give away pamphlets, etc., only when she has some positive assurance of doing good by it. I have done lots of that business myself; with the result of being humiliatingly in debt to other radicals, and seeing reason to fear the seed was sown on rock. Cost is a ploughshare which opens the soil of people's minds; or, to drop metaphor, my experience is they will pay for, and apply, contraband truth when they would not use it free. If our publications are prohibited, my advice is, sell them; advertise them as under ban; send them through post offices whose postmasters have not "got on to" what they are; or by express, go to prison, if need be, and make an advertisement out of that; but do not give them away, except in peculiar cases.

* * *

An use has been found for Congressman Loud of postal law celebrity. Until today I had vaguely imagined, with Artemus Ward, that he was created for some good purpose, like the measles and New England rum; but "allowed" it was mighty hard to tell what the purpose should be. "Whereas I was blind, now I see." Loud, true to his name, has kicked up a reverberating shindy in that sanctuary of despotism, blackmail and general rottenness, the United States Post Office. The officials were unfavorable to the Loud bill, because it threatened to cut down some of their perquisites. They accordingly stated, through one of their representatives, that Loud was mistaken in the data of his plea for the proposed legislation. Loud replied on the floor of the House that he did not believe them; openly charged them with embezzlement on an enormous scale; showed, as sensibly as if he had been an Anarchist, that the corruption alleged flowed naturally from that usurpation of power which postmasters have been encouraged in ever since the Comstock law was passed; warned the national legislature that it was about to lose the last shred of its constitutional functions, through executive encroachment along this very line; and, of course, undertook to verify his statements.

All this from a Liberal, would probably have fallen pretty flat; but, from a moral reformer it is promising indeed. Go ahead, Loud! Become louder. I know nothing about your proposed law, except that some radicals do not like it; so I suppose it is as bad as other laws. But in the character of a waker-up, you are a magnificent success. You are a Parkhurst among the Federal blackmailers. May you do for the Post Office what Rev. Dr. Leap-frog did for New York—clean out the Augaean agglomeration, and make such an abominable smell that people will set in earnest about removing its cause.

* * *

Some weeks ago, I mentioned, in Lucifer, the possibility that Spiritualism was about to be placed on a basis of scientific demonstration. S. S. Bailey then sent me a letter of inquiry, stating that he did not believe in Spiritualism, and asking me to explain myself. I have written twice in reply to Mr. Bailey's letters; but it seems he did not get my first, and today my second came back from Washington. Hoping to satisfy him, and perhaps some others, I give the part of it which concerns that matter here.

"I do not positively believe in Spiritualism. I believe however, that the scepticism of scientific men—a wise and just one in its day,—has, as it were, retreated before the advance of experimental investigation. Dr. Franklin and his compeers thought mesmerism a subject of no importance after finding out that the subject threw himself into the hypnotic state instead of being put into it by the operator. For the last fifty years, however, it has been fully acknowledged that hypnotism is a real and interesting phenomenon. All attempts to explain it by the duplexity of the brain or other known causes, have signally failed. It belongs to an unexplored region, with the phenomena of mesmerism, which convinced the famous Georget that the soul, or intelligent subject in man, is quite distinct from the brain. The matter seems now to halt at this question—Does a hypnotized person ever act under suggestions which could not have been made to him by any visible person present? The contrary has often been asserted; but, being a negative, it, of course, lacks proof: while many profess to know of such cases. To establish them fully would be to prove something explicable by no hypothesis except the presence of intelligences which are not visible. The existence of such intelligences is far from appearing to me absurd. In every direction—greatness, littleness, rarity, density, the plasma of Nature far exceeds the range of our senses. Why, in a whole infinity of space, superimposed on the infinities of divisibility, should life be found only within that very limited portion which our senses, unaided by inference, can perceive? Besides, the Materialistic philosophy always seemed to me very superficial and silly. I utterly reject it, without any reference to spiritualistic phenomena. Consciousness is a dual relation, requiring two poles—the subject, or self, and the object, or non-self. By no process can the known properties of the non-self-impenetrability, extension, figure, weight, color, taste, scent, etc.,—give rise to the properties of the subject—intelligence and will. But the latter can give rise to the former, as we see in every exercise of imagination. Hence I believe that the universe is essentially subject—spirit, and assumes the form of matter only through self contemplation. It does not at all follow that the individualized spirit of a man continues to exist, as an individual, after the death of his body. But it does follow that this is quite possible, and might be believed on sufficient evidence."

Is There a Law of Sex Control?

BY S. R. SHEPHERD.

theory and regime of sex control formulated by me some five years ago has been verified in eighty-four per cent of the experiments tried. This however does not justify me, not being a much degreed European Savant, in claiming that I have discovered the law of sex control. The results obtained may have been merely a coincidence. With a rabbit's foot in his left vest pocket a man may go in and strike a "run" that "busts the bank."

Possibly some psychic law of faith fulfilled the expectancy in complying with my regime. Dr. Schenk may have hit the bull's eye, but in view of past fizzles in the line of great discoveries by European M. D.s, it is not safe to wager any money on his "find."

I began searching for the law of sex control thirty-five years ago. Five years later I rushed into "Fowler's Phrenological Journal" with a "true and verified theory," but it turned out a failure. After running down several false clews and finally coming to the conclusion that Nature had forgotten to provide man with the means of controlling sex, I ran across the polarity clew and have followed it up with encouraging results. I had intended to fully verify it before sending up any sky rockets but the Schenk announcement has led me to give it publicity.

That I am not "dead sure" of its identity as the long sought law and that it is in direct conflict with Dr. Schenk's theory constitutes pretty good proof of its genuineness. This is my theory:

Germs are male and female when deposited hundreds at a time by male in female organ. With medium conditions they have equal chances but the male germ, being positive and more persistent and hardy, is best adapted to thrive in the cold, sterile soil of negative, low vital conditions, produced by the female subsisting for a month, more or less, prior to conception, upon a low, weak, non-heat-producing diet, with habits tending to deplete.

Cast into such uncongenial environments the female germs fail to develop. But reverse the regime and produce extreme warmth, high tone, luxuriant, tropical and positive vital conditions, for which they with their opposite polarity have an affinity and they respond quickly, develop rapidly, get the start of and crowd out the male germs which perish, leaving the female germs to struggle among themselves, the fittest surviving.

To obtain the highest percentage of success, the same regime is to be applied to the male, since vital depletion is unfavorable to the inception and development of female germs, while vital repletion is equally unfavorable to male germs.

This not being an exact science like mathematics, the aim is to accomplish the nearest possible approximation to absolute certainty.

The male germ is slow and deliberate in beginning to develop but once started holds on with firm grasp. The female germ acts oppositely.

A like law of affinity or adaptation holds reign in the vegetable kingdom. A soil extreme in heat and richness is as inimical to some plant life as the opposite soil is to other.

Every action in the universe, from molecule to planet, is in obedience to the mysterious law of polarity, magnetism, attraction and repulsion.

I venture to say that if our morals were somewhat laxer, we should find less vice and less crime in our midst. There are a class of moralists who, while professing to worship a god, try to make out that he was altogether wrong when he created us.—Allen Ludlaw, in "University Magazine."

THE PAMPHLET, "Motherhood in Freedom," is now out of print. We still have copies of "Our New Humanity" in which the essay appeared, together with other valuable essays, as follows: "Priestly Celibacy," by Prof. A. L. Rawson; "Sex Love Analytically Defined," by Ernest Winne; "The Other Side," by May Clifford Hurd; "The Incoherence of Transition," by E. C. Walker; "The Greatest Sin," (an allegory,) by R. B. Kerr; "Our New Savior—The Surgeon," by Charles Turner Brown; "Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom," by Oscar Rotter Price, 25 cents.

VARIOUS VOICES.

August Bosshammer, Cat Spring, Tex.:—Enclosed please find twenty-five cents for which send me Lucifer for three months. I used to take Lucifer before I went to Topolobampo in 1891, where we got wrecked, like all the rest, and from whence we returned, wife, two children and I, in 1896. Later I shall subscribe for a whole year.

I. W. Overton, Stamford, Conn.:—Please accept my thanks for the sample of Lucifer which was received from you last evening. It is a fine little paper and I enclose thirty cents for a thirteen weeks' subscription, and for a copy of "Isabel's Intention" which I saw advertised therein. I would like to have a copy of the work entitled "Hilda's Home" if it is now in print and you will kindly inform me as to price of same.

[Price, fifty cents, paper cover, one dollar in cloth. The book is in press.]

J. A. W., Phila., Pa.:—From New York I learn that Lum Smith has registered a stinging complaint before Federal Judge Brown, and demanded to be called before the grand jury in its support; also that Dr. Leverson has in turn entered suit against Comstock for $50,000 damages. And—what do you think—at last, after twenty-five years R. K. Fox and his "Police Gazette" have been complained of by Anthony Comstock! Fox waived a hearing February 2, before Commissioner Shields, and entered bail for court. In addition to Leverson's suit against Comstock several others are pending Josie Springer, Mr. Hurley, Lum Smith and others, showing that the life of a suppressor is not at all a rosy one.

B. B. Ends, M. D., Oakland City, Ind.:—Lucifer comes regularly and is anxiously read as soon as received, and highly appreciated. I am sorry I did not get acquainted with it sooner than I did. I believe there is more disappointment, more sorrow, crime of all kinds, even murder—more blighted lives—caused by the present marriage system than from all other causes combined. The Light-Bearer gets better all the time; hope it may live long and grow in usefulness until all mankind receives the light of reform. Enclosed find one dollar for my subscription for this year. Sorry that I am not able to do more for the cause of freedom. Almost forgot to say Combination Offer received, and greatly appreciated.

F. S. Harman, Shannon, Tex.:—I have watched with great interest your battles with the United States—that is what Father calls them and he says you have about whipped. I sometimes tell Father that there is no use for us to work for any reform. Free mothers are undoubtedly our only hope. If you had money to use freely you could accomplish what you have undertaken much faster than you can at present. The greatest wonder to me is that you are getting along as well as you are.

We need not expect the Populist Party nor anything else to do us any good under our present system of government. I would never go to the polls and vote again if it were not for the fact that I have a few friends that I want to see elected.

If we all live a few years longer I hope to be able to come to see you. I shall never forget the short time that I had the pleasure of going to school to you. I only wish it had been ten years instead of a few short weeks. With best wishes and kindest regards to you and cousin Lillian and little Virna, I am yours very affectionately. (Enclosed find five dollars for Lucifer one year ahead and back volumes.)

[We are very glad to hear from our Texas relatives and especially pleased to know that they take such interest in Lucifer and its work.]

C. B. Hoffman, Enterprise, Kan.:—Lucifer is doing good and much needed work. The emancipation of woman must go hand in hand with economic emancipation. Each helps the other. Enclosed find three dollars for which send one copy of Stockham's "Karezza" to me, and apply the balance to my subscription on Lucifer.

My son Walter, bright, radical, affectionate, passed to the great beyond two weeks ago. Consumption. He was ill nearly a year but was not confined to his bed. He went to sleep, as usual one evening and did not wake up again in this world. This was at San Antonio, Texas, where he was in care of a dear friend—Cheyse—whom you may remember. Walter was a radical—Whitman was his favorite poet. "The Song of the Universal" his choice. Funeral from M. E. church (family connection caused them to tender the use of it and as it was impossible to accommodate the crowds elsewhere we accepted). Dr. Roberts delivered a most magnificent address, full of the most radical thought. It did much good.

[Most sincerely do we sympathize with our old and faithful friend in his sad bereavement. Of all the early friends of Lucifer none deserve more honorable mention or more grateful remembrance than does the writer of this letter. No man in Kansas has done more hard work in the cause of radical reform, or contributed more financial aid—according to his means—than has C. B. Hoffman. The letter from which the above extract is made was evidently not written for publication, but knowing that a large number of Brother Hoffman's personal friends who read Lucifer would be glad to hear from him, we take the liberty of making public the news of the untimely demise of his son. M. H.]

RARE BACK NUMBERS.

The Number that Can be Supplied is Limited. First Come First Served.

Many persons have written to this office for back numbers of Lucifer covering the first time its editor was in prison. We have a limited number of copies in stock and while they last they can be had for 5 cents a copy. These copies comprise Volume X. of Lucifer. Some of the features of the different issues are:

1. A Story of Two Lives, by May Huntley; Extracts from Moses Harman's address to the court; Dianism Discussed, by Elmina Drake Slenker.

2. The Pittsburg Problem, by "Diana"; Prison Echoes, by Moses Harman; Rules for Sexual Health, by Allie Lindsay Lynch; Court of Love.

3. Enforcement of Morality, by "Diana."

4. A Branch Road, by Hamlin Garland.

6. Prison Echoes, by M. Harman. Dianism vs. Budlongism, by Elmina Drake Slenker.

8. "The Woman Who Dares," by H. J. Hunt. Women's Work, by Lillie D. White.

10. The Girl of the Future, by Ruth B. Havens.

11. The Girl of the Future, by Ruth B. Havens; Prison Echoes, by M. Harman. What Do the Sex Cranks Want? by M. Harman.

12. Release of the Editor from Prison; A Story of One Hour, by May Huntley.

13. Account of the Editor's Release from Prison; The Nude in Artists, by C. L. Swartz.

14. Criticism and Comments on the Editor's Imprisonment. Reception for the Editor. A New Realism, by Lizzie M. Holmes.

15. Beginning of May Huntley's serial story, "Hagar Lyndon, or a Woman's Rebellion." This interesting story is completed in twenty-two numbers of Lucifer. Our Name and Purpose—Editorial.

16. "The Crowning Sin of the Age,"—editorial. The Object of Laws, by Marie Louise, who has since writing this article become a Buddhist priestess and is now known as Swami Abayananda.

17. Selfish and Immoral Women, by Lillie D. White. Dualism and Varietism Compared, by C. L. James. Feelings and Ideas of Sex in Children, by Prof. Earl Barnes of Stanford University.

18. "His Confession," a poem by Voltairine de Cleyre.

19. Maltreatment of Wives—editorial. Bondage and Bondage, by Allie Lindsay Lynch.

21. Marriage Going Out of Fashion—editorial. God's Mistakes—editorial.

Give the number of the paper you want when you send for it. Besides the features mentioned above every copy contains much valuable contributed and editorial matter. The entire volume of fifty-two numbers will be sent to any address for $1.75. This offer is necessarily limited by the number of papers we have on hand.

The Adult for February

Contains Music, Religion and Sex, (1.) by Orford Northcote; Malthus, by Lady Cook; "Love's Coming of Age," by Sagittarius; The Sex Philosophy of Exeter Hall, by W. F. Dunton; The Divine Woman, by William Platt; Two Gifts, by Edward Carpenter; Wonderland, (a poem.) by Amy C. Morant; The Home and the Family, by Robert Braithwaite; Controversial Correspondence William Platt and the Adult. Price, 10 cents. $1 a year.

Instruction upon Right Marital Living.

Advice given by mail, and questions answered Two dollars per letter.
Ida C. Craddock.
1230 Arch St., Philadelphia.

698.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Ruled by the Tomb.

A Discussion of Free Thought and Free Love.

BY ORFORD NORTHCOTE.

"The world for the most part is ruled by the tomb, and the living are tyrannized over by the dead. Old ideas, long after the conditions under which they were produced have passed away, often persist in surviving. Many are disposed to worship the ancient,—to follow the old paths, without inquiring where they lead, and without knowing exactly where they wish to go themselves."—"Marriage and Divorce," R. G. Ingersoll, p. 5.

Price, ten cents. For sale at this office.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson, 16 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 20 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

The Adult for January—Double Number.

Contains the Second Biennial Proceedings of the Legitimation League. Edited by Oswald Dawson. Picture of the president of the League on the cover. Full page portraits of Lillian Harman, president, George Bedborough, secretary, and Louie Bedborough, treasurer of the League.

Contents: 1. The Annual Meeting and Dinner. 2. Friction. 3. Eighteenpence or Half-a-crown? 4. The Play's the Thing. 5. Some Letters, the Constitution and a Speech. 6. The Judgment of Paris. 7. Which Sex Suffers Most? 8. The Physiology of Love. 9. Sexual Education. 10. Spiritual Love. 11. Miss De Cleyre on the League and the Woman Question. 12. The New Idealism. 13. An Autonomistic Marriage. 14. Marriages Made in Russia. 15. Cast off the Shell! 16. The "Firebrand" in the Flames. 17. The New Martyrdom. 18. Letters and Reviews. 19. Free Love and Lesbian Love. 20. Powder Magazines and Lighted Lucifers. 21. Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs. Price, 20 cents. Address this office.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.
This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1284 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

The Outcome of Legitimation. By Oswald Dawson. This address was to have appeared in the January "Adult," but the printers of that number played Bowdler on a small scale, and refused to print it, alleging that the matter which they did print was "bad enough, but we are printing that and decline to print more." The lecture deals with some problems arising from the practicalization of the theories of free love. Price, 5 cents. For sale at this office.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Hadcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 427 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

HUMAN RIGHTS. By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasion; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter IV., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, ten cts.

Wanted: A practical horticulturist, and a scientific vegetarian cook. A free man and a free woman, only, need apply. Address Z., care of Lucifer, 1284 Congress St., Chicago.

Personal: Advanced thinker, bachelor, educated, musical, etc., desires acquaintance of a lady of similar views living in or near Indiana, or who visits Indianapolis. Address P. O. Box 775, Indianapolis, Ind.

Books Worth Reading FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .10
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .50
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr., .5
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .10
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .10
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .10
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1284 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" most ardent criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1907, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 25 cents per dozen.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook social liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 10 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "The Anarchist Communism." Nos. 1 and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 1 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

"The Philosopher." A Monthly Magazine for Progressive People. Albert Chavannes, Editor and Publisher. Philosophical Comments, Review of Books that Help Progress, Miscellaneous Reading, Original and Selected. Price fifty cents a year. Valuable premiums. Send for sample copies. Address Albert Chavannes, 308 Fourth Ave., Knoxville, Tenn.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., NO. 8. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, FEBRUARY 23, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE NO. 699.

Galileo's Prison Song.

Though you fear me, though you doubt me,
I shall win, whate'er befall;
Though you jeer me, though you flout me,
Truth and I against you all!

Though you bend me, though you break me,
Time and I against you all;
Time and truth at last shall make me
Lord of you who am your thrall.

Though you chain me, though you burn me,
Yet the earth, though that befall,
Moves, and though you daunt and turn me,
It still moves in spite of all!

—Selected.

Popular Follies and Crimes.

BY JAMES S. DENSON.

Justice Dunwell, of the Fourth judicial department, Albany, New York, decides that a person convicted of a felony can not traffic in liquor. It seems to me that this justice has not done well. As I have hitherto understood the law, the deprivation of citizen rights accompanying conviction of a felony, extends only to the denial of the right to vote and to hold office. If the law may say that an ex-felon shall not sell liquor it may also say that he shall not engage in farming nor become a conductor on a railway. If it can deny him the opportunity to engage in one vocation, it may deny him the right to engage in any vocation, and so reduce him to pauperism or starvation. It thus has the power to practically make a time sentence a life sentence or even a capital sentence. I submit that Justice Dunwell's decision is bad law, and bad policy, and that it reeks with injustice and inhumanity.

* * *

When waitresses in East Side cafes in New York smile at the passers-by, detectives in citizens' dress are detailed to walk slowly along the streets where the cafes are situated, invite smiles by their fine appearance, and then go in and arrest the girls who fall into the trap. The next morning the magistrate reads the girls a severe lecture and fines them ten dollars each. All this is done to protect the poor incapable men, for of course nobody supposes that the waitresses waste any sweet looks on the women who pass. A smile that has ten dollars worth of "kill" in it must be somewhat dangerous, I confess, and yet it would seem that the recipient of the shot would not suffer materially unless he went into the cafe, and perhaps not even then, while his going in is a matter in which he has the sole jurisdiction. In short, it is the business neither of the law nor of the magistrate to interfere with the smiles of the waitresses. The men who go along about their business will not be hurt, while those who go in will also be about their business, which is not the business of the legislator or of the magistrate.

* * *

Anthony Comstock said in the "Christian Principles" meeting in Philadelphia that "it is the stinging of our children, the filling of young minds and hearts with secret evil thoughts, that will be the bane of the race in the future." Therefore, said he, give me more power and more earnest support, for repression alone can save you. He fails to see that it is repression that fills the minds with "secret evil thoughts." The sexual impulses are not evil in themselves, but they often work disaster through ignorance and the consequent misdirection. Repressive measures tend to make permanent the ignorance that causes all the trouble. There must be perfect confidence between parents and children, but this confidence is impossible while parents are under the domination of the idea that sex is inherently vile and knowledge concerning it dangerous. Comstock, as the sworn enemy of the Frank and the Nude, is therefore the active promoter of the very evils which he professes a desire to remove. If he will take down the bars and permit the friends of instruction to put into the hands of parents and other teachers the books and papers they need in order to fit themselves for their work as guides, he will do a thousand fold more for purity than can be done by all the conventional moralists in a century.

* * *

"Our doctor does not like Aunt Maria."

"Why not?"

"When the baby has croup she always comes it before the doctor gets here."—Chicago Record.

The clergy assert it is in seasons of calamity that they win the most souls for Jesus; when persons are prosperous here they are not so anxious about their hereafter. Similarly, if men and woman and children can enjoy themselves as they please on Sunday, they will not nearly so often please to go to church as they will when the church is the only place to which they can go. Hence, the great interest clergymen take in the enactment and enforcement of Sunday laws. This fact, this relation of cause and effect, has its bearing upon the little "skit" from the "Record." A large number of doctors are very insistent in their demands for medical monopoly laws, which would go to show that a good many cases of croup are cured by the Aunt Marias before the regularly licensed healer can get around.

Imperialism.

BY CHAS. GANO BAYLOR.

I desire through Lucifer, to call general attention to the following brief paragraph, sent out semi-officially through the Associated Press, from the seat of National Federal Imperialism at Washington. In alluding to the De Lome incident the official imperialistic mouth-piece says:

> The results of a rupture of 'diplomatic relations" [please mark the italicised words] between the United States and Spain, at a time so critical as the present, may be imagined. It would then be well nigh impossible to prevent an outbreak of actual hostilities.

The question of peace or war dependent upon the mere "rupture of diplomatic relations"! And the irresponsible con trol of these delicate "diplomatic functions" in the hands of a presidential imperial executive who is also commander in chief of the army and navy and who may wish to perpetuate his presidential dynasty and divert public attention from the monopolistic parasites who are bleeding the people, by a foreign war.

Whether McKinley is a "low politician" or not; whether De Lome's caustic character-sketch of the champion demagogue of American politics coming swiftly as it does after the Lattimer massacre of helpless strikers by the bounty enriched "protected" coal barons of Pennsylvania, is galling to our national pride or not, there remains back of it all, the terrible fact, that a "politician" whether "high" or "low," who can wriggle himself into presidential power, can, even with Congress in session, precipitate the American people into a bloody war, and that back of this one-man-war-power, are compulsory military service laws, both Federal and State with their grip on every able bodied man of the nation to carry forward the inhuman business.

In this connection I would ask the reader to consult the orations of Patrick Henry against the crime of all crimes in history, the fraud and crime of 1789. Patrick Henry demanded that greater safe-guards be thrown around liberty, and stronger checks placed on the spirit of imperialism, before the liberated colonies accepted the yoke of British Parliamentarism.

Here is the situation in America today, fully vindicating the prophetic sagacity of the great colonial revolutionary leader whose bugle call, "Give me liberty, or give me death," aroused the colonies in 1776 to revolutionary action. An imperial presidential executive, who can at any time precipitate the nation into war according to his sweet will. A subservient cabinet composed of official loafers to sanction the crime. An aristocratic senate, irresponsible to the people; an autocratic Federal Judiciary which has finally become the government, and which by judicial decree in the "Income Tax" decision, nullified the liberty principles of the declaration of American independence as forming no part whatever of the constitutional structure of the nation and which has also by "judicial decree" elevated Jefferson Davis to an equality with Abraham Lincoln, (see oration of President Andrews of Brown University upon General Lee), placed "God" in the constitution and ordained a national religion.

As to the house of representatives in the national congress the prerogatives of which were supposed to constitute an effective check upon imperialism while reflecting the dominant sovereignty of the people in their government, it has become so abject and servile under the general corruption as to allow the senate, the executive and the Federal judiciary to usurp its prerogatives without a protest, to have its legislation dictated by one man—(the speaker) while the imperial presidential executive can precipitate the nation into war over its head and even while it is in session. The De Lome letter should have been laid before the House and the President's duty was to await the action of the House.

If this is not imperialism, pray in what does imperialism consist? From the seat of this centralized Federal power packing the supreme court with its creatures and partisans to the suppression of the "Firebrand," the arrest of Emma Goldman and the massacre of the helpless strikers at Lattimer, Pennsylvania, this hydra-headed imperialism overshadows the land. In brief, the United States has finally become under the evolution of despotism a judicial military ecclesiastical capitalistic, plutocracy embodying the aristocratic principle of the Doges of Venice, with the imperialism of ancient Rome working through the Parliamentary machinery of monarchial England. Every avenue of the nation's life is fed and poisoned by a capitalistic corrupted and religion-by law-perverted public school system—perhaps the most vicious system of education on the face of the earth—the entire imperialistic edifice being crowned with Federal judicial absolutism under which the sole measure of an American's personal liberty is the autocratic will of a Federal judge. And worst of all, the enslaved and degenerate American, thanks to the public school, loves his chains.

In the face of this imperialism (growing stronger and stronger and more and more arrogant day by day, in fact and naturally growing with what it feeds on, while the people become poorer and poorer and weaker and more servile) the land is filled with the howlings of "patriots" and "statesmen" who want "16 to 1," or the "gold standard," "government ownership of railroads" or "protection" or some other similar nostrum or palliative under the "divine constitution" for the national disease—Imperialism—for all the miseries of the American people can be clearly traced to one primal and prolific source, namely, the perverted and imperialised character of the American government itself.

Again let me urge upon all who take an interest in political action, as a remedy for our national ills, to read the protests of Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson, Thomas Paine, Samuel Adams, Luther Martin and the other social Democrats of that day, against the fraud and crime of 1789. That crime is now bringing forth its legitimate fruits, "after its kind." A government the corner stone of which was, for the first time in history, the formal recognition of the principle of the right of property in man; a government constructed by the Colonial Reactionary Aristocracy, the British-American Tories, the slave-lords and the Church of England priests (see Shinn, an American priest of the High or Ritualistic Anglican-Catholic church, in his work showing the part the church took in the framing of the Federal compact) and the slave-lords; a government which the believers in the sublime liberty ideals of the immortal declaration of the sacred and inalienable rights of man bitterly opposed, such a government could only end as the monarchical scheme of government of Alexander Hamilton with human slavery as its corner stone, has finally ended. Let Liberty turn away her eyes from the spectacle, in grief, shame and humiliation. Let Humanity in Europe take warning by the fate of Liberty in America.

Providence, R. I.

It is the rebels who extend the boundary of right little by little, narrowing the confines of the wrong, and crowding it out of existence.—Sarah Grand.

A New Test of Truth.

BY A. WARREN.

The old adage, "Old men for counsel, young men for war," will have to be remodeled. A brilliant latter day philosopher has discovered that age has nothing to do with wisdom, after all; that people do not reason from facts, learned by experience and observation, but simply by their feelings, as these may happen to be, along the various stages of development. Thus, old men and women cannot reason at all, having lost their feelings, and having forgotten the feelings that formerly animated them. The inference is, that everybody ought to be guided by the feelings of the young and middle aged.

This is our philosopher's answer to the arguments of those who have ceased to bend the knee to Venus, as the sole arbiter of the relations of the sexes. To our facts he has little answer to make. All he can think of is, "Oh you have lost your virility. You have forgotten how you felt and acted, some years ago." Oneida is nothing. They acted under duress.

There are several objections to this method of reasoning. The premises are not true; and if they were true, the conclusion is not deducible from them. It is not true that we all base our judgment upon our feelings. Neither is it true that feeling is a reliable guide for conduct, especially during those periods of life in which feeling preponderates over the reflective faculties. That varietists thus reason is apparent; but people are not all alike, and emphatically, no person's feelings can be a sure guide for the conduct of another. What ails our varietist friends is, that they have not had sufficient time to learn by experience

The experience of others goes for naught, because it contradicts their desires. And these are the men, (always men,) who charge women who differ from them with being narrow and selfish.

Nor is it true that those who renounced variety were superannuated. The Pattersons were not forty years old, when they backslid. Mrs. H. was not forty, when she made her celebrated remark about taking money. Mrs. —— was still in the prime of life, and none of her lovers were old, when they all deserted her, on account of her promiscuity. I know you do not advocate promiscuity; but you have not defined clearly, the point where that begins and where variety ends. You yourselves hardly know either from the other, when you see them. These men were all varietists. Why should they object—how could they object to promiscuity among themselves, thirty or forty of them? Where is the line to be drawn? Please do not dodge this question.

It is not true that Oneida acted under duress. There were parties working the legislature against them, and threats were made; but this was no new experience. The persecution was no more formidable than it had always been. The fact was, there had for many years been a division of sentiment in the community. The motto "All one in Christ" could not be lived up to. The majority were against it. Mr. Noyes, with a few followers, seceded and sought a new location. The balance reorganized as a joint-stock company, on a family basis. Does our philosopher believe that these tried veterans repudiated their honest convictions, at that late day, just from fear of the law? Or, are they still practicing variety, on the sly? Neither assumption would be more insulting than it is to charge all dualists with senility. Surely, this is your "Last ditch." You concede that you will be with us, bye and bye, after you have finished sowing your wild oats. That is what variety usually is. Let us hope that you will not go back to marriage, as the others have done.

Bear it in mind, that I have not assailed variety, except as an ideal. If I wished to visit France, or make my home in Italy, I should expect to have to cross the ocean; but I would not abandon my destination, and sail forever at random, merely to enjoy the fascination of the sea. To indulge variety with no end in view beyond the pleasure to be found in itself, is to dissipate real love, and to jeopardize the cause of freedom; for the world will never be converted to that ideal.

[It seems to me that a reply to the above is scarcely necessary; there is so much of self-contradiction in it; but I will call attention to a few points.

There is nothing whatever in Mr. Walker's article in No. 696 to justify the inference that everybody ought to be guided by the "feelings of the young and middle-aged." Everybody ought to be guided by his or her own feelings and judgment; should not try to regulate the feelings or conduct of others. When a "varietist" tells people that they must love more than one, he places himself on a level with the exclusivist who says that they must love only one. But this accusation has no application to any of Mr. Walker's arguments.

I know nothing about Mr. Warren's citation of personal examples, but if they are as wide of the mark as his statement concerning the "wild oats" sowing, they are scarcely to be considered seriously. I have enjoyed the intimate acquaintance and friendship of Mr. Walker for more than fifteen years; Mr. Warren is not personally acquainted with him. I know that of no man could the accusation of "wild oats sowing," promiscuity, irresponsibility, be made more unjustly than of E. C. Walker. By the way, how do the "horrible examples" of women varietists harmonize with the last three sentences of the paragraph preceding them in Mr. Warren's article?

LILLIAN HARMAN.]

An author must remember that, while he is descendant of the past, he is a parent of the future; and that his thoughts are as children born to him, which he may not carelessly let die.—Herbert Spencer.

To James S. Denson.

BY FRANCIS BARRY.

You are neither dull or dishonest, and so you must have read my article hurriedly.

You say I protest against the advocacy of "variety." I have done no such thing. I never did any such thing. I have advocated variety all my life. At the age of fourteen, fifty-seven years ago, while my personal feeling was that of perfect devotion to the girl I loved, I made myself exquisitely happy by cherishing the feeling that she should be absolutely free to accept any manifestation that would make her happy, from any boy or man who was generous, and sweet, and clean, and select. I have, repeatedly, advocated "variety" in Lucifer's columns. I have even said, and now repeat, that "freedom and variety are one and the same thing." That is, in a condition of freedom, variety is inevitable.

But I do not mean by "variety" just what you and others seem to mean by it. The difference between us is this: While I use terms with perfect accuracy you, and many others, use them with a greater or less degree of looseness. If you and I, and all the rest, made it an arbitrary rule to have two lovers a piece, no more, no less, it would not be "variety." It would be sameness. But if one had one lover, another two or more, and another none at all, that would be "variety"—just what we shall have when marriage is abolished.

Lillian Harman, in Lucifer of Jan. 19, makes an absolutely correct statement. If I do not misunderstand her, she looks at the matter precisely as I do, namely: that no one has any business to meddle with other people's private affairs. I trust I do not misrepresent her when I say that she seems to regard it as bad taste to even suggest to anybody the propriety of sustaining this or that kind of relationship. If this is your platform I have no fault to find. If you only mean to contend that a woman who has two lovers, is, other characteristics being equal, just as pure and just as womanly as the woman who has only one, I have no fault to find. That is my contention. I deny that there is any such thing as a "free monogamist." I have, a thousand times, said there was no difference between monogamy and polygamy. But, while I do not know much about the latter phase of the greatest of all abominations, the marriage system, I think monogamy must be, practically, the worst, if one phase of slavery is worse than another. There is, without doubt, more rape and prostitution, and certainly more phariseeism.

Now I may be wrong, but I believe it will be much easier to convert the world to the doctrine, and spirit, and practice of genuine toleration, than it will be to convert it to the theory of non-exclusive love. I advocate variety, but I do not advocate non exclusive relations, nor do I advocate exclusive relations—not one more than the other. And while I am in favor of the free discussion of all questions, and the free expression of all opinions, I do think the able writers who are recognized as the leaders of the free love movement, will make their work count more for humanity by giving their best efforts to the abolition of slavery and the success of absolute and unconditional freedom.

THE PAMPHLET, "Motherhood in Freedom," is now out of print. We still have copies of "Our New Humanity" in which the essay appeared, together with other valuable essays, as follows: "Priestly Celibacy," by Prof. A. L. Rawson; "Sex Love Analytically Defined," by Ernest Winne; "The Other Side," by May Clifford Hurd; "The Incoherence of Transition," by E. C. Walker; "The Greatest Sin," (an allegory,) by R. B. Kerr; "Our New Savior—The Surgeon," by Charles Turner Brown; "Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom," by Oscar Rotter Price, 25 cents.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of the social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

PUBLISHED AT 1394 CONGRESS ST., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representative, George Bedborough, 16 John Street, Bedford Row, London, W. C., England.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

"WOMAN'S Place in Nature; or the New Ideal in Family Life," was the subject of an address by the editor of this paper, Sunday night, Feb. 13, before the Chicago Economic Educational Club, which association holds meetings every Sunday evening at the corner of Milwaukee and Armitage Avenues. The attendance, of both sexes, in spite of stormy weather, was good. A very interesting discussion followed the opening address, closing with the usual fifteen minutes for reply by the first speaker to criticisms and questions by the audience. This club is doing excellent educational work, and should be encouraged by all earnest seekers for the new and better way of living. For information as to future meetings, address Secretary Warmbold, 1515 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago.

WITH THIS ISSUE of Lucifer is begun the reproduction of a story, one of the best life-stories, heart-stories, yet written by one who is without reasonable doubt the most radical, as well as most able, of the transatlantic story-writers of the present day. Possessing all the artistic and creative genius of George Eliot, George Egerton has a clearer perception of "Woman's Place in Nature," and higher and better ideals of what woman's freedom from conventional standards of morality demands.

The story will run through perhaps a dozen issues, and as our supply of back numbers often runs short, those who wish to preserve copies of all the issues containing this exceptionally good story, and who wish to help Lucifer in its educational work, will do well to order an extra copy now—one for home use and one to give away to friends.

The Outlook for Peace.

That the status of the people of the United States is now that of peace, or that it has been one of peace, in any proper sense of the word, for the past five or ten years, will hardly be maintained by those acquainted with the facts. With vast armies of unorganized and unemployed workers barred out from access to nature's supplies of coal and other useful minerals; denied their equal right to the results of labor-saving inventions—the product of past ages of labor,—mental and physical, of the race itself; denied their equal right to a share of the use of fertile or productive land—with these vast armies of disinherited, unprotected, unorganized laborers, on the one hand, and on the other the comparatively small army of organized, "protected," purse-proud, arrogant, aristocratic, unsympathetic, unfeeling plutocrats, with the state militia and the army and the navy of the United States at their command to defend their baronial rights and privileges,—and with occasional slaughter of unarmed, unorganized and inoffensive workers, as in the case of the Latimer massacre in Pennsylvania, and with thousands of producers actually starving or freezing in sight of enormous unused accumulations of food, of clothing and of houses, of their own production—to say nothing of the perpetual warfare of the armies of police, of detectives, of constables, sheriffs, etc., etc., against the illegal, the amateur robbers and murderers that infest the cities and the highways and byways of the country—in view of all these things, and more of like nature, it would seem a mockery of language to say that we have been and are now living in an era of peace.

But now, in addition to the never-ceasing warfare waged by the law-protected classes against the non-protected, we are now threatened with the horrors of another kind of war; a war with another robber nation whose armies of trained murderers have for years carried on one of the most cruel and utterly inexcusable of all cruel and invasive wars known to modern history. That it is in the power of a few ambitious and unscrupulous politicians to precipitate the people of this country into the horrors of a national or foreign war, involving the loss of thousands of lives and many millions of money—all of which money must be paid by the enslaved and robbed working classes, is almost past belief; and yet, as stated by Charles Gano Baylor in his article entitled, "Imperialism," it is undoubtedly true.

That the politician class would welcome a foreign war there is little room for doubt, and that the leading political parties would vie with each other in proving their loyalty to "Old Glory," as the American flag is called, goes without saying. In all the past history of this nation the party that was most clamorous for war and least disposed to compromise, has been the winning party at general elections. Politicians will not be slow to remember this historical fact, but their chief reason for welcoming war is that it will divert the attention of the discontented masses from the real cause of their troubles and postpone indefinitely any real movement for radical change, or for abolition of government by classes, or by rulers.

That the plutocratic, the protected, the privileged classes would rejoice at the outbreak of war is only too natural. National war means more national debt; more debt means more interest-bearing bonds—more opportunities for profitable investment of their now idle millions of ill-gotten wealth. War means more opportunities for demanding still more rigorous laws securing rights of property—in the interest of which it may truthfully be said that all wars are waged, unless an exception be made in the case of religious wars.

Last of all, saddest of all, the working masses themselves, the voting masses and (when fighting must be done) the fighting masses, would all welcome war. The millions of the unemployed, as well as millions of the employed but poorly paid wage-earners would welcome a foreign war because it would bring activity to business of all kinds. Thousands who now hold down the labor market would then enlist as soldiers—would join the division of labor known as man-killing. Thousands more would find employment in furnishing these man-killers with needful weapons and other supplies. The cost of killing one man in actual war is said to be greater than the cost of keeping alive many men in times of peace, and all this extra cost gives life and activity to trade, to manufactures, to mining, to agriculture, to live-stock-raising—to every department of productive or non-productive human industry.

At this writing, Feb. 16, a new complication, the destruction of an American war-ship in the harbor of Havana, seems to have given a fresh impetus to the war spirit. This occurrence, most horrible as it is, will doubtless be secretly hailed with delight by those whose selfish interests would be served by war.

There is much in the doctrine of periodicity. Wars are the result often of causes that do not appear on the surface. Prenatal influences have doubtless much to do with the recurrence of wars. Men born during the period of the great civil war are now in the prime of life. They unconsciously act out the impressions then implanted in them. Hence the great need of the exercise of reason, of judgment and of fraternal forbearance on the part of those now in charge of the diplomatic affairs of the so-called American Republic.

Sociologic Lesson. No. LIX.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

INHERITED POVERTY. There is a prevalent idea that the poorer classes have been forced into their dependent position, and that they have a right to complain that they are wronged in not being lifted out of it. The truth is that they have either chosen that position themselves, or have inherited it from their ancestors who have chosen it for them. Even the lowest classes enjoy advantages resulting from the co-operation of others, sometimes without cost and sometimes at a nominal price, placing them above what they could secure by unaided labor at a distance from civilization; and on account of these advantages, either consciously or unconsciously, they cling to city or factory life; some of them by persistent efforts rising out of the mire, and others too ignorant or indolent to do so. Even the miners, toiling underground for a meager compensation, in comparison with what skilled and co-operative industry will command, originally adopted that mode of life as a harbor of refuge from a more laborious and precarious life; and if they had energy and determination they might now rise above it. We must not forget that frequent famines were the lot of all tribes of men until co-operation put an end to them. These classes, downtrodden by their own choice, will persistently reject every effort to induce them to become self-sustaining and free, until the advance of civilization invades their haunts and forces them out in spite of themselves, as the overworked street car horses have been replaced by the trolley. The great want is not to ameliorate the condition of the poor but to annihilate poverty. This can only be done by integral co-operation, the co-operation of all industrial pursuits, the branch of our subject which we are now to consider in detail.

[It cannot be too often repeated that Lucifer's editor must not be held responsible for the opinions expressed by contributors to its columns. To get at the best, the truest, the highest, in any department of life, it is necessary to hear all sides. With many of the views advanced in the long series of articles called "Sociologic Lessons" the editor is in full accord, and whether in accord or not he does not consider it necessary always, or often, to offer comments thereon. The readers are supposed to be able to make their own comments,—to select or reject, as seemeth good to them.

Whatever may be thought of the views of the author of the "Lessons," in regard in the causes of poverty of the many, and of the enormous accumulations in the hands of the few there will probably be little or no protest against the statement that poverty can only be abolished by "integral co-operation;" the elaboration of which idea by Mr. Parkhurst will now be looked for, doubtless, with much interest by Lucifer's thoughtful readers. M. H.]

The Unfaithful Lord.

Ethelyn Leslie Huston, in "Brann's Iconoclast."

What is morality, and what is immorality? Is conscience or custom God? Why must man or woman carry the charnel-house of a mistaken marriage to their grave? Who says they must? And who told them so? And when? And where? What was moral law in other ages is immoral law today. The moral law today may be sin generations hence. Who is right? And how do they know they are right? And why? I am not advocating liaison. I champion neither Don Juan nor Queen Elizabeth. There are moral lepers just as there are disease and dementia. And all such should be imprisoned in lazar-houses or chloroformed. But because we do not so dispose of them it is madness to make laws to control libertines and think to thus harness Eros. Cloacina was a useful goddess. She presided over the sewers. But we must not conflict her office with that of Venus. Omar asks:

"A book of verses underneath the bough,
A jug of wine, a loaf of bread—and thou
Beside me, singing in the wilderness—
O wilderness were Paradise enow!"

And it is that "thou beside me" that is the right of man and woman by every just law. Life at its best gives little but its jug of wine and loaf of bread. The body is fed, but for heart and soul the way is long and bitterly hard, and when the bared feet stumble blindly from the sharp stones they generally find hot plough-shares. And in all its grinding toil and weariness of spirit, and emptiness, the only hope in the soul's Garden of Gethsemane is the divine passion that wakes but once in a lifetime and in that one awakening, though it last but an hour, makes the past bitterness and the after crucifixion—worth while.

If man or woman "prove unfaithful"—let them go. Would you treasure the cocoon when the butterfly has wakened and taken wing? Would you press to your bare breast the gilded wires of the cage if the song-bird were silent? Would you crush to your lips always the chill face of a corpse, whose heart to you is dead—for all time, dead? If they "prove unfaithful" what, in the dear God's name, is left? What would you hold? Hands that no longer caress? Eyes that are chill? Lips that are mute? Body that shrinks? Soul that wearies and struggles and despairs and—loathes? If they "prove unfaithful" will last year's roses live again? Will dead ashes kindle to warm life? Will wearied sighs give birth to quick passion? Would you sleep on a heart that dreams of another? Would you draw to your breast a head that wearies for other pillow? Would you try to give warmth to lips that thirst for other lips?

In all Deity's catagory of hideous torment is there any more devilish than the warmth of a human body sleeping at your side, but heart and brain and soul separated from you by a chasm wider than the seas and deeper than hell's deepest cavern! Are men and women mad that they would change rose-wreaths to iron fetters! Would they bound Elysium by prison walls? Was ever yet the winged god held in bondage? If they "prove unfaithful"—let them go. Better the silence of deserted Naxos than the awful farce of this "unreal nullity." Rather the loneliness of Elba, than State that is but a mockery. Rather the desolation of Eugenie than the ghastly pomp of Louise. Rather the prison straw of Gretchen than the silken couch of Wales.

THE REGENERATION OF TWO.

George Egerton, in "Discords."

Love is the supreme factor in the evolution of the world.—Professor Drummond.

It is mid June one hot forenoon in Christiania. The air seems to vibrate audibly with heat, to gasp for coolness. The sun rays play "hide and seek" amongst the tombstones in our Saviour's graveyard. Sable-clad figures move about with spades, a few sit and do fancy-work, and spend a thoughtful hour at the resting-place of some near one passed through the gates of Sleep. The roses—such roses!—hang their heads with faintness as the sun becomes more insistent in his wooing, and the fragrance of a thousand plants fills the air with the glory of summer.

The long French windows of a villa overlooking it are thrown wide open. The lace curtains hang limply, for there is not a breath of wind. It is a pretty room, with evidences of taste and wealth. Its only occupant is stretched in a weary attitude in a low rocking-chair; she is swaying slowly to and fro. A book lies on the carpet near her as if thrown there, her slippers are kicked aside, she has taken off her rings, and they are glittering on her lap; and as she rocks from shade to light, and light to shade, the sun strikes gold and ruby, emerald and diamond and sapphire flashes. She yawns wearily and stretches up her arms behind her head, then clasps her long hands—they are well formed, with a yellow whiteness and a look of delicate strength about them—round her knees, and looks at her own reflection in a mirror opposite. She is not unlike an illustration in a dainty magazine: she has an æsthetic appreciation of the effect of her black silken-clad ankles and the froth of white lace flounces on her petticoats; the cool tones of the broad lilac-and-white stripes of her muslin morning-gown, and the chic of the black rosette at the waist.

She is scarcely beautiful, but she is undeniably striking. There is a tantalizing irregularity about the face, with its bored expression. Her mouth is large, but no man would wish it smaller, with its firm tender curves and deep-set corners; her brows are delicately marked; the orbs of her wonderful eyes, with their changeful lights, are large; there are weary lines about them; the lids are heavy with bistre-stains; her skin has an anæmic tinge, and today it looks shrivelled, like a waxen flower with the first touch of wilting over it: the little touch of rouge, though it is artistically applied, only heightens this effect. As she leans back, her throat looks singularly strong for such a small head; her hair is curled loosely about her forehead; the moulding of her temples is fine. Taking her altogether, she is seductively attractive, a thing of piquant contrasts,—the attractive artificiality, physical lassitude, and irritable weariness of a disillusioned woman of the world, and the eyes of a spoiled child filled with frank petulant query. She yawns wearily as she rocks, and looks at the coquettish bows on her pretty shoes: she fancies they have a dejected look. A door opens; she calls irritably, "Jomfrue!" and a stout woman with quiet eyes and repressed mouth enters the room.

"Does Fruen want anything?" She speaks respectfully, yet there is the note in her voice that one uses to a child or an invalid,—indeed, she is on terms of companionship with her mistress.

"I'm awfully thirsty; I want something tart."

"Fruen had better have saft [fruit-juice] and seltzer."

She leaves the room, to return with a tray and a long glass. The seltzer rises in little silver pearls through the rose-colored liquid. She watches them idly for a moment, then drinks it greedily, with a sigh of satisfaction.

"Shall I rub Fruen's feet?" the woman asks, drawing forward a footstool. Without waiting for a reply she takes them on her lap and rubs gently, shaking her fingers after each time, as if she is scattering away something she has drawn out of them.

"Can't Fruen read?"

"No, my head aches; I feel much more as if I want to scream. Don't you ever?"

"Fruen isn't well." Then with a sort of hesitation: "At times, at night, I do feel as if I could just cry, without knowing why. I suspect all women do,—it's part of our nature. Fruen ought to do something. Frue Hohlsen, with whom I lived before, used to sew for poor children for the missionary fund, and I know English ladies have many interests——"

"Bah, bah! I don't believe in that, Aagot. What on earth's the good of sewing flannel petticoats for poor little niggers in Zanzibar? I am sure it's much nicer for them to roll their little brown bodies in the warm sand; I wouldn't mind doing it myself. It's," with a humorous twitch of mouth, "an æsthetic sin to send them out Christian fig-leaves in the shape of hideous—the patterns always are hideous—garments sewn by pious fingers at home here. I have too much respect for the poor little beggars' individual liberty. And then in such a climate, too! Phew!" She undoes her gown and draws a deep breath.

"But in Fruen's country I have read of ladies doing all sorts of things."

"Yes, so they do; they go in for suffrage, social reformation, politics, all sorts of fatiguing things. I thought of doing something of that kind myself,—of having a mission; but it would last as long as it was a new sensation. Besides, I didn't care much for any of the advanced women I met, they were so desperately in earnest; they took it out of me so. I am too selfish, I am afraid, Aagot! Do you know I think philanthropy is a masculine attribute; you don't find woman as a rule having her affections on man in the abstract. Love narrows rather than broadens her, unless she is 'crossed' in it; then she sometimes dispenses it in particles. I want something for myself!"

"Fruen could go into society; there is life in London,—theaters, balls—"

"Psha! There's more real life here, or at least you see it more plainly. It's too big, Aagot. Friendship in London costs a tremendous lot; you have to pay very dearly for your social whistle, and it's only a tin one when you get it. I used to have the feeling at an afternoon sometimes that I was one of a company of marionettes, and that some malicious demon was pulling a string in me, making me say things utterly unlike myself,—and it wasn't even amusing. The men have the best of it. If a man is bored he puts on his hat and goes out, and looks for a man or a woman to help him to get rid of himself. Why can't we do the same? I wish I knew what to do with myself!"

"Yet Fruen has much to be thankful for. She had a rich husband and—"

"Buried him," she interrupts, cynically; "yes, there is a measure of thankfulness in that."

The woman says nothing in reply, but her lips twitch and her lids drop.

"Yet Fruen likes gentlemen's society, likes to be admired, has many friends."

"Ugh! I like talking to them, Aagot, in a way, like them to admire me,—there's excitement in it; but when they want to come nearer, I get a kind of dislike to them, a sort of resentment. They interest me until they want to be more than a pastime; then, if they persist, I hate them. I am jealous of myself; one sees such a lot of animal in them when they are in love. Sometimes I get sorry for some one, and ask, 'Could I marry him?' Then I shudder. It's all horrid, unless one has what some one calls 'the white fire of love' to burn out the animalism, to consecrate it, in a way. You see, I know it, Aagot," with a serious air, "because I married without understanding anything about it; I never cared for the master. He just came when I was in one of my affectible moods, and I was too ignorant to understand why I felt like that. He was good to me, without understanding that I had anything more in me,—good in a 'man of the world's' way. You were there, Aagot, and it is a terrible thing to say," sinking her voice; "but the strongest feeling I had when he was dying or dead, though I was sorry in a way, and dreaded the loneliness, was a fierce inward whisper of exultant joy that I belonged to myself again. I fancy there must be many marriages like that, in which the woman feels a dull resentment against the man because her love does not go with herself. Were you ever in love, Aagot?"

The color mounts slowly to the other woman's dull fair hair.

"Yes, Frue,—at least, I think so. There was some one once, but there is very little to tell. I went a voyage with father. He used to take us girls in turns; that time it was to Spain. I always wanted to go to Spain."

"You Northerns always do; 'Spanish' seems to convey an idea of romance, of beauty, to you folk up here."

"Perhaps, Frue. Well, we went with a cargo of deals to Barcelona. Father had a mixed freight to bring back, and we stayed there three weeks. There was a big Swedish bark at anchor next us. The captain had died in hospital, and the first mate was going to take her home. I met him at a Norwegian ship-chandler's; it was a great house for all the Northern skippers to meet. I met him several times. Then one evening I was going down to the quay by myself, and there was a troop of asses, with panniers, trotting down one of the narrow streets, and there was a fearful row going on between some sailors and a woman; and when I saw knives flash, I got frightened, and ran down an alley. A fellow leaning against a doorway said something to me in Spanish, and caught hold of me, and I screamed; and he came up and sent him flying into the gutter, and took my arm and led me away. I felt faint, and couldn't answer him; and it wasn't because I was frightened, but because there was something that came from him to me and paralyzed me and made my legs fail me. I often met him after that, and he was always just the same, laughing, joking, mischievous, never serious; and sometimes that hurt me. And one day I saw him leaning against a counter talking to a Spanish woman with just the same look as when he spoke to me, and I went on board and didn't go on shore for three days. Father thought it was the heat was too much for me; and one evening, when he had gone in to a dinner with a Danish captain, he rowed over and came on board and talked to me. He wasn't feeling well; he said he had missed me; asked me where I lived in Norway; if I was engaged. We sat and listened to the castanets ringing out from a dance house near the wharf, and I was very happy. He said, when he was going, that he would likely be skipper after the next voyage, and that he wanted to settle down, and that he would come and see mother after he got home— Two days latter, he was dead,—a sort of cholerine, they said. That is why I go out to service. The winter after that I stayed at home, and it nearly drove me mad. I like to work. When I am idle I can hear the castanets, and the air of the dance they played— Work is the best."

"But you are going to marry a cousin, aren't you?"

"Yes, Fruen,—that is to say, a cousin's widower. He is a cripple; he got a stroke, and he has three little children. I love the children; I went to school with her—and you see—he is quite helpless!"

"Hum! will that satisfy you?"

"I think so, Fruen. I don't want a husband; I should hate it. The one I wanted lies out there under the olive trees in the Catholic churchyard. I just want the children; little Henrik has a smile like his." There is a long silence; a bee buzzes in and fills the room with the drone of summer.

"Perhaps you are right," says her mistress; you have the melody of the air he played in you. No man ever played on me; I am like a harp that has lain away until the strings are frayed, and no one ever called out its deepest music."

"Fruen ought to go out!" she replies; and she slips on her shoes, and arises, with no touch of sentiment in her stolid face, and busies herself in the next room.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

B. J. Snyder, Grand Junction, Colo.:—Please let me know if the books "Loma" and "Hilda's Home" are in publication and if they can be sent to me now, and the price of each.

[We can now send "Loma," post paid, for $1.50. "Hilda's Home" is in press, and when ready will be sent to all applicants for one dollar in cloth, or fifty cents in paper cover. M. H.]

Emily G. Taylor, Chicago, Ill.:—

Lucifer! Lucifer! Star of the Dawn!
Foretelling that darkness from earth shall be gone;
That the son of true science shall usher the day
When man shall see clearly life's true and right way—
That the dragons of night no longer be'll fear
When the search-light of reason shines brightly and clear.

Misery and woe now encompass earth life;
Error mee'a Truth in deadliest strife;
Down the ages of time how close is their race
As Error with Truth has held even pace.
Truth sits on a steed transcendently white;
A steed that is seen through the darkness of night.

Man's journey is long and the shadows lie deep,
Yet slowly the dawn up the east now doth creep.
Lucifer! Lucifer! thrice welcome thy light!
The light that shall triumph o'er Error's dark night.

Geo. W. Argo, Sioux City, Iowa:—LILLIAN HARMAN: I call you friend because I consider you a most valued and true friend to the entire human family and especially so, to those of your own sex. I endorse your thoughts and writings on the subject of marriage and divorce. Twenty-five years of active practice in the courts, during which time I have been attorney in three hundred divorce cases, and have been consulted in double that number of family or domestic quarrels growing out of unhappy marriages, where, after a few weeks' or months' experience in uncongenial married life it was discovered that the husband and wife were not sexually mated. In such cases if a legal separation could be quickly and conveniently accomplished, without expense and without notoriety, much of the misery, slavery and unhappiness of this world would be avoided. I am an advocate of the freedom of women in its fullest sense. I wish to continue my subscription to your paper and as soon as I can spare an hour from my court work will send you another order for several of your publications for free distribution among those of my acquaintances who are not familiar with their teachings.

Henry Addis, Portland, Ore.:—In reading my article in No. 696 of Lucifer I find that it carries the idea of ill-will or accusation with it. It reads quite different in print from what I expected, and for this reason I think I owe my readers an explanation or apology. I perhaps wrote hastily and while under nervous and mental strain.

I do not wish to charge that any one connected with the case acted viciously, or with the intent of causing our conviction, except McGinn, and it may be that he fully expected to win on the decoy letter plea, and was disarmed when that failed. I do think the money could have been expended so as to accomplish more for our case, and the cause of free press, but the others differed from me in this opinion.

At first I thought to conduct the case myself, but the honest advice of friends changed my determination on this point. Comrade Harman has had lots of experience with lawyers and his opinion is worthy of consideration, but I did not have it in time to influence me against having an attorney.

My view of the question as it now stands is this: The case is as much a live issue as ever, and it should be so considered. The fight is on now, and it behooves every lover of free press to carry on the agitation as vigorously as ever. If I have written anything that tended to discourage this view of it, it was unintentional.

I will take no part in factional disputes, and to that extent I am a non-resistant. Our war is with the enemy, and we have no time to fight each other.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Hara H Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

The Adult for February

Contains Music, Religion and Sex, (I.) by Orford Northcote; Malthus, by Lady Cook; "Love's Coming of Age," by Sagittarius; The Sex Philosophy of Exeter Hall, by W. F. Dunton; The Divine Woman, by William Platt; Two Gifts, by Edward Carpenter; Wonderland, (a poem,) by Amy C. Morant; The Home and the Family, by Robert Braithwaite; Controversial Correspondence William Platt and the Adult. Price, 10 cents. $1 a year.

The Sexual Enslavement of Woman.

BY E. C. WALKER.

American Slavery of Girls; the English Army in India; the Bible and Woman Jehovah and "Godless Governments;" Melancthon, the Bible, and Maternity; Mrs. Packard's Case; Slave Hunting in America in 1857 and in England in 1888; A Statement of Facts Also, Poems by Kernan, Longfellow, and Henderson.

Enforcing Rape by the Legal "Restitution of Marital Rights."

SECOND, AND REVISED, EDITION.

PRICES:—One copy, 3 cents; two copies 5 cents; five copies, 10 cents; copies, 20 cents; fifty copies, 85 cents, one hundred copies, $1.50.

"Loma"—A CITIZEN OF VENUS," by Prof. Wm. Windsor. A story of surpassing interest, largely devoted to Sexologic and Socialogic problems. Like Bellamy in his "Looking Backward," the writer of "Loma" believes in the "state," as a factor in social evolution, but individualists will probably forgive this feature for the sake of the radically revolutionary ideas in regard to popular theories—sexologic, theologic, cosmologic, etc. Substantially printed and artistically bound. Price, post-paid, $1.50. Address this office.

699.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Ruled by the Tomb.

A Discussion of Free Thought and Free Love.

BY ORFORD NORTHCOTE.

"The world for the most part is ruled by the tomb, and the living are tyrannized over by the dead. Old ideas, long after the conditions under which they were produced have passed away, often persist in surviving. Many are disposed to worship the ancient,—to follow the old paths, without inquiring where they lead, and without knowing exactly where they wish to go themselves."—"Marriage and Divorce," R. G. Ingersoll, p. 5.

Price, ten cents. For sale at this office.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 16 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 20 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

The Adult for January—Double Number.

Contains the Second Biennial Proceedings of the Legitimation League. Edited by Oswald Dawson. Picture of the president of the League on the cover. Full page portraits of Lillian Harman, president, George Bedborough secretary, and Louie Bedborough, treasurer of the League.

Contents: 1. The Annual Meeting and Dinner. 2. Friction. 3. Eighteenpence or Half-a-crown? 4. The Play's the Thing. 5. Some Letters, the Constitution and a Speech. 6. The Judgment of Paris. 7. Which Sex Suffers Most? 8. The Physiology of Love. 9. Sexual Education. 10. Spiritual Love. 11. Miss De Cleyre on the League and the Woman Question. 12. The New Idealism. 13. An Autocomistic Marriage. 14. Marriages Made in Russia. 15. Cast off the Shell! 16. The "Firebrand" in the Flames. 17. The New Martyrdom. 18. Letters and Reviews. 19. Free Love and Lesbian Love. 20. Powder Magazines and Lighted Lucifers. 21. Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs. Price, 20 cents. Address this office.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.

This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

The Outcome of Legitimation. By Oswald Dawson. This address was to have appeared in the January "Adult," but the printers of that number placed Bowdler on a mail scale, and refused to print it, alleging that the matter which they did print was "bad enough, but we are printing that and decline to print more." The lecture deals with some problems arising from the practicalization of the theories of free love. Price, 5 cents. For sale at this office.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's excellent translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $2.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by H. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasion; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter IV., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, ten cts.

Wanted: A practical horticulturist, and a scientific vegetarian cook. A free man and a free woman, only, need apply. Address Z., care of Lucifer. 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Personal: Advanced thinker, bachelor, educated, musical, etc., desires acquaintance of a lady of similar views living in or near Indiana, or who visits Indianapolis. Address P. O. Box 176, Indianapolis, Ind.

Books Worth Reading FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .15
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .05
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .05
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .10
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .10
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .05
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .10
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. P. Tinfal. Price 10 cents.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1037, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook sexual liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 10 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "Talk About Anarchist Communism." Now, I and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 1 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Wattles. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobado Barker.
Box 122. San Jose, Cal.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., NO. 9. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, MARCH 2, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE NO. 700.

Salvation by Blood.

BY JONATHAN MAYO CRANE.

The battle of creeds with the bigots it breeds
  Slays all that is best on earth.
The faggot and stake a bonfire make
  For the zealots' murderous mirth.

The cross and the sword of fanatical horde
  Ever go hand in hand,
And woe to the man, and woe to the clan
  That dares the assault to withstand.

In the sign of the cross what reck of the loss
  Of innocent human kind
Is made by the knight in his merciless fight
  For the faith that enslaves the mind.

In the name of the Christ whose blood has sufficed,
  They say, for the whole world's sins,
They continue to slay to hasten the day
  When the era of Love begins.

With pitiless ruth in the name of Truth
  They crucify Truth itself;
While renouncing the world, their banner unfurled
  Are blazoned with Mammon and Pelf.

"All are depraved; oh, come and be saved!
  Ye are wretched and lost," they cry.
"Ye grovel in sin. Your souls to win
  Made the Blessed Lord to die.

"Believe on His name, or die in your shame
  And burn in a lake of fire.
Forsake your lust; in Jesus trust—
  Or we build your funeral pyre.

"Salvation is free and ye must agree
  To enter the Shepherd's fold,
Or thumbscrew and rack your bones shall crack,"
  Is the cry of the churchmen bold

"All vile and abased, with desires unchaste,
  You have wandered away from God.
Turn and repent ere your lives are spent—
  Or feel the avenging rod."

This Gospel of Wrath with its aftermath
  Of heretics' bones and blood
Has riven apart Humanity's heart
  In the name of Humanity's good.

Oh, children of men, why suffer it when
  By rising in Manhood's might
And using your brains you could break the chains
  And put your oppressors to flight?

Come out of the shade Credulity's made!
  Be brave, independent and free.
Let Truth's clear light put Error to flight
  That the eyes which are darkened may see.

Think not ye are vile; no longer revile
  Yourselves as sinful and base;
But understand ye are noble and grand,
  Whatever your color or race.

Stand not in awe of custom or law
  Which your reason tells you is wrong;
To yourselves be true whatever you do,
  And then ye are always strong.

Then Priestcraft's sway shall be swept away
  With all of its cunst effect.
In its place we shall find the unfettered mind
  And the Gospel of Self Respect.

Freethought and Retrogression.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The Secular Union is an organization composed of individuals who affirm that civil and political matters should not be mixed. The purpose of the Union is to secure the complete separation of church and state by the abrogation of every law and the discrediting of every custom which compels one citizen to conform to or to support the dogmas and rites of another citizen. It is perfectly clear, therefore, that if any secular union makes the acceptance of any belief regarding an alleged future life a test of membership it, in effect, is doing precisely the thing it was organized to prevent the state doing. In a word, it is stultifying itself, it is committing logical suicide. This is the unenviable position in which the Oregon Secular Union has placed itself by its rule excluding Spiritualists. It makes belief in a future life a bar to work on its platform for a state in which there shall be no such bars! Was there ever a sillier exhibition of short-sighted intolerance? I wish it distinctly understood that this criticism is not inspired by partisanship; I am not a Spiritualist—in fact, I am at the very antipodes from Spiritualism, but I would rather be the little finger of a sincere Spiritualist who stands for a free platform and unfettered fellowship than the whole body of a thousand Secularists of the Oregon Union type rolled into one.

* * *

"The Torch of Reason," the mouthpiece of the close-communion Oregon Secular Union, says:

> It is amusing to us to see the desperate efforts made by some who claim to be Freethinkers, trying to keep the patronage of both the moral and immoral factions of what has heretofore been called the Freethought cause.

Can it be possible that this means the "Torch's" Chicago brother-in-morals who clamors for the ousting of free lovers from Liberal organizations and at the same time eagerly welcomes them as writers for his magazine that thereby it may be made more interesting and so sell better, and who takes pains to call the attention of said free lovers to the free and unsolicited advertisements he gives their societies? It does not seem possible that the custodians of inherited authoritative goody-goodiness can thus jibe each other. But it may be.

> "There are some [Freethinkers] who systematize their immorality and offer their 'principles' as an excuse for it.—Torch of Reason.

And there are some alleged Freethinkers who systematize their prejudice and intolerance, call the result morality, and offer it to the world as genuine science and Freethought.

> It is certainly time that honest, moral men and women found out that there is Freethought and Freethought; and they should not only find it out, but they should stop supporting that which their best judgment teaches them is evil. It is not necessary, nor is it to be expected, that Freethinkers should agree on everything, but this question of what morality is is a vital one and those having radically opposite ideas on this question never can affiliate, and failure will overtake us every time we try.—Torch of Reason.

I readily admit that "those having radically opposite ideas on this question never can affiliate" in advocacy of their side of it, but there is no good reason why they can not work together for the reforms regarding which they do agree. Nothing but the intolerant narrow-mindedness of the ancestral moralists interferes with the uniting of all Freethinkers in support of the Demands of Liberalism. Marriageists and anti-marriageists can stand on the same platform in defense of Sunday liberty and secular education, and if they do not stand there shoulder to shoulder it will be because the marriageists choose to take themselves off in a huff—we are not going. You gentlemen who are dead sure you alone know what morality is and that we are "immoral" because we can not accept your definitions, might as well make up your minds first as last that Mohammed is coming to the mountain if the two are to be close together, for most certainly the mountain is not going to Mohammed. If you do not like Freethought, if you can not abide its traditions, its bed-rock principle of universal equal liberty, and are not prepared to follow its logic to the uttermost, you can trail your dishonored banner back to the caverns of Authority; the arms of Holy Mother Church are ever open to welcome her returning children; apostates may sit high in her councils and feast royally in their dotage at her board. You talk about "what morality is" as though you had had revelation from the gods. "What morality is" is a matter for history, for science, and for present need and experience to say, and we are as well qualified to interpret the oracles as are the traditionalists, to put our own claim most modestly. You and we are at one in the desire to resist certain encroachments of the church; if you have good sense you will not fly off at a tangent because we are not at one as regards some other questions. The choice for division or union is yours; our course is clearly marked, whatever you do; you can break away, if you do not know any better, but we shall continue to evolve in the Freethought orbit. And if you who are up there in the New Northwest persist in the folly and bigotry which now characterize the Oregon Secular Union it is only a question of a brief time when you will find yourselves confronted by a real Freethought society which will compete with you for the direction of Liberal affairs in that country.

The Oregon State Secular Union stands for the only kind of Freethought that can win and the only kind that can do the world any good when it does win. In fact, it stands for the only real Freethought that there is, for it is neither bound to an orthodox creed nor to the creeds of the other extreme, but its guide is the highest scientific authority of the world and it stands ready and willing to change, adopt, reject and amend in order to be in perfect harmony with truth and right.—Torch of Reason.

Brave words, truly! But they are words only, "sound and fury, signifying nothing." If there were any heart in them we should not find their utterers setting up a creed which must be professed by whoever would enter the sacred portals of their church. "Its guide is the highest scientific authority of the world." Paraphrasing Madame Roland, we may well exclaim, "O Science, what false priests speak in thy name." Not only is it not true that the Oregon Secular Union is not bound to a creed but it is bound to the orthodox moral creed, one of the creeds which its mouthpiece repudiates in terms. Instead of standing "ready and willing to change, adopt, reject and amend in order to be in perfect harmony with truth and right," the Oregon Union positively refuses to admit to membership any one who is pledged by the constitution of his mind to such action, and it is logically bound to incontinently kick out any one of its present adherents who develops this independence and fairness. The profession of scientific dispassionateness by a society of this kind is terribly wearying. Real men of science form themselves into societies for the study of matter and phenomena, and they do not ask intending members whether they are or are not committed in advance of that study to a certain conclusion. It is assumed that they wish to find facts and that they will give those facts due and fair consideration, regardless of any prepossessions they may have. On the contrary, the Oregon Secular Union, supposedly formed to secure justice for all citizens of the state, no matter what the ethical or theological views of any of those citizens, sets up standards of belief and of personal, self-regardful, conduct and declares that whoever does not accept and act in accordance with these standards can not teach from its platforms and in its schools. Instead of waiting, as it falsely says it will, for the progressive revelations of science, it dogmatically asserts that certain questions are forever closed and that those who not accept its dictum are worthy only of the penalty of excommunication, which it proceeds to inflict with all the self-praise, all the arrogance, all the bitterness, all the vindictiveness, and all the implacableness of its spiritual mother, the Roman Catholic Church. For such an organization to vaunt the alleged possession of the open-mindedness of science is at once ludicrous and disgusting. How it can refuse to let Social Radicals and Spiritualists work in its ranks for the religious liberty of men and yet call itself creedless almost passes human comprehension.

The majority may make a mistake, but its decision is the highest standard we have—the best guide that can be found—the best and nearest to an infallible regulator of our actions toward others, and without obedience to this regulator, which the world has been so long in learning to obey, we can have no free men and women.

No, Johnny, that was written neither by a Methodist bishop nor a Covenanter editor; your mistake is a natural one, but you will have to guess again. Its author is the editor of "The Torch of Reason," a paper which some persons suppose is a Freethought journal, and which itself says its kind of Freethought is the "only real Freethought that there is." The "poor fellow"—to use the designation he applies to my friend, Cyrus W. Coolridge—refuses to accept the standard formulated by the Christian majority, while at the same time declaring that it "is the highest standard we have—the best guide that can be found," and "that without obedience to this regulator" "we can have no free men and women." That is a fair example of the consistency of the worshipers of the fetich of majorityism—the standard of the majority is for other persons, never for themselves. In another part of the same editorial, he says:

If, in actions affecting others, your reason leads you to do what is contrary to the reason of the majority of those with whom you associate, and they consider your actions wrong or detrimental to the society, then the majority should decide.

To illustrate: The reason of the abolitionists led them to help escaping slaves. This was "contrary to the reason of the majority," it was an action "affecting others," and the majority thought "it detrimental to the society." In that case, therefore, the majority should have decided (as it did) and its decision should have been respected in letter and in spirit (which it was not). And yet, despite this irreverent, criminal, conduct of the abolitionists, we of today,—the "we" doubtless including even Mr. Hosmer,—look upon the abolitionists as the truly clear-sighted, the really heroic, men and women of that stormy epoch. Again: The reason of the Christian majority leads it to exempt its property from taxation. The reason of Mr. Hosmer leads him to oppose this exemption. As the Christians hold that the abrogation of the exemption laws would be detrimental to society, the editor of the "Torch" should not challenge this almost "infallible regulator," for his expressed disaffection might induce some belligerent Freethinker to refuse to pay his increased tax, and as this would be an act "affecting others," it would be a criminal interference with the majority's right to decide. If the decrees of the majority, from the monad to man, had not been continually evaded or defied, there never would have been a man, there never would have been any organism more complex or thoughtful than a monad. The Oregon Secular Union would have had the entire sea to itself.

Variety Scientifically Considered.

BY ALBERT CHAVANNES.

The interesting article by E. C. Walker in No. 696 of Lucifer, entitled "When Men and Women are and When they are not Varietists," is a praiseworthy attempt to place the discussion of that subject on a scientific basis, in marked contrast to the efforts of other correspondents, who seem to reason more from their feelings and desires. I believe that really useful work can only be done through the scientific method, and that the question of society will eventually have to be scientifically considered, and as a help in that direction I will briefly state what I consider the facts in its relation.

I hold that scientifically we must greatly extend the definition of varietism from that which is now usually accepted. Varietists are now supposed to be only those persons who have intimate sexual relations with more than one person of the other sex, within a short period of time. Scientifically considered, I believe that any person who, during his or her life time, establishes such relations with more than one person is a varietist, and that the term can be applied to those persons who marry the second time, whether the first marriage ended through death or divorce. And I believe the same is true of the degree of relations established, and that the most strict monogamist, who finds pleasure in dancing, driving, or even conversing, with a person of the other sex, besides his or her married partner, if the pleasure is derived entirely or in part from the sex of that person, must scientifically be considered as a varietist.

If what I state here is correct, then it must follow that all persons who have reached the age of puberty are varietists, the difference being one of kind and not of degree, and that there is really no such thing as entire exclusiveness.

What is then this exclusiveness which is the object of so much solicitude from the moralists of the day? It is not a natural force, but it is altogether a social virtue, evolved by society, to meet certain conditions needed for the progress of civilization, and the contest now going on between two opinions, represented in Lucifer by E. C. Walker and Dr. Berrier, is a contest between those who believe that exclusiveness is no longer—if it ever has been—needed for the progress of civilization, and that it is a barrier to the pursuit of individual happiness, and those who believe that exclusiveness still serves a good purpose, and that it tends to the increase of happiness of mankind.

This question, like all others, while helped along by arguments, will finally be decided by practical experience. All that can be said at this time, is that today the whole social fabric of the most developed countries, is based upon exclusiveness, which is one of the props of monogamic marriage, and that if ever varietism becomes the accepted rule of social conduct, it will affect the organization of the social organism, much more than most varietists contemplate. But it is also true that exclusiveness being a social restraint of a natural force, has been privately resented and evaded from the earliest time of its introduction, and that varietism, in some of its many forms, is steadily gaining ground, till today it is practiced to an extent never attained before.

We have in the present contest between exclusiveness and varietism, the same old contest which has been going on for ages between the conservative and the progressive forces of society. The new woman is a varietist of a very marked type, so is the summer girl, and so are all those persons of independent spirit, who think more of the gratification of their desires than of the restraint of society. On the other hand, all persons of timid character, and those who support these old institutions of ours, which are fast outliving their usefulness, support exclusiveness in its resistance to the encroachments of variety.

The trouble in the scientific discussion of this question is the same which for a long time existed in the discussion of religious beliefs. Religionists of all beliefs used to divide the people into saints and sinners, the saints being those who believed as they did, and the sinners those who had other beliefs. Scientific knowledge showed that there was no truth in such a distinction, and it is now well understood by all intelligent people that no such division is possible, for all persons are actuated by the same motives and obey the same natural laws. We have now in the realm of sexual conduct the same attempt at arbitrary division, and authoritative moralists attempt to divide individuals into exclusivists—saints—and varietists—sinners—but scientific investigation shows that no such distinction is possible, for we are by nature all varietists, and besides that the extent of our exclusiveness depends upon what is called "surrounding conditions," and that as in all social virtues, it is mostly influenced by our social education.

The Movement in England.

BY R. B. KERR.

On the evening of Sunday, Feb. 7, we went for the first time to a meeting of the Legitimation League. It was held in the French room of St. James' Hall, while down below in the same building the Rev. John McNeill held forth on the salvation of souls.

We were just in time to get the two last of the 240 chairs, and many who came after us could not gain admittance.

One glance around was enough to convince me that the sex battle is no longer doubtful, so far as England is concerned. It was the most select audience we had ever seen. Every person present belonged to the educated classes. About one-third of the people were women,—chiefly, I think, teachers, journalists, artists and musicians.

The proceedings began with a letter of apology from Richard Le Gallienne, now one of the recognized poets of England, who deeply regretted that he could not be present to take the chair.

The business of the evening was a lecture by George Bedborough. Subject—"How to be Happy Though Married." Mr. Bedborough is a very witty lecturer, who knows how to keep the attention of his audience. If he has any fault, it is that he is a little too humorous; for the public have been so much accustomed to jest about sex, that it is well to show them that there are people who consider the problems of sex as serious as any others.

The lecture was followed by much discussion, in which many well known people joined. The style of the speeches was scholarly, rather than oratorical; but that was perhaps the best style for an audience so intellectual.

There was no rowdy element at all in the meeting. Every one had a fair hearing, and everyone seemed to have come to learn.

After the lecture a case of persecution by some petty magistrates in Yorkshire was mentioned, and it was announced that the League would take steps to deal with the magistrates. In England the officers of the law are glad to leave the League alone; but the League will not leave them alone, and is always ready to worry them.

Everyone is astonished at the ease with which the League has established its position. Other new movements have begun with violent popular opposition, but the League seems to have had plain sailing from the first. Nearly every one we meet has either been to its meetings, or wants to go. No one seems to be violently opposed to it. For many years, the poets and novelists of England have dealt so freely with sex, that all thinking people clearly perceive the existence of a sex question, and are inclined to discuss it.

Much, however, is due to the consummate tact of the Leaguers, and to the fact that they stick exclusively to the sex question. The platform of the League and the columns of the 'Adult" are not open to people who wish to air their views on religion, economics and government; but they are for the exclusive use of those who have good ideas about sex reform.

Such specialization is very characteristic of the English, who can change their views on one subject without having other parts of their faith affected. In a few years, the pulpits of the various churches will be filled with apostles of sex freedom, and, as we now have Christian socialists, so we shall also have lots of Christian free lovers. At first the bishops will frown, but soon they will gracefully give way, and quote old treatises of their own to prove that they knew it all fifty years ago. St. Gladys and St. Louie will be added to the calendar of saints; learned commentators will find new readings to prove that St. Paul was prominent in the free love movement; and Christian apologists will cite the fact as one more irrefragable proof of the divinity of Christ and the inspiration of Scripture.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

PUBLISHED AT 1394 CONGRESS ST., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representative, George Bedborough, 16 John Street, Bedford Row, London, W. C., England.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

THE WAR-CLOUD increases in size and density. Will the working people of the United States allow their falsely called servants to drive them into a national war in order to divert attention from the real causes of the distress and demoralization everywhere now prevailing? We shall see.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION of Spiritualists has just closed a very successful three days' convention in this city. The editor of this paper attended part of the sessions and expected to make some report thereof, as an index of the trend of thought along humanitarian lines, but temporary illness prevented the carrying out of this design.

Condemned, but Not Crushed.

Emil F. Ruedebusch has been found guilty of corrupting the morals of Anthony Comstock's mail bags by depositing "The Old and the New Ideal" in the post office. He writes:

"This was my punishment:

"I. A speech by Judge Seeman.

"II. Imprisonment in the county jail for one day.

"III. A fine of $1,200.

"I did not appeal, because I am thoroughly disgusted with courts, lawyers, etc."

Yet, though the author has suffered, the new ideal is not crushed, and can not be crushed by court decision. Even though the sale of the book may be stopped for the present, nearly two thousand copies are now in circulation, and these the censors cannot touch. The prosecution has given them an added value, in demonstrating how freedom is crushed by the Old, and the vital necessity of the New, Ideal. L. H.

A Criticism Criticised.

We cheerfully publish the following communication from William Platt:

TO THE EDITOR OF LUCIFER: I take advantage of the known fairness of your paper to ask you to insert this emphatic protest against one point raised in your issue of Jan. 26 while criticising my book, "Women, Love and Life."

Your critic's initial error is of a kind unfortunately only too frequent. It is that of assuming that all the words in the mouths of the characters drawn by an artist are expressions of the artist's own opinion. This is absurd on the face of it. Yet no error in art-criticism is more frequent. Every one must have seen extracts quoting as the sentiments of Shakspere almost any saying from any of his creations; including for certain those sententious speeches upon Honor which for dramatic purposes he put into the mouth of that arch-villain Iago! The transference of this bombast from Iago to Shakspere is a poor compliment to the misused bard; and one might have imagined that a grain of common sense would have rendered it impossible.

To return to my own case. Your critic quotes a passage from a story entitled "Love is Blind" that is found on page 40 of the collection entitled "Women, Love and Life." In that story I draw a character—a passionate artist who swears that if his wife deceives him he will kill her. The speech that I put into this artist's mouth when he defends his point of view is quoted in Lucifer just as if the words were written by me as my own sentiments; and the quotation is coupled with complimentary remarks, comparing me to my brother-monogamist, the Sultan of Turkey! This proceeding, I protest, is critically unjustifiable—it would strike at the basis of all artistic character-drawing.

To be quite fair to Lucifer's critic, I will admit that there might logically be held to be a very large affinity between my drawing of a passionate artist, and my own character and opinions. But, having said that much, I must in self-defense point out that the whole course of my story shows how emphatically I contradict the words that have been quoted by Lucifer as my point of view. Positively, the climax of my tale is made by the fact that when the artist does come face to face with his wife's deceit, he prevaricates with his own oath and will face anything rather than carry it out; in this contradiction between his words and his act lies the whole point, purpose and strength of the story; I am utterly at a loss to understand by what mental process your critic could have mistaken the moral that is thus hammered out by no less than the whole tragic action of the piece—the moral that a great mind will sacrifice itself, but not others, to the fervor of the grand ideal.

Sincerely yours,
WILLIAM PLATT.

Perhaps, in my criticism in No. 695, I misapprehended Mr. Platt's meaning. I should be very glad to know that I did. If the words he puts into the mouth of his artist-hero were not, in spirit, so closely related to so many other expressions running through his books, I would feel more inclined to blame my own stupidity than I feel at present. How are we to know the real sentiments of authors if we are not to judge from their apparent sympathy with certain of their creations? They should indicate their own opinions in some way—a la Artemus Ward when he labeled his productions: "This is a goak."

In the case in point, the story is of a musician who was mated with a woman whose love for him grew cold. They were not adapted emotionally or intellectually. She asked him what he would do if she proved "faithless" to him.

"I would wait first to see with my eyes," he replied; "but if I saw with my eyes then I swear to you that as I love you you should die!"

Finally she loved another man; and the despair of the husband is vividly pictured. He heard "voices in her room. . . . . Then he thought of his vow 'If I saw with my eyes,' then took his penknife and smote out those eyes of his, then staggered into the room a bleeding horror crying out 'Gertrude, Gertrude; you shall live, I have seen nothing!"

Mr. Platt says that his moral is that a great mind will sacrifice itself, but not others. Did his musician not sacrifice her when she "asked for reconciliation and was refused;" when she "asked to serve him like a dog, and was refused"?

Authors often claim that such and such an outcome is necessary to the artistic perfection of their work. In real life, there are certainly open to a man who has made a foolish vow, other alternatives than that of mutilating himself. Years ago John Ruskin discovered that his wife loved the artist, Millais. He did not destroy his eyesight when he made this discovery—the world would have been the loser had he done so. He quietly obtained a divorce on one of the very few grounds possible in England, being willing that it should go on record that he was impotent, in order that she might be free; and when she and Millais were married Ruskin stood beside them as their best friend. And Nature has witnessed, in their singularly happy union, and in their lovely children, that Ruskin acted wisely. Instead of ruining three lives he made them happy and useful not alone to themselves but to the world.

If Lucifer's space were not so limited the story would be reproduced. But it is necessary to condense my comments; and other points of difference must be permitted to pass unnoticed. Those interested in the question would do well to buy a copy of "Women, Love, and Life," the book in which the story appears. Mr. Platt deals with social questions in a very interesting and distinctly original style. LILLIAN HARMAN.

A Rationale. No. I.

BY J. MADISON HOOK.

Desires and emotions are the results of molecular activity in brain cells. Though the primary cause of this brain activity is peripheral excitation, we may inherit certain aptitudes or tendencies which are great factors in determining the direction of the activity. The will power, also, depends on heredity and bodily conditions. Conscience, which prompts us to do what is right, as we see it, is a faculty of heredity and education. Human conduct is largely the result of conditions over which the individual has no control. As a matter of fact man is not and never was a "free moral agent." The ever occurring chain of circumstances drives one to a line of conduct undesired and unchosen.

* * *

The only argument, in favor of statutory prohibition, worth serious consideration, is the fact that man is not a "free moral agent." This argument should not be ignored, as it is founded on a fact known to every student of physiological psychology. A friend of mine argues, that every act that has been demonstrated by science to be injurious to mankind should be prohibited by law. Here is where he would draw the line between restraint and freedom. I have been making consent the sole factor in determining invasions of natural rights. I admit the force of the above argument, but the only compromise I have made with it is in the case of children, idiots and insane persons. I made this reservation in my little pamphlet on "Human Rights." I am still compelled to assert that it is a crime to wrong children against the consent of the parents.

* * *

I hold to the idea of paternal responsibility. I do not wish to deprive any woman of the right to assume the whole of it, if she chooses; but claim that mutual or "autonomistic" marriage with equal parental responsibility is not slavery for man or woman, and will be the result of the elimination of all invasive force from our present system. I believe that mutualism in marriage will be conducive to more lasting love unions. I doubt that woman will desire to assume all the responsibility for care of children. To contend for mutual marriage and paternal responsibility is not retrogression as assumed by some reformers.

THE REGENERATION OF TWO.

BY GEORGE EGERTON.*

Love is the supreme factor in the evolution of the world.—Professor Drummond

(Continued from last week.)

The woman in the chair gets slowly up, and goes into her bedroom; there is a delicate smell of violets about it. She takes off her loose gown and begins to dress. She is far above the average height, and as she lifts her rather long, bare arms to reach down a gown, every action is full of grace. She has sloping shoulders and a long deep chest; she looks slight of hips, and yet her frailness is more apparent than real; her muscles show under her delicate skin as she moves. She dresses slowly and stamps her foot impatiently when she lets anything drop out of her hand, which she seems to do often in her nervous irritability. She looks at herself in the long glass with a kind of satisfaction, rubs off a final dab of powder with a soft piece of chamois, lifts up her gown and looks at her feet in the glass, turns slowly round to get a back view, and then gives a pleased nod over her shoulder at her own image.

Quarter of an hour later she is on her way to the landing-stage; for she has decided to go to Bygdo, that prettiest of Christiania surroundings.

The city is almost given over to tourists. A party of Cockney "Cookies" are standing outside Torstrup the jeweller's window. She smiles as she passes them, for they have evidently anticipated a polar temperature. "What guys!" she laughs, hurrying on, for they are making unflattering remarks at the top of their voices on some of the idiosyncrasies of national costume, with a characteristic disregard of the fact that every second Norwegian understands them. She turns with relief to look at a group of pretty girls and students,—town residents, probably. Their fresh laughter touches her in some way; she is affected today by every change in the world about her.

She finds a comfortable seat on the little steamer, and settles down to languid enjoyment of the scene. It is too early for a crowd, and she is aware of a strange feeling, of a presentiment of coming change, as they steam out. The fanciful idea strikes her that all the flags fluttering from the different poles are flying gayly in honor of some special event in her life. The very breeze blowing freshly from the sea seems to whisper of a vague change. The mountains lie blue in the distance, and she watches idly the water drip off the oars of the rowing-boats as they pass,—looks as if they scattered a shoal of little silvern fish at each dip, she thinks. Students' and girls' and children's laughter, and the murmur of voices about her, reach her, without conveying any sense to her; she feels inclined to close her eyes and just sleep.

When they reach Bygdo, she hurries past the tables, the waiters with seidels of beer, and what an Irish acquaintance wittily calls "bread and butter and trimmins," bends round the cove and up to the wood. The witchery of the surroundings begins to affect her. The resinous smell of the pines does her head good. The fir-trees stand sturdily, as if listening to the gracile silver-birches bending their delicate branches in airy persiflage. A wren alights for an instant on a blossom of dwarf honeysuckle, then darts under a tuft of wild thyme. The lace of her parasol throws patterns on the grass, and the quick tramps of horses coming round the bend of the road startles her, and she slips quickly aside. An officer, a civilian, and two ladies, ride by. She recognizes one of them, the young wife of a painter; scandal connects her name with the man at her side. How whitely her teeth gleamed through the crimson curve of her lips as she laughed, thinks the woman, and a story she heard lately about her flashes through her memory. Some way the meeting jarred on her; she wants to get away by herself, away from the memory of town scandals and town people; she almost regrets she did not take a drosche out to the country. She turns down a side path towards the water. She sits down under a tree on the slope. The cove forms a horseshoe to the right; in the centre lies the landing-stage and bathing-house; she can see heads bobbing in the water from where she is seated. To the left the fiord stretches, dotted with islands and boats, and further still she can see a villa, and a flag fluttering from a white staff against a background of pines. Groups of people are scattered about. Two Hallelujah lasses in neat uniform pass her, with Norsk versions of the "War-Cry" under their arms. A soldier, with a hat like a forester's, with the addition of a horse's tail, is chaffing them. A little below her, two lovers are sitting, oblivious of passers-by; his arm is around her waist, and her head is on his shoulder. The expression on his otherwise stupid face disgusts her, and she hurries further round the cove, and seats herself again. She is tired, flushed with the exertion, and she sits watching lazily the dip of the sails, and the midges as they whirl before her against the background of blue sky in ever-recurring giddy circles, always two,—an aerial wooing.

*From "Discords." Copyrighted by Roberts Brothers, Boston, Mass.

There is no one to be seen, yet she is not at ease; she experiences the odd feeling one has sometimes of not being alone, and her heart throbs with quick thuds that seem to dominate over the little whispering, flute-like prattle of the water against the rock. She looks round as if expecting to see eyes peering down through the firs at her back. The conviction grows upon her of the nearness of some one. She has felt eyes on her back before; she felt strange presences, with some sense that lies outside her ordinary senses. She gets up and walks down towards a blue-gray bowlder with a clump of dried bracken next it, to look behind it; and as she reaches it she is stopped by a yawning whine that ends in an unmistakable growl. A dog, genus cur, a rough, yellow-coated dog, crouched on the grass a yard ahead, is looking up at her; she has honest, tawny eyes, and a ragged ear torn in some old fight, and she is studying her attentively. She looks back at her bravely enough, although she draws a quick breath, and the lace on her bodice flutters as her breast heaves. Something else, too, is working in her,—a hypnotized sensation, making her limbs heavy; it isn't fear, it is purely physical. She snaps her fingers, and pats her knee coaxingly, and is answered by a yawn that reassures her; she walks on. This time the growl is only feigned, and she becomes aware of a man lying on the bracken in the hollo below the bowlder. She stops at once, and the blood rushes t her face in a hot flood. She looks down at him, and a kind o wondering, interested look succeeds her surprise. The man at her feet is not a tramp, and there is something in the unconscious helplessness of his attitude that appeals to all that is womanly in her; perhaps it is just the unconsciousness. It reminds her, too, with the thrown-up arm and hand loosely clenched, of a little brother, dead so many years that he is barely a memory. Besides, the fellow's head is striking, and he sleeps with his mouth shut. It isn't given to every man to look beautiful in his sleep, even though he may pass for a handsome chap enough in his waking hours. Faces tell tales in sleep; one's subliminal consciousness is apt to play mean tricks with one's expression. This man's face has a sorrow-worn, spiritualized look, a sternness about the mouth; he is clean-shaven, and his hair is longer than the men of her set wear it, but it is dark and soft and silky. She wonders vaguely what color his eyes are. He looks, she thinks, as if he has gone through some of God's mills, and got hurt in the grinding. She is conscious of a wonderful sudden change in herself; her depression is melting away; she only feels a ridiculous kind of buoyant reaction against it, a sense of rest after disturbance, the quiet after a rain-gust. She hardly knows why she remains standing there, looking down at the sleeping man; she tells herself the proper thing to do is to go. She is about to do so,—not, she recognizes, with some astonishment, without reluctance,—when the dog, perhaps awakened to a sense of having failed somewhat in her duty, protests by catching her dress in her teeth, letting it go, growling and frisking round her. Now, fear is not exactly a part of her nature, but regard for a pretty gown is. She stands still and whispers soothingly to the beast. It has a certain effect. She lets go, but seizes her again every time she takes a step forward. The ludicrous aspect of the matter strikes her, and she laughs softly. She stands still, doggie likewise a little distance away. Finally, the latter lies down, with her forepaws stretched out, keeping her quizzical eyes fixed on the woman. This grows monotonous. She says to herself, "I wonder if I may venture to sit down." She bends slowly, keeping her eyes on the dog; the latter growls softly. She sinks on one knee: it is not an easy manœuvre, encumbered as she is with a parasol and a book; however, she accomplishes it successfully, with one foot under her. Doggie is satisfied with the compromise, so she gets into a better position. She has a side-view of the sleeping man, and she examines him with a woman's attention to details. His clothes are rough blue serge; the unstarched collar of his linen shirt is scrupulously clean; a soft felt hat is lying on the grass near him, and a canvas knapsack. His shoes are worn; one of them is patched. She speculates on his calling,—a painter, a poet, a Bohemian of some sort—likely. A "pillar of the state," a church-warden,—unlikely. Meanwhile, the sun creeps round, and slants through a tree right on to his face. How tired he looks! There is a weary droop about his mouth. She flushes, hesitates, looks at the dog,—she is asleep, with her black snout on her paws. She moves very softly, and contrives, by leaning back, to stand her open sunshade so that it shades his face. Its lace and knots of ribbon flutter and throw fantastic shadows over him, and she laughs, for it reminds her of a furbelowed bassinet. The little dog creeps up to her, gives her wrist a lick, trots down to the water's edge and laps eagerly, comes back, and nestles down at her knee. She takes off her glove and scratches her behind her ears, and rubs her head. "You are a bit of a vagabond, I think," she whispers. There are many old scars, and one ear is split; and when she cocks it, the half of it flaps in a comical way. So she sits, with an unwonted sense of drowsy well-being, the mingled smell of pine-trees and brackish water, the lap and sparkle of the waves that wash gently in the sunshine, the rustle of foliage and the trickle of runlets finding their way to the fiord, act soothingly. She is affectible today, stirred in the depths of her nature in the underlying wholesome woman that is there uncalled to life, for the warp is only external.

How long she sits there she heeds not; a little breeze rises, and a shrill whistle sounds in the distance. She looks at her watch,—almost five o'clock. Chiff, chiff, chuff, chuff, and the steamer by which she has intended to return passes by, with its freight of gladsome people, towards the landing-stage. She is loath to go; it is so good to sit thus bathed in silken air. Besides, she feels as if she is infused with some mystical elixir that is filtering down to the underlying strata of her being. Let chance decide! She unloosens a penknife from her chatelaine, and spins it smartly on a flat stone in the moss beside her. "Points to me, I go!" She catches her breath and sets her teeth in her lip as the silver and pearl glisten as it revolves slower, slower—a-ah! she closes her lids involuntarily—opens them—one little turn more; the point rests fiordwards. She feels inclined to clap her hands. She recalls having experienced precisely the same relief once years ago, when, in a fit of childish passion, she had thrown a stone at a playmate and it just missed her temple. Why should she feel so now? she asks herself. Well, why analyze? She has two hours more until the next steamer. She feels unreasonably glad,—as glad as when a little child, she sat in the meadows and wove daisy-chains, twenty golden years ago. The steamer has left again; and up in the sky above its track two clouds are meeting: now they fuse, and turn into a chariot tipped with silver, and soar upwards. "Why can't," she says softly, "his soul and my soul and the doggie's soul loosen ourselves and float away in soul communion out of the barren loneliness of this old earth here?" The band up in "the umbrella" strikes up the opening bar of a "Huldretanz," a weird, witching thing with a want in it, and someway it brings her back to earth again. She laughs at herself, and pats the dog's head, and says, "No, I wouldn't sail over the clouds if I could; I'd rather be you, doggie, and curl up under the caress of some one's hand."

She considers herself as she sits there: her patent shoes are made by the best man in London; her muslin gown with all its apparent simplicity, is fitted by Parisinn fingers; and her hat is an inspiration of blossoms and lace from the Rue de la Paix. Her gloves are delicate to sight and smell and touch; and yet she would give all she possesses for one hour's real happiness.

Suddenly the quiet is broken; a troop of boys and girls playing "hide-and-seek" come rushing round the slope, and one of them holds a handful of pine-cones. She throws them with uncertain aim at the lad following her, and darts up through the trees with a giggling scream; the tan cones pelter with a rattle on to the sunshade and over the sleeper. He wakes, not drowsily, but all at once wide-awake, with eyes black on awakening, gray as the pupils close with the light, steel-gray as a lake without sunlight.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

M. L. Studebaker, Fort Hunter, Pa.:—I enclose twenty cents; send "Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs." If it were not for the bigotry of the people here I might get some subscribers, but the masses don't want the truth. They don't like the priests but I can't make them understand the Bible is only a mass of heathen literature, etc., but while the feeling is strong against priests, and what they call the abuse of government they are afraid they will be murdered in the absence of government.

H—— S. S——, London, Ky.:—I see you offer to give a thirteen weeks trial subscription and twenty-five cents' worth of literature, all for twenty-five cents. I enclose sixty cents and a list of the literature I want at present. Mrs. Josephine K. Henry, my friend, sent me a copy of the paper. I am very much interested in the subject of sexology. I am fully convinced of the unrighteousness and injustice of the present enslavement of women by laws of church, state and society. Am not just decided what is the best thing to be done, but I do want to learn. The gratitude of all women is due to you for the noble blow you are striking for the emancipation of their sex, and I tender mine with unstinted measure.

J. A. Wilson, Phila., Pa.:—A large and appreciative audience filled the hall of the Ladies' Liberal League last evening to hear Emma Goldman's address on "The New Woman." Miss Goldman does not believe in a new woman but rather in an emancipated woman freed from the shackles of law, church and society; the equal, and the equal only, of man. She pictured the false education of the sex taught from infancy. That her mission was to marry, and thus have a claim for support on a man, and yet totally unfit, because of lack of knowledge of her sexual functions and rights, to become a mother. The duty of a wife is treated as a subject too impure and immoral to be even hinted at before a priest or magistrate has handed her over, it may be, to some reformed rake for a husband. Instead of aping man as is the fashion of the would-be new woman Miss Goldman contends that both sexes are equal even under present social and economic conditions, and that a new man must first be had if he is to be worthy of imitation by the other sex. As at present conditioned no man is worthy of the labor bestowed on him by woman, who, in her household cares spends, on the average, more hours of toil than does the man, and who at a correct financial valuation on her services as housekeeper, cook and drudge, as well as nurse and trainer of her family, never can be repaid. She does not believe in angels, either masculine or feminine on earth. With most men woman is an angel before marriage and a devil after marriage. The whole address was a masterly arraignment of the double standard of morality of the sexes, and was listened to with close attention. A number of speakers took exception, in ten minutes addresses, to some of her points, but in her rejoinder Miss Goldman showed herself fully capable of upholding her end of the argument, and possessed of the courage to announce boldly and plainly her views and opinions on any given subject. She delivers several other addresses here before starting further west. Those who miss hearing her miss a treat.

Sophie M. Rivers, San Jose, Calif.:—Enclosed find fifty cents for three months trial subscription and for the books named. I am very much delighted with your dear paper, only I wish you had a different title. I am sure the paper, with a smoother name, would work its way into more families. "Lucifer" is so startling—not a suitable heading for a paper for a lady to read. We must of necessity be careful what the world thinks of us, so long as we have to make our own living.

[The objection to the name Lucifer, urged by Mrs. Rivers, is an old one, and has been many times answered at length in these columns. It is true that the name chosen to represent the weekly paper devoted mainly to emancipation of woman from sex-slavery is "startling" to the average reader. Most people have been told, from early youth, that Lucifer means the "devil," and to the average mind the word devil is the personification of all that is bad, wicked, sinful and destructive to human happiness, "in this world and in the next." That the name of our paper repels many people who would otherwise become readers and helpers is doubtless true. But there is another side to the question. The word Lucifer challenges attention. Women as well as men are everywhere learning to think for themselves, and one of the first things that an independent thinker learns is that his theological teachers are not to be trusted. That they deliberately teach what they know to be false, in order that they may obtain and retain power over the people. (I speak of the priestly hierarchy as a class, as organizations, rather than as individuals.) A very conspicuous example of their false teaching is the perversion of the meaning of the word Lucifer. This name, as all scholars know, belongs to astronomy, and not to theology. It means "light-bringing," and, very naturally, was anciently synonymous with "Morning Star." And so it has continued to mean, in the minds of all except the ignorant and superstitious priesthood and those who pin their faith to priestly dogmas. But now that modern science, with her "starry eyes," has shown the fallacy of the old myths and fables even the clergy are getting ashamed of their own perversions, as witness the rebuke administered by the Biblical Commentator Henderson—See Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, edition 1886, page 792, under the head "Lucifer":

"The application of this passage [in Isaiah—'How art thou fall'en from heaven, Lucifer, son of the morning,' etc.] to Satan and to the fall of the apostate angels is one of those gross perversions of sacred writ which so extensively obtain, and which are to be traced to a proneness to seek for more in a given passage than it really contains—a disposition to be influenced by sound rather than sense, and an implicit faith in received interpretations."

The worst of all the enemies to woman's emancipation is priestly domination, and until woman herself finds out this fact but little can be done for her deliverance. The history of the word Lucifer is an excellent educator to show how utterly untrustworthy are the theologic guides upon whom woman has been taught to depend as her best friends. M. H.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 50 cents. Address Moses Harman, 1304 Congress st., Chicago.

The Adult for February

Contains Music, Religion and Sex. (1.) by Orford Northcote; Malthus, by Lady Cook; "Love's Coming of Age," by Sagittarius; The Sex Philosophy of Exeter Hall, by W. F. Dunton; The Divine Woman, by William Platt; Two Gifts, by Edward Carpenter; Wonderland, (a poem,) by Amy C. Morant; The Home and the Family, by Robert Braithwaite; Controversial Correspondence Wbiam Platt and the Adult. Price, 10 cents. $1 a year.

LOVE, MARRIAGE, AND DIVORCE:

And the Sovereignty of the Individual.

A Discussion between Henry James, Horace Greecy, and Stephen Pearl Andrews. There are here included the final replies of Mr. Andrews, refused by the New York Tribune, and a subsequent discussion, occurring twenty years later, between Mr. James and Mr. Andrews.

"The great lesson for the world to learn is 'that human beings do not need to be taken care of. What they do need is such conditions of justice and freedom and friendly co-operation that they can take care of themselves. Provided for by another, and subject to his will as the return tribute, they pine, and sicken, and die. This is true equality of women as of men: as true of wives as it is of vassals or serfs. Our whole existing marital system is the house of bondage and the slaughter-house of the female sex. Whether its evils are inherent or incidental, whether they belong to the essence or the administration of the institution, whether they are remediable without or only by means of revolution, are the questions that now have to be discussed."

Price 35 cents. Address Lucifer, 1304 W. Congress Street, Chicago

700.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Ruled by the Tomb.

A Discussion of Free Thought and Free Love.

BY ORFORD NORTHCOTE.

"The world for the most part is ruled by the tomb, and the living are tyrannized over by the dead. Old ideas, long after the conditions under which they were produced have passed away, often persist in surviving. Many are disposed to worship the ancient,—to follow the old paths, without inquiring where they lead, and without knowing exactly where they wish to go themselves."—"Marriage and Divorce," R. G. Ingersoll, p. 5.

Price, ten cents. For sale at this office.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 16 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 20 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

The Adult for January—Double Number.

Contains the Second Biennial Proceedings of the Legitimation League. Edited by Oswald Dawson. Picture of the president of the League on the cover. Full page portraits of Lillian Harman, president, George Bedborough secretary, and Louie Bedborough, treasurer of the League.

Contents: 1. The Annual Meeting and Dinner. 2. Friction. 3. Eighteenpence or Half-a-crown? 4. The Play's the Thing. 5. Some Letters, the Constitution and a Speech. 6. The Judgment of Paris. 7. Which Sex Suffers Most? 8. The Physiology of Love. 9. Sexual Education. 10. Spiritual Love. 11. Miss De Cleyre on the League and the Woman Question. 12. The New Idealism. 13. An Autonomistic Marriage. 14. Marriages Made in Russia. 15. Cast off the Shell! 16. The "Firebrand" in the Flames. 17. The New Martyrdom. 18. Letters and Reviews. 19. Free Love and Lesbian Love. 20. Powder Magazines and Lighted Lucifers. 21. Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs. Price, 20 cents. Address this office.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.
This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

The Outcome of Legitimation. By Oswald Dawson. This address was to have appeared in the January "Adult," but the printers of that number played Bowdler on a small scale, and refused to print it, alleging that the matter which they did print was "bad enough, but we are printing that and decline to print more." The lecture deals with some problems arising from the practicalization of the theories of free love. Price, 5 cents. For sale at this office.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasion; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter V., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, ten cts.

Wanted: A practical horticulturist, and a scientific vegetarian cook. A free man and a free woman, only, need apply. Address Z., care of Lucifer, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Personal: Advanced thinker, bachelor, educated, musical, etc., desires acquaintance of a lady of similar views living in or near Indiana, or who visits Indianapolis. Address P. O. Box 778, Indianapolis, Ind.

Books Worth Reading, FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
Vitae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .05
The Right Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .10
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .05
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .05
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie P. White, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address
M. HARMAN, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 75 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 121 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook sexual liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 10 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "Talk About Anarchist Communism," Nos. 1 and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 1 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 180 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.
Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
Box 132. San Jose, Cal.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 10. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, MARCH 9, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 701.

Homes for the Homeless.

Homes for the homeless!
Our prayers still arise!
Justice is faithful,
And truth never dies.
Roses for nettles,
And plenty for dearth;
Homes for the homeless,
On Nature's free earth.

Homes for the orphan—
The widow forlorn;
Homes for the exile—
Where'er he was born.
Give us, O country!
Our right to the soil;
Earth shall be gladsome
With generous toil.

Homes for the homeless
Who famish for bread—
Earth for the living,
And not for the dead.
Give us our birthright,
O tyrannous god!
The land is our charter—
It shall not be sold.

—Selected.

Nudity and Purity.

BY CYRUS W. COOLRIDGE.

"Daniluich, I axed her about them actions of theirn. Says I, 'Do you live with your old man?' She laughed. 'Why, yes, says she, 'of course I do.' 'Then,' says I, 'what makes you act as you do? You never see him without his clo'es on, as though you wan't his wife.' And says she 'It's because I don't want him to see me in dishabilly, so as to keep love in the house and git rid of quarrels.'"—Tchernyshevsky's "What is to be Done?"

Tchernyshevsky, the Russian apostle of sex freedom, was not entirely free from prejudice, if the above quotation from his famous novel expresses his own views. Why did he make Lopouschoff and Vera Pavlovna "act as they did," if he was not under the impression that men and women who see each other in "Nature's garb" cannot love and respect each other? But is it true that love is a matter of clothing? Is it true that the face only is fit to be seen? With due respect to those who think that clothes make the man, I wish to say that the man who cannot love and respect a woman in a state of nudity is not a real man, but a poor apology of a man.

It is claimed by Mrs. Grundy that nudity is immodest, that it tends to excite the "base" passions of man, etc. Well, it may be true that the majority of men cannot stand the sight of a nude body, but does it prove that a nude body is in itself indecent? If men and women have perverted minds, it is perhaps not as much the fault of nature as that of our false education. What can you expect of a man to whom the female body is a terra incognita? He may naturally be a man of pure mind, but he cannot help wishing to know how the female body looks, and if he cannot satisfy his curiosity, he may in the course of time become a sex maniac. There is no reason why sex should be kept a secret; there is no reason why men and women should be ashamed of their bodies. Speaking for myself, I am of the opinion that nudity, far from being indecent, is the very essence of purity and refinement, and that the really pure man is not he who protects his purity by the aid of rags, but he who can see and touch every part of the human body, the female as well as the male, and keep his mind pure.

Let us get rid of Mrs. Grundy's notions of purity; let us understand that man consists of flesh, bone and blood, not of rags, and that the sex organs are in themselves no more "vile" or "nasty" than are other parts of the body; let us teach our children to hold the body in esteem; let us tell them the truth about the uses of the various organs of the body. Above all, let us know that if we want our children to be pure, we must commence with ourselves. Let us then learn to mingle in nudity and purity; let us get accustomed to see each other in a state of nature; let us impress upon our minds the truth that free love does not mean free indulgence in the sex act at every opportunity, that men and women can love and caress each other and yet keep themselves under perfect control and that if we desire to indulge in the sex act, we should be ready to meet and welcome the consequences. Let us do all this and the most of sex abuses will disappear.

Plans to Practicalize "Hilda's Home."

[Believing that the times are ripe, or rapidly ripening for the practicalization of such homes, such co-operative homes, as that outlined in the story "Hilda's Home," and in the book, "Cityless and Countryless World," and in other similar publications, a place is freely given to the following correspondence. With the writer of the first letter I have been acquainted, personally and by correspondence for several years, and believe him to be a man upon whose word all may rely. With Mr. Jameson I have no personal acquaintance, but have no reason to doubt his reliability. As will be seen he refers all interested to the governor of Washington, and to the cashier of a bank in Seattle, for his "reliability." M. H.]

Mr. Isaac Jameson, Brinnon, Wash.: DEAR SIR: Your letter in Lucifer of 1st inst. interests me, and your suggestion that a truly liberal community be founded in Washington has my unqualified approval, and I will give the project my support if it assumes a definite practical form.

Rosa Graul furnishes an ideal, and inspiration as well, in "Hilda's Home." I do not anticipate that an "Owen Hunter" can be found to endow so munificently our real practical home as was the case in Rosa's ideal, but I do believe her other characters exist in the real world around us. If we can succeed in assembling a goodly number of them in a community in such a place as you describe we will have accomplished much, and will have laid the foundation for a home, or perhaps many homes in which all of us can enjoy a much larger measure of freedom than is possible for us in our present isolation. I believe the readers of Lucifer contain in their ranks the very salt of the earth; the most liberal constituency, as a whole, that can be found in the world. Most of them that I have met really believe in, and would gladly practicalize the law of equal freedom. If gradually we can bring together a community of Lucifer readers we can leaven a very large lump of "Religion, Rascality and Respectability." Our light can be made to illuminate a large neighborhood. Enlightened co-operation will give us wealth—and the possession of wealth will enable us to enjoy a wider freedom, and shed more and ever more light into the surrounding darkness.

I have long desired to become a member of such a community. By bitter experience I am impelled to reverse the order in which you range the powers of darkness, and to write them instead—"Grundy," "Government" and "God"—these three, and the meanest of these is "Grundy." I have found that God can be placated, Government very largely evaded, or, as a nuisance, abated, but Grundy is omnipresent, omniscient, (in hunting out your private affairs), and almost omnipotent.

Now to the practical.—I am willing to make financial sacrifices, quit present business, and move to the Pacific Coast if by so doing I can live in a liberal neighborhood, and at the same time be able to make an honest living. I have investigated many Co-operative Colonies, helped in organization of two, and have been a member and victim of one—the ill-fated Topolobampo Colony. Despite all the failures of colony efforts I have lost none of my faith in co-operation. In the beginning, however, care must be exercised in the admission of members. I would suggest in our Lucifer Colony the principal requirement of the applicant shall be that she or he is a reader of Lucifer, and believes in equal freedom, and is willing to try to live up to that ideal. A community of such people can co-operate and will succeed socially and financially if they can secure control of natural resources with which to build. You are favorably situated in this respect I believe. I have lived in California and in Oregon, but am not acquainted with the "Sound Country." Will you please inform me at what price good improved and also unimproved agricultural land can be bought for per acre in your section. Also cost of timber land, that is accessible, per acre, or stumpage per thousand. What is the population of Brinnon? How far are you from a good harbor? How far from mineral country? What are transportation facilities, and where market for produce. Can lumbering, salmon-fishing and canning, and agriculture be made to return a living and a surplus for permanent improvements? Will horticulture pay? What of temperature and rainfall? I assume that irrigation is not needed. Is it a healthy locality? What is average labor, cost of clearing unimproved land and getting it ready for cultivation?

How many Luciferean Liberals have you in your neighborhood as a nucleus for our association? I am not sure that it is either wise or necessary to form a legally organized association in the beginning of such an enterprise. I would rather simply show up the advantages and resources of the section, and induce liberals to come there in large numbers and locate on individual holdings and in individual homes. Once such a neighborhood is formed and we become acquainted with each other we will voluntarily and naturally form ourselves into mutually helpful and interdependent co-operative groups. As we become known abroad through Lucifer and such other liberal publications as will advertise us, and friends are assured of the financial success that can be achieved, our community will become the Mecca to which will come hundreds of desirable broad-minded liberal friends. I am satisfied there are thousands of people in these states both willing and able and also desirous to make a home among genuine freethinkers and actors. And hundreds of them, like myself, are willing to sacrifice present business to attain this much desired condition. As it is now, in outside barbarism, we are forced to live in the crowded cities to be permitted by Madame Grundy to enjoy any liberty of action whatever. To many of us it would be delightful to enjoy the pleasure of rural life with most of the advantages of the city, and at the same time by force of numbers, intelligence and material prosperity be able to ignore Grundy, honor God, (as Good,) and largely "stand off" Government; defy the priest, scorn the politician and shock the prude so hard that the reaction will precipitate a little common sense.

I shall be very much pleased to hear from you. I have known Moses Harman personally several years and refer you to him if you desire to inquire about me. With best wishes I remain, my dear sir, very truly yours,

W. A. WOTHERSPOON.

P. O. Box 920, Denver, Colo.

REPLY.

Partly in response to the questions of Mr. Wotherspoon, and partly to answer other inquirers, Mr. Jameson writes a long letter—too long for insertion entire, but the main points thereof are as follow:

DEAR LUCIFER: As you have been so kind as to publish to the world my proposition to plant a miniature "Hilda's Home," (or Lucifer Colony) on the shores of Puget Sound, I will come once more to see if you will help me to answer the many correspondents that said proposition, in Lucifer 687, has brought me.

I have no time to answer all these separately, so will ask you to print Comrade Wotherspoon's letter and my answer, and will ask all who have written me for information to accept this as reply to their questions.

First, then: We want to build a permanent home. We don't want to run off after any more Topolobampo-Sinaloa Investments, Credit Fonciers, "L. Cs.," "T. Cs.," etc., etc., as you and I have done. For, though my zeal, like yours, is unabated my experience tends to make me more careful in future moves. Then, on the other hand, I don't want to deceive any body else, hence, would suggest to all who wish to help found such a colony on these shores, who can do so without too much sacrifice, that they come and see us and see the locality for themselves.

I have a homestead of fifty acres, on which, I can "prove up" any time during next two years. It is mostly upland, with more or less stone on it. It is good grass and fruit land, and when we get a little rain in June und July it brings fine potatoes and other vegetables. We have about ninety rods of water front.

We are located on the west side of Hood's Canal, forty miles south of Port Townsand, and sixty miles from Seattle, by steamer, which makes three round trips a week, landing at our front once every day except Monday. We are one and one-half miles from the best harbor I know of on Puget Sound; in fact, I never saw a finer harbor, and I've sailed in both hemispheres.

Now, in regard to our colony: I propose, in order to make all parties who join it, secure in their rights, to divide up into lots, of a few acres each, and sell to members at the current price, assisting each family to erect a comfortable house of modest dimensions thereon, according to available means; also, to build a boarding and lodging house for all single members, or others, who might prefer living in that way.

But before going farther I will say that we want to organize a branch of the "Labor Exchange" as soon as possible, in order to use labor checks to make up for the deficiency in our circulating medium. We should do most of our business among ourselves with "labor checks," giving them in exchange for cash invested, or, any goods or chattels turned in, or, labor performed, by members. We will need a store to supply members, also to supply the public, receiving cash or barter for goods; the cash we will need to buy outside, pay freights, etc.

As soon as we can get means enough, we must establish some kind of manufacturing, for the employment of members. But, in my estimation, one of the first conditions to insure success, is to keep out every appearance of superstition,—have no gods to interfere with perfect freedom,—equal freedom; that is, the inalienable right of each to do whatsoever he or she chooses to do, that does not interfere with the like right of another.

I think we all—readers and patrons of Lucifer—are fully aware that only by excluding all gods, especially Grundy—also Ego, (self-worship or jealousy) can we hope to succeed. So, we want first to get a few true blue comrades, of both sexes, together in a co-operative venture as above described; then we can develop closer unions as we become better acquainted, in accord with the above self-evident truth, or axiom of equal freedom.

I would not advise any one to leave a good business in which there is a fair living in such times as these, until we get established permanently. But if any of our comrades of Lucifer's Circle feel sufficient interest in our proposition and have any means to spare, that they feel willing to invest in a home where any meritorious person, though ever so poor, may find a shelter from "man's inhumanity to man"—and to woman—a home in the fullest sense of the term, wherein they can earn and enjoy all of the comforts, if not the luxuries, of life, we would be glad to hear from them. We know that it will take a big dowry, or a great many small ones, and also much time and labor added, to intelligent, patient, persevering self-denial to do what we are proposing to do. So we should begin without delay in order to enjoy it in our day and generation.

And now, friends all. I am a stranger to you, personally. Although we are all members of our great and growing Lucifer Circle, and ought to be able to trust each other, our little savings have cost too much sweat and blood, and are too precious to part with lightly. So, as it would not be good business to entrust me with your hard earned money, in these days of rauds and swindles, without some satisfactory evidence of my integrity, I will refer you to our governor, John R. Rogers, Olympia, Wash., my old-time neighbor, both in Kansas and in this state. He and I were Brother Knights of Labor. Any one writing to him, enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope, asking about my honesty and integrity will probably get a satisfactory reply. I can also give, as reference, F. R. Van Tuyl, cashier Dexter Horton's Bank, Seattle, Wash., who will vouch for my reliability.

I will now proceed to answer the questions asked by Comrade Wotherspoon, and this will cover most questions asked by other comrades.

First. Improved bottom land. I don't know any for sale. Think it would approximate one hundred dollars per acre. Second. Unimproved bottom land—fifteen to twenty-five dollars per acre. Ditto upland, five to ten dollars. Third. Stumpage—fifty to seventy-five cents per thousand, for cedar and fir. Fourth. Population of Brinnon will not exceed two hundred; being a settlement of ranchers. There are three stores of general merchantise; one paper, "The Olympic Miner." Some few mining claims are being developed near by. One logging camp here, and a few more not far distant. Fifth. Harbor one and one-half miles distant. Sixth. Mineral country. We are on the east edge of the Olympics, which are so full of mineral that the government surveyors have to use a solar transit. These mountains have been full of prospectors the past year, who have struck numerous good silver, gold and copper quartz leads. Hundreds of claims have been located, but as no placer has been struck yet the recent Alaska and Klondike developements have knocked our mining interests in the head for a few years at least; the golden calf devotees having flown northward on the track of the wild geese. Seventh. Transportation—by steamer three times a week to Seattle, which is our principal market; yet there are several considerable cities on the sound.

Eighth. Will lumbering, etc., etc., pay? Yes, if we can use "labor checks" to expand our currency, in order to reach those who need our product but have no money to buy with. Then our market would be with the Eastern Washington farmers; or, wherever a live labor exchange exists. Ninth. Will horticulture pay? Yes; that is one of the best kinds of business when we get well started at it. This is one of the best countries I ever saw for berries, both wild and tame, and I've traveled in thirty states.

Tenth. Temperature and rainfall? Have never seen it at zero. Sixteen above is the lowest I've seen it on this coast. Following is a table showing highest and lowest temperature at 8 A. M. and 3 P. M., number of frosts, etc., each month of last year. [Table omitted.] Seventy-two inches rainfall during the year. There were five inches snow, which melted, was measured as rain. Upland sometimes needs a little irrigation in summer, but we did not need it last year.

Eleventh. Yes; this is quite a healthy climate. Twelfth. Average labor—one dollar and fifty cents per day, without board. Thirteenth. Cost of clearing—heavy fir land, timber, stumps and stones, about two hundred dollars per acre; but there is some first class bottom land, timbered with alder, soft maple, vine maple, etc., which may be cleared for twenty-five dollars to fifty dollars per acre, and the stumps will rot in a few years. Fourteenth. How many Luciferian Liberals—well, our family numbers six, all Freethinkers, though I am the most radical of all. We have many liberal friends in the country round about, and a few social radicals who are anxious to help build a free colony, with God, Government and Grundy left out.

We had for guests, a couple of weeks ago, Brother and Sister Dow, who were on their way from Indian Territory, having joined "Equality Colony," a branch of the Co-operative Commonwealth, now starting at Edison, Wash. They are staunch liberals. Brother Dow is a grand nephew of old Lorenzo Dow, and appears to possess a good deal of his uncle's enthusiasm, though it doesn't run to God as his did. I have a letter from them since they arrived at the colony saying they like the situation, and prospect better than they had expected. There were one hundred members there when they arrived; the finest set of people they ever met; altogether I feel warranted in predicting success for their colony if all are as good stuff as are Comrades Dow. I am glad to learn that colonies are springing up all over the country.

I now propose to start two funds. The first I will call the "Home" fund. All comrades who have from time to time a little spare change that they wish to invest in our Lucifer Home, and feel willing to intrust it to our care, will please send it any time they feel they can do so without discommoding themselves. All donations to this fund will be used to make permanent improvements on our homestead, such as clearing and fencing, sowing meadows, planting fruit trees, berries, etc., and in building additions to house, barn and other buildings that will be needed from time to time. Also to establish some kind of manufacturing industries for the employment of our members.

The second I will call the Schooner fund, which is to enable us to complete our boat, if possible, in time to catch the spring rush to Alaska. We have means to build the hull, but will need three hundred dollars to rig and fit her out. All who invest in this latter fund will be entitled to their share, pro rata, of the vessel's net earnings.

Any comrade having two, five, or ten dollars, or any larger amount to invest in this enterprise, please write soon for conditions, etc., stating the amount you wish to invest in the schooner fund.

All who invest in the Home fund will have the amount credited on their membership fee, which fee will be determined, as soon as we get properly organized, which, in turn, will be greatly expedited by sending in the donations, or rather, investments, as a guarantee of their aid in our home enterprise and to encourage us to push the work forward. Be sure to state which fund you wish to invest in. Our schooner is to be forty feet long by fourteen feet beam by five to six feet deep. Will be about fifteen tons.

We are busy as bees on our shop, which will be completed this week. We have our model carved out and will be ready to draft our boat next week. I will report progress from time to time on our colony, and, also on the boat. Will also publish all amounts received on either project. I furthermore propose to devote five per cent of all money received on the Home fund,

(Concluded on page 77.)

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

PUBLISHED AT 1394 CONGRESS ST., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representative, George Bedborough, 16 John Street, Bedford Row, London, W. C., England.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER's specialty is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

WORD has reached us from Minneapolis that LeRoy Berrier has again been arrested "for sending obscene matter through the mails," and that he was released on giving bail in the sum of five hundred dollars. But few particulars are yet given. Hope to get more before our next issue goes to press.

MUCH of the space of this issue of Lucifer is taken up with correspondence relating to a proposed colony in Washington in what is known as the "Sound Country." Notwithstanding the failure, in part or in whole, of most ventures of this kind there are probably more people now looking for suitable locations for experimenting in this way than ever before. Keeping in mind and profiting by the failures of the past there seems no good reason why this new venture should not be crowned with complete success. The time and the place are alike propitious.

The Family and the Nation.

That home life, and especially prenatal home life, has more to do with the building of human character than has any other condition or factor, will probably not be seriously questioned by the intelligent observer of human life, or of human affairs.

Therefore, it would seem reasonable that to make human life better, to make existence on our planet more enjoyable, more really worth having, it would seem that the first thing to do is to make the home-life better, the family life better, than it now is.

To make the home life better we must first ascertain what it is that is now wrong—what it is that is lacking, in order to make home influences what they should be, to secure the highest and best development of individual character.

To judge of the merits or demerits of things—of persons or of institutions—it is only necessary that we observe the results of the working—the fruits, of such persons or such institutions. "By their fruits ye shall know them," is a true saying, no matter to whom the saying is attributed. What then are the fruits of our modern home-life? Let the present political, the religious, the economic or the industrial conditions of the people in this country and in Europe give answer.

Home life means family life. All students of sociology admit that the family is the unit of the state or nation; that the ethics, the morals, of the state, the nation, will be but the reflex of the ethics, the morals, of the family. What then do we find as the fruits of family life, of home life, as incarnated in the state and nation? Do we find the state to be the embodiment, the personification, of justice, of fairness, of generosity, of brotherly love; of helpful sympathy with and for the unfortunate and the suffering? Do we here find the ethics of humanity, or of savagery?

For answer to these questions, read the daily papers.

For answer, look into the faces of the great masses of the working people of this country and of Europe, and more especially in the great cities.

For answer, compare the splendor and extravagance of "good society," with the squalor, the pinching poverty of the poor.

For answer, visit the prisons, the reformatories, the asylums, the hospitals, etc., etc., where justice and charity are supposed to be administered to the erring, to the insane, or to those who have hopelessly failed, or fallen, in the race of life, and who yet cannot die, or who will not commit suicide.

For answer, observe the legislators and the judiciary of this country,—honors and privileges for those who have, and robbery and death for those who have not.

For answer, observe the steady increase in the salaries and perquisites of public servants, or of those who do little real work, and compare these with the perpetual reduction in the meager pay of those who do the really hard work, all the really useful labor of the social hive.

For answer, observe how eagerly the news is scanned that tells of probable war with Spain, and how ready are the great masses of workingmen, employed or unemployed, to begin the work of killing their fellow-workers of a different race or nation—all in the name of "patriotism"; all for the "honor of the flag"—all for "God and native land!"

That most of the ills that curse our social life, our institutional life, are the legitimate and necessary outgrowth of defects in our family life, our home life, is, as some of us think, a demonstrable proposition in ethics, and hence the prominence given to this part of educational work, in the columns of Lucifer the Light-Bearer.

Some Interesting Books.

The close relation between religious and sexual emotions has been noted by many writers, especially those who have written concerning different phases of insanity. In fact some psychologists assert that the preponderance of women in churches is accounted for by the fact that girls are taught to suppress their sexual desires and that the emotions thus suppressed find expression in religious enthusiasm. An interesting book on this phase of psychology has been written by James Weir, Jr., M. D. While dealing with the problem in a thorough and scientific manner, the language used is plain and as intelligible to the layman as to the physician. "Religion and Lust" is the title of the book. Bound in cloth, 338 pages. Price, $2. Address Z. T. Lorrey, P. O. Box 104, Owensboro, Ky., or Lucifer office.

* * *

Following are a few excerpts from the chapter on "Marriage and Divorce," in Elizabeth Cady Stanton's latest book entitled "Eighty Years and More":

"As woman is the most important factor in the marriage relation, her enfranchisement is the primal step in deciding the basis of family life.

"The first step toward making the ideal the real, is to educate our sons and daughters into the most exalted ideas of the sacredness of married life and the responsibilities of parenthood. I would have them give at least as much thought to the creation of an immortal being as the artist gives to his landscape or statue.

"It is folly to talk of the sacredness of marriage and maternity while the wife is practically regarded as an inferior, a subject, a slave. Having decided that companionship and conscientious parenthood are the only true grounds for marriage, if the relation brings out the worst characteristics of each party, or if the home atmosphere is unwholesome for children, is not the very raison d'etre of the union wanting and the marriage practically annulled? It cannot be called a holy relation,—no, nor a desirable one,—when love and mutual respect are wanting.

"The lack of sympathy and content in the parents indicate radical physical unsuitability which results in badly organized offspring. If, then, the real object of marriage is defeated, it is for the interest of the state, as well as the individual concerned, to see that all such pernicious unions be legally dissolved.

"The question of divorce, like marriage, should be settled, as to its most sacred relations, by the parties themselves; neither the state nor the church having any right to meddle therein. As to property and children, it must be viewed and regulated as a civil contract."

* * *

BOOKS RECEIVED.

"Religion and Lust, or The Psychical Correlation of Religious Emotion and Sexual Desire," by James Weir, Jr., M. D. 338 pages. Cloth, $2. Z. T. Lorrey, Owensboro, Ky.

"Eighty Years and More," Reminiscences of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, cloth, 468 pages. European Publishing Company, 35 Wall St., New York.

"Love Triumphant," by William Platt, cloth, 222 pages. Nine'y cents. Charles Hirsch, publisher, London, Eng. Order from this office.

"The Flaming Meteor," poems by Will Hubbard-Kernan, cloth, 270 pages. Charles H. Kerr & Co., publishers, 175 Dearborn St., Chicago.

Plans to Practicalize "Hilda's Home."

(Continued from page 75.)

to the assistance of the publication of Lucifer. What do you all say to that?

Now comrades, I have stretched this letter out fully twice as long as I intended when I began, but I don't see where I can abbreviate it. It will fill three columns of Lucifer; but if the editor will insert it as early as possible, it will be of great help to our colony proposition. I wish to say before closing, that I was lately offered, for $350, relinquishment on a 160 acre homestead. It has about forty acres bottom, and balance well timbered upland. Five hundred dollars would not put the improvements on it, now there.

The adjoining ranch of 160 acres, forty or fifty acres river bottom, balance also heavily timbered, improvements more valuable than the former, is for sale also. Both parties wish to leave. I think $350 to $400 will buy it too, subject to "Homestead." These claims might suit some of our soldier comrades, who cannot go on to their homesteads, being in Uncle Sam's service.

ISAAC JAMESON.

Brinnon, Wash.

Explains His Theory.

Mr. Shepherd writes Lucifer as follows concerning his theory of sex control:

"The theory recently projected by me in Lucifer is built upon the postulates in general that life is electricity as expressed in organic union with matter (it being a law of science and logic to attribute effects to nearest, adequate, possible cause rather than to something remote and hypothetical); that electricity is male and female; that each individualized beginning is a tiny spark emitted and separated from the infinite, life-generating fountain of potential energy, etheric or static electricity; that the male animal is positive and hence the sex to throw off or generate the divine spark of life.

"Also that sex is essentially electrical—life polarized; that every motion, effect or phenomenon in the universe is the result of electrical causation; that the struggle for existence begins the instant of the inception of a germ; that a germ comes into being essentially a complete, self-centered and perfect organism, from which interior latent forces and potentialities unfold and develop under the law of magnetic affinity as expressed in the environments.

"And that planted in maternal soil the mother can no more change its sex than sun, rain and earth can change the sex of seeds in the vegetable kingdom; that animal life is analogous to vegetable life whose offspring it is; and that a theory of law and order in the animal kingdom, to be true, must be corroborated by analogous facts in the vegetable and even in the mineral kingdom, and harmonize with every law of Nature.

"Tried by this test the theory put forth by Dr. Schenk falls to the ground. The idea of a germ being sexless—a blank—incomplete—and that the mother injects into it, from without, a sexual nature, is simply absurd. Such a thing is contrary to all the known laws of organic life. There is not a fact in the whole economy of Nature with which Dr. Schenk's ridiculous proposition will fit.

"I am willing to risk my theory to run the gauntlet of criticism side by side with his, and I only ask that they may together be thrown into the crucible of practical demonstration. If I have not discovered the law of sex control, of one thing I feel confident—it will never be discovered with a microscope.

"Of the various 'scopes' in use in solving the problems of Nature, the comprehendiscope (to coin a new and fanciful term) is of most importance. It deals with causes, forces, elements, principles and laws more than with effects and minor details. It not merely observes but interprets phenomena."

Sociolog esson. No. LX.

BY HENRY M. PARKHURST.

FORCEFUL COLLECTION OF DEBTS. The primary office of the government, for the protection of life, has been gradually extended; first, to the protection of property, which is the means of supporting life, then to the protection of the right to transfer property, protecting the property in the hands of the transferee. A debt is an uncompleted transfer. In the exchange of property, unless gold or other merchandise is paid at the time, there is a debt which is paid only in promises; that is, payment of which is deferred. If the debtor refuses or neglects, at the stipulated time, to pay what he has promised, the creditor is deprived of a part of his property, as fully as if it were taken from him by violence. Before the days of civilization, each man defended himself, by enforcing his claim, and made his claim what he pleased. Under civilization, the government protects the creditor, by enforcing his just claim, but also protects the debtor from extortion. The forceful collection of debts is the co-operation of society in requiring individuals to keep their promises. It benefits the honest debtor; because without it he would be unable to borrow what he really needs, except from the few who know him well, and in many cases those who would be unable to help him; whereas strangers can trust him safely if the government will protect them. It protects the whole community from the robberies which might be committed under the pretense of the forceful collection of a debt.

THE REGENERATION OF TWO.

BY GEORGE EGERTON.*

Love is the supreme factor in the evolution of the world.—Professor Drummond.

(Continued from last week.)

He sits up, looks at the cones, at the sunshade, at the woman. She is uncomfortably conscious of his steady, cool scrutiny. It flashes through her that he is not in the least impressed, and that he will judge on first impressions. She flushes angrily, and stammers,—

"Some young people, playing, threw those things, and they fell on my parasol."

The man's face softens; he says directly and simply,—

"Did you put it here to shade me?"

"Yes, the sun was fearfully strong, and it struck directly on your head!"

"Thank you; it was very kind of you. I must have slept a long time!"

He takes out a clumsy, old-fashioned silver watch in a crystal case, such as peasants wear.

"You were asleep when I came, three hours ago!" she interjects.

He examines her with new interest, frowns as he takes her in, as if puzzled at himself or some sudden idea.

*From "Discords." Copyrighted by Roberts Brothers, Boston, Mass.

"That is odd, for I never can sleep if any one is near me, never!"

She feels—for her senses are sharpened in some subtle way—that there is disapproval of her in the look. It is a new sensation; she wonders why she finds it more hurtful than amusing.

"Your dog objected to my going in the first instance," she says, with a touch of restraint. A pained disturbance is replacing the unreasoning sense of joy that has possessed her; her head throbs, and a feeling of faintness overpowers her. The sun-filled air, the music, water, all the thrumming sounds of summer, seem to fuse into a gigantic gold-green disk that revolves first quickly, then with ever-slackening turns around her, until she loses herself in the slow swirl. A voice coming to her from ever so far away rouses her, saying, "Drink this!" The cold of metal touches her lips, and the disk whirls the other way round, with sickening swirls, ever quicker and quicker, until it stops with a jerk, and she comes to full consciousness of herself and her surroundings. He is holding the top of a flask to her lips, watching her with eyes in which the dominant expression is impatient disapproval. It strikes her as supremely funny; she can't help herself, and she bursts into an hysterical uncontrollable fit of laughter. It has a true, unaffected ring in it, and it is unrestrained as a child's; coming from her, it is as if one of the figures in a fashion-plate in a lady's paper were suddenly to change its simper into a natural smile and let its waist expand. The man's face relaxes, and he stands up, remarking,—

"You are better, Frue; it was the heat, no doubt, and you gave me your parasol." A pause. "Why did you?"

She blushes through her powder, and tells the simple truth.

"I don't know. You looked some way helpless, like a child, in your sleep."

She pales again; he draws his brows together impatiently, and says somewhat ungraciously,—

"Can I get you anything?"

"Yes, if you don't mind calling to a waiter, please,—or perhaps I shall be all right in a moment; I will go myself."

He has put on his hat and picked up the sunshade; the impatient look leaves his face again as he hands it to her.

"What does Fruen want,—coffee, lager? I am at her commands."

"Coffee, please, and I am very hungry," meekly. He has gone, followed by the dog, trotting first to the right, then to the left, at his heels.

She bursts into another fit of laughter, and, diving her hand into her pocket, takes out a little ivory case with a glass in it, and looks at herself. It strikes her as never before that the powder accentuates her lines, and makes her look horribly haggard. She wipes it off carefully. The utterly non-admirative look in the man's eyes is burning into her as the recollection of some betise one has committed will strike one afterwards with a double sense of discomfiture. If she were not afraid of his coming back she would go down to the fiord and wash her face. It has grown natural to her to exact homage from every man, and it piques her,—rouses a devil-may-care mood in her.

A waiter comes down the slope with a tray, a coffee-service and some sandwiches. A shade crosses her face as she sees that he is alone; but she reassures herself as she sees his knapsack and stick still lying there.

Whilst she is picking out the little nickel coins in her purse she inquires, with an effort at carelessness, for the gentleman who ordered it. The waiter has in the meantime been examining her clothes, and he is puzzled. He says doubtfully, "I brought for two, Frue; the gentleman only said, 'Take some coffee and something to eat down to where that lady is sitting,' pointing Fruen out."

"Oh, that is all right; keep the change."

The man goes away smiling. She buries the coffee-pot in a clump of bracken, and waits. The band is playing a waltz; the whole atmosphere is filled with a murmur of leafage and laughter, whispers of wind and wave. It seems to her a long time since he went; she is thirsty, and starts at every step, and looks around. At length his voice sounds behind her,—

"I hope Fruen got all she wanted?" He asks it politely; the doggie trots, and looks wistfully at the tray. "Fruen hasn't had anything yet! She has been waiting—?"

She disinters the thick white coffee-pot from its nest in the bracken. The sun flicks rainbow sparks off the rings on her ivory-tinted hands as she sets the cups to rights. "You were a long time."

She does not look up to see in what way he takes her remark; she is half afraid of the new side of herself that is prompting her to recklessness.

She hands him his cup with a demure tightening of lips, and then passes the sugar basin.

"Well, when ladies will!" he says, and there is a mocking note in his voice. Her lips quiver, and there is a mute reproach in her look; it touches him as her laughter before, and he changes his tone, and says, "Thank you," simply.

It crosses her mind that some of her acquaintances, a certain little lawyer with very keen eyes, might easily pass, and put her in an awkward position. She pours some cream into a saucer for the dog.

"Does Fruen often have these extempore picnics?" with the intonation that hurts her.

She looks him steadily in the face.

"This is the first time, and you are the first man I have ever spoken to without a formal introduction; and," with a quiver through her voice, "I don't know why I am doing it now. It's not that you are too—too amiable."

There is a silence that seems long, and the man pushes back his hat with an impetuous, nervous movement, and runs his hand through his hair and says,—

"But, dear lady, don't think so; I scarcely understand; I mistook—I—I am sorry. You see, I am not used to women, to ladies—to any one lately. I am not much used to kindness, I resent it rather; I am a solitary kind of fellow,—a bear, a boor, anything you like; you must overlook it!"

"Have some strawberries?" is her only reply; and she heaps a plate with the tiny wild berries, and smothers them with cream, adding mischievously, "They are rather uncultivated too; but they are nice, for all that,—far better than the garden ones."

He laughs responsively; his eyes glow warmly when he laughs, as if they catch and keep the sunlight. She heaps the things carefully on the tray, stands up, and waits in an undecided way, swinging her sunshade.

"Don't you hate seeing the remains of a meal?" she asks.

He laughs. "I am afraid I am sometimes so glad to see the meal that those hyper-refinements are lost upon me."

She walks round the slope skirting the water's edge; he follows, shouldering his knapsack. They go further into the wood, where the last year's fir-needles carpet the ground with a warm brown; and she finds a place where the evening sun is sending golden slants to the water's edge. She throws down her shawl and sits down; looks up at him, and he cedes to whatever of mute invitation may have been in her brief glance.

He stretches out his hand to feel in the pocket of his knapsack, hesitates, and draws it back. She divines his intention, and says, "I don't mind, at least in the open air." He lights his pipe, and she sees a package of closely written papers in the pocket. She would like to ask him where he is going, but fears he might resent it; she never remembers before to have taken the man's feelings into consideration: she has simply dwelt on her own as of primary importance.

"Does Fruen live in Christiania?"

She feels he asks it more for the sake of saying something than from any real interest in her.

"At present. I have an estate on the south coast; I came up for a change."

"Does Fruen like the city?"

"I don't like any place much; they are all the same. And you?" with timidity.

"I, Fruen? I," with a grim humor, "I am the most fruitless of all things; the thing of least commercial value to the state,—a poet. I belong nowhere; the whole world is mine! Poor in all the world counts of value, and yet I am rich in all she has of best,—in myself, in freedom."

She scarcely knows why, but a shadow falls on her heart at his words. This strange man who is so self-sure, who is unaffected by her presence as no man before, to whom she is almost afraid to talk, who looks dreamily ahead at some mental picture in which she has no part, seems even as a shadow unseizable,—what does she know of the working of his soul, how reach him? Her temples throb; she is unconsciously concentrating every effort of her will to draw his spirit to hers.

To be continued.

VARIOUS VOICES.

"Fidelity," care of Lucifer Office:—If "Arbutus" is willing to exchange a few letters with a young woman who is seeking enlightenment on sexual matters, will she communicate through this column, her address, or give the editor permission to furnish it to me?

H. Bauer, Alleghany, Pa.:—The committee which is assisting H. Bauer in dividing prices has resolved to postpone this work until April 2, 1898, for the reason that most of the tickets are still outstanding. Those having received tickets are kindly requested to settle and return those not sold until March 29, 1898. The committee: P. Haibert, C. Hold, P. Slipp, H. Gordon, A. Frey, L. Rouff.

Huldah G. Heacock, Vineland, N. J.:—Commenting on the sad condition of the very poor class (in Lucifer, Feb. 9,) you ask "who will suggest a remedy?" I honestly believe that freedom from all matrimonial chains, and that alone, will cure the monster ills, while those of minor importance would soon, or eventually, adjust themselves. How I wish Lucifer could be read in every well regulated household. I like the ring of "The Warning Voice" in a late Lucifer, and would be glad to receive a letter from the writer of that article, as I am still interested in the question of socialism and believe, with Brother Truman that it ought to be a success and will be in time,—I have never tried life in a commune, but live alone. Am waiting, hoping to find people who have found "the true method" and will join them in the cry (anarchistic though it be) "Curse on all laws but those which love hath made." A home where Love is Law.

Charles Gano Baylor, Providence, R. I.:—As a fitting supplement to the De Lome incident illustrating the practical one-man war-making power as now lodged in the Imperial American Presidential Executive, come the consequences of the Maine disaster. We are semi-officially informed that Bill McKinley has put on his war-paint and wishes to declare war with Spain at once. But we are also informed by the same semi-official authority that his Cabinet is holding him back. In short, that the whole question of war is in the hands of the President and his Cabinet. This too with Congress in session. And what a contemptible part the House of Representatives plays in this bloody farce! It is as servile before this Executive usurpation as it is before Judicial usurpation and the Senatorial usurpation of its prerogative in originating appropriation and Revenue bills. Yes, Imperialism is already here. Make way for Caesar!

J. W. Vandeventer, Sterling, Colo.—I enjoyed the removal of my article by Lillian and Mrs. Graul very much. Perhaps I am all wrong and they all right, but I cannot see it that way.

Maybe I should have lived with a dozen women instead of being true to one, or, maybe I should have only hired her services instead of securing them legally. Maybe I could have hired a mistress for less than my wife cost me, for every penny I earned went into her pocket-book—I had none of my own—and no account of the spending was kept by me. A mistress, on a salary would have been cheaper but words cannot express my gladness that the queen of my (or our) home bore the sacred, to me, title of wife.

More than that. Much of my present happiness comes from my belief that I shall meet her again "over there," and that we will be together through all eternity.

My father and mother lived as husband and wife more than forty-nine years and were wedded lovers to the end. Among my married friends happiness is the rule, unhappiness the exception. Possibly my circle of acquaintances may be remarkable in this, but I hope not. Yet matrimony has, very often, grave defects that I fain would see remedied.

Most young people enter it as densely ignorant of the things they should know as a Hottentot is of the Justinian Pandects. What the world calls modesty wraps them like a mantle. Behind it lies the grandest mysteries of nature and the grandest, noblest pleasures of life, and they feel forbidden, by they know not what, to even think of the mysteries or to taste more of the pleasures than mere sexual gratification, or free indulgence of their animal passions. Their children are "happenstances" in every way.

You are doing a grand work, my freethinking brothers and sisters, in teaching the world that the gratification of sexual passion is not the greatest pleasure to be derived from unrestricted, untrammelled intercourse between the sexes, but rather the least. That the mother alone should determine when a child should be born. That it is a crime for men to beget and women to bear any but the best children. That to "know thyself" is the first and highest duty of men and women, that no mystery or function of sex is or can be unclean or obscene.

But I pray you, good friends, tell me not that the only genuine, true happiness that ever came into my life was wrong, for I believe ye not. True marriage of heart and soul will ever be sacred to me.

[If Friend Vandeventer has read Lucifer carefully he must know that none of its writers condemn him for being "true" to one woman. Lucifer's teaching is that we should be true to ALL—including SELF! When we do this we cannot be false to any. This does not condemn the monogamist or dualist in sex life. If in the woman he called "wife" our friend found all the helpful co-operation he needed from the feminine side of life, then surely he may call himself a happy man. Few men have been so fortunate. But is it not pertinent to ask if the legal tie and the "sacred title of wife" were really helpful in securing the perfect accord which seems to have blessed two lives in this case. As to the word "mistress": Is it any worse morally to give to a woman a limited claim and for a limited time upon your pocket book and call her "mistress" than it would be to give her unlimited claim and call her "Mrs.?" In either case, as I see it, the relation might be pure, moral and honorable to both, provided always that love sanctions the co-operation if it reaches or includes intimate physical blending on the sexual plane; but the presence of the legal tie in the one case cannot make pure and good a relation that would be impure and immoral because of its absence in the other. Experience proves that in most cases the legal tie in time becomes a fetter, and, as all know, love will endure no fetters but his own. In limited partnerships each is put upon his or her good behavior, hence the chances of remaining lovers to the end of life are thereby increased. By this plan the publicity and expense of divorce is avoided, whenever, from any cause, it becomes desirable to dissolve old partnerships and form new.

What we demand then, first of all, is liberty, equal freedom for all to live their lives in their own way, so long as they do not invade the like right of others. M. H.]

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 copies per dozen.

701.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Ruled by the Tomb.

A Discussion of Free Thought and Free Love.

BY ORFORD NORTHCOTE.

"The world for the most part is ruled by the tomb, and the living are tyrannised over by the dead. Old ideas, long after the conditions under which they were produced have passed away, often persist in surviving. Many are disposed to worship the ancient,—to follow the old paths, without inquiring where they lead, and without knowing exactly where they wish to go themselves."—"Marriage and Divorce," H. G. Ingersoll, p. 5.

Price, ten cents. For sale at this office.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 16 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 20 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

The Adult for January—Double Number.

Contains the Second Biennial Proceedings of the Legitimation League. Edited by Oswald Dawson. Picture of the president of the League on the cover. Full page portraits of Lillian Harman, president, George Bedborough secretary, and Louie Bedborough, treasurer of the League.

Contents: 1. The Annual Meeting and Dinner. 2. Friction. 3. Eighteenpence or Half a-crown? 4. The Play's the Thing. 5. Some Letters, the Constitution and a Speech. 6. The Judgment of Paris. 7. Which Sex Suffers Most? 8. The Physiology of Love. 9. Sexual Education. 10. Spiritual Love. 11. Miss De Cleyre on the League and the Woman Question. 12. The New Idealism. 13. An Autosomatic Marriage. 14. Marriages Made in Russia. 15. Cast off the Shell! 16. The "Firebrand" in the Flames. 17. The New Martyrdom. 18. Letters and Reviews. 19. Free Love and Lesbian Love. 20. Powder Magazines and Lighted Lucifers. 21. Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs. Price, 20 cents. Address this office.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.
This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

The Outcome of Legitimation. By Oswald Dawson. This address was to have appeared in the January "Adult," but the printers of that number played Bowdler on a small scale, and refused to print it, alleging that the matter which they did print was "bad enough, but we are not printing that and decline to print more." The lecture deals with some problems arising from the practicalisation of the theories of free love. Price, 5 cents. For sale at this office.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights: Chapter II., Invasion; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter IV., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, ten cts.

Wanted: A practical horticulturist, and a scientific vegetarian cook. A free man and a free woman, only, need apply. Address Z., care of Lucifer, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Personal: Advanced thinker, bachelor, educated, musical, etc., desires acquaintance of a lady of similar views living in or near Indiana, or who visits Indianapolis. Address P. O. Box 775, Indianapolis, Ind.

Books Worth Reading FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .75
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
Vistas Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .15
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .15
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .25
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .05
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .15
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He dare not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it contains very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the care of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 807, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 121 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook sexual liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 10 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "Talk About Anarchist Communism," Nos. 1 and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 1 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 180 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
Box 132, San Jose, Cal.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 11. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, MARCH 16, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 702.

True Courage.

I honor the man who is willing to sink
Half his present repute for the freedom to think;
And when he has thought, be his cause strong or weak,
Will sink t'other half for the freedom to speak;
Not caring what vengeance the mob has in store,
Be that mob the upper ten thousand or lower.

—Lowell.

The Rapid and Sweeping Advance of the Censorship.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The conviction of Emil F. Ruedebusch for sending through the mails his able treatise on sexual ethics and economics, "The Old and the New Ideal," is another enormous forward stride of "the movement in favor of ignorance." In fact, it is the most ominous triumph that the enemies of Free Press and Mails have won since the enactment of the Comstock postal statutes in March, 1873. Hitherto, there has been at least a pretense of attacking the phraseology rather than the ideas of sexual reform writers. We have thought that it was still possible, by carefully picking our words, to examine social institutions, to expose domestic wrongs, and to offer for consideration and acceptance modifications of old theories or theories entirely new. We have said, indeed, and with emphasis, that it was the manner more than the matter of their productions which exposed our publicists to danger; that if we observed the conventionalities of "polite" expression we should be immune to the attacks of the pestilence of Comstockism, and that the finesse of educated propagandists would ultimately prove more than a match for the aggression and trickery of the censors. This might still be true if intelligent men only sat on the law-benches, but when to the invasive tactics of the vice agents and the notoriety-hunting and the malice of the prosecuting officers is added the asininity of judicial ignoramuses, it is useless to hope for such an outcome of the present desperate struggle. That I do not paint the outlook with too dark pigments, that my animadversions upon our judges are not unduly severe, will appear when the reader peruses the lecture delivered by the federal judge in Wisconsin who condemned Emil F. Ruedebusch to one day's imprisonment and to pay a fine of twelve hundred dollars. William H. Seaman is the judge who has thus voluntarily placed himself in the pillory of infamy, and the peevish scolding which he gave Mr. Ruedebusch is printed below, exactly as it appeared in the columns of the Milwaukee "Sentinel":

"In this case," said the judge, having called Ruedebusch to the stand, "the jury has indicted you of the crime charged in the indictment, and their decision and judgment was undoubtedly right. Of the question of the falsity of the doctrines contained in the book, this court has nothing to do. That they are false from top to bottom seems to me quite apparent to any man. From what has appeared in this case, I am satisfied, however, that you are not a bad man in the sense in which it would have to be said, if the sentiments contained in that book were to be attributed to you, as you understand the views.

"Now, I am inclined to think you have become imbued with notions and theories which have led you into a theorizing of yourself, without realizing what it would come to, and that the only possible result of your doctrines would be the absolute destruction of all home life, and all the social relations, and everything that we hold dear; everything that is contained in the civilization of the world; would carry us back beyond any matters entertained in the dark ages.

"All that, however, would not lie as ground for a sentence in this case; but it does lie in this, what I have no doubt you did not realize, and that is that the reading of such sentiments, in the language in which they are clothed, is absolutely sure to be demoralizing and dangerous to the mind of the young. The license suggested is the danger in the book.

"But as you are not one of whom it would seem to me it would be felt or said that there was any intention on your part to carry out such effects, the court is justified in taking that into consideration, and that there should not be imposed upon you the severe term of imprisonment which would be imposed if I felt that it was an intention on your part to do the harm that will necessarily be done by the dissemination of the sentiments contained in this book.

"The sentence of the court therefore is that you be imprisoned in the county jail of Milwaukee county for one day, and pay a fine of $1,200, and that you remain imprisoned until the fine is paid."

This judge as George Macdonald says with perfect truth, insults and robs an honest man because that man fails to agree in opinion with him concerning a matter which is entirely outside the jurisdiction of the court. He takes advantage of the privileges of his position to browbeat his victim in the most disreputable and cowardly manner, and then adds injury to insult by deliberately stealing from him one day of his life and twelve hundred dollars of his earnings. It had not been shown or even claimed that any man, woman or child had been injured by the words Mr. Ruedebusch had written, and yet, in the absence of this only justification for interference with his freedom and property, the author of "The Old and New Ideal" is blackguarded, robbed and imprisoned by the creature set on high supposedly to restrain the invasive and to protect the non-offending.

As Moncure D. Conway has pointed out, some man writes a book; another man thinks the book is pernicious, in that it may corrupt morals or endanger some popular institution; he appeals to the judge to help him expose the falsity of the work by shutting it out of circulation by punishing its author or publisher or some seller of it; the judge calls about him twelve other men and they apply to the book the tests of their own literary and ethical limitations, with the result that the accused person is fined or imprisoned or both. The outraged law is avenged, virtue is vindicated, and society is saved again.

Now, from beginning to end, there has been nothing but speculation, guesswork. No one has come forward to say that he or she has been damaged by the publication. The judge and jurors have assumed that the book or paper, because its ideas are unfamiliar and unacceptable to them, is necessarily a Pandora's box for the destruction of other persons, for, of course, it would have no power to demoralize them. They have mistaken their prejudices or their hypocrisies—it doesn't matter which—for the laws of the universe, and proceed at once to help the universe out of its troubles by torturing their fellows

Generally utterly incapable of a profitable study of sociological problems, they take for granted their infallibility as judges thereof and proceed remorselessly to crush whoever has the temerity to differ from their conclusions. These dwarfed and perverted individuals have in all ages been the pests, the scourges, and the destroyers of their kind. With the vision of the bat, they have ever claimed to be able to see farther than the range of the mightiest telescope of modern times. They know it all, and not content with this immeasurable advantage over ordinary mortals, they will pauperize you, or clap you into prison, or kill you if you venture to pick your own path and pursue your studies in your own way.

Judge Seaman declares in the beginning that he has nothing to do with the alleged falsity of the doctrines taught in the "Old and New Ideal," and in the very next sentence asserts that they are false from top to bottom. If he has nothing to do with this alleged quality of the doctrines, why does he affirm that they have this quality? And on what ground does he condemn the book? Is it not because the doctrines are pernicious, as he tells us they are? And if they are pernicious, are they pernicious because they are false or because they are true? If they are pernicious because they are false, then he has to do with their falsity, while if they are pernicious because they are true, then he places himself in the position of a suppressor of the truth. I leave him in this trap of his own setting.

Judge Seaman tells Mr. Ruedebusch that he, Mr. Ruedebusch, is better that his doctrines, in which particular he differs from his torturer, who is fully as bad as his doctrines. His doctrines enjoin him to persecute those who do not agree with him, and he proceeds at once to prosecute. So far, he is consistent.

Judge Seaman gives it as his opinion that the teachings of Mr. Ruedebusch have in them the germs of destruction of our home life, of all the social relations, of everything that we hold dear, and, inclusively, "of everything that is contained in the civilization of the world." Judge Seaman's limitations are the limitations of his class; he reverences the doctrines transmitted from the past but forgets the lessons of the past—he forgets that every change in the beliefs and customs of man has been opposed on the ground that it would disrupt society and destroy civilization. He has not grasped the fact that society will exist so long as man, the gregarious animal remains on the planet, and the no less important fact that civilization is a succession of culture-steps, ascending if liberty strengthens and widens, descending if liberty weakens and narrows. Society is not destroyed by the infusion and application of new ideas; it is simply modified, transformed.

What the judge means is that his ideal of home life is imperiled by the principles enunciated by Mr. Ruedebusch; that the social relations to which he gives at least his theoretical allegiance are jeopardied by such works as the "Old and New Ideal," and that the civilization in which he has been taught to see the best that is possible for humanity is in danger of falling into disrepute through the teachings of the Social Radicals. So feeling, if not reasoning, he comes to the rescue of his fetiches, not with facts, not with arguments, not with a demand for the thorough and impartial investigation of rival theories, but with the club of the policeman, the key of the jailer, the sandbag of the highwayman, and the breechloader of the soldier. Distrusting and fearing the peaceful methods of the student, he, like other tyrants through all the ages, at once resorts to violence, thus confessing the intellectual and moral weakness of his cause, and inviting the whirlwind that swept them away.

Judge Seaman avers that the book incriminated "is absolutely sure to be demoralizing and dangerous to the mind of the young." "Absolutely sure"? Is he a god, that he can know what the wisest man can only guess at, the influence of any book on the mind of any person? The assertion is absurd. Because Mr. Ruedebusch affirms that, in his opinion, men may in a state of freedom be frankly and responsibly varietistic instead of being, as now, deceptively and irresponsibly varietistic, and that what is salutary for one sex is salutary for the other, this crusher of free speech violently assumes that the author is a demoralizer of the young and is to be defrauded and incarcerated at the pleasure of the defenders of a social system that rests at one end on the rotten pillar of monogamy and at the other on the pillar of prostitution.

Judge Seaman declares that "the license suggested is the danger in the book." But no license is suggested. A license is a privilege granted to certain individuals or bodies of individuals to do what is esteemed wrong. License is the child of arbitrary power; it has no consanguinity with liberty.

To close as I began—the conviction of Emil F. Ruedebusch, as it is justified by the presiding judge, marks the beginning of a new epoch in the enforcement of the postal censorship. Hereafter it is to be the idea instead of the mere language that will incriminate the social investigator. This step taken, there is no discernable limit to the powers of the reaction. All outrages are possible. Any infamy may be perpetrated. Any torture may be allowed. Any depth of sexual ignorance and depravity may be reached.

I understand that Mr. Ruedebusch does not intend to appeal the case. The news is most discouraging. No greater tactical error could be committed than this of stopping short of the highest court. These prosecutions should be made as difficult and expensive as possible. Many an unjust law has been literally worn out in that way. It has often happened that a judge has found a technical path out of the swamp into which these Comstock prosecutions have plunged him. It might be so in this instance. A victory won on technical grounds is a thousand times better than defeat, however inferior it may be to a victory won on the merits of the case. The essential thing is victory. I do not accept the non-resistant ideas of Abner J. Pope, but his position is at least understandable and consistent. We must either quit all radical propaganda or fight with every moral and legal weapon we can command. To fight with other weapons now would be foolish, and it would be needless if we were strong enough to make them available. The duello may be an unscientific means of settling differences, but it gives at all events a chance for life and liberty. The suit at law is a form of the duello and we should familiarize ourselves with its rules and weapons.

Progress of the American Inquisition.

Under date of March 1, Abner J. Pope, one of the editors and publishers of the suppressed "Firebrand," writes us as follows:

"DEAR LUCIFER GROUP AND READERS: This my sixth letter from county jail informs all of you that I have just returned from Judge C. B. Bellinger's court and that from him have received my sentence, which was that I be confined in the county jail for four months and be fined one dollar. Addis and Isaak have been granted a new trial; but the day for their trial, so Schnauble told me, will not be set until the United States Grand Jury meets again, and as there is no set time for their meeting, I may be out of jail before their trial comes off. I am well, cheerful, at peace and as happy as a caged bird can well be. I had nothing to say why sentence should not be inflicted on me, as I was not asked why sentence should not be imposed on me. I feel that every hour I am in prison the truth will increase in the human family. I do not like to be in prison; the published statements that I do, by the enemies of freethought, are not true. As this is visiting day and I am expecting some of my friends to see me, I close with love to all those who love the truth, and am as ever your Pantarchian friend,

"ABNER J. POPE.

"Portland, Ore., County Jail, Cell 5, March 1, 1898."

A clipping from the "Oregonian" (Portland, Ore.) of Feb. 26, enclosed with this letter, gives a detailed account of the granting of the new trial to Henry Addis and A. Isaak, who were convicted with A. J. Pope, as accessories to his act. A new attorney, named I. Swett—who as we are told by "Free Society," (San Francisco) volunteered to make the application —"appeared as counsel for the defendants, and contended that neither had had a fair trial, as they had not been given an opportunity to testify." The plea was resisted by United States Attorney Hall, who maintained that though Pope alone mailed the papers upon which indictments had been found, Addis and Isaac were cognizant of the facts, and, as "part owners of the paper they were equally responsible." The court overruled the demurrer of the United States attorney and granted the motion for new trial, as stated. "Being asked whether the order applied to the case of Pope also, the court replied in the negative."

The last paragraph of the report in the "Oregonian" reads as follows:

A. J. Pope, who is still in jail, because he refused to be liberated on his own recognizance, and also refused to apply for a new trial, is a sort of conundrum which the court will have to dispose of somehow. He is longing for martyrdom, and as he is not too young to be a martyr, the court will probably be forced to accommodate him. Just what becomes of the trio of anarchists is a matter of small moment, so that they are precluded from again publishing the filthy "Firebrand."

While the editor of Lucifer is neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet he ventures to make a prediction, namely, that the time is coming when Attorney Hall, Judge Bellinger, and all who have been connected with this case as prosecutors and censors will blush for shame,—or their surviving friends will blush for them—for the part they took in this thoroughly infamous transaction. What the judge will do when the case comes up for rehearing is yet to be seen, but his act in passing sentence upon A. J. Pope is beyond recall. Or rather, his attitude in not dismissing the case when first brought to his notice, as one of malicious prosecution, or of unwarranted meddling with other people's business—is beyond recall, and stamps him as a willing tool in the service of the enemies of human liberty and of impartial justice.

More than this: If it be the duty of the judge to see that impartial justice is done, and to punish those who invade the rights of their neighbors, then he should have compelled the public prosecutor, the "grand jurors" and the postal censor to make restitution to the invaded editors and publishers of the "Firebrand," for the loss sustained by them because of such invasive meddling.

It will doubtless be said, in reply to this view, that Judge Bellinger has done the best he could do. That he did not make the laws he is sworn to enforce, and that his rulings have been very fair, all things considered. To this I would simply reply that men were before laws; that Chas. B. Bellinger was a man before he was a judge, and that his duties as a man take precedence over his duties as a judge. To reverse this order—to exalt the judge above the man, to merge the man in the judge, is simply to make of the man a legal prostitute—to make him a slave to the opinions of other men. The first and chief obligation that Charles B. Bellinger took upon himself, when taking the oath of office, was that he "would uphold or secure justice." Then when a conflict arises between justice and law he should always decide in favor of the former. Even Blackstone, the great English legal commentator, took the ground that "all laws which contravene natural justice, are void and of none effect,"—or such like words.

The worst of all "houses of prostitution" are the so-called courts of justice when legality is exalted above manhood, or when forms of law take precedence over the natural sense of justice.

Natural justice teaches Charles Bellinger and the public prosecutors, that what is known as "obscenity" is a matter of opinion merely, and that Pope, Addis and Isaac have the same right to differ from their neighbors on this point that they have to differ from their neighbors on matters of religion, of food, of drink, or of partisan politics, and that the business of the judge is to simply see that all persons are protected in the enjoyment of their equal rights in these and other like regards.

Looking backward for causes and forward for prospects we can see little ground for hope that these prosecutions against social heretics will cease so long as the priest and the judge control the reproduction of the race; that is, so long as woman is held a slave by church and state—so long as woman is denied the right of self-ownership; so long as she is denied the right to do the best possible for herself and for her prospective child, regardless of "God, Government and Grundy." Back of the judges,—the Bellingers, the Seamans, the Benedicts, the Fosters—back of the censors, the Comstocks, the McAfees, et al, lies the clergyman, the priest, whose power over mankind would be lost if he should lose his control over the reproductive forces and functions of woman.

Is it wise to expend all our forces in fighting secondary or third-rate causes of the evil known as press censorship? Why not strike at root causes? M. H.

The Scales of Justice.

It is a part of the business of government (not necessarily the intelligent intention of government officials, for these gentlemen are not over-blessed with intelligence) to make paupers and criminals. Ingenuity and power are exhausted in pushing the weak and indigent into ever lower depths of poverty and wretchedness. Illustrations of this lamentable fact constantly present themselves. For instance: Broad Street (below Wall) in New York has been much resorted to by the small dealers in food and drink. Here could be found frankfurters, pies, cakes, rolls, coffee, and cocoa, fruit and the like. The sellers of these articles were eagerly patronized by the office and messenger boys, junior clerks, and other underlings in the offices on Wall, Broad and adjacent streets. The food and drink were apparently good, and were sold in small quantities at reasonable prices. In the middle of the street there stood a line of cabs and carriages waiting for the convenience of the silk-hatted gentlemen who "do business" in the buildings on the streets named and who are not under the necessity of spending from two to ten cents with the pushcart men. I said this line of cabs and carriages "stood" in Broad Street; they did, and they still stand there. But the portable refreshment stands of the office boys and clerks have disappeared. They were clubbed out by the police, acting under the orders of the captain of that precinct. As for the poor devils of peddlers and the slim-pursed underlings of the "big fellows," who cares? Certainly not the police nor their masters; a few more beggars and thieves don't count; are not Governor's Island and the other federal strongholds handy? As for the millionaire operators, it would never do to keep their carriages off the street that is too sacred for the carts of the vendors. Did you say the scales of Justice are even-balanced? When? Where? By the way, did you ever study meteorological indications in the tropics of legalized spoliation? If you have, you may have noticed— W.

THE ADDRESS of Lois Waisbrooker, till May next, will be Ogilby, San Diego Co., California. The many friends of this faithful and very efficient champion of womanhood and motherhood will please remember that, in her age and feebleness of body, she has no other means of support than the sale of her books. These books are among the very best educators for young and old, in that most important of all departments of human knowledge, that which treats of sex and the right of every human being to be born well. Orders for these books can be sent direct to her, or to this office. For lists and prices, see our advertising columns.

The Sexual Enslavement of Woman.
BY E. C. WALKER.
American Slavery of Girls; the English Army in India; the Bible and Woman
Jehovah and "Godless Governments;" Melancthon, the Bible, and Maternity; Mrs. Packard's Case; Slave Hunting in America in 1807 and in England in 1898; A Statement of Facts. Also, Poems by Kernan, Longfellow, and Henderson.
Enforcing Rape by the Legal "Restitution of Marital Rights."
SECOND, AND REVISED, EDITION.
PRICES:—One copy, 2 cents; two copies, 3 cents; five copies, 10 cents; copies, 20 cents; fifty copies, 85 cents, one hundred copies, $1.50.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

PUBLISHED AT 1394 CONGRESS ST., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representative, George Bedborough, 16 John Street, Bedford Row, London, W. C., England.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is SEXOLOGY, or SEXOLOGIC SCIENCE, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

GOOD AUTHORITY tells us that the Cubans ask nothing of this government except to be let alone. Naturally they wish to incur no obligations to a despotism but little if any better than the one whose yoke they are trying to throw off.

LUCIFER SYMPATHIZES with the oppressed everywhere, but the sufferers from oppressions of government are far more numerous in this country today than in the garden patch called Cuba; hence our sympathies and our efforts are mainly directed to relieving the suffering that is nearest home.

GEORGE EGERTON'S arraignment of conventional morality in sex life, in religious life, in politics, etc., as given in this week's Lucifer, will pay a careful perusal. Many good people tell us they have no time to read stories, yet in no other way can truth, every-day truth,—prosy, unattractive, common-sense truth, be so well brought home to us as in the story form. "The Regeneration of Two" is receiving some very flattering testimonials.

A Few Words

To all who feel an interest in the educational work to which Lucifer is devoted:

The year upon which we have lately entered promises to be a critical one for many if not for all journals advocating unpopular reforms. The spring and summer months are always more or less critical, always more difficult to make ends meet, financially, for such publications, than are other portions of the year, and while there is no immediate occasion to prophesy serious disaster it is well to know the facts as they really exist.

During the past year special efforts have been made to extend Lucifer's work, not only on the American continent but in Europe, and wherever the English language is spoken. Many hundreds of dollars have been spent by the publishers and by interested friends, in sending sample copies and trial subscriptions to those who were willing to read and investigate, and while the visible results have not been all that could be desired we are glad to see and to be able to report signs of an awakening, world-wide in its scope, upon a line of subjects that for hundreds of years has been neglected, repressed and suppressed, because of ignorant fears and because of superstitious prejudices,—a line of subjects that all thinking persons must admit is more important to human welfare than all others, because more intimately connected with the origin or reproduction of human life.

These extensions of Lucifer's work, while very gratifying in promise of lasting results, have not as yet been productive of much in the way of financial co-operation. Seed sown must have time to germinate and grow. Meantime renewed efforts must be made in order that the awakening shall be permanent and effectual.

For these reasons we, whose time and means are wholly devoted to this work, come once more with our plea for co-operation in our efforts to make Lucifer more effective as a Light-Bringer than ever before. To this end we ask,

First. That all subscribers who are now in arrears will send us something on renewal, if only a few postage stamps and a word of cheer and hope.

Second. That all will make a special effort to get us a few new subscribers, if only for a "trial trip" of three months. See special offer under the head of "Books Worth Reading Free."

Third. That all who can will send to us for pamphlets and books for their own reading, and to sell or give away to others. For a starter with those who have not read anything on sexologic science, see "Combination Offers," as advertised in current issues. To those who buy for distribution, or to sell again, good discounts will be given.

Fourth. We ask that all will send us the names of such of their friends and acquaintances as they think would be benefited by reading a sample copy or two of Lucifer.

Among the books and pamphlets specially recommended by us for distribution, in order to arouse interest in Lucifer's line of work are the following:

(a) "What the Young Need to Know,"—A Primer of Sexual Rationalism, by E. C. Walker. Price, 10 cents; five copies, or more, 5 cents each.

(b) "Ruled by the Tomb," A Discussion of Freethought and Sex Reform, by Orford Northcote. Price, 10 cents; five copies, or more, 5 cents each.

(c) "Outcome of Legitimation," by Oswald Dawson. Price, 5 cents; five copies for 20 cents.

(d) "Prodigal Daughter, or the Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell. As a separate pamphlet, this remarkable essay ran through several editions. It is now published as No. 2 of "Our New Humanity" with several other essays in the same line, by Mary Florence Johnson, Lucinda B. Chandler, M. Harman and others; ninety-two pages in all. Price, 25 cents; five copies for 75 cents.

"A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

As a special premium to any one who will send us five dollars, and the names of five yearly subscribers to Lucifer we will send the large volume called "A Physician in the House," price $2.75, written by Dr. Joseph H. Greer, a well-known Chicago physician of the reform school, and for many years an earnest friend and generous helper of Lucifer and its work.

Hear All Sides.

William Platt, author of "Do We Live, Do We Love" and several other radical books on sexologic and sociologic questions, has sent us the following criticism:

"I was somewhat belated in looking through the issue of Lucifer Jan. 26. When I did so, I was struck by the article on page 442-443 signed by Moses Harman. With the conclusion of this I both agree and disagree most emphatically. I thoroughly uphold with him the point of view that one of the most important of all reforms is to drive into people's heads a sense of the responsibility and dignity of race-building—although for this very agreement with Moses Harman I am accused in another part of the same paper with 'Making too much of the purely physical manifestation of love'—the said 'physical manifestation' being the birth-producing act, which I hold should be a thing very grave and sacred. But I differ utterly with Moses Harman's one-sided-ness where he says 'Woman can now achieve a peaceful revolution, if she would only awake to a sense of her power, to a sense of her responsibility to herself and to her children. Man cannot save woman; man cannot save himself, nor the race of which he is a part. Woman must do this!'

"There is a deal of point in the old legend which made the coward Adam cry out 'The woman tempted me and I did eat.' The whole of the passage I quote is an echo thereof. Why, I beg to ask, shall not man be told to awake to a sense of his responsibility to woman and to their mutual children? Why, when it takes two to make a child, shall the whole responsibility thereof rest on the woman alone? In the cause of woman, truth and justice, let us amend those words to the following. 'We can now achieve a peaceful revolution if men and women will only awake to a a sense of their power, and of their responsibility to their children. Not man nor woman alone can save the race of which they are part; both together must do this.'

WILLIAM PLATT.

"London, Feb. 15, 1898."

My thanks are due to our English friend for his earnest and plainly spoken criticism. There is doubtless a tendency in all reforms, and all reform advocates, to magnify and overestimate the particular truth that to each seems most important. For many ages woman has been kept in a subordinate position in the social scale, while man has arrogantly claimed the right to rule, in the family, the church, the forum, the state or nation, and now that the slow development of the sense of justice in man is beginning to demand for woman a better recognition in social life it is possible that there may be a tendency to go to the opposite extreme, and to substitute the matriarchate for the patriarchate in human affairs.

Admitting that such may be the natural trend or tendency I still maintain that the statement objected to by our critic is founded in truth,—truth as it is in nature. Mr. Platt says, "When it takes two to make a child" etc. As I see it, woman alone is the maker of the child. Impregnation of the ovum is not "making," in any proper sense of the word. Woman alone builds the child,—physical, mental, psychical. Impregnation is one of the conditions necessary to the building, and so, likewise, is food, drink, heat or shelter, necessary conditions.

Woman—feminine man—is the centripetal force; the constructive, the organizing, the peace-loving, the civilizing, the humanizing, the conservative, the saving force in the human equation.

Man—masculine man—is the centrifugal force; the distributing, the disintegrating, the diffusive, the aggressive, the war-loving, the brutalizing, the iconoclastic, the destructive force in the human equation.

Woman is love—attraction.

Man is valor—repulsion.

From these data, these basic facts in the constitution of woman as woman, and of man as man, I argue that woman must be the savior of the race, if it is ever saved, from the social hells in which the rule of physical force—man's rule—has placed it.

I fully endorse the statement that "there is a deal of point in the old legend" concerning Adam and Eve in the Garden. Woman was then man's leader, man's teacher, man's savior from ignorance and primitive savagery. Left to himself man would have remained an ignorant, brutal savage. Woman was not content thus to remain. She experimented; she "ate of the tree of knowledge" and finding it "good" her loving heart "tempted," lured, led, her brother man to do likewise.

Come again, Friend Platt. I have no liking for controversy for its own sake, but a friendly comparison of ideas may be very helpful in bringing to view all phases of the many-sided problem called life—helpful in showing us how to make the most of the share of life to which we find ourselves heirs.

M. H.

In another letter Mr. Platt sends two short paragraphs for publication. The first is headed "English Decency" and reads thus:

"An English lady known to my sister has a bath-room that is walled with mirrors,—a beautiful, cleanly, useful idea But several lady-guests of hers have expressed their opinion that it is shockingly 'indecent' for them to see their own nakedness there. One would not feel inclined to contradict them—the apparent probability being that they had not a decent inch of flesh about them."

The second he calls "Peculiarities of Grammar":

"There are two adjectives irregular in their degrees of comparison and not classed as such in grammar. One is 'valuable' of which the regular comparative is 'more valuable' and the irregular superlative is 'invaluable.' Similarly 'decent' has for its comparative 'more decent' but for its superlative 'indecent.'"

A Short Campaign in Philadelphia.

BY ANNA STIRLING.

I had the great pleasure of accompanying Miss Emma Goldman a little way on her Western tour, going with her to Philadelphia and remaining there during her short but most successful campaign. My delight was three-fold—I heard all our speaker's excellent addresses, I witnessed her enthusiastic reception, and I made the acquaintance of many of the workers and sympathizers in the Quaker City.

Wednesday evening, February 16, Miss Goldman spoke at the meeting of the Ladies' Liberal League on "The New Woman." There is no new woman, she maintains; there is the same woman the world has always known, but one having new thoughts and inspired by new ideals. In the discussion which followed the lecture, Daniel Bright was the chief critic, but, as usual in such cases, he signally failed to sense the fundamental ideas advanced, and was easily corrected by Miss Goldman in her response.

The next evening, at the Single Tax Society's meeting, the subject was "The Absurdity of Non-resistance to Evil." Here the critics were Rev. J. H. Amies and Fred Long. The latter gentleman, who is a State Socialist, denounced the Anarchists as vermin and police spies, much to the indulgent amusement of the intelligent audience.

On Friday evening Miss Goldman spoke before the Society of Ethical Research on "The Basis of Morality," which, of course, she found to be purely human and utilitarian, in the broadest sense. Mr. Long was again in evidence, as was Hugo Bilgram, who is a gentleman well known as a financial and economic writer of the school of Philosophical Anarchy. The debating platform of this society is very broad, and its atmosphere of intellectual hospitality is most invigorating.

Saturday evening Miss Goldman addressed a mass meeting, speaking in the German language.

In the fine hall of Friendship Liberal League, on Sunday afternoon the Champion dealt fearlessly with the subject of "Patriotism," naturally shocking some of the auditors, for unreasoning patriotism is as much the fetich of many as is unreasoning religion the fetich of others. Sentiment was invoked to nullify the conclusions of thought, for Dr. Kay tried to sing a patriotic song to refute the arguments of Miss Goldman. It was as if a Salvationist should essay to break the force of a Freethinker's impeachment of Christianity by beating the bass drum or sing "Jesus Paid it All." J. H. Crandall said that Americans were not enslaved because when aggressed upon they took their muskets; they do not sweep streets, like the European "lower classes." In her reply Miss Goldman said she did not indorse his advice, although it was good. Mr. Meekim thought if Free Love prevailed the foundling asylums would be overcrowded, but it was made clear to him that under freedom women would control their own lives and would have the knowledge that would enable them to have the children they desired, and no more.

Sunday evening, in the same place, Miss Goldman exposed the sham and evil of the "organized charity" upon which modern Philistinism so prides itself. She showed that it was the feeble and generally mischievous attempt of society to palliate the evil results of its own stupendous and cruel blunders. When all men and women can live under the reign of that equity which will come only with liberty there will be no place for the "charity" which indeed "covers a multitude of sins."

A group of the progressive women and men of Philadelphia gave a little reception to Miss Goldman at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Shilling on the evening of February 19. There were sixteen persons present, including the guest of the occasion and the writer of this. I believe all present are interested in the work which Lucifer makes its specialty, while some are fully committed thereto. There were assembled a sufficient number of thinkers to push on a forward movement capable of accomplishing much for the enlightenment and liberation of the race

Emma Goldman in Chicago.

We have been requested to announce a series of lectures in this city by Emma Goldman of New York:

March 20, 8 P. M. at Benzo's Hall, corner Armitage and Milwaukee Aves. Subject: "Authority."

Monday 21, 8 P. M. at Zeph's Hall, corner Desplaines and W. Lake Sts.

Tuesday 22, 8 P. M. at Blum's Hall, 254 E. North Ave.

Thursday 24, 8 P. M. at Vorwart's Turner Hall, 1166 W. 12th St.

Friday 25, 8 P. M. at 535 Blue Island Ave., W. (Nagle's Hall.)

Saturday 26, 7 P. M. at Zeph's Hall, corner Desplaines and W. Lake Sts.

She is also announced to speak at 2 P. M. Sunday 20, and at 8 P. M. Wednesday, of the same week, but the places of meeting are not given. For further particulars address Theo. Appel, 1360 N. Rockwell St.

THE REGENERATION OF TWO.

BY GEORGE EGERTON.*

Love is the supreme factor in the evolution of the world.—Professor Drummond.

(Continued from last week.)

Suddenly there is a tremulous stirring and whispering in the foliage, a ripple across the water, a susurrus in the air,—the disturbances one feels just before sundown, as if some unseen spirit is soaring across the land, announcing the sun's good-night.

The silent man watches Sol's masterpiece; the silent woman watches it and him. Before them a stretch of swart green land lies low against a distant background of purple mountains,—a purple almost black in its intensity. And above it a scattered mass of brazen gold clouds, flecked with vivid purple, is tossed in heaps, as if flung by some Titan's hand against the sky of aurous green,—a sky that suggests a veil of filmy golden tissue dropped smoothly over a background of lettuce-green. The veil is jagged at the ends, and the green becomes fainter and fainter, and blends into the tint of a wren's egg, changes into opal, warms again suddenly, and melts into the sea in delicate misty rose. And, further to the left, a great bold sweep of opaque salmon and orange, and orange-pink cloud spattered with audacious violet flecks, darts upwards from the horizon to resolve into transparent nebulous filaments of color overhead. They both give a sigh as the last wave of color fades. An exultant feeling masters her soul, because she knows that for the space of the gorgeous color-change they have felt together, and the knowledge brings an odd shyness with it. The dog licks her wrist in a friendly way, and goes over to her master and snoozles her snout into the palm of his hand. She makes one more desperate effort, not without a sense of shamed wonder at herself, to approach him.

"Why do you say a poet is the most fruitless of all things?"

He looks puzzled for a moment; then, recalling his own remark, looks at her with a fresh gleam of interest.

"Because he sees too much. Because his soul is a harp hung up in the market-place of the world. Every passer-by strikes a chord on it,—most of them roughly. Because he is cursed with a dual nature, flesh and spirit always warring in him; because the very harmony of his creations springs from the discords of his temperament. Does Fruen never think?—I mean think of things outside the circle of her own immediate desires?"

There is more than sarcasm in his voice, there is a wish to probe under the surface of her "make-up," as he puts it to himself,—to get at the woman under that infernal corset.

"Sometimes!" she replies. She is not surprised, neither is she offended; he is a new type of man, and she is attracted powerfully. "I read more, I have got into a way of letting other people think for me. I used to think more when I was a girl than I do now. A quoi bon? Life is a bore."

"So? Why should it be? Isn't that your own fault?"

"No, I don't know that it is, quite. The things I have don't satisfy me. People seldom interest me for long, and the more one thinks, the more discontented one gets."

"But you do get discontented. That is a hopeful sign. With yourself, or things?"

"Both!" with a sudden inspiration. "Tell me something: what do you see when you get that absent look? You had it awhile ago."

He flushes this time. "Only thoughts, Frue,—thoughts that find words, and glide into verses,—mayhap into print,—to lie on a shelf,—perhaps wrap butter!"

"Oh, poetry! I hate poetry!" He turns and looks at her. "Except folk-songs. I'd much sooner read prose. I hate bothering with metre, and dodging about after the verb; one gets at the heart of the thing—at least I do—best in plain prose. I don't believe that women, as a rule, do like poetry as well as men. I believe we have really much less sentiment in us. No," with a coaxing intonation, "tell me what you see in plain prose; tell me the truth!"

He smiles, and she marvels at the softening of the stern lines, and the new tone in his voice.

"The truth? Does Fruen think she could stand the truth? Truth doesn't wear a fig-leaf!"

"Fruen will try!"

There is a long silence, and then he says, half musingly,—

"Close your eyes, Fruen, and look down over all the cities of the world; look with your inner eyes, try to pierce to the soul of things: what do you see? Shall I tell you what I see? A great crowd of human beings. Take all these men, male and female, fashion them into one colossal man, study him, and what will you find in him? Tainted blood; a brain with the parasites of a thousand systems sucking at its base and warping it; a heart robbed of all healthy feelings by false conceptions, bad conscience, and a futile code of morality,—a code that makes the natural workings of sex a vile thing to be ashamed of; the healthy delight in the cultivation of one's body as the beautiful perfect sheath of one's soul and spirit, with no shame in any part of it, all alike being clean, a sin of the flesh, a carnal conception to be opposed by asceticism,—a code that has thrown man out of balance and made sexual love play far too prominent a part in life (it ought to be one note, not even a dominant note, in the chord of human love); a code that demands the sacrifice of thousands of female victims as the price of its maintenance; that has filled the universe with an unclean conception of things, a prurient idea of purity, making man a great sick man. Divide him into units again, drop them into their separate places, and look down at them: a hungry, ignorant crowd swarming like flies over a dust-heap in search of enough to keep them alive for the day. Look down to the market-places of the world, and watch the jugglers at play,—the jugglers of religion and morality. What a motley crowd of followers each one can claim, and how they applaud with satisfaction as the gilded balls are tossed before them! Look at the domes and spires and minarets of the houses of worship; listen to the preachers shrieking from the pulpits; listen how their voices roll out, and are lost in the chink of the money-changers' coins, and the clamor of the Bourse in the great squares. See, there comes a procession, headed by cardinals who spend their lives in deciding theological quibbles as futile as the famous one of 'how many angels can dance on the point of a needle'! And as it passes on, with its mitres, and costly robes, and swinging censers, and waxen lights in silver candelabra, and trappings worth a prince's ransom, the crowd cry 'Alleluia' for the space of a second, only to return to their bartering and their 'Buy, buy, buy!' and the last chant of the choir is drowned by the raucous voice of the latest novelty-vender. 'I am the only true Church; in me seek salvation! Anathema maranatha be to him who believeth not in me!' cry the heralds of the older creeds of the state, and their words are swallowed by a crash of cymbals, rattle of tambourines, and the swell of brass instruments and voices singing in hysterical frenzy of Jordan rivers and golden streets to the latest music-hall air. You, deafened by the many voices, ask which is the true belief? And a feeble voice replies to you, and says, 'Do good for good's sake, without thought of heaven or fear of hell.' And stepping forth, he cries that the halls are gilded; points to the cracks in the pedestals upon which the gods stand; and the exponents of the creeds look frightened, and the partisans of each rally round and cry their particular 'Crucify him!' There is a volley of stones, a rush of hurrying feet, a little blood, a few gray hairs, and the voice is silenced; so much for religion. And I look to the rulers of the world, and I see an emperor hold up a withered hand; and yet in that hand the threads of the destinies of nations are held as an old wife curls the flax from her distaff; and he tangles them into a ball, and throws it down, with his gauntlet, to the other nations, and says, 'Fight for it!' And trumpets call, and the land trembles under the beat of marching feet, and rings with the clangor of arms; and men leave their ploughs, and the hammer ceases to ring on the village anvils, and dust covers the saw-dust beneath the carpenter's bench, and the group at the door of the village inn is made up of red-eyed women with tear-worn cheeks, forsaken sweethearts, senile gray beards, and half-grown youths, thirsting for tidings of the men who have marched from them; and away on the battle-fields where the brethren of Christ, the Peacemaker, meet as foes, the brown earth is soaked with blood, and the vultures, with gore-dripping beaks, flap heavily from dead horse to conscious men, alike their prey. And I see factory doors open, and troops of men and women and children, apologies for human beings,—narrow-chested, stunted, with the pallor of lead poisoning, in their haggard faces,—troop out of them; and as they laugh wearily, their teeth shake loosely in their blue-white gums, and they are too tired to wash the poison off their hands before their scanty meals. And I see great monopolies eating away the substance of the people, and magnificent chapels built in memory of railway kings who ruined thousands of women and children, and I say, 'So much for the rulers!'

*From "Discords." Copyrighted by Roberts Brothers, Boston, Mass

"And I said to myself, 'Salvation lies with the women, and the new race they are to mother.' I sought out women I had heard of whose names were identified with advancement; and I found them no whit less eager to employ every seduction at their command to win men over to their particular narrow cause, than their frivolous sister to keep him at her beck and call. And she who flaunted the white banner of purity calculated the cut of her evening frock, and enticed men to walk under her banner by the whiteness of her breast. And underneath it all I saw Vanity, the old insatiable love of power that is the breath of most women's nostrils, or the physiological necessity for excitement that belongs to the wavering cycle of her being; and I found no woman to whom if I had said, 'Love is a divine gift, it is the strength of the game of life! Come with me, work with me; be the mother of my children to come; let us try to live the broad life purely and soberly, in like freedom for the development of the best in each of us,' who would have placed her hand in mine with the courage of womanhood sure of herself, and come. I had illusions in those days. I sought my Rachel well. I would have served my time for her patiently; but I found her not. Sometimes I thought I had found her, but it was only a mask, with sawdust at the back of it. For if I buried my face in her neck to smell the sweetness of herself,—faugh! she reeked of distilled perfumes and scented powders. If I uncoiled her hair, it came off in my hand, and the roots grew dark to mock the gold of its length. And when I spoke to her of little children, she looked bored; for little children spoil one's figure and dim the lustre of one's eyes. And when I saw how skilled they were in converting their bodies into targets for men, I said, 'Man need not trouble to woo woman, for she can calculate to the finest point the cut of her gown on her hips, the flutter of lace on her bust. She knows how to reach him at his worst by deliberate calculation of dress, and then sell herself or her daughter to the one who can pay the most for trappings to set her off.' And I went amongst the advanced women,—some on platforms, some in clubs, some buttonholing senators in the lobby of the senate, or cooing politics or social economy over afternoon tea; and I knew that in hovels and cellars, in the dens of the 'angel-makers,' the fore-doomed fruitage of human mating wailed pitifully on heaps of reeking straw, sucking their lean thumbs hungrily; and no woman of the crowd of reformers had courage enough to cut the father if she knew him to be amongst her acquaintance. And still I sought amongst the petticoated crowd. I conned the inscriptions upon the banners,—suffrage, purity, equal wage; I looked underneath, and I said that with some it was a pastime, but with most, 'suppressed sex' was having its fling. I turned from them, and went into a lighted square; and the rippling laughter of women's voices fell softly as the churring of ring-doves in my ears, soothing after the chattering shrieks of 'wrongs' of the women I had left;—and I was surrounded by women, some just crossed girlhood, some alluring in the ripeness of womanhood, some old, painted into fictitious youth, making age despicable. The frou-frou of silken skirts, the tap of little heels on the pavement, the heaviness of perfumes, the touch of their hands as they slipped them under my arm or searched my pockets, enervated me; dark eyes smiled at me, and blue eyes grew deeper as they met mine, and I had to wrench myself free to save myself, asking as I fled, 'With how many of these is it just selection? Surely here is the place to begin,—here, where women are on sale in a public mart.' And I saw men hurrying past the place I had just quitted, with tender girls on their arms; and these all had bandages over their eyes,—and I asked, 'Why are they blindfolded?' for I noticed that many peeped out under the bandages when a male step passed by, and that in all a morbid curiosity gleamed. And the men made answer, 'I would keep her from eating of the tree of knowledge, for she is my one ewe lamb; I would keep her from the understanding of evil until tomorrow, when I deliver her into her husband's hands,—an ignorant virgin.' Her betrothed hastened up, and he too shielded her from the wanton crowd on the pavement; and as one more bold than the rest pressed towards the girl, he shoved her brutally aside, so that she fell and cut herself sorely. And the women with the banners marching by that way, passed her with cold indifference, for they too must be protected and kept clean at all cost, and I marvelled anew, thinking 'Verily, the price is great!' But the Jezebel whom he had struck staggered on to her feet again, and, stepping near to him, whispered with a triumphant smile on her cracked lips, 'You can open the book of life for her,—fitting exponent of the text of evil; for have I not taught you? Have not I given you a bridal gift for her, and her children, and her children's children,—a fatal crimson flower, with far-reaching tendrils? The flower of revenge of me and my sisters. I know you well. You have forgotten me, for I was but one of the many embraced in a night of passion, and forgotten with the dawn of the day. Go to your unsoiled dove; were her eyes not blindfolded, she would be loath to take you!' So much for women!"

To be continued.

HUMAN RIGHTS: By J. Madison Hook. With an introduction by E. C. Walker. "Liberty is the guiding star of all lands, all races." Chapter I., Rights; Chapter II., Invasion; Chapter III., Co-operation; Chapter V., Individualism; Chapter V., Liberty. Price, ten cts.

702.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Ruled by the Tomb.

A Discussion of Free Thought and Free Love.

BY ORFORD NORTHCOTE.

"The world for the most part is ruled by the tomb, and the living are tyrannized over by the dead. Old ideas, long after the conditions under which they were produced have passed away, often persist in surviving. Many are disposed to worship the ancient,—to follow the old paths, without inquiring where they lead, and without knowing exactly where they wish to go themselves."—"Marriage and Divorce," H. G. Ingersoll, p. 5.

Price, ten cents. For sale at this office.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 10 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 30 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 30 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.
This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1394 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H. Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address Moses Harman, 1394 Congress st., Chicago.

The Adult for February

Contains Music, Religion and Sex, (I.) by Orford Northcote; Malthus, by Lady Cook; "Love's Coming of Age," by Sagittarius; The Sex Philosophy of Exeter Hall, by W. F. Denton; The Divine Woman, by William Platt; Two Gifts, by Edward Carpenter; Wonderland, (a poem,) by Amy C. Morant; The Home and the Family, by Robert Braithwaite; Controversial Correspondence William Platt and the Adult. Price, 10 cents. $1 a year.

"Loma" —A CITIZEN OF VENUS," by Prof. Wm. Windsor. A story of surpassing interest, largely devoted to Sexologic and Sociologic problems. Like Bellamy in his 'Looking Backward," the writer of "Loma" believes in the "state," as a factor in social evolution, but individualists will probably forgive this feature for the sake of the radically revolutionary ideas in regard to popular theories—sexologic, theologic, cosmologic, etc. Substantially printed and artistically bound. Price, post-paid, $1.50. Address this office.

The Outcome of Legitimation. By Oswald Dawson. This address was to have appeared in the January "Adult," but the printers of that number played Bowdler on a small scale, and refused to print it, alleging that the matter which they did print was "bad enough, but we are printing that and decline to print more." The lecture deals with some problems arising from the practicalization of the theories of free love. Price, 5 cents. For sale at this office.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting exposition of the present industrial situation, and a strong appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cents per dozen.

Books Worth Reading, FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation; Albert Chavannes, .15
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .05
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman, .05
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr. .05
The Right Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wachi, .05
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .05
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .05
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address

M. HARMAN, 1394 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 25 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governor has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 15 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindal. Price 10 cents.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the cure of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department O, 121 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64. Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1037, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr Wood, 121 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook sexual liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 10 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "Talk About Anarchist Communism," Nos. 1 and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 30 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whitlock. With portrait of Author. 190 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.

Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
Box 132, San Jose, Cal.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 12. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, MARCH 23, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 703.

Slaves to Custom.

They are slaves who will not speak
For the fallen and the weak.
They are slaves who will not choose
Hatred, scoffing and abuse—
They are slaves who will not be
In the right with two or three.

—Lowell.

Plumb-Line Penographs.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Some of the women in Philadelphia who oppose the establishment of a foundling hospital in that city say that such an institution would promote immorality. Of course, as usual, considerations of humanity are mere bagatelles in comparison with "moral" fetiches.

* * *

Some years ago Edward Parker Deacon murdered a man in Paris because he thought or thought he thought that his victim and Mrs. Deacon were lovers. Of course he escaped all punishment. In modern society jealous fools with homicidal tendencies and sheriffs who shoot laborers in the back have carte blanche to do as they please. Through all the years following the cowardly assassination Mrs. Deacon has said no word in defense or explanation. Two years after that event Deacon admitted he had misunderstood her character and had imbrued his hands in blood for nothing. Last fall he was admitted to an insane asylum. There is room for him there but the whole country would have to be roofed over if all who condone such atrocious crimes as his were put under similar needed restraint. He is merely one of the representatives and one of the victims of popular ignorance, superstition and cruelty.

* * *

A woman arraigned in Philadelphia for larceny accounted for the presence of a sheet belonging to another woman in her bundle in this way: "I didn't steal the sheet; it must have been the devil who put it there." Religion has lost so much of its potency, even in Pennsylvania, that the court refused to accept the explanation, and yet the defense was perfectly orthodox. At this late day, both within and without the church, when an individual has said some particularly brilliant thing or done some especially good or some very bad act, men and women confidently assure us that he was inspired by a god or a devil or a spirit. This woman, pleading not guilty to the charge of larceny and shouldering her apparent offense upon the "devil," is just as likely to be right as are those good persons who tell me that whatever I do or say that they think is out of the ordinary comes from "the Lord," or from the "spirit world." Science has only just commenced its educational work.

* * *

Will Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott follow his logic to its legitimate conclusion? Recently, he said from his pulpit, answering a question regarding prohibition: "Every man is to decide the question of wine drinking, as well as every other ethical question, for himself. Your conscience is given to guide you, not to control your neighbors." If Dr. Abbott is sincere and knows what he is talking about, he is honestly committed to the free love position. The words which I have italicised are a clear and distinct affirmation that the love relations of each man and of each woman are to be determined by the conscience-laws of that man and of that woman and by no other person nor by any aggregation of persons. Each individual's conscience can do no more in matters pertaining to sex than to guide him or her—it can not become a law for that individual's neighbors. That is the Plymouth pastor's thought, as he has formulated it, but if he means what he has said, why does he give his tacit and presumably active sanction and support to the dominant political and social institutions which definitely, continually, flagrantly and viciously deny and trample the principle of non-invasion which he has enunciated?

* * *

In a recent case decided in Pennsylvania it was held that a woman who claimed property rights was not the legal widow of the decedent, her alleged marriage to him being unlawful because of the fact that he was a co-respondent with her in a divorce suit brought by her (first) husband, although several children and a grandchild survive her union with the decedent. As will be perceived, the state here claims that its own act in joining this man and woman was unlawful because it had charged the woman with committing an illegal act prior to its joining of the two persons. That is, while recognizing the right of children to inherit from their parents, it nullifies this principle by its own unwarranted interference with the ante-nuptial affairs of the parents. In other words, it makes its first crime the warrant for the commission of a second. What is the way out? Accept the principle that sex association gives no property rights to either partner, put business contracts between men and women on the same basis (ignoring all thought of actual or possible sex relations) as business contracts between men and men and women and women, and let inheritance, in the absence of a will, be determined by the fact of parentage, without reference to the form or duration of the mating of the father and mother. We can trust the natural love and solicitude of free women and men for their offspring to do substantial justice in a vastly greater proportion of cases than such justice is done under the existing servile system.

* * *

I recently endeavored to make clear the rationale of the changing beliefs of men and women in respect to variety vs. monogamy. It is not necessary to now defend my position against attacks. It rests on human observation and experience and will withstand all assaults. Of course I have not said that old men and women can not reason at all because they have lost their feelings—that persons learn simply by their feelings. That would be preposterous. But I have said that it is safe to assume that men who in the years of their physical vigor were varietists and who in later life argue against variety have forgotten; it is easier to understand this than it is to understand why, if variety does not minister to an imperative human need, generation after generation of stalwart men are varietists in desire even if not always in practice. Old men and women can and do reason, but in a matter so closely related to vitality and the springtime impulses of man as is sexuality it is extremely injudicious for old persons (and it should not be forgotten that some persons are as old at forty as others are at sixty) to take it for granted that their later conclusions are more likely to be valid merely because they are aged than were the less deliberately formed deductions of their earlier years. Inasmuch as those earlier years cover the period of life initiation (for the offspring) and of development (for the adults) it is reasonable to think that the sexual needs of the organism are more strongly and truly expressed at that time than after the organism has turned down the slope toward the sunset. It is ever needful to be very careful in theorizing from the data of the emotions, but when the emotions under consideration are those most intimately connected with or springing from the forces of growth, we must admit that these emotions are quite important indications of the constitution and claims of the organism. If we seek knowledge concerning the food and tillage the plant or tree requires we study it and experiment with it during the spring and summer rather than in the autumn when its leaves are yellowing and falling or in the winter when it stands naked and sleep-locked.

* * *

Julian Hawthorne, inheritor of a famous name, is a strange compound of moral sanity and lunacy. Some time ago, commenting in the New York "Journal" on the reinstatement in society of Mrs. Drayton-Haig, the daughter of the Mrs. Astor who is the leader of the "400," Mrs. Drayton-Haig having been the heroine of the J. Coleman Drayton-Hallett Alsop Borrowe scandal, Mr. Hawthorne said:

> The day when Mrs. Astor announces that her daughter, because she is her daughter, may be accused without stamping out every vestige of the accusation as absolutely false, she signs the death warrant of social law and order; no ascertainable rule of social propriety any longer exists; the factitious respect we have hitherto paid to the "400," their artificial ascendency over us, are at an end. The issue must be either lunacy or a new dispensation; and in either event the "400" must go down.

Julian Hawthorne is an eminently judicial gentleman. He deliberately reverses the rule that the accused person has the benefit of the doubt, and proposes that Mrs. Haig or her mother for her prove a negative. She is to be assumed to be guilty; the onus of proof must rest upon her; her accusers can make whatever charge they please and then lie back and laugh at her if she essays to hunt down their accusations or sneer and insinuate further if she remain silent under reproach and denunciation. Mr. Hawthorne must be in training for a judgeship as the successor of Woodward of Wilkesbarre, in line for promotion. Of course it is nothing new, this social inquisition which condemns the woman before the evidence is examined, but there was some reason to expect better of Julian Hawthorne, who several years ago placed himself in a position of antagonism to the Comstock phase of our social insanity. Whatever her motive, Mrs. Astor does liberty a service when she shows that it is possible for a woman to ignore the outeries of Grundy and yet maintain her position in "respectable" society.

Individualism and Communism.

BY WILLIAM G. SCOTT.

In No. 696 of Lucifer appeared an article entitled "An Object Lession in Economics," in which the writer shows that after years of fair and liberal dealing with his employes they have at last been the cause of his ruin in business.

"Cast not your pearls before swine," came to my mind as I read the lines. Mr. Frank's emotional nature was too strong for his judgment, and he has suffered the consequences; while it is probably very doubtful if those who benefited by his emotional tendencies were bettered thereby, except from a money point of view. If their intellects have not been broadened by his humane treatment then Mr. Frank has simply thrown his money away to the extent that he paid them more than the market price of labor. This would seem to be the case from the fact that they have now turned on him and helped to bring about his ruin. Until a man's intellect is developed sufficiently to appreciate such generous acts as those of Mr. Frank's, it is useless to contribute very much to his animal comforts. It is wasted effort. Men, or women, can not be developed in groups, —communistically,—because it is not in the course of nature. The best, and I might say the only way, is to pick out, here and there as you find them, the ones who are already sufficiently developed to grasp the advance thought of the scientific thinkers of the age—especially does this apply to the realm of social economics.

Had Mr. Frank's better judgment, or reason, prevailed against his emotionalism he might today still be in a position to help the cause he loves so well, while his workmen would probably be no worse off, and he would also be able to take the rest he so richly deserves and doubtless needs after so many years of hard work. Of course he enjoyed himself in doing as he did. He simply followed the line of least resistance, but I think I can see that had he possessed better control over his feelings the cause of liberty might have been better served by him.

I am not writing this to find fault with what Mr. Frank has done; that were useless. Built as he was he could not have done otherwise. I believe that the development of the individual must come first, and that on the development of the units depends the elevation of the whole community to a higher plane of life.

Now I wish to say a few words about the effort that is to be made by the author of "Hilda's Home," to establish a home in accordance with the idea contained in her story. I will not say I am opposed to it for these people have the right to try any experiment they see fit to try. At the same time I will give some reasons why I would not be willing to join such an enterprise.

First. It will be almost impossible to find even a very small number of people who can harmonize on all or even many of the points involved. More especially will this be the case after rules and regulations have been made for the conduct of the scheme, for as I understand it there are to be no servants employed and there will necessarily be considerable work to be performed. Here will be a great opportunity for disagreement.

Second. As soon as these people, with their radical social ideas, separate themselves from their neighbors, even to the extent of a very few of them living together according to their peculiar ideas, they will begin to attract attention. This will bring espionage, then ostracism and persecution, and perhaps imprisonment.

If answer is made that none of this exposure is necessarily a part of the scheme then I say that my experience among ignorant people as neighbors, who are continually prying into their neighbors' affairs, counts for nothing.

On the other hand these same people could get together for social intercourse in a large city, first at one place and then another, at their private homes or rooms, or occasionally in a public or semi-public place or hall, and enjoy each other's company without exciting the curiosity or suspicion of any one. At any rate, if curiosity should be aroused on any particular occasion in the mind of outsiders the chances are that the incident would soon be forgotten and no bad result follow.

Another point to be made against the "home" is this: The people so associating would place themselves under restraints,—necessarily so, in order to keep outsiders from becoming a nuisance (personally), thereby rendering subterfuge and deceit necessary to self-defense. This restraint of itself would be a curtailment of personal liberty utterly unnecessary in connection with the coming together at different places and at times to suit any number, from two up, instead of as an aggregation.

Remember, also, that "familiarity often breeds contempt." It is more than likely that disagreements would arise. In such a case some one would have to retire. If forced to leave, or if they left voluntarily because of something that proved to be unbearable—perhaps a personal matter—is it to be supposed they would say nothing to outsiders of the affair? Here again you encounter the danger of becoming known to the public as peculiar people, if nothing worse.

From the above considerations I believe the scheme to be impracticable.

Case of Leroy Berrier.

BY JAMBLICHUS.

The administration of justice, so-called, is in a very crude condition in St. Paul, Minn. District Attorney Stringer rattles around there with very little idea of the dignity of his office, and with no conception of the good that might be done were his place occupied by a straightforward, cleanly man.

Miss Bee Taylor is a bright little schoolmarm of St. Paul, and of late years she has taken to publishing a paper, "Truth," with a view to improving the condition of the public schools of that city, and in pursuance of her purposes she printed at great length an account of some alleged gallant improprieties of one Gilbert, at that time a school superintendent, in connection with one of the female teachers. With an alertness which showed wonderfully tender consideration and friendliness toward this Gilbert, Stringer procured the indictment of this brave little editor and tried to get her convicted under the blackmail law for mailing obscene matter, but somehow the jury had some scruples against sending a good little woman to prison just to gratify Stringer and his vile associates, and so Bee was acquitted.

Mr. Albert M. Lawton is another editor in St. Paul, and approving Miss Taylor's motives and purposes he reprinted in his paper, "The Breeze," a very small part only of the voluminous affidavits, charges, statements, etc., which had appeared in "Truth." So to satisfy this Moloch of Justice Mr. Lawton was indicted as well, and a propitious fate having smiled upon Stringer's efforts, he was convicted and thereupon adequately fined in due and regular process of justice as administered in St. Paul, for of course the administration of justice could not go on without convicting and fining somebody even although this were only a partial satisfaction for Gilbert's revenge.

Now this Stringer whose marvelous achievements in shuffling and dealing out justice have been accompanied with such discriminating results is the same fellow who some time ago considered that his manhood's purity required him to pitch into Mr. Leroy Berrier of Minneapolis and so after appropriate legal skirmishing and some resistance on the part of Mr. Berrier, he as well as Mr. Lawton was convicted and fined fifty dollars as a salve to Stringer's wounded purity.

But Stringer's impurities have got the better of him again and require more salve, so he has once more pitched into Mr. Berrier who at the present writing stands indicted under the accomodating and elastic charge of having mailed obscene matter, and tried must he be! And if Stringer can fill the minds of the jury with a superstitious prejudice against Mr. Berrier and make them think that as a consequence of Berrier's living and moving and having his being in Minnesota the terrors of Sodom are about to break forth and engulf that noble state then will Berrier again become a victim of the justice according to St. Paul and Stringer will get salve enough to last him until the next outbreak.

As a matter of fact, however, Mr. Berrier is a noble, serious, earnest, devoted worker, and has done more to promote an honest purity and a cleanly and dignified conception of sex than a thousand Stringers. It is pitiful therefore that there is not at the head of the Department of Justice in this country an integrity which at such a time might stand forth and with stern command forbid the threatened victimizing of a man whose beneficent work is as far reaching as that of Leroy Berrier.

Crudities Criticised—No. 2.

BY FRANCIS BARRY.

Alvin Warren is an old and valued friend, an able, conscientious, and, sometimes, charming writer, and, if he could keep a reliable party at his elbow to furnish him with facts, would be a first-class historian. But as he has to depend, more or less, upon the loose-jointed statements of slack-twisted persons, (of which sort there is, in the present transition, a great over production,) some of his history has to be taken at a discount.

The ichthyosaurus was a useful member of society, so is the skunk, and, while I, personally, have no use for the gossip, and think he or she would do at least one good thing by dying, at his or her earliest convenience, of colic or the grip, I have no doubt that the supreme economist, Nature, has some use even for this most pestiferous of all pests. Some shrewd and practical people do not seem to have made the discovery that the gossip is a liar per se.

Warren says: (Lucifer Jan. 12) that John Patterson "went back to marriage." John Patterson came to Berlin, with his family, about forty years ago. He lived with his family during the ten years I remained with the socialists. After an absence of five years I visited Berlin. Patterson was still living with his family. I stayed away nine years and visited again. He was still with his family, and, doubtless, remained with them to the day of his death. What his special relations were, with Mrs. Patterson or whether there was any change in their relationship, during the near forty years, I do not know; neither, I suppose, does Warren.

Before Patterson came to Berlin, he was the lover of the sweetest woman I ever knew, who was not a lover of mine. I knew more of her for her being a very dear friend of Cora Barry. Her death was a sorrow her lover carried with him to his grave. After he came to Berlin, Patterson was supposed to be the lover of two women, one at a time, "only this and nothing more." The first was a worthy person; the last was admired and loved by old and young, men and women, radicals and conservatives. I loved John Patterson for the women he loved. He was modest, reticent, unassuming, and the few clean men and cultured women who were so fortunate as to be able to win their way to his confidence, were profited by his clear perception and his deep philosophy, and charmed by his conversational power and his "sweet voice." In later years he was the companion of his books; several of the best of which he made himself. He spent several winters in Washington City, that he might frequent its libraries.

I have taken this space because I think it important to know whether this leader of radical thought, the contemporary and peer of Nichols and Andrews and Lazarus, was, like them, true to the last to his convictions and his cause, or whether he basely dishonored the one and gave the other a cruel blow from a cowardly apostate's hand.

Warren says that Patterson publisbed a recantation. When and where? I want "chapter and verse."

"His brother, Sam, went the same way." Samuel Patterson came to Berlin with a lover and two babies. He was criticised for being exclusive. But at last, despite the old saying, the love ended in friendship. The old lovers continued the very best of friends and mutual advisers. I never heard that any of the Pattersons ever had any domestic inharmony. A sister of John and Samuel was a perfect model of mildness of manner and sweetness of temper. Samuel became the lover of Mary Hall, Warren so highly and justly extols in his "Reminiscences." They were lovers till her death. After a while he found his third lover. As they were in business, and the free love agitation had ceased, they, very likely, as a matter of policy, had a legal ceremony, as did a few others, for a like reason. I do not know. If he ever kissed the fourth woman the offense was never reported to me.

In my next I shall refer to the women Warren tells about, and also to the Oneida people, who were not varietists, or free lovers of any sort.

LUCIFER, THE LIGHT-BEARER

PUBLISHED AT 1394 CONGRESS ST., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

European Representative, George Bedborough, 16 John Street, Bedford Row, London, W. C., England.

Our Name.

"LUCIFER: The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness."—Webster's Dictionary.

The name LUCIFER means LIGHT-BRINGING or LIGHT-BEARING and the paper that has adopted this name stands

For Light against Darkness—
For Reason against Superstition;
For Science against Tradition—
For Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—
For Liberty against Slavery—
For Justice against Privilege.

LUCIFER'S speciality is Sexology, or Sexologic Science, believing this to be the Most Important of all Sciences, because Most Intimately Connected with the origin or Inception of Life, when Character, for Good or Ill, for Strength or Weakness, for Happiness or Misery, for Success or Failure, is stamped upon Each Individual.

Published weekly. One dollar per year. Three months for twenty-five cents. Foreign subscribers will please add the postage to their respective countries.

Make all orders payable to Moses Harman, 1394 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill

To Extend Lucifer's Work.

The object of this fund is to send trial subscriptions to those who have not yet been made acquainted with Lucifer's educational work in sexologic science.

Previously acknowledged,	$412.17
Lucy N. Colman,	1.00
Morris Scheibel,	1.00
A Friend, (Mass.)	5.00

"Firebrand Fund."

The following sums have been received at this office for the benefit of "The Firebrand Group," A. J. Pope, Henry Addis and A. Isaak, convicted of violating the postal laws by depositing for mailing, copies of the "Firebrand."

Previously acknowledged,	$15.25
H. Celler,	.50

WILL "FIDELITY" send her real name and address to this office?

LUCIFER CIRCLE will meet Thursday, March 31, at 1394 W. Congress Street. R. B. Kerr, of New Denver, British Columbia, a frequent contributor to the columns of Lucifer and "Our New Humanity," will make the opening address. Subject: "Does Marriage Protect Women?"

PLEASE SEND US NAMES of women and men who would probably be interested in seeing a copy or a few copies of Lucifer—women and men who are thinkers and investigators in regard to the underlying facts, the hidden factors that produce the happiness and the miseries of human life.

"IT IS WOMEN, not men, who are the greatest bar to progress the world holds," says George Egerton in "The Regeneration of Two." This is another way of saying that human progress depends more upon woman than upon man. This is another way of saying that woman holds in her hand the making or the unmaking of human weal. None but a woman, and none but a woman of extraordinary genius could portray the inner workings of newly-wakened woman's mind, as does the author of the continued story, in this week's Lucifer.

"MEN, OR WOMEN, cannot be developed in groups—communistically, because it is not in the course of nature," is the opinion of W. G. Scott, see his article on "Individualism and Communism. As some of us see it, both are included in nature's methods. Individualism and socialism, egoism and altruism, are the two factors in human evolution, the two legs upon which humanity, as a personified entity, must stand,—or rather, must walk, for there is no standing still. If either leg is deprived of its rightful share of the life-blood of the organism the gait will be a limping gait, and progress will be slow and very unsatisfactory. The objections, urged by Friend Scott, against the scheme of building an ideal home may be well taken, or they may not; but whether surmountable or not, all the difficulties in the way should be carefully considered before making the venture. In discussing these problems, of how best to practicalize the higher ideals of social life, we ask our friends to be as concise and pointed as possible. The field is a large one, and the temptation to wander from the main points will be almost if not quite irresistible.

Familism and its Fruits.

The "Chicago Tribune," March 13, begins a leading editorial—headed "A War-like Era"—with the prediction that "the beginning of the year 1898 will be memorable in history as an epoch-making period." Proceeding in this vein the editor maintains that if we are not now to pass into a "war-like cycle" it will be because of the general knowledge that the advance in construction of war-engines has rendered "a conflict between first-class powers so destructive as to approach annihilation." He does not think peace will be maintained, or war avoided, if avoided, because of "any development of a spirit of amity or increased regard for the rights of each other among the nations of the earth."

The editor of this great metropolitan daily is not alone in predicting unusually troublous times in the near future; not alone in thinking that the agencies known as "peace societies," common schools, Sunday schools, churches, "fraternal" organizations, etc., etc., are powerless to prevent men from cutting each others' throats by the wholesale, or from making widows and orphans by the million. But whether the observers who thus think and thus predict, take time to look beneath the surface of things and to search for the hidden causes that make men resort to blood-letting to settle international difficulties, is a question not easily answered. Judging from the general tone of the press and of the public forum the average observer sees surface causes only. He does not see that the nations of the earth are simply families or aggregations of families, patriarchates, despotisms, built upon robbery as their chief corner stone, or underlying principle. Familism,—not the Christian sect by that name—means the negation of liberty. It means the right of the stronger sex to rule the weaker. It means the right of the father to rule and to rob his children and the mother or mothers that bear these children to him.

Familism means me and my family first, as against my clan or tribe. It means my clan or tribe as against all other clans or tribes. It means my nation, my aggregation of tribes, clans or races against all other aggregations of people whatsoever.

Familism is the negation of the doctrine of human solidarity.

Familism denies that an injury to one is the concern of all.

Familism says, "Do your neighbors or they will do you."

Under familism the vendettas of Kentucky and Tennessee, by which whole families have been in a manner annihilated, are legitimate and logical.

Under familism the feuds of the Scottish clans, lasting from generation to generation, were simply natural results of the working of natural but abnormal causes.

Under familism, or because of familistic influences, the aggregations called nations rush to battle for no reason whatever except to avenge an insult to the flag of their respective countries.

The national robberies called tariffs are the logical result of familism.

The enormous ill-gotten accumulations of the Vanderbilts, the Astors, the Rothschilds, etc., are all in perfect accord with familism.

The ineffably cruel robberies and murders of the poor by the coal barons of Pennsylvania and elsewhere are in full accord with the familistic principle.

"The ascent of life is the ascent of ideals." If familism, as we now have it, is the cause of feuds, vendettas, wars and wholesale robberies, then the first thing to do to remove these evils is to reconstruct our family ideals.

Is it because of the fact that the book called the "Old and the New Ideal" points to a radical reconstruction of family life that the United States government has suppressed it and fined and imprisoned its author? It looks that way.

International Censorship.

That the government of the United States is less free—is more completely under the control of ignorant prejudices and priestly codes of morality,—than is monarchical England, receives a fresh illustration in the treatment Lucifer and its friends are getting from the United States Custom House officials. Some time since a consignment of pamphlets was sent us by an English correspondent. In due course of time we received notification from the New York Custom House that the package could not be forwarded because "seized by the United States Government." Now the same correspondent writes us that the same thing has happened to two other packages sent by him to a New York agent of ours. Omitting names, for obvious reasons, we reproduce the statement returned from New York to our English correspondent:

Custom House, 18 and 20 Broadway, New York. Feb. 1898. "Messrs. G. W. W. and Co., Liverpool, Eng. Gentlemen: Referring to your 2 parcels 3 Ref. No. 24, S. S. Servia, Jan. 8, W. E. C., we beg to advise that same has been seized by the United States Government, being an illegal importation, under 16 July 24, 1897, as the contents are prohibited by law, being obscene printed matter. We are therefore unable to effect delivery. Very truly yours, the Morris Esropean and American Ex. Co. L'd. Dict. F. K.

Again, and for the ten millionth time, the old maxim receives confirmation that "acts speak louder than words." Americans boast that theirs is the freest government on earth, while their acts give the lie direct to their words. The prohibited books circulate without hindrance in England, Scotland and, presumably, in all the British dependencies. Instead of the proud distinction of being the standard-bearers of human liberty and progress the boastful Americans are rapidly earning the badge of infamy—the reputation of being the greatest foes to human liberty and progress now living. Freedom of speech and of press is the most important of all freedoms, because the palladium of all others, the guardian of all the others.

"THE ADULT" for March is to hand, and has been sent to all subscribers to same. The contributors to this number are Grant Allen, E. C. Walker, R. A. Gordon, M. D., Oswald Dawson, J. P. Gilmour, Orford Northcote and Lillian Harman—besides short shots by the editor, George Bedborough. A fuller notice of the March number of this the most revolutionary of all the English magazines will appear next week.

Emma Goldman in Chicago.

We have been requested to announce a series of lectures in this city by Emma Goldman of New York:

March 20, 8 P. M. at Benzo's Hall, corner Armitage and Milwaukee Aves. Subject: "Authority."

Monday 21, 8 P. M. at Zeph's Hall, corner Desplaines and W. Lake Sts.

Tuesday 22, 8 P. M. at Blum's Hall, 254 E. North Ave.

Thursday 24, 8 P. M. at Vorwart's Turner Hall, 1166 W. 12th St.

Friday 25, 8 P. M. at 535 Blue Island Ave., W. (Nagle's Hall.)

Saturday 26, 7 P. M. at Zeph's Hall, corner Desplaines and W. Lake Sts.

Wednesday 30, 8 P. M. at Ruehl's Hall, 224 W. 12th St., International Group, in English.

Thursday 31, 8 P. M. at Tauchman's Hall, corner W. 18th St. and Centre Ave. The Progressive Bohemian Labor-Organizations, English.

She is also announced to speak at 8 o'clock on the evening of Monday and Tuesday, March 28 and 29, also on the evenings of April 1 and 2, but the places are not given. For further particulars address Theo. Appel, 1360 N. Rockwell St.

Some Possible Consequences of War.

BY CHAS. GANO BAYLOR.

The first Napoleon declared that the possession of that decision of character which enabled a military commander at the critical moment to make the needed choice and sacrifice, was the one faculty which determined potentially the superiority of a commander. Applying this rule to Spain, in the event of war with the United States we shall see that the final issue of such a war may possibly turn upon whether Spain on the threshold of the struggle promptly makes the sacrifice demanded by the situation. If she attempts to hold and defend Cuba she is weakened at the start. If, however, she promptly sacrifices Cuba and Porto Rico and grants political independence to the islands, the United States is beaten. The war would then become at once a sea-combat, with the ocean as the arena, between the United States and Spain with Cuba and Porto Rico eliminated entirely from the conflict.

In such a purely naval war Spain would have the upper hand. She has no external commerce of consequence to be destroyed. The superior military strength of the United States would count for nothing in such a war. We could not land 100,000 men at any point on the Spanish coast. If we did they would be met by an overwhelmingly superior force and annihilated. In a war between Russia and Japan, for instance, Russia even with her close proximity to the Japanese coast could not land an invading army anywhere along the coast of the islands.

There was a time when the United States by simply appealing to the spirit of European Revolution could have set the whole European continent in flames. That time has passed. The masses of Europe have long since learned that America is not a Republic; that it is a despotism, all the more to be dreaded because it sails under false colors. The moral power of America as the upholder of liberty and as the asylum of the oppressed being gone, the naval war between the United States and Spain would be a conflict on the high seas between two despotisms. In such a conflict Spain would have everything to gain and nothing to lose (supposably having made in advance the needed sacrifice of Porto Rico and Cuba, and possibly of the Phillippine Islands—the latter conceded to Japan) while the United States would have everything to lose and nothing to gain, the rich Spanish West India Islands of Cuba and Porto Rico having passed beyond the reach of the annexationists. After two years of such a naval-guerilla war the entire mercantile marine of the United States, including her Coasting Trade marine would be swept from the ocean by privateers and cruisers. The increased rates of freight and insurance with organized smuggling on a colossal scale would destroy whatever of Foreign Commerce the Dingley Tariff Robbery bill left unappropriated. And possibly this may be the final result even if Spain attempts to hold Cuba and Porto Rico. That is, even if Spain attempts to hold Cuba and Porto Rico by the United States the occupation of Cuba and Porto Rico by the United States will not end the war. It will simply change its character, making it a purely naval conflict.

How long would the money grabbers who own the country stand that? How long could the already enslaved industrial stand that? How long could the already enslaved industrial masses of the United States be kept up to the patriotic "boiling point" by the plutocratic shouts of "Old Glory," "George Washington," "Drink Garfield Tea," "The Divine Constitution," "Our Sacred, Immaculate, Infallible, Federal, Judicial Czars," "Our National Aristocracy," including the "Pennsylvania Coal Barons," "Our Heaven-inspired, Evangelical Comstocks, "Parkhursts," "Sam Joneses" and "Moodys"?

A nation like the United States which has basely betrayed the cause of Humanity, and sold its liberties to its moneyed aristocracy and its religious bigots occupies dangerous ground. This dangerous foundation may be developed by a purely naval war with Spain as the final outcome of the Cuba affair; a naval war in which our formidable military forces will cut no figure, for there are two sides in every war, and a man of superior military and naval genius at Madrid may suddenly precipitate a conflict which may make it finally necessary for the enslaved masses in the United States to rise and overthrow the present incompetent and corrupt governing plutocratic class. In fact Spain as well as the United States may be revolutionised before the Cuba question is settled. Do not forget that Maceo and Gomez are negroes, and that the brave Revolutionists of Cuba are mostly negroes. Evolution reaches far and goes deep. The scraping of a match may start a conflagration which Niagara cannot quench.

Providence, R. I.

THE REGENERATION OF TWO.

BY GEORGE EGERTON.*

Love is the supreme factor in the evolution of the world.—Professor Drummond.

(Continued from last week.)

"I was but a youth; but my heart burned in me at the problems that presented themselves to me, and I returned home to my native place, and I wrote down these things, and I unveiled the hushed truths that carry betterment. And they deprived me of my office in the state; and woman, being a creature appreciative of the concrete, shunned me. For I had thrown aside a chance of endowing her with a social position; and men called me 'a crack-brained poet,' a madman, and now I have learned to lean on myself—"

She draws a long breath that is half a crying sigh.

The band is playing a wild Hungarian dance, and the beat of whirling feet comes down to them, and the laughter of men and women's voices, and away at a great distance a bell is tolling, and a dog barking with a sharp, excited yap, yap; but it seems to her that she is inside a circle, and that his voice alone reaches her. She feels her corset press her like an iron hand; she is shamed to the depths of her soul. The spots of rouge on her cheeks seem to sting as a sharp blow from a freshly gathered nettle; and she is conscious that she, who has all her life let men care for her, and closed her eyes without thought of their trouble, or what she may have done to them, —that she, who would have laughed at their presuming to find fault with her, only cares now because this one "crack-brained poet," outcast what you will, is the first man who has touched the underlying fibres of her nature. And she is the epitome of this class of women he lashes with his scorn! She cringes inwardly, and a dull pain stirs in her, and she queries impatiently, as so many others have done before her: What is this feeling, and from where does it come, making us the plaything of the inexplicable?

"Are you not ever lonely?" she asks.

"Yes, when I am ill. The only natural companion for man is woman. I seek now in nature what I failed to find in her. I lay my heart on the brown lap of earth, and close my eyes in delicious restfulness. I can feel her respond to me; she gives me peace without taxing me for a return. I sought that in woman, for I thought to find her nature's best product,—of all things closest in touch with our common mother. I hoped to find rest on her great mother heart; to return home to her for strength and wise counsel,—for it is the primitive, the generic, that makes her sacred, mystic, to the best men. I found her half man, or half doll. No, it is women, not men, who are the greatest bar to progress the world holds."

Her thoughts have been clamoring for words as he speaks, and as his voice dies away she asks, half defiantly, half timidly,—

"Perhaps more of us than you think recognize the truth of what you say. In our girlhood we perhaps ask; but such questions are not easily answered: one seeks to spare youth from disillusion. And don't you think," there is a shake in her voice, and the man watches her, shading his eyes with his hands, "that you are rather hard on—us dolls? Perhaps we too have our lonely hours,—hours in which we ask ourselves what it is we need to complete us? Perhaps we seek a key to the enigma of our own natures; we try man after man to see if he hold it. Do you think, taking them on an average, that they could give it to us? You are hard on us," with a touch of sadness, "for perhaps we are merely the playthings of circumstances, contradictions, leading a dual life, . . . our varying moods bound up with the physiological gamut of our being. We have been taught to shrink from the honest expression of our wants and feelings as violations of modesty, or at least good taste. We are always battling with some bottom layer of real womanhood that we may not reveal; the primary impulses of our original destiny keep shooting out mimosa-like threads of natural feeling through the outside husk of our artificial selves, producing complex creatures." Her voice vibrates with feeling, and she marvels at her own words and where she finds expression for her thoughts. "One layer in us reverts instinctively to the time when we were just the child-bearing half of humanity, and no more, waging war with the new layers that go to make up the fragile latter-day product, with the disinclination to burden itself with motherhood. And our powder and our paints! Aren't they rather tributes to the decay of chivalry in your own sex? It's not to woman, but to pretty woman man pays deference. So much," with bitterness, "for the dolls, as you call them; . . . and the de-sexualized half-man, with a pride in the absence of sex-feeling, reckoning it as the sublimest virtue to have none,—what is she but the outcome of centuries of patient repression? Repress and repress,—how many generations has it gone on? You must expect some return for it,—if you get the man-woman as a result! Well, I have known some feminine men, too. Isn't feminization a result of all civilization, and isn't," with desperation, "it that perhaps you resent most?"

She has risen to her feet, and is leaning against a slender fir tree; she is quivering with excitement. The man still watches her under his hand.

"I have been a coward, because I have half felt these things, but I never knew till today that I could put my thoughts into words, and maybe after today I shall turn over a new leaf, and put more into my life, or more of myself into it."

Her voice is steady now, and her eyes are shining. The man has risen to his feet, and the steamboat passes towards the landing-stage. They seem to have changed places, for he is watching her, and she only thinks of herself. She feels as if her inmost soul is laid bare, as if she cannot face the people, possible acquaintances on the boat, in her present mood. She is so stirred that she forgets the man near her, forgets everything, save the new conception of life forming in her, her mighty need of being alone, to sift the thoughts that are crowding in upon her. She lifts her gown and turns up the slope, crosses the road crowded with chatting people, and is only then aware that he and the dog are following her. She passes the standing-place, where the drosche drivers are grouped, waiting for their fares, and takes the road leading back to the town. The man scans her face with surprise. Somehow, it seems different to him; he tries to recall the first impression it made upon him, but cannot. He is acutely conscious of the rustle of her gown, the swing of her hips, and the varying expressions that chase one another across her face. Something of her disturbance communicates itself to him. An empty drosche comes slowly up to them; as it reaches them, she holds up her hand and stops it. The driver pulls up and waits. As she stands still, she notices that three little white pebbles form a triangle at her feet, and that the driver is a man who has driven her before. She is searching for something to say to this man beside her; and an unreasoning anger against herself, against him, and against the mysterious forces that make it possible for an unknown vagabond—she repeats the epithet to herself; it seems to mitigate her self shame—to disturb her; forces that she feels it is useless to struggle against, because one has no key to their origin. She notices that she is as tall as he is, and that now, when she can examine him closely, he looks nervous and suffering, as if the sword is wearing the scabbard; and she feels sorry. Her face softens; she smiles as she says,—

"Adieu, then, and thank you for everything you said!" She stoops, and pats the little beast's head, and turns towards the shabby old drosche. He opens the door for her, and waits, hat in hand. She steps in, and he shuts it.

"Thank you! A pleasant journey!" The wheels give one turn. "I hope you'll find that perfect female!" she adds mischievously; it is the parting flippancy of her old self.

"Au revoir, Frøen!" is his only reply. The driver jerks the reins, and urges the horse on, with the peculiar noise Norsk horses seem to expect as a right. She looks back; he is still standing, with the cur at his side, and something in the lonely figure standing in the quiet evening touches her. She feels a warm rush of feeling for him, a desire to be good to him; she waves her hand, and watches, until he becomes a tiny speck in the twilight of the pearl-white summer night.

To be continued.

*From "Discords." Copyrighted by Roberts Brothers, Boston, Mass

VARIOUS VOICES.

V. O. Smith, Leyton, England:—Having just seen and read a copy of the Lucifer I agree entirely with its brave, bold and perfectly correct ideas. Now, please send me the following books: "A Physician in the House," $2.75; the "Great Combination Offer," twenty-five cents, and "Hilda's Home," paper cover, fifty cents, per return mail. I enclose $3.50, as required.

Wesley Jewell, Humboldt, Kan.:—Find enclosed two dollars on subscription, and fifty cents for the pamphlet containing "Motherhood in Freedom" and "Combination Offer No. 2." In regard to the paper, it is to my mind one of the best publications on earth. Continue the work, Brother Harman. With an assistant so able as Lillian you certainly will succeed. Yours for pure individualism and free love—the two being inseparable.

Elmina D. Slenker, Snowville, Va.:—I have just received a set of Berrier's books and as they fit in so well with "Diana," "Karezza," "Vital Force" and other works on that plane of thought, I wish to speak a good word for them to Lucifer readers, and ask them to secure them for themselves. We can never learn too much on this most important of all subjects, scientific sexualism, and the conservation of creative force. Berrier's "First Lessons" is only fifty cents, and I'm sure all who read them will want his "Creative Force." We live to learn.

"Ever the beginning;
Ever the growth, the rounding of the circle;
Ever the summit, and the merge at last,
To surely start again."

—Whitman.

H. W. Hunt, Federalsburg, Pa.:—I like Lucifer mainly for the reason that in its columns I find the latest news from the advance picket line of reform. These accounts are, on the whole, inspiring. Progress is and has been slow but sure. Just how much has been accomplished no one can tell, but that much has been done the writers and the growth of Lucifer abundantly testify.

That men are slow, even the most advanced, to break away from ancient superstitions and antiquated customs the columns of so radical a paper as Lucifer, even, will clearly show. That human beings are wont to talk much, and endure even more, before they make any attempt to improve their condition by action the history of the past will abundantly prove.

What a terrible load a man has to carry who does his own thinking! Even professed "Freethinkers" cry out in the anguish of their soul: "The burden is greater than I can bear," and beseechingly they stretch out their hands to Mother Grundy and to the church, imploring relief from the strain imposed upon them by this exercise. In spite of all these obstacles I see that an effort is likely to be made to put in practical operation the revolutionary ideas embodied in "Hilda's Home," somewhere on the shores of Puget Sound, and for this evidence of practical progress I am devoutly thankful.

The air is filled with Co-operation, Socialism and Communism, and now a few noble souls appear to have caught the infection and will make another attempt to erect a temple in the wilderness, dedicated to righteousness and true holiness. May they have wisdom to cast behind them their inherited superstitions and, in the rising light of the twentieth century may they lay their foundations on the bed-rock of truth and raise thereon a colony that shall be a haven where the weary souls of earth may flock for safety from the tempests of competitive greed and of ignorant selfishness.

Mrs. M. C. Shay, Mayflower, Fla.:—I have not noticed the wrapper of Lucifer nor the paper either, since I find it a pronounced advocate of variety in sex relations. At first I objected to some contributors, supposing Lucifer a paper devoted to investigation of the causes of the abuses of sex, to exposing the awful results and finding a remedy. I did believe and still think Mr. Harman sincere, but, like most good men, too easily influenced by plausible friends. Our body is the temple of the spirit. Things pure must come from a pure atmosphere. We know excess will pollute the body, yet we may supply our wants. A healthy appetite enjoys food; excess is punished by disease; failing energy is restored by stimulants. Excess brings imbecility. The emotions are soothed by responsive affection but excess brings the most cruel punishment to parents and offspring. I have tried to draw attention to this most serious matter, but men have not moral courage, and women, as a rule, care only to please men; the exceptions are not allowed publicity.

[Mrs. Shay was correct in supposing Lucifer to be devoted to investigation of the causes of sex abuse. It holds that no phase of the subject should be exempt from calm investigation and criticism. Only thus can we arrive at the truth. It is true that many people go to excess in sexual indulgence, but they are rarely to be found among the advocates of sexual freedom, for the simple reason that they find such gratification more easily obtained while professing compliance with conventional standards. It seems that to Mrs. Shay, as to so many others, free selection means no selection. Because excessive indulgence in food is injurious, would Mrs. Shay maintain that no one should eat more than one kind of food? And what would she think of one who should say, because she advocates the right to choose her own food that she must therefore inevitably become a glutton? L. H.]

THE PAMPHLET, "Motherhood in Freedom," is now out of print. We still have copies of "Our New Humanity" in which the essay appeared, together with other valuable essays, as follows: "Priestly Celibacy," by Prof. A. L. Rawson; "Sex Love Analytically Defined," by Ernest Winne; "The Other Side," by May Clifford Hurd; "The Incoherence of Transition," by E. C. Walker; "The Greatest Sin," (an allegory,) by R. B Kerr; "Our New Savior—The Surgeon," by Charles Turne: Brown; "Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom," by Oscar Rotter Price, 25 cents.

LOVE, MARRIAGE, AND DIVORCE

And the Sovereignty of the Individual.

A Discussion between Henry James, Horace Greely, and Stephen Pearl Andrews. There are here included the final replies of Mr. Andrews, refused by the New York Tribune, and a subsequent discussion, occurring twenty years later, between Mr. James and Mr. Andrews.

"The great lesson for the world to learn is 'that HUMAN BEINGS DO NOT NEED TO BE TAKEN CARE OF. What they do need is such conditions of justice and freedom and friendly co-operation that they can take care of themselves. Provided for by another, and subject to his will as the return tribute, they pine, and sicken, and die. This is true equally of women as of men; as true of wives as it is of vassals or serfs. Our whole existing marital system is the house of bondage and the slaughter-house of the female sex. Whether its evils are inherent or incidental, whether they belong to the essence or the administration of the institution, whether they are remediable without or only by means of revolution, are the questions that now have to be discussed."

Price 35 cents. Address LUCIFER, 1304 W. Congress Street, Chicago

703.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

Ruled by the Tomb.

A Discussion of Free Thought and Free Love.

BY ORFORD NORTHCOTE.

"The world for the most part is ruled by the tomb, and the living are tyrannized over by the dead. Old ideas, long after the conditions under which they were produced have passed away, often persist in surviving. Many are disposed to worship the ancient,—to follow the old paths, without inquiring where they lead, and without knowing exactly where they wish to go themselves."—"Marriage and Divorce," H. G. Ingersoll, p. 5.

Price, ten cents. For sale at this office.

Great Combination Offer No. 2.

Many persons having availed themselves of the "Combination Offer" recently advertised in Lucifer, we feel encouraged to make a second offer as follows:

The Abolition of Marriage; by John Beverly Robinson. 16 pages.
Isabel's Intention. A story by "Mariette," dealing with the social evil in a new and radical way. 16 pages.
Subsistence and Justice; by Lucinda B. Chandler. Startling array of facts concerning the status of labor in Illinois. 20 pages.
Burmese Women; by H. Fielding. 16 pages.
Reminiscences of Berlin Heights; by A. Warren. 16 pages.
The Sexes and Love in Freedom; by Oscar Rotter. 8 pages.
Thomas Jefferson as an Individualist; by Geo. M. M. Trumbull. 20 pages.

ALL FOR ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE.

A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer.

This book is up-to-date in every particular.
It will save you hun reds of dollars in doctors' bills.
It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies.
It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs.
It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods.
It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure.
It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell.
It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases.
It has 16 colored plates, showing different parts of the human body.
The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women.
The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read.
It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines.
It contains valuable information for the married.

This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, a neatly bound in cloth with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express prepaid to any address for $2.75. Address M. Harman, 1304 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.

Personal Rights and Sexual Wrongs.

Contains matter pertaining to the Legitimation League and the Personal Rights Association of England. Also, four fine full page portraits of Ezra H Heywood, Moses Harman, Lillian Harman and Lois Waisbrooker, together with sketches of their personalities and work. By Oswald Dawson. Neatly bound in boards. Price, 20 cents. Address Moses Harman, 1304 Congress st., Chicago.

The Adult for February

Contains Music, Religion and Sex, (I.) by Orford Northcote; Malthus, by Lady Cook; "Love's Coming of Age," by Sagittarius; The Sex Philosophy of Exeter Hall, by W. F. Dunton; The Divine Woman, by William Platt; Two Gifts, by Edward Carpenter; Wonderland, (a poem,) by Amy C. Morant; The Home and the Family, by Robert Braithwaite; Controversial Correspondence William Platt and the Adult. Price, 10 cents. $1 a year.

"Loma" -A CITIZEN OF VENUS," by Prof. Wm. Windsor. A story of surpassing interest, largely devoted to Sexologic and Sociologic problems. Like Bellamy in his "Looking Backward," the writer of "Loma" believes in the "state," as a factor in social evolution, but individualists will probably forgive this feature for the sake of the radically revolutionary ideas in regard to popular theories—sexologic, theologic, cosmologic, etc. Substantially printed and artistically bound. Price, post-paid, $1.50 Address this office.

The Outcome of Legitimation. By Oswald Dawson. This address was to have appeared in the January "Adult," but the printers of that number played Bowdler on a mail scale, and refused to print it, alleging that the matter which they did print was "bad enough, but we are printing that and decline to print more." The lecture deals with some problems arising from the practicalization of the theories of free love. Price, 5 cents. For sale at this office.

Subsistence and Justice. By Lucinda B. Chandler. An interesting appeal for a better. Contains important statistics; also quotations from well-known authors. Price, 5 cents.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. By John Badcock, Jr. A remarkably clear, convincing work. Price 10 cents.

What IS PROPERTY? Proudhon's famous book, the most startling and revolutionary work on economics ever published. B. R. Tucker's translation, 457 pages, bound in cloth, was published to sell for $3.50. We are selling the same book for $1.00.

LOVE AND THE LAW. By E. C. Walker. A clear, concise statement of social liberty in contradistinction to the much lauded legal bondage now almost universally upheld. An excellent missionary document. Two copies, 5 cents; 20 cts. per dozen.

Books Worth Reading, FREE!

Send us twenty-five cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer and we will present to you your choice of the following books, to the value of 25 cents. Read the list carefully. Every book is interesting and thought-inspiring.

John's Way; a domestic radical story, by Elmina D. Slenker, .25
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetization; Albert Chavannes, .25
Human Rights; J. Madison Hook, .10
Prohibition and Self-Government; E. C. Walker, .10
Practical Co-operation; " " .10
The Revival of Puritanism; " " .10
Love and the Law; " " .10
Sexual Enslavement of Woman; " " .10
Digging for Bedrock; " " .10
In Hell and the Way Out; H. E. Allen, .10

We have in stock a considerable variety of pamphlets which we have not space to advertise. As we desire to get them off our shelves as soon as possible, we will offer them as premiums with trial subscriptions. In ordering, please state second choice, as some of the works are now out of print, and in any case we do not expect to renew our stock of any in this list.

Religion in the Republic; Mrs. M. A. Freeman. .05
Vistae Vitae; M. T. Martin, .10
Immortality; Mary S. and James Vincent, Sr, .05
The Eight Hour Movement; John P. Altgeld, .10
Science of a Universal Religion; Gabriel Z. Wacht, .05
Government Ownership of Railroads and Telegraphs; H. L. Loucks, .05
What Diana Teaches; Count Tolstoi, .01
How the Devil Beat the Salvation Army, .10
The Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type. By D. D. Lum .05
God in the State; E. A. Stevens, .10
The Coming Woman; Lillie D. White, .10

These books are given for new subscriptions, only. They will be sent to any address when the order contains 25 cents and the name of a new subscriber to Lucifer. They are given instead of the usual agents' commission.

Inclose two two cent stamps for postage, and address
M. HARMAN, 1304 Congress St., Chicago.

Elmina's Request. Please send three 2 cent stamps for a copy of "Little Freethinker" and a letter from Elmina Drake Slenker, Snowville, Va.

Reminiscences OF AN OCTOGENARIAN in the Fields of Industrial and Social Reform, by Joshua King Ingalls. An interesting book by a pioneer in the cause of social and economic reform. Paper, 75 cents. Cloth, 50 cents.

REASONS FOR PARDONING FIELDEN, NEEBE AND SCHWAB. By John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois. In this work the claim is conclusively proven that the prisoners did not have a fair trial, that they were unjustly condemned and that their imprisonment was an outrage and the Governer has the courage of his convictions. He does not "pardon" repentant criminals, but releases innocent victims of a judicial outrage. The history of the case is gone over from beginning to end and it comprises very valuable information. Price 25 cents.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. An essay towards the formation of an anti-persecution society. By A. F. Tindall. Price 10 cents.

C. S. Wood, M. D. Radical Physician and Surgeon. Successful treatment of all chronic and special diseases, by new and correct methods. Satisfaction guaranteed, as we will undertake no case that we cannot cure or permanently benefit. Especial facilities for the cure of women suffering from any disease or irregularity peculiar to their sex. Consultation free. If by mail, inclose stamp. C. S. Wood, Department G, 131 LaSalle st., Chicago, Ill. Suite 64, Office hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

NIAPON MAKES CHILD-BIRTH EASY. Used in Best Maternity Hospitals. Recommended by Lillian Harman. Send for circulars. Women Agents wanted. Niapon Remedy Co., Room 1007, Unity Building, Chicago.

A Private Home with the best care and treatment for women and unfortunate girls, before and during confinement; securing an absolutely safe and easy delivery. A home provided for the child if the mother cannot keep it. For full particulars call on, or write to, Dr. Wood, 131 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill. Office suite 64. Hours 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

"Isabel's INTENTION," by Mariette. This is a story of a sympathetic, high-minded English girl of the "upper" classes, who, having been made to believe the popular lie that prostitution is inevitable and that prostitutes are the martyrs who make a virtuous life possible for the rest of womankind, determines to offer herself as a sacrifice to this Moloch. A neat little paper-covered pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 5 cents. Three for 10 cents.

Free Society is an advocate of Anarchist Communism, and in its advocacy of liberty in all things does not overlook sexual liberty. It is an eight-page weekly published at 50 cents a year. A specimen copy will be cheerfully furnished upon request. We also publish a monthly Anarchist library. If you want two good treatises on our theories send 15 cents for Kropotkin's "Law and Authority" and Malatesta's "Talk About Anarchist Communism," Nos. 1 and 2 of our new monthly. Free Society, 10 Oak Grove Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

Bombs: The Poetry and Philosophy of Anarchy. By Wm. A. Whittick. With portrait of Author. 189 pages. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

An Astonishing Offer!

Send three two-cent stamps, lock of hair, age, name and the leading symptom and your disease will be diagnosed free by spirit power.
Mrs. Dr. Dobson-Barker,
Box 122, San Jose, Cal.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. II., No. 13. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, MARCH 30, E. M. 298. [C. E. 1898.] WHOLE No. 704.

Life and Death.

On parent knees, a naked, new-born child,
Weeping thou sat'st, while all around thee smiled.
So live that sinking on thy last long sleep
Thou then may'st smile while all around thee weep.
—Sir William Jones. From the Persian.

Sexual and Economic Reform—A Question of Precedence.

BY JAMES S. DENSON.

